"In 1831-2 when Italian patriots began the great work called of the Risorgimento, that is, of clearing Italy of its foreign invaders, and found all its directing classes hostile to the movement because they were bound either to the Vatican or to Vienna, they saw the need of the warm faith of an apostle and of the hot ardor of a propagandist and soon discovered Mazzini and his Giovane Italia. When these had done their work which ended with the Roman Republic of 1849, and the necessity of a man of action became apparent, Garibaldi and his Red Shirts took the place of Mazzini.

"After the last terrible war Italy became infested with a horde of arrivisti and speculators tolerated by the imbecility of the men who have governed Italy ever since. But the Italian people soon found Mussolini and his Fascisti.

"Fascism has saved Italy from becoming a second Russia, and is gradually clearing Italy of all persons who intended living comfortably at other people's expense, doing nothing.

"I consider that Mussolini, if he continues as he is doing at present, will take his place in the Italian Olympus with Dante, Mazzini, and Garibaldi—and that his Fascism will quietly die out when its program is accomplished as the Mazzinianism and the Garibaldianism have done.

"Ever yours, Ricciotti Garibaldi."

Dead and Risen with Christ—A Meditation

By S. Adelbert Wood, Pastor of the Friends Church, Upland, Ind.

"YE DIED" Colossians 3:3. Paul was constrained by the love of Christ to judge that as Christ "died for all, therefore, all died." The death of Christ being vicarious for all, His death was the death of all, to be realized by all who believe on Him. The church being made up of believers in Jesus, Paul makes no mistake when he addresses them as men who have "died with Christ"; that is, men who have actually been buried with Christ "into death." It is to such that he says, "Ye died." He also classifies himself as one of these when he says, "I have been crucified with Christ."

The Penalty Is Paid

Transgressed law holds its dominion over the transgressor "for so long a time as he liveth." The ordinance of the law that tells what the penalty is, stands unyielding until it is fulfilled. But Paul tells us that when God sent his Son into the world in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, it was that sin might be condemned in the flesh and this "ordinance of the law might be fulfilled in us" (Rom. 8:3).

To such it can be truthfully said, "Wherefore, my brethren, ye also were made dead to the law by the body of Christ." Christ having fulfilled the law by suffering its extreme penalty, which is death; we also by our baptism into Christ and into his death have complied with the full requirement of the law—have had this, the final ordinance of the law fulfilled in us. We have found in Christ "the end of the law for righteousness," and are no longer under law but are under grace. Every jot and tittle of the law has been accomplished and has found its end in Christ Jesus.

This appears more evident to us when we recognize that when we died with Christ, we died a death that was "for our sins." That is, the wages for our sins, which is death, has actually been paid by us, by our burial with Christ into death. Our justification is from all things from which we could not be justified by the law of Moses. And that because we have satisfied the law by complying with all of its requirements.

Christ did not die, the innocent, for the guilty that we might escape justice; but the rather that the guilty might fully meet the demands of justice by dying with him on whom the Lord laid the iniquity of us all. As surely as Christ bare our sins in his body on the tree we have borne them in our body when we fellowship his sufferings, "becoming conformed unto his death." "Having suffered in the flesh, hath ceased from sin."

God's Righteousness Is Manifested

It is said that the righteousness of a nation is known by its righteous laws and their enforcement. That God's laws are righteous we need not stop to prove, for we know that they are just and good. It is true, however, that God has shown his righteousness in the death of the just for the unjust, and the death of the unjust when he is crucified with Christ, because there has been full enforcement of his holy laws (Rom. 3:25, 26).

The death of Christ was not alone "for our sins," "for the death that he died, he died unto sin once." It was His mission to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself.

For us to be pardoned for the sins of the past and be left with sin having dominion over us and reigning in our mortal bodies, or dwelling in us, at the most would not more than half meet our needs as to salvation from sin. It is death "for our sins" and death "unto sin" that sets us free from sin in its every form.

When we were baptized into Christ, we were baptized into His death "unto sin" as certainly as we were "for our sins." We were buried with Him through baptism into death. Therefore, we have become "united with him in the likeness of his death." Our old man was crucified with Him that the body of sin might be done away that we should no longer be in bondage to sin. "And they that are of Christ Jesus have crucified the flesh with its passions and the lusts thereof." To all such it is perfectly pertinent to ask, "We who died to sin, how shall we live any longer therein?" We should reckon ourselves dead unto sin in Christ Jesus (Rom. 6:11).

Resurrection in the Present Time

"Ye were raised." Colossians 3:1.

Jesus tells us that "the hour cometh in which all that are in the tombs shall hear his voice and shall come forth." This truth does not militate against the truth that in the time that "now is, the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live." It is of the resurrection of the present time that we wish to speak.

To become united with Christ in the likeness of his death, and not be "also in the likeness of his resurrection," would be to us as though Christ had died and not been raised from the dead. It would leave us dead, and Christ came that we might have life. We should have evidence in our loving, that we have passed from death unto life.

The real objective in being buried through baptism into death is "that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father so we also might walk in newness of life. For if we have become united with him in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." "If we died with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him; knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more, death hath no more dominion over him." We being in the likeness of His resurrection have a life that dieth no more, even life everlasting.

When Christ received commandment from the Father to lay down His life and take it again, He having power to do so, became obedient unto death even the death of the cross. And as it was not possible that He should be holden of death, He lives and that forevermore. He is not to be sought among the dead but among the living.

What It Means to Be in Christ

When we are baptized into Christ it is the resurrected Christ that we abide in as the branch abides in the vine. It is the resurrection life that we are in possession of when we are in the likeness of his resurrection. Paul's desire to become conformed unto Christ's death was that he might attain unto the resurrection from the dead. To knowChrist and the power of His resurrection is the experience of all who are in Christ Jesus.

Men have power to lay down their lives, but none other than Christ has power to take it again, so that His death is the only death that we can be buried into, from which there is resurrection unto life eternal. Man must get over on the eternal life side of death, or he is undone forever. Christ has given His flesh for the life of the world; there is no other bread of which a man may eat and live forever. "If any man is in Christ he is a new creature." Such a one has been crucified with Christ and it is no longer himself that lives but Christ lives in him. The eternal life that God gives is in His Son. "He that hath the Son hath eternal life; he that hath not the Son of God shall not see life."

PERSONAL EVANGELISM

The age calls for a more positive evangelism. It means personal evangelism first of all. This is the method of Jesus himself. He did not depend upon impression upon masses of men. Even where he spoke to many, it was to a smaller group close to him that his word had special meaning. He seemed to have little regard for numbers but supreme regard for individuals. The most significant and distinguished incidents of the Gospels are His dealing with persons. He took infinite patience with a chosen few, knowing that a life thoroughly awakened and trained was the greatest force for a new world. And it is so now. The weakness of our Christianity has been its mass movements and lack of personal conversion. A ministry forever seeking the individual as Christ did will be the greatest force for salvation. A church so fully Christian as to have personal interest in the Christian life of friends and neighbors, forever widening its circle and making every human touch spiritual, will be the greatest force for the kingdom of God. In fact, we can hardly expect any marked spiritual advance until the church itself is thus quickened.

The End of the Journey

By One of the Travelers

A DREARY day in mid-November, my companion and I were some distance from home. All day the clouds had hung low and heavy, covering the earth as with a pall of leaden grey, shutting out from sight every least bit of blue or cheering ray of sunshine. The air was damp and raw, a cold northeast wind penetrated to our very bones, and drove the rain and sleet against our faces. The road was rough and heavy, progress slow and wearisome.

But at last, just as the short autumn day was closing and the evening had already begun to darken, the welcome home lights appeared over the hill top around the bend in the road, and presently we drew up at the gate.

Cramped and stiff from long sitting, damp and chilled by the wind and rain, we were glad to alight. The home door opened, and from within there came the voices of loved ones glad to welcome us back.

My companion went in—into the light and the cheer, the warmth and the comfort of the home, and the glad fellowship of those within, and the door was shut behind her. While I, left behind, for a little, outside in the deepening darkness and storm,—passed on to the barn to care for the horse, and finish up my out-of-doors work for the day.

This done, with no unnecessary delay I hastened to the house. Again the door opened and I, too, went in to rejoin my companion and the happy group within.

And then, gathered by the fireside, under the glow of the lamp, around the family table, in joyous converse, the discomfort of the journey, the gloom of the night, the chill of the wind and the rain, the short separation at the door, all were forgotten in the happy fellowship of the home and in the thanksgiving offering with which the evening was closed.

Together we two, my companion and I, had come a longer journey. Side by side, hand in hand, in both stormy and sunny weather, we had walked through many years of life's journey in closest companionship. The varied experiences of human life had been ours. Sometimes in green pastures, by still waters, and beneath bright skies our path had led. Then we had walked with glad hearts, light step, and song of thanksgiving on our lips. But sometimes we walked through the dark death-shadowed valley, and over rough places where feet dragged heavily, our heads were bowed down, and our hearts cried out like children in the dark: "My Father, my Father, O my Father."

But through all the varied experiences progress was ever being made homeward. The miles were being left behind. The years were slipping by. Each nightfall brought us

"A day's march nearer home."

And then, one day the door opened, and she—my companion, my loved one, went in to the light and joy of our Father's home, to join the host of loved ones gone before,—parents, brothers' child, and many another—went in to the presence of the Lord and Saviour whom she had loved and trusted, followed and served, lo, these many years here on earth.

And then the door was shut, and I was left alone in the dark—darkness that might be felt—left to finish my work without her.

Thank God for the assurance that that door will open again, and I, too, shall enter in when my work is done. Whether by the same door, by the subway of the grave, or whether my Lord shall come first in His own glorious Person to fulfil the hopes of His people and make an end of death for them forever, and so I go by way of the air route,

"Caught gently upward to an early crown,
With death untasted, and the grave unknown," is not mine to know or care. In this as He, my Lord, shall will. Be it mine to be ready for His call whenever He opens the home door for me.

Then let me finish my work as best I can by His grace. Let me not dally nor delay by the way. Let not sloth or unfaithfulness on my part hinder the coming of that day, nor cause that I be not ready when it comes.

And so I watch and pray, and work and wait for the opening of the home door—the door of our Father's house—at the end of the journey.—J. E. M. in The Canadian Baptist.

Some Hypothetical Questions

By Rev. Charles C. Cook, Montclair, N. J.

IT IS sometimes asked by those who teach that our Lord did not offer Himself to Israel as their King, what would have happened if Israel had accepted Him? What kind of kingdom would He have established? And how then would have been fulfilled the prophecies concerning His death and resurrection, the coming of the Holy Spirit, the gathering out of the Gentiles, etc.?

An easy reply may be given that will effectively turn the tables on the questioners, viz.: What if Israel had accepted Him as their Messiah? All, even those who deny that He came as King, admit that He did offer Himself as Israel's Messiah and that His claim was denied and Himself rejected. But what if their conduct had been otherwise?

The latter position offers difficulties as truly as does the former.

The fact is that the pursuit of such hypotheses is always futile and unprofitable. Open the door to them and there come trooping in a host of others, the consideration of which would only land the speculative mind in hopeless confusion. Such imaginative questions may be raised at every step of Scripture history with equally barren results.

What if Adam and Eve had not yielded to the tempter? Or, more puzzling still, if Adam had not followed Eve in the transgression? Let these questions be considered in connection with Revelation 13:8 where we read of "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world," thus showing that the provision for the consequences of man's fall was made long in advance of its occurence.

Again, what if Abraham's faith had failed as to the birth of a son?

What if Israel had obeyed the law?

What if Judas had not betrayed his Lord?

What if Peter had committed suicide in remorse for his denial of Christ?

The mere mention of these shows how boundless is the sea of speculative inquiry.

The fair-minded reader sees no contradiction in the fact that our Lord made a bona-fide offer of Himself to Israel as their King, even while knowing He would be rejected. Further than this there is nothing to say, except that our Lord Himself once made a hypothetical statement, and left it without an explanation, so teaching us that we are to be content with facts as they are, without insisting on a present solution.

The instance referred to is found in Matthew 11:14 and 17:10-13. Here we have a statement to the effect that if Israel had received the testimony of John the Baptist and followed his directions he would have taken the place of the actual Elijah, who was to come according to prophecy!

The question naturally arises: How then would have been fulfilled the prophecies concerning Israels' apostasy, punishment and restoration?

No answer to this question is now forthcoming, even as there are no answers to the other questions; and until God makes these matters clear it remains for the believer to be content, faithful, obedient, expectant!

LORD KINNAIRD DIES

The Associated Press reports the death of Lord Kinnaird, January 30, at the age of 75. He was very prominent in Y. M. C. A. work, and was a tower of strength to Christianity in Great Britain.

The Poet Contemplates Good Friday and Easter

DEATH OF CHRIST

By Frances Camp Duggar, Montgomery, Ala.

Oh, why that silent, throbbing, breathless crowd,
And why those looks of sadness and of awe?
Condemned to die before the Roman law,
Hung One whose kingly head in pain was bowed
Upon a cross; then came a thunder loud,
And all who watched were seized with mighty fear,
For earth did quake and rocks rent far and near,
And dark the world as though an awful cloud
Had come forever 'twixt the earth and God;
Behold the temple's veil was rent in twain,
And graves were opened wide, and from the sod
Arose the dead; centurions watched in vain,
And loud the inward voice of conscience cried,
"The sinless Lamb of God is crucified."

"WHY HAST THOU FORSAKEN ME?"

By Harold F. Damon, Chicago, Ill.

"Forsaken," Oh, my God! that cry,
Rending the earth and heaven high,
Sounding down to deepest hell
Where the powers of darkness dwell.
This, a cry of dread and woe,
Deeper far than man can know,
Came from Christ, in place of me,
Who died my death on Calvary.

"Forsaken," Oh, my God! Thy face
Was hid from Christ, by wondrous grace
Bleeding there on Calv'ry's tree,
Bearing sin's full penalty.
Death He knew as none can know,
For alone He fought the foe,—
Fought and gained the victory,
Broke my bonds and set me free.

"Forsaken," Oh, my God! Therein
I now through death am dead to sin,
For all the law's demands are met;
He paid my price, I owe no debt.
No terrors now before me stand,
But joy and peace in Beulah land.
So round the earth I'll raise the cry
That men for sin need never die.

PETRA

By Guelph, Chicago, Ill.

I stand upon a solid rock to-day,
And, standing, feel no tremor at my feet.
A tempest rages; I can hear it beat
Against the base, and see all nature sway
Before the fitful blast. Above its spray
I rest. No common haven, my retreat;
It towers above both storm and summer's heat,
And millions see it as they pass this way.

Hewn in this rock, behold, an empty tomb,
Telling of death's defeat, our hearts to cheer.
And graven on its everlasting face,
The sentence, "It is written," doth appear.
From every storm it is my hiding-place;
Come, make it yours, my friend, there's ample room.

"HE IS RISEN, AS HE SAID"

By Charles Irvin Junkin, Lexington, Va.

Slow of heart and unbelieving,
Sad of heart and sorely grieving,
They who sought the Prince of Life among the dead;
Oh, the wonder of the token!
Every word that He had spoken,
It is truth! for He is risen, as He said.

He is living! Christ the Lover!
And His mighty love shall cover
With forgiveness all my blunders and my dread.
He is living, strong and tender,
The Good Shepherd, my defender,
He is risen, he is living, as He said.

He is coming! Ever nearing
The great day of His appearing,
With the crown of many crowns upon His head!
It is true, the golden story,
I shall see Him in His glory,
In the radiance of His glory, as He said.

THE STING OF DEATH CAN HARM ME NE'ER

By G. LeRoy Wilcox, Chicago, Ill.

The sting of death can harm me ne'er;
I've passed from death to life;
With Christ in heav'n I'll dwell fore'er—
Eternal, blissful life.

The grave no victory can claim;
Of it I have no fear;
I'm trusting only in the name
Of Christ, my Saviour dear.

My Lord hath conquered death and hell;
What then have I to dread?
He robbed the grave of terrors fell,
In rising from the dead.

From sting of death He set me free;
Fear of the grave dispelled;
Assured of life eternally;
And all my doubtings quelled.

(Chorus)
O death, how can thy sting touch me,
When I am Christ's for aye?
O grave, where can thy vict'ry be,
When He leads all the way?

The So-Called "Social Gospel"

From The Relation of the Missionary Message to Missionary Success, by Rev. James F. Love, D.D., Corresponding Secretary, Foreign Mission Board, Southern Baptist Convention

"THE false antithesis between doctrine and social service has contributed to the complexity of the situation on the foreign field as at home. The new champion of the social gospel thinks that a doctrinal ministry is the enemy of practical Christian living. Some men seem to be able to think only with one lobe of their brains at a time. Whatever they happen to be stressing is antithetic to something else. Truth with them is not only in contradiction to error, but to truth itself. They do not see the supplementary relation between doing and doctrine, experimental Christianity and Christian truth, between sociology and theology. Because one is true the other must be false. The genius for false antithesis is a mark of a little and yet a dangerous mind.

Nothing New About It

"But there is more the matter with the social gospeler than this. In the first place, he fancies that he is entitled to a place in the foremost ranks of the thinkers, because he is an advocate of something new. He berates the teaching of the old school, and, alleging that it did not produce social fruit, charges the discrediting omission to a doctrinal ministry.

"Now, as a matter of fact, social service is no new thing among Christian men. There is, to be sure, a difference in the way it is done and it has, in the mouths of its modern advocates, assumed the dignity of an 'ology'—sociology. Sociology sounds better to the modern ear than the words, 'Do good to all men.' Sociology is a science to be taught a class: doing good is a duty to be practiced by all Christians. Social science tells a few folks how to do something for the neighborhood; the old custom was for each individual to do his duty by his neighbors. Old preachers did not know so much about sociology, but they did teach their hearers to visit the sick, the widows and the fatherless; and no neighbor to the Christian man in the older communities was allowed to go hungry or without a watcher by his or her bedside in time of sickness. The modern paid nurse knows better how to take the pulse than our grandmothers did, but she does not bear a more effective testimony to the Christian spirit and to unselfish and thoughtful Christian love.

More Reports But Not More Workers

"Under the social regime we have more organizations and reports, but I am not sure that we have more social workers. It is a false comparison to charge the lack of social service to the men and women of the old school who did not send representatives to discharge their social obligations, nor themselves go about neighborly ministrations garbed to advertise their mission.

"It is a false comparison to represent theology and sociology as contradictory sciences. One is a doctrine; the other is duty. The doctrine produces the practical service. Too much emphasis upon social service and too little upon evangelism is affecting doctrinal soundness on the mission field, and, in the end, will reduce the purest missionary results. It is not, therefore, a question of theology versus sociology, but one of such relation of these and such proportionate emphasis as will secure the desired missionary results.

There Is No Such Thing

"The social gospel is spoken of as though it were something superior to the gospel of grace. Indeed, it is presented by some as the only gospel. As a matter of fact, to state the case bluntly, there is no such thing as a social gospel.

"Adjectives before gospel do not magnify, but minify the gospel. The word gospel compasses contents which make full its meaning and without which it is incomplete. Eliminate these contents, and you have no gospel. There are, of course, social duties which are binding upon all men and upon Christians in particular, of which the best of us are derelict; but, we repeat, there is no such thing as the social gospel. To use the word thus shows one to be in error as to what the gospel is.

"The gospel is the most prolific source of social deeds, but social service belongs to the realm of Christian duty and not theology. The one is for Christian practice; the other is for Christian preaching. There is no contradiction nor antagonism between them. The one is the fruit of the other. The gospel is the world's generator of social impulses, the fertile soil of which neighborly deed is the perennial fruit.

"To belittle evangelical doctrine in an effort to magnify social service convicts one of being a novice as a religious thinker and teacher. Orphan asylums and other humanitarian institutions and benevolences sprouted and have found their fertility in hearts which have been mellowed by the gospel of Christ. They are nurtured by the truth which declares that men redeemed by the self-renunciating Christ are by that redemption made debtors to all men.

Keep Things In Their Place

"Some are ready to substitute the social program for the commission. If China's millions of sick, hungry and unfortunate are to have ministered to them the compassions of Christ, if we are to create in China a social conscience which will compel wealthy Chinese themselves to feed their hungry brothers, we must keep things in their place. We must apply to the dead social conscience of the Chinese people the life-giving Word of God.

"The preachers of the social gospel in China who neglect the evangelistic message will, if left alone for a season by other workers, eventually find themselves surrounded by dry bones. The Christian enterprise will, even in the hands of radicals, move on for a period under its gathered momentum, but if it loses the vital elements of the impulse-giving gospel, it will presently slow down in social activity.

"Unitarian and atheistic thought have no vitalizing or propulsive quality or power. The nations of the world today are, in their civilizations and social conditions, a contemporaneous and convincing witness to the power of the evangelical gospel and the impotency of everything else heathen, ecclesiastical and intellectual. The gospel of Christ in its evangelical interpretation is the one and only fecundating principle which has as yet been applied to the social and moral order of the world. Nothing else has the mysterious power to re-create character, revive the social conscience, and rebuild a collapsed race or civilization. Social deadness or deterioration is found wherever the evangelical gospel is not found.

BRINGING A BIBLE INSTITUTE TO MUSKOGEE

By Paul Philpin, Secretary, Conference Committee

The third annual Bible conference held in Muskogee, Okla., the week ending December 15, 1922, was a rich feast for Bible-loving Christians, the presence of such men as Drs. Gray, Fitzwater, and Mr. Guille on the platform of the First Presbyterian Church, reviving blessed experiences in the memory of those in the audience who had been privileged in the past to attend some of the large classes at the Institute in Chicago.

That the conference is exerting a far reaching influence, not only in Muskogee, but adjoining territory, is evidenced by the cheerful testimony of many representative members of the community, lawyers, doctors and successful business men. A practicing physician remarked, "The constructive Bible teaching given in the Bible conference work is the need of most church people. Dr. Fitzwater's lectures on the Book of Luke gave us something to think about."

A Presbyterian minister from a neighboring church said, "I have only words of commendation for the straight Bible teaching."

Although our dates were between the two great holidays, Thanksgiving and Christmas, we brought together one of the most representative crowds of Bible teachers, Sunday-school workers, pastors and other Christian workers ever assembled in Muskogee.

The Ku Klux Klan—Is It of God?

By Rev. A. R. Funderburk, Palestine, Tex.

THE Ku Klux Klan question has thrust itself suddenly and forcibly upon us, and one must line up for or against.

But that is not a very bad thing. Nearly everything can be classified as right or wrong. So when any question comes up it should be given thoughtful consideration and if we arrive at the conclusion that the thing is right we, as Christian people who stand for righteousness, should take our stand unhesitatingly for it, and if we find the thing to be wrong, we should take an equally firm stand against it. The thing that we must be very careful about is that we have not made a mistake about the matter and assumed the thing to be right when it is wrong, or to be wrong when it is right.

The Bible the Standard

For the Christian, the Bible is the standard by which we judge whether a thing is right or wrong. If the Bible upholds a thing we may be sure that it is right and good. If the Bible condemns a thing we may be sure that that thing is wrong and bad. If anything conflicts with Bible teaching it is wrong. If it is in harmony with it it is right.

The question under discussion is the Ku Klux Klan. Is it of God? Everything that is of God is right. The only way we can arrive at a conclusion is to compare the teaching and principles of the Klan with the teaching and principles of the Bible. If the principles of these two run parallel and do not cross or conflict, their principles are identical. But if the principles and teaching of the two lead in different directions, if following the one does not carry one to the same point as the other, then they are not parallel, but are in conflict one with the other. And in this case the Ku Klux Klan is wrong for God's Word contains the mind of God and does not conflict with right.

Who Is Our Neighbor?

The Bible teaches that every man whom we can render a service is our neighbor. It teaches that we should love our neighbor and have consideration for his physical and material welfare.

Let us compare this doctrine with the doctrine of the Klan. The Klan "stands for one hundred per cent Americanism and white supremacy." It seeks to promote the interest of pure Americans even at the expense of the foreign born element. It has no interest in the welfare of others than Americans. It says of the Jews, "Boycott them and force them to leave." The Bible says, "Do good unto all men."

The two quotations above are from a representative of the Klan and the Bible respectively. Is the teaching of the two the same? Is the principle the same? Can a man follow the one, and have the same attitude that he would have had he followed the other? The teaching in these is in conflict. They are at variance with each other. If a man should have it in his heart to "do good to all men," he could not have it in his heart to boycott a man simply because he happens to be of that poor cursed race that is scattered among all the nations of earth and have no national home.

Suppose that all one hundred per cent Americans should follow out the teaching of the Klan and boycott the Jews so that they would be forced to leave this country. Where would they go? America and England are about the only two countries in which they have not been boycotted and persecuted and hated as criminals.

All this has come upon this race as a curse from God for their disobedience to Him and for their rejection of the Messiah. Some one may say, "Oh, well then, if God has ordained that they be thus treated, it is all right for them to be driven out." But the Bible says, "It is needful that offences must come, but woe unto him by whom the offense cometh." And indeed, woe is pronounced upon all who persecute the Jews. They are God's chosen people. The Jews are as much God's chosen people today as they ever were. He has not fulfilled His purposes with them. (Rom. 11: 1,2). Since the dispersion, every nation that has been intolerant and unkind to the Jews has had the curse of God upon it. Every nation that has treated the Jew kindly has had the blessing of God upon it. America has always been an asylum for the oppressed Jew and no nation has been so blessed as has our country. But now there have arisen those who are saying, "Boycott the Jew and drive him out." The Jews are, as a rule, a law abiding people and those who oppose them have no right to take the law into their own hands and do them violence—so their only weapon against them is boycott.

As sure as God's Word is true, this country will invoke the curse of God upon it if this feeling of hatred against the Jews is nurtured in the hearts of our people. For He has said, "I will bless them that bless thee and will curse them that curse thee."

What About Romanism?

The Bible says: "Love your enemies; do good to them that hate you. Pray for them that despitefully use you." We recognize in Roman Catholicism an enemy of true Christianity. Their teaching is the teaching of Antichrist. Now, some one may say, "Well, if Catholicism is an enemy of Christ it is wrong and we ought to oppose it."

You are right, we ought to oppose the doctrines and teachings of Catholicism, but at the same time we ought to love the Catholics. We can even hate Catholicism but at the same time love Catholics. God hates sin but loves the sinner.

But is this the attitude of the Klan? Here is a statement verbatim from a Klansman that expresses their attitude: "We're not going to stop until we drive every one of them out of the country."

We are comparing Bible teaching with Klan teaching. The Bible says, "Do good to them and pray for them." The Klan says, "Drive them out."

The attitude that the true Christian had toward the heathen of China and India is the attitude they should have toward the Catholics. They are just as truly in sin's bondage and lost, without hope. They know nothing of the atoning blood of Jesus, but are trusting to the power of the priests to save them. For shame that Christian people should hate such poor benighted people!

Standing For Law and Order

Now on the point of relationship that one should bear toward civil authority, let us compare Bible teaching with Klan practice. They say they stand for law and order. This sounds well. It is just what the Bible teaches on the subject.

But, except one's practice agrees with his teaching his teaching is worthless. Actions speak louder than words. One of the tenets of the Klan is that they stand for law and order and law enforcement. Let us see if they really do this.

In Texas (and other states) it is against the law for a number of men to overpower a man and take him out and beat him. But those Klansmen who profess to stand for law enforcement and loyalty to organized government are often guilty of violation of this law. It is proven that the Ku Klux were guilty in the shameful Inglewood raid in California. Neither is this the only instance where the Klan has been proven guilty of violence and violation of law. So we see that the practice of the Klan in regard to law and order is contrary to Bible teaching.

But some one says that these matters that the Klan attends to are matters that do not come under the jurisdiction of the courts, or that the law is slack and this is the only way to enforce justice in some cases.

Now let us see where such a course of reasoning will lead us to. If twelve men have the right to take a man out and flog him because he is guilty of an act of immorality or misconduct six men have the same right. If six men have this right then two men have it. And if two men have the right then one man has the right to go out and punish any act of misconduct that he happens to notice. And he alone, of course, is the sole judge of whether the man is guilty and what the penalty should be. So he is both judge and jury. Thus every man will be a law unto himself, and we should have a state of anarchy.

Jesus Could Not Be a Klansman

From a comparison of these points of teaching it is easily seen that the teaching of the Klan is not the teaching of the Bible. We see that the religion of Ku Kluxism is not the religion of Jesus Christ.

How could the Klan embrace Christianity and the Christian religion when its very constitution would bar the Founder of Christianity from membership? Our Lord Jesus Christ was a Jew and no Jew is eligible to membership. Yet they claim to stand "for the principles of Christianity." They accept Christianity but reject the Christ. These are but empty claims. They are like their claims to law and order. The great principle of Christianity is love. The outstanding principle of Ku Kluxism is hatred. It tends to array class against class and race against race.

Some one says, "Oh, but the Klan is doing some mighty good things." Yes, we admit that this is true. We know of an instance when the Klan made a generous donation to some poor orphan children.

But listen! Catholicism, that dread enemy of true Christianity, as we have admitted, and against which the Klan has so arrayed itself, is distinguished for its benevolence. There are not many things in the world wholly bad. Even bad men usually have some redeeming traits.

Look at this matter with an unbiased mind and you will see that the principles of the Klan are not the principles of the Bible. If you love Jesus and want to honor Him you will not want to go where you cannot take Him, and you cannot take Him into the Klan.

Beware of Satan as he appears as an "angel of light" and a preacher of "righteousness."

Reject Couéism If You Are a Christian!

By Mrs. Lillian G. Galloway, Mount Airy, Ga.

COUÉISM says: "Speak to your own spirit, you can do anything you wish to do."

Jesus Christ says: "Of mine own self I can do nothing" (John 5:30), "The Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works" (John 14:10).

M. Emile Coué is a hypnotist, president of the Lorraine society applied hypnotism and psychology.

He speaks of people being like sheep following one another, which is what is happening to many Christians in this country. Just because a few titled English people advertise this man from France many are taking up the idea, repeating his little man-made sentences, and deifying the ego within them instead of Jesus Christ.

Last year we had a terrible flood of spiritism, this year we have its close ally, hypnotism, self-suggestion, and both are black magic.

No magic comes from Jesus Christ and the Father through the Holy Spirit, but only that spiritual power which belongs to sons and daughters of the King.

We are not to put trust in ourselves, but "They that know Thy name will put their trust in thee; for thou, Lord, hast not forsaken them that seek thee" (Ps. 9:10).

"Day by day, in every way, I am growing better and better," thus chants the sheep following the man who ignores the teachings of Jesus Christ.

But Christians will not follow him if they are real followers of the Son of God. They will take John 15 in all the fulness of its meaning. They will appropriate the life from the resurrection body of Jesus Christ, and their body, mind, and soul will be renewed through the power of the Holy Spirit. They will not speak to their own spirit, but to the King of kings and Lord of lords.

The Bible, the Christian's only guide book, is full of promises of help if we appropriate them by faith. Psalm 91 will cover every need, and it holds good according to the first words of it.

It is better to repeat God's messages twenty times night and morning, than any brand of the man-made hypnotic article.

The unthinking Christian man, woman, or child is being swept into the wrong company by repeating the lines given by this mental worker, that is, outside the realm of Jesus Christ. Whenever any movement is not connected with Him, and is without the power of His Spirit, it is not the kind Christians should use.

Is it strength, health, supplies, prosperity, power, cleansing, freedom from fear, healing, soul nourishment, knowledge, love, or any other vital thing? Then claim it in His dear name.

Bible Conferences at Eagles Mere, Pa., and Ocean City, N. Y.

THE Moody Bible Institute's Annual Summer Bible Conference at Eagles Mere, Pa., will be held this year July 6-15. The list of speakers includes Rev. J. Ritchie Smith, D. D., Professor of Homiletics, Princeton Theological Seminary; Rev. Herbert W. Bieber, D. D., pastor Church of the Covenant, Bala-Cynwyd, Pa.; Rev. George E. Guille and Elinor Stafford Millar of the Extension Department, and Rev. A. L. Lathem, D. D., originator of the successful "Chester Plan" of Summer Bible Schools for Children.

Eagles Mere, on a half-mile-high summit of the Alleghenies, with a lake nestling in a pocket dug out by the plowpoint of a huge glacier, is a recreation center different from any other because it combines the best that the mountains can afford with the water advantages of the seashore, amid surroundings of beautiful scenery, cleanliness, safety and summer comfort, plus recreational opportunities altogether unique. Hotel and boarding facilities are first class and at reasonable cost.

The Ocean City Tabernacle Association has invited the Institute to conduct a summer Bible conference on their grounds at Ocean City, N. J., August 9-19, 1923. The conference held last summer was so well received that an effort is being made to put on even a stronger program this year.

In addition to the usual Bible teaching and inspirational addresses, a special series of lectures of interest to Sunday-school workers have been arranged. Dr. C. C. Ellis, vice-president and director of education, Juniata College, and contributor of "This Week's Teaching Principle," in the Sunday School Times, is to be the leading speaker in this branch of the conference.

Among the other speakers already arranged for is Rev. S. B. Rohold who has been for two or three years in Palestine. Having just returned from the Holy Land he is in a position to discuss intelligently the important question of Israel's present position and need. Himself a Jew, he can speak on the relationship of the Jew to the church and coming events. His address will probably be on present conditions in Palestine.

Dr. A. L. Lathem of Chester, Pa., will speak on the Vacation Bible School Work in which he has been wonderfully used of the Lord.

Mr. H. S. Dulaney, a well known Methodist layman of Baltimore, Md., will speak on his experience as a tither.

Rev. L. W. Gosnell, Assistant Dean of the Institute, will be one of the Bible teachers, and it is hoped it may be possible for Dr. Robert H. Glover, F. R. G. S., director of the Institute's Missionary Course, to be present also and speak on missionary subjects. His addresses last year were greatly appreciated. Other speakers will be announced later.

There is a fine Christian atmosphere at Ocean City and its slogan, "America's Greatest Family Resort," is very appropriate. It is located on a small island close to the mainland and a few miles southwest of Atlantic City. It has an abundant supply of pure artesian water, drawn from wells more than 800 feet deep. There are eight bathing grounds on the city's eight-mile ocean front, each protected by capable life guards during the summer season. The summer population is about 50,000 and hotels and boarding houses are numerous, meeting all grades of requirement, at corresponding prices.

Cheery Words From Russia

MR. GITLIN, in his first letter, gives certain explanations why at first he failed to gain the confidence of some of the leaders of the Russian Evangelical Movement in Volhynia where he is located, and how the obstacles were removed, and then writes:

"The brethren have now invited me and our other missionary, brother Malzmann, to work with them, and now we are about to open up stations in a few towns in Volhynia. This is a great victory for which I praise God.

"Another cause for rejoicing is that the Lord has brought us in contact with prominent Polish Christians who are greatly helping us in our effort to legalize our work here in Volhynia. Did I tell you that so far I have been working here what may be termed "illegally"? Poland is not as yet an altogether free country (at least so far as preaching of the gospel is concerned). We must be legally incorporated before we can carry on our work altogether without hindrance. It is on account of this that I have been arrested twice in connection with my ministry. Praise God for my American passport. The Lord uses it as a means for my protection.

Conversion of Two Cossacks

"There has come to me now a new service for the Lord, that of Bible teaching. I am teaching Bible synthesis after the Moody Bible Institute method to a group of Hebrew Christians at Zdolbunowo. Next there has been organized a little Bible school for young people of the Evangelical church here in Zdolbunowo, whom I am to teach Bible synthesis, personal evangelism and homiletics, and then I am to teach the same subjects to another group of young people in a village, Plosk. This is a young Ukrainian Baptist congregation, under the human leadership of pastor Poliykov. It is about fifteen miles from here.

"I have Jews, Ukrainians, Bohemians, Russians, Poles and Germans in these classes. In my Plosk class there are two converted Cossacks. I praise God for them. There are a living witness to the saving power of the gospel of our Messiah. They are from among those who before their conversion took delight in massacring Jews. 'What a wonderful change in their life has been wrought since Jesus came into their hearts!'

"The Plosk church has issued me a teacher's certificate, so that now I have some kind of a 'document' on hand to justify my presence in Poland. You see our district is on the very border line, and naturally the police are on the watch when one goes on the train toward the border line. One must not only produce a passport in his possession, but also give a justifying reason for his being here.

"Last night I returned from two days' missionary trip. I visited the two Ukrainian villages, Plosk and Verchovtsi, and the Bohemian colony Zavidowski, and held four meetings there. I had personal interviews with some of the Jews, one of them a young man who does not seem far from accepting the Lord. It is such a joy to labor for the Lord among real hungry souls! To see the "starosta" (mayor) and the teacher of the colony Zavidowska, one a Greek orthodox and the other a Roman Catholic, come for the first time in their life to hear the gospel message attracted by the novelty of hearing a young Jew preaching it! They seem to have drunk in every word and then warmly shook my hand, thanking me for visiting them and confessing that a romance is beginning between them and God. Praise God! It is He who enables.

"Still I feel He would pour out blessings in greater measure if I had proper 'helps' for preparation. My American Revised Bible, with its brief concordance at the back, is about my only tool. I do not mind my lack of 'helps' for my preaching ministry as I do for teaching His Word."

Some Helps That He Needs

In a second letter Mr. Gitlin writes: "I have been praying that the Lord might open doors for service 'to fill in my time' until we get our official permission to work among the Jews. Unexpectedly there came the suggestion, and then the call, to organize the young people of our native evangelical churches into Christian workers classes or Bible classes, as it is termed here. I have gladly accepted the call and prayerfully gave myself to the longed for work for my Master and His cause here in Volhynia.

"So far I have three classes. On Wednesday I teach in Zdolbunowo, on Thursday in Plosk, and on Friday in Mirotin. These places are nineteen and fifteen miles from here. There has come another call from Alexandria for a Bible class on Mondays. Alexandria is about twenty-five miles away from here, and they wish me also to conduct a gospel service for Jews there in the evening. Two more calls—from Staro-Chelnitsa and from Porozow—are expected by me soon. I want to have at least five classes a week, and if possible six.

"The greatest labor consists in preparing the lectures, so that when these are ready, they can, by technical means,

The cover of our September (1922) issue contained an appeal for Ukraine, Russia, whither Messrs. Palmer and Hellyer had gone to investigate conditions and distribute material relief in the famine and pestilence-stricken regions. Our readers responded to the appeal and rendered blessed and much appreciated aid. Since the return of these brethren letters have been received by them from missionaries whom they encouraged in their gospel work, and we are permitted herewith to quote from one of them, Mr. Moses H. Gitlin, a Christian Jew, and formerly a student in the Moody Bible Institute.

We take pleasure in adding that Mr. Hellyer, in a private letter to us, says that the story of how Mr. Gitlin is being used by the Lord reads like a chapter from the lives of such pioneers as William Carey or David Livingstone or Hudson Taylor. He also says that he could not recall in his (Hellyer's) recent experience in Russia a single instance where a Jew would not listen attentively and sympathetically to the gospel. He regards the field there as ripe for the harvest. —Editors.

The Children Your Money Helps

You have often wondered what is done with the money collected from the various drives to help the ill-clad and starving. Here is a line of little ones who make their appeal to you. They are little Armenians who increase the line in front of the American Relief, from day to day. They are often refused a meal or clothing in such large centers as Erivan, Alexandropol and other places, simply because there is not enough to go around. Prominent women in this country have formed an Emergency Committee which is making a nation-wide appeal in behalf of these children.

Country Life in Ukrania

The entire household is busy peeling potatoes. A mundane occupation, but one which is very necessary, as "spuds" form the greatest part of their meals. Ukrania is a little agricultural country and the inhabitants live primitively.

be taught in as many places as possible. As you know we have not a single evangelical Bible school or seminary in this part of Europe. With the exception of about six or eight men there are no trained ministers of the gospel here; neither are there any trained or well prepared Christian workers of any kind. You can easily surmise how great the need is, and what a joy it is for me to help train about a hundred 'select' young people for the Lord's work. Praise God for the by-products of these courses in lighting revival fires among the young folks here and in building up the adults in the most holy faith.

"I am somewhat handicapped for the lack of Bible helps, and have written to the Moody Bible Institute to send me some of their Correspondence Courses. Will you kindly see to it that I get the needed help along this line as soon as possible?

"If you or any of our Christian friends, could spare and send me some useful books on the Bible, Christian work and relative topics, I would be very grateful. I teach at present Bible analysis, personal evangelism and homiletics. I find there is need for a course in Bible doctrine and pastoral or practical theology, that is, a practical knowledge of Christian life and service. I shall be much obliged for any helps on these five topics. Any helps on Christian evidences or apologetics will also be greatly appreciated. There may be some books lying idly on some good brother's library shelf that could perhaps be of help out here. I have to select proper material suitable to the capacities of my simple-minded, unschooled students and then translate same into the Russian language.

"In connection with my classes there has arisen a need for a stencil mimeograph. Most of my students cannot write very fast, and some of them hardly at all. They have been studying to read and write only since their conversion. How I should love to be able to put a printed copy of each lesson into their hands! If we can we will endeavor to obtain a machine and stencils out here otherwise we may have to ask you to send us one.

"These evening Bible courses have awakened an appetite for study in many places, so that two calls have already come to organize a daily school for a monthly Bible course. Kindly pray that the Lord may give me wisdom, ability and strength for this much needed and already abundantly blessed work of God and His cause."

Christian Literature for Moslems

AMONG all the Christian forces that we can release in the Near East there is none that can penetrate more deeply, extend its influence more widely, and abide more permanently than the printed press. The power of the press in Moslem lands is no longer a matter of theory. Islam is today using the press in every great center as never before. The Moslem press by its enterprise and activity is a constant challenge to Christian missions.

The American Christian Literature Society for Moslems was founded in 1915 on an interdenominational basis. It has for its purpose the spread of the gospel in the printed page wherever Moslems are found. With headquarters in New York (25 Madison Ave.), it has already been able to support the work of production and distribution in Algiers, Egypt, Syria, Palestine, Turkey, Persia, Malaysia, India, and China. The society has no costly organization, no overhead expenses. All contributions are used for the purposes indicated.

It is proposed at this time to raise the sum of $25,000 to be used in the preparation of special literature to meet special needs in the large language areas. Ten million Moslems in China have at present only a half dozen books and a score of tracts suitable for their special need. The entire set can be purchased for two dollars Mexican. In Java, Sumatra and the Straits Settlements the missionaries are clamoring for a more adequate literature. In Arabic there is already considerable, but the problem of child literature, a boys' magazine, the translation of important Christian classics and the problem of distribution face us. In Persia the provision of new books and leaflets would mean an immediate doubling of the effective value of evangelistic forces.

That there is a growing demand for Christian literature among Moslems is evident from the fact that in the past fifteen years one million eight hundred thousand books were sold and distributed from the Nile Mission Press alone. Last year fifteen colporteurs sold 27,000 books in the Nile valley. Ten thousand copies of the "Sermon on the Mount" in Diglot, Chinese and Arabic have been printed and put on sale with the tract societies throughout China. Also the booklet, God in Islam. In Palestine, now linked to Egypt by rail, the opportunity is unique and the demand steadily increasing.

Prayer is needed above all for the deeper conviction at home regarding the importance of using books and tracts in evangelism—that God may set free missionaries who will devote all of their time to the preparation and revision of literature for Moslems; that book shops may be opened in every great Mohammedan city; and that literature may be used far more than it has been heretofore in the great pilgrim centers—Mecca, Medina, Keruba and Tunka. To the last mentioned place in Egypt more than four hundred thousand pilgrims go annually. While the missionary may not be able to enter the holy land of Arabia, workers have proved the possibility of distributing literature to Mecca pilgrims at Jiddah and from Damascus.—S. M. Zwemer.

THE LONG AND THE SHORT OF IT!

"Wish to say, was about to let the MONTHLY drop, as there were so many long, dry articles in it that I scarcely ever read them, but this issue, January, 1923, is interesting. The articles are short and spicy and cover a large range of subjects which make it a pleasure to read. May you keep the good work going through the year, is the wish of an old subscriber.

Founder's Week Conference, 1923

By Joseph B. Bowles

EVER since D. L. Moody departed this life in December, 1899, the day and week of his birth have been marked in The Moody Bible Institute by memorial exercises. For many years these have usually taken the form of a conference for the instruction, edification and strengthening of Christian workers.

"Founder's Week Conference" is the name of these annual gatherings. It is a name which holds precious memories for many thousands of men and women out on the gospel battle lines. With gratitude to God they recall its days of delightful fellowship, of the opening of the treasuries of the Word, of enjoyment to the full of the singing of the gospel, and, in the case of former students of the Institute, of renewal of old friendships and contact again with the Institute associations which meant so much to them in their student days.

As this is written, another of these great conferences has just ended. How wonderfully God's presence was manifested hour by hour, day by day, from the opening session Monday afternoon, February 5 (Mr. Moody's birthday), right through to the evening of Friday, February 9, when many hundreds of young men and women offered themselves for foreign missionary service!

A Climax of Heavenly Power

The closing scene was one never to be forgotten. "It was the climax of the spirit one felt to be in all the meetings," said Rev. Donald McTavish, D.Sc., for many years pastor of Grosvenor Street Presbyterian Church, Toronto, now representative of his denomination in conference and evangelistic work throughout Canada.

"I have been present on many occasions when numbers of young people offered themselves for foreign missionary service," he added, "but never have I seen anything so spontaneous and so large as the response last evening. And how simply and calmly it was done, without effort to arouse the emotions. It was a remarkable meeting."

There had been two addresses by veteran missionaries, following which Dr. Gray asked all missionaries present who were in this country on furlough to rise and remain standing. Then he asked missionaries present who had been obliged for any reason to give up their work, to rise; then also missionary candidates under appointment for the field from various missionary boards; then those who had already definitely volunteered for missionary service; and finally, all others willing to offer themselves unreservedly, in full surrender, to go forth to the dark places of the earth as God opened the way.

The beholders marveled at sight of the throng who had previously volunteered; "But," said Dr. Maurice Frater of the John G. Paton Mission, "the response to the final appeal was overpowering. I felt like weeping. If Dr. Gray had asked me then to lead in prayer I could not have done so. After his appeal it was as though the Spirit of God had taken hold and was sweeping all before Him."

Missionaries on the platform estimated the number standing at fully one-half or more of the entire audience, which filled the Institute Auditorium to its capacity, about 1,700.

The full story of the conference would require space far beyond the limits of this report. It must suffice to touch briefly on its outstanding features and give a taste of the spiritual and intellectual feast provided. If what is here set down shall whet the appetite for the principal addresses, which will be published in THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY for April, the reader thus exercised will have been well served.

The conference was especially rich on the lines of the defense of biblical Christianity against the attacks of its enemies within and without the church; on foreign missions; on the believer's high privileges and obligations in Christ, in the sphere of Christian living—what is known as the Keswick teaching; in the large part taken by former students of the Institute; in fresh illumination and inspiration from the life and work of D. L. Moody; and as always, in the congregational singing and the special musical numbers given by the Institute choir.

On Monday seventy-six Chicago clergymen, of hundreds invited, were guests of the Institute at luncheon, and the conference opened at 2 o'clock with an inspirational period in charge of Dr. Gray, who led the exercises of this hallowed hour daily in the power of the Holy Spirit.

Dr. Machen' Addresses

The opening address was by Dr. J. Gresham Machen of Princeton Theological Seminary on "Christianity vs. Modern Liberalism." Both the man and his message caught at once the fixed attention of the audience. Here was no mere rattle of intellectual musketry or scattering machine gun fire, but rather, to carry out the simile, the effectiveness of a high-powered artillery unit, amply supplied with the best quality shells, served with masterly precision on the positions of the foe.

A rapid, even speaker, thought close packed, no wordy digressions, every sentence giving added force to the argument, the whole a singularly lucid, logical, overwhelming refutation of modernist sophistries—that was Professor Machen and his address—a keynote of heavenly power and blessing that deeply stirred the hearers.

His second address, Tuesday morning, "Is Christianity True?" fully bore out the same characteristics.

A few thoughts from the first address will give its flavor.

Prof. Machen declared that the battle being fought by Christianity today against modern liberalism is the third of three great crises in the history of the Christian church, the first of which came in the second century when Christianity was almost engulfed by paganism in the form of Gnosticism in the church, and the second in the middle ages when salvation by works was almost dominant in the church.

"The root of the modern liberal movement," he said, "is found in what may be called naturalism, by which is meant the denial of any entrance of the creative power of God at the beginnings of Christianity, as sharply distinguished from His works in nature.

What Is Christianity?

"To say that Christianity is a life and not a doctrine is radically false," he declared, "and to see that it is false you do not need even to be a Christian, you need have just a little bit of common sense and common honesty, because when you say Christianity is this or is that you are making an assertion in the sphere of history. What Christianity is, is a matter of history. All historians admit that Christianity at its very beginning was a campaign of witnessing, an account of historical facts—Christ died, was buried, was raised from the dead, and ascended to Heaven.

"The first Christians produced a new type of life, not by telling people to be good, but by the proclamation of a piece of news, of something which had recently happened. They did not call upon their hearers to submit themselves to the contagion of contact through them with the life of Jesus of Nazareth—that is just what modernist preachers are saying today—but by heralding the news that the Jesus who was crucified and buried, had risen from the dead, had been seen by them after his resurrection, and had ascended into the heavens before their eyes. There was history there; an account of things that had happened; and there was the meaning of what had happened; and when you get the historical facts with the meaning of the facts, you have Christian doctrine. Christ died; that is history. Christ died for our sins; that is doctrine.

"It is the fundamental business of the church today to set forth the teachings of Christianity truly and plainly in opposition to the teachings of the chief modern rivals of Christianity; and the chief modern rival of Christianity is not Mohammedanism nor Buddhism, but the naturalistic liberalism which is almost dominant in our large ecclesiastical bodies today."

Mr. Moody as Dr. Torrey Knew Him

The Monday evening address on "Why It Was That God Used D. L. Moody," by Dr. R. A. Torrey, was delivered to an audience occupying every available seat in the Auditorium, while an overflow meeting filled the Institute Lecture Room and many others who sought admittance had to be turned away.

This great address, dynamic from start to finish, constituted such a portraiture of Mr. Moody, the manner of man he was, and such a revelation of the springs of his extraordinary power, as perhaps no other living man could equal. Interspersed with numerous anecdotes and illustrations, Dr. Torrey gave the following "secrets of power," in Mr. Moody's life:

He was fully surrendered to God; he was in the deepest and fullest sense a man of prayer; he was a man who studied and used the Bible; he was humble—"the humblest man I ever knew;" he was marked by an entire absence of a love of money; he had a consuming passion for the salvation of the lost; and he had a definite baptism with the Holy Spirit.

Another Evolution Bubble Punctured

Another new voice mighty in defense of the Scriptures, not previously heard in the Institute, was that of Dr. Leander S. Keyser, professor of systematic theology in Hamma Divinity School, Wittemberg College, Springfield, O. Dr. Keyser delivered addresses on three great subjects, "The Origin of the Universe," "The Origin of Man," and "The Origin of Sin." He commanded rapt attention, and delighted the assembly with the clarity of his reasoning and the unanswerable logic with which he pierced the fallacies of evolutionary teaching, and over against them brought out the truth and wisdom of the Mosaiac records, the whole enlivened by a kindly humor which drew all hearts out to him.

This is about what he had to say, in his third address, of the theory of evolutionists that sin is the remains of man's primitive animalism:

"If sin is the remains of man's primitive animalism then God is the author of sin. I am sure no one in this audience would want to throw the responsibility of sin and suffering in the world back upon the good and holy God who has revealed Himself as our Creator, our Preserver and our Redeemer. If man came up from a bestial origin then God is responsible for it; and if that were the origin of sin, man would not have had a fair chance. According to the evolutionists we have been evolving for millions of years. If it took man that long to develop, the heritage of animalism would have overborne the slight adumbrations (the foreshadowings or beginnings), of morality and spirituality.

"Another flaw in their theory is that sin per se is not a materialistic thing. You cannot predicate morality of a mere material substance. Morality can be predicated only of a personality that is free, a free moral agent; therefore, sin per se is an act of the mind, an act of the soul which is free to choose between good and evil. Therefore those who posit sin in merely our animal nature are wrong in their comprehension of morality, for sin must be a psychical act or it will not be sin. Then again animals are not sinful; they are not free moral agents."

Watch for Dr. Keyser's address in April Moody Monthly The Christian worker's equipment for the time in which we live will be much strengthened thereby.

A third speaker in defense of God's Holy Word was Rev. P. W. Philpott, pastor of Moody Church, Chicago of whom Dr. Gray said in introducing him, "When I learned that he felt called of God to come to Chicago my heart was at rest as far as the future of Moody Church is concerned. I knew that the traditions of D. L. Moody, the traditions of Dr. R. A. Torrey, the traditions of Dr. A. C. Dixon, and of Dr. W. J. Erdman, Dr. Charles A. Blanchard, Rev. George C. Needham and others like them would be maintained. It gives me joy to introduce Pastor Philpott."

Mr. Philpott's address went to the hearts of his hearers with Holy Ghost power, especially in the presentation of reasons why he believes in Christ's virgin birth, and also of the threefold purpose of His coming. In closing he appealed to any unsaved in the audience to accept Him who died to save them, and some hands were raised in response.

A Remarkable Stereoptican Lecture

Another feature of great interest in confirmation of Holy Writ was a lecture on "The Earth the Theater of the Universe," by Rev. Clarence Benson of the Institute Faculty. It was illustrated by a large number of colored slides showing views of the sun, the moon, star clusters and constellations, many of them reproduced from original drawings by Mr. Benson of pictures in the recent book The New Heavens, by Professor Hale of Mount Wilson Observatory, Calif., whose photographs were taken with the new Hooker 100-inch reflecting telescope, the largest in the world. They include the very latest that have been made. Some views were reproduced also from the recent work, Outline of Science, by Professor Thompson of Aberdeen University.

Mr. Benson's mother was an astronomer. At the age of seventeen he was writing astronomical articles, and at the University of Minnesota he specialized in astronomy.

Simply as a spectacle the views shown by Mr. Benson were nothing short of marvelous in their "close-up" revelations, as it were, of some of the glories of God's illimitable, immeasurable, incomprehensible universe. One large view especially, showing a seemingly countless multitude of the starry host gave eloquent confirmation of the astronomical truth implied in God's statement to Abraham, "I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven."

It was brought out in Mr. Benson's address that the theory held by evolucionists that the sun and earth were evolved from nebulae has now been disproved. It is only in recent months, he said, that astronomers have been able to answer the question, What are nebulae? and their answer is destructive rather than constructive of the evolutionary theory. To give one of many quotations, the distinguished British astronomer, Professor Eddington, says, "We must regard with respect the view that nebulae are the last and not the first stage of evolution. The fact that we have seen stars turn into nebulae ought to outweigh any amount of speculation about nebulae turning into stars."

Concluding on this point Mr. Benson declared that while a person not in accord with the theory of evolution may not be popular in these days, it must be admitted that as far as the latest evidence from astronomy is concerned he is scientific as well as scriptural.

Spirit-Filled Messages on Christian Living

One of the richest privileges of the conference was that of listening to the addresses by Dr. McTavish. Quiet, clear, simple, yet profound in their reach to the deeps of Christian truth for the daily walk of the believer, the power of God was in them mightily to the instruction, encouragement and enrichment of the hearers.

To quote briefly: "The late Bishop Moule said there are many who are truly Christian who are not fully Christian. What do you mean by that? Well, we all know from experience. If you take just common sins, for instance, pride. How do you feel when you are slighted, when you are overlooked? Do you accept that quite meekly and praisefully? Mr. Hoste of China tells us that when he first went to China a companion went out with him who was somewhat younger than himself. When they were assigned to the field, his companion said to him, 'By the way, you know in these fields one man must have the control, and the Lord has laid it upon me that I should be that one.' What do you think Mr. Hoste thought of that? His first thought was to say, 'Well, perhaps you had better get some other person to go and work with you.' But he came to recognize in Christ that there was a battle to be won, and after much prayer he said, 'I will accept your plan.' They spent a very happy year or two together until that young man was called into another field."

"The Character and Experiences of the Redeemed," was the subject of the address by Rev. W. S. Gottshall, of Bluffton, O., president of the Home Mission Board of the Mennonite Conference, and heard on this occasion for the first time in the Institute. O the power and blessedness of the lessons for the believer's walk as revealed in the experience of God's people Israel! Such was this Heaven-given address. Here is a thought or two from it:

"Just as God took his people through the Red Sea and performed a miracle, making a path through the sea, bringing his people through on the other side and closing the sea behind them, so God took you and me with Christ through death over on the other side, through the process of the new birth, and by the power of God. It required a miracle. There is not a soul converted and born again, that was not born again through a miracle. It was not simply a change, but He took the old heart away and gave a new one. That is a miracle because accomplished only by the power of the Holy Spirit.

"That was the time the children of Israel began to live, because God said it was their birthday;—'this is the beginning of months.' God took the seventh month and made it the first. Before that they really did not live. Now we find them living in fellowship wth God. My friends, it is true that before souls are born again, they do not live; they exist but really do not live, and they will have no credit for anything they do. Thousands of people are going to be disappointed and be fooled because they think they are doing the great things. They are very philanthropic and think they will be rewarded for it, but they are fooled, because things cannot be done in the name of Christ save by those who are in Christ. When you get into Christ, then only can you perform any living works; the others are all dead works."

Lack of space limits this report to brief reference to the remainder of the conference program, though that remainder was not a whit behind the portion already described.

The Moody Bible Institute has seen many a Missionary Day of great power and blessing, but never one equalling Missionary Day of Founder's Week Conference, 1923.

Addresses by Great Missionary Leaders

Perhaps no more thrilling and inspiring recitals of missionary experiences and triumphs were ever heard than those narrated by the two principal speakers, Dr. Maurice Frater of the John G. Paton Mission to the New Hebrides, who has labored since 1900 in evangelizing the savages of two cannibal islands, and Rev. Charles W. Abel, of the London Missionary Society, who came direct to Chicago from London to attend this Conference, after thirty-two years spent in evangelizing cannibals in New Guinea, where he was associated with the saintly James Chalmers, who was killed and eaten by the cannibals there twenty years ago. Both of these great servants of God delivered several addresses, some of them on preceding days. They were the speakers in the closing session, described in the beginning of this article.

At the missionary symposium in the afternoon of Missionary Day twenty-three three-minute talks were heard from eighteen missionaries, three Institute students, children of missionaries, and two students, who are accepted candidates for the field. The list included Rev. A. J. Kligerman from Russia; Rev. William G. Kensinger and Mrs. Kensinger of the Mennonite Congo Mission, Africa; Rev. W. B. Cole, a Methodist Episcopal missionary, for thirteen years in China; Miss Minerva S. Weil of the Reformed Church of the U.S.; Rev. George Woodley of the Africa Inland Mission; Miss Jessie Harrell of the South Africa General Mission; Mr. and Mrs. Vartan Atchinak from Syria; Rev. F. A. Steven of the China Inland Mission; Rev. and Mrs. C. S. Foster, Africa Inland Mission; Miss Atkinson, for twenty-four years in Japan; Rev. M. C. Hayford, D. D., a full-blooded African, son of a Gold Coast chieftain, with the degree of M. A. from, an English University, and a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, a missionary in West Africa for twenty-two years; Rev. William Taylor, thirty-two years in Central China, Rev. A. W. Bradley from Egypt, Miss Margaret A. Reynolds and Miss N. Bostrom from China..

Rev. Robert H. Glover, M. D., head of the Institute's Missionary Course, who presided, was a pioneer missionary in China, and his associate in the Missionary Course, Rev. E. L. McCreery who delivered an able address earlier in the day, was a missionary in Egypt.

Had it been possible to give time for extended addresses by this galaxy of missionary veterans, a book would have been required to do justice to their recitals of the wonders accomplished through the miracle working power of our God.

One of the notable addresses of the forenoon of Missionary Day was given by Dr. McCreery, and another speaker was Miss M. A. Reynolds of China.

An Unequalled Student Day

Mention of Student Day, which was the second day of the Conference, must not be omitted. Institute officials qualified to speak, say it was the best Student Day the Institute has ever known. Four hundred and forty-six former students sat down at the Alumni dinner. The evening session which followed was second to none in the enjoyment experienced by the audience as they listened to Miss Grace Saxe tell the story of her life, and to one of the most effective addresses of the entire conference, given by Rev. C. R. Scafe on the text, "Ye must be born again."

Other former students who spoke earlier in the day were Miss Sara C. Palmer, well-known evangelist; Rev. R. L. Evans, of St. Louis; Rev. Howard Fulton of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Miss Mary Grace, Bible teacher; Rev. John T. Raymond of Cleveland, O., and Rev. A. G. Johnson of Chicago.

Miss Charlotte Cary, for many years Superintendent of Women, also gave an address, and the presiding officer was Dr. P. B. Fitzwater of the Institute Faculty.

At the business meeting of the Alumni Association, Rev. C. R. Scafe, of Detroit, was elected president, succeeding Rev. J. F. Rake of Evansville, Ind. Other officers elected were Miss Hazel Harper of New York, vice-president, succeeding Rev. W. L. Cain of Creston, Iowa; Rev. S. C. Ramsay of Minneapolis, second vice-president, succeeding Mary R. Phinney of Detroit; Mrs. H. R. Hutton, of Chicago, recording secretary, succeeding herself; and Mr. A. F. Gaylord, treasurer.

An honored visitor at the Institute who spoke briefly in one of Dr. Gray's hours, was Mrs. O. T. Graham, of Muskogee, Okla., who has the distinction of being teacher for nearly thirteen years of the largest correspondence Bible class in the world, conducted without a constitution, without officers and without organization of any kind. The class, composed entirely of women, began with nine members and now has approximately 180. As work in the various courses is satisfactorily completed, certificates are issued by the Institute's Correspondence Department.

The Conference music was directed from day to day by various members of the Music Faculty of the Institute, Professors Alfred Holsworth, T. J. Bittikofer, Geo. S. Schuler, Guy C. Latchaw, and A. E. Hosmer, assisted by Professor Foss Fellers and various other musicians at the organ and piano.

The Idea of Evolution and the Idea of God

"Philadelphia, Pa., January 30, 1923.

"Dear Mr. Editor,

"In connection with your editorial in the current issue on the subject of evolution,* it has occurred to me that perhaps many of your readers may not have seen an article in the current number of the Hibbert Journal, entitled 'The Idea of Evolution and the Idea of God.' It is written by Mr. E. G. A. Holmes, who was formerly an inspector of schools in England, and is a man of scholarship and ability, but is well known as one who takes a very definite line of opposition to Christianity. This is what he says about the relation of evolution to what he calls orthodox theology, and in view of his position it shows not only what he and others like him think on the relation of evolution to the idea of God, but it also indicates with unerring clearness what men of his type think of the efforts made in certain quarters by those who insist upon what is called 'Theistic Evolution.'

" 'Slowly but surely the idea of evolution is undermining the foundations of orthodox Christian theology. For a static conception of the universe was the cement in which those foundations were laid; and as the idea of evolution makes headway and the static conception falls into disrepute, the foundations of the orthodox theology, which have long shown signs of instability, will become more and more unstable, and at last, in the fulness of time, the whole structure will totter to its fall. * * * The theology of supernaturalism, having never had to reckon with the idea of evolution, cannot now assimilate it except by transforming itself beyond recognition. Attempts to compromise with the idea have been made by Protestant theologians. No compromise is possible between two such incompatible ideas; and any concession to the one involves a betrayal of the other.' "

"Yours,

"W. H. Griffith Thomas."

What Other Editors Are Saying

J. H. Ralston

The purpose of this department is to give the views of editors of periodicals, chiefly religious, on matters of interest to our readers. In publishing what they say, we are simply endeavoring to give information with no intention of endorsing or repudiating the views printed, although from time to time, comment may be made upon them in our editorial pages.—Editor.

MUDDLING PUBLIC OPINION

The Churchman

Both during and since the war people who have known something of the facts entering into international problems have been appalled at the common ignorance of such facts on the part of the "average public." That ignorance can be accounted for by the type of reading done by the average public, and its attitude toward that reading. Millions of people in America confine their reading to newspapers and the popular magazines. They have a tendency to believe what they see in print. Knowing nothing of journalism it does not occur to them that, both during and since the war, various government censorships have colored news at its source; that modern international news gathering has become largely a matter of propaganda. Only a few days ago the representative of one of the London dailies in Constantinople returned to England and reported that every news story that he had sent to his paper for months, had, after passing through the hands of the censor, been completely distorted. Such a situation is intolerable from the point of view of an intelligent public opinion.

JUSTICE

The Chicago Daily Tribune

In sentencing to death James Smith, a youth who killed a cigar clerk while trying to steal enough money to pay a bondsman who had secured his release for another crime, Judge Kavanagh made some pertinent remarks on the subject of crime and penalty which are worthy of repetition as an editorial. In part he said:

"Some persons think that punishment is to reform criminals. That is not true. It may deter them, but it does not reform them. Justice to the guilty is mercy to the innocent. It is a cruel thing to take the life of a human being. These defendants, however, cannot advance that plea until they can give back the life of O'Connell.

"A man and a woman were recently hanged in London. If that were in Cook county the woman would have been found not guilty and the man probably given fourteen years in prison. The statistics show that in this country one out of every 12,000 persons dies by the hand of an assassin, while in England one out of every 640,000 meets death in that manner. Why should life be safer there than here? Because it is a life for a life over there." * * *

As to Smith's accomplice in the murder, James J. Butler, a slight concession was allowed by Judge Kavanagh because of the defendant's excellent war record. His punishment was fixed at life imprisonment. We will not quarrel with the judge on that, but we venture the assertion that few good soldiers in the great war are in sympathy with the offering of war records as alleviation of the offense of murder. The crime of murder wipes out any good in the record of a murderer if the supreme issue of justice to society is to be considered.

PREACHING

The Cumberland Presbyterian

Daniel Webster said: "When I go to hear a man preach, I want him to preach." So does every other man. Oh, the needlessness of those preacherless preachers, who talk, lecture, entertain and discourse upon the things of an intellectual, social and moral nature only! These are the men that assist the Devil so much that by just changing one letter they make our holy day we call Sunday stand out bold and brazen and glaring, as "Funday." I call your attention to the fact that the same bulletin board that carried the announcement that the sermon denouncing the virgin birth of Jesus was for free distribution for the asking, carried also the announcement of a dance to be given in the church on the following Friday night, at "The Old First Church" in New York City. Of course it did! Like preacher, like people.

The greatest need this old world has today is that of more strong, direct, sin-convicting, sin-condemning, sin-killing, preaching from the pulpits of the land. When God's preachers fail him in the pulpit, the heaviest check against the Devil's work and the strongest resistance against sin is removed.

ABUSES OF FREE SPEECH

Chicago Journal of Commerce

In the total collapse of the effort of Congressman Keller to bring about the impeachment of Attorney-General Daugherty, the public gets a close-up view of the utter falsity of much of the vituperation of men in public life. For months the Attorney-General was slandered, and when opportunity came for legal proof that he had been guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors his detractor was unable to fortify his charges with evidence.

It is not in politics alone that men's characters are wickedly assailed by their enemies. There are business gossips who spread falsehoods about their fellows. Unpleasant stories of lawyers, doctors, even clergymen, are whispered by members of their own professions. In the great majority of cases, let us hope, rivalries and jealousies have poisoned the tongues of accusers.

Once in a while some impatient victim of intolerable malice forces a public retraction of privately circulated lies reflecting on his character, but as a rule slandered men—and women, too—are advised by their lawyers to ignore them. In most cases that is the better plan. A man's life speaks best for him. If it has been one of integrity, he need fear no serious effects from calumny. A bad man cannot hide his wickedness; and a good man gives evidence of his goodness so constantly in his daily life that the slings and arrows of envy and detraction cannot pierce his armor. A just man, and a just public, is always slow to believe evil of another. The wonder is that so many who regard themselves as respectable are so swift to abuse their right of free speech by indulging their animosities in verbal efforts to injure the reputations of those they dislike.

MODERN MORALS

The Presbyterian Banner

Dr. Dawson in The Christian Century discusses stirringly "Our Changing Morals." This change which he characterizes as a revolt against "the conventional decencies of life," is strikingly expressed in the modern novel. "There is no secrecy of vice which may not be found fully described in a popular novel." And the intention of this description of lubricity is not to point out "the retributive working of moral law," but to tell what real life is like, for its own sake, and just as though there was no such thing as a moral law.

This revolt against the old morality makes religion and the church its chief point of attack, because, hitherto, they had supplied believers and unbelievers with a standard of conduct. The church is a teacher, not only of spiritual doctrine, but of morals—the common morals of honesty, justice, veracity, chastity. Therefore, the authority of the church must be broken down before the old morality can be swept away, for good and all. So, even the outsider, who had been preaching up physical science as the all sufficient mentor of life, alarmed over the situation, is interested to see whether the church will be able to hold against the drift, and, is hoping it will.

Mr. Thomas Hardy is one of those who regards the church as the forlorn hope of a world hastening to destruction. This would hardly have been expected of Mr. Hardy, but in his Apology he declares that "we seem threatened with a new Dark Age." And, in his alarm, he appeals for "the rallying forces of goodness in a destroyed generation." He specifies the church as the only institution that possesses the moral sanctions that can hold mankind back from the precipice. He asks, "What other timely English establishment than the church, of sufficient dignity and footing, and with such strength of old association, is left in the country to keep the shreds of morality together?" Such a call from such a man should stir in us a new sense of the dignity and the responsibility of the church as the last refuge and hope of a world on the edge of moral disaster.

"He might have called upon the old universities or the old public schools; but he prefers to call upon the power that begot them."

CHRISTMAS DEMANDS OF UNION LABOR

Manufacturers Record (Baltimore)

According to a circular issued by the National Association of Manufacturers, the Union Label Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor has just issued to all labor unions a statement that labor unionists should see to it that:

Christmas gifts bear the union label.

Stores employ only union clerks and drivers.

Churches engaging special orchestras at Christmas hire only union musicians.

Christmas programs bear the union label.

Holiday season entertainments employ union waiters who serve union bread, cake, meat and soft drinks.

It is hardly possible to see how the selfishness and greed of despotic unionism could go further than in this demand. We presume that even the gift of a Bible would be resented unless it bore a union label and the story for a little child that told of the coming of the Saviour and of His love for little ones must bear a union label or else be accursed. * * *

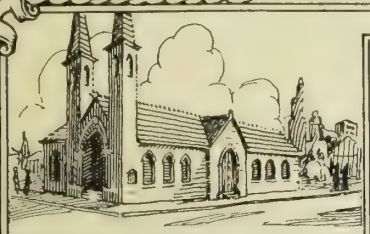
COMMUNISTS' WAR ON RELIGION

The Chicago Daily News

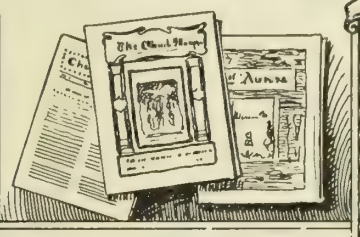
Mr. Mackenzie cables to The Daily News from Moscow that the grotesque efforts of communist students during Christmas week to heap ridicule upon all things usually regarded as holy failed signally of their purpose, since they rather served to demonstrate that anti-religious sentiment among the Russians is anything but common. Despite the jeering and masquerading, the sacrilegious banners and the scron expressed for all who—to use Hume's contemptuous phrase—perform "ghostly offices," the Christmas celebrations in the churches "were attended," says Mr. Mackenzie, "by larger assemblages than in the old days, when religion had all officialdom behind it." Among those who thronged churches were surprisingly large numbers of soldiers of the red army.

* * * * There is, however, one feature of the Russian situation that may well claim more than passing attention from western peoples. It is the effects of atheism as systematically taught to children and youths in the government schools of Russia. Relief furnished in famine-stricken districts in recent years by American and other agencies has gone to the children, whereas the devout and patient adults were permitted to die if they were unable to feed themselves. Thus great numbers of orphans have come into the keeping of the government, and these are systematically taught to look with contempt upon the religion of their parents.

Religion still has a powerful hold upon the Russian masses. However, if famine and communist schools co-operate in making of the new generation carefully instructed mockers of all things revered by the fathers and mothers of today, the triumph of irreligion in the land of the soviets may become a reality.



Rev. B. F. West



New Philadelphia, Ohio

The Story of a Successful Pastor

Reverend West realized that a church has little influence on a community if the masses pass it by.

Too often a successful pastor is pointed out as "a lucky fellow." Luck has but a small part in it. Communities do not take an active interest in a church by chance. The success of Rev. B. F. West, of New Philadelphia, Ohio, is an example.

Rev. West has been a firm believer in business methods in the church. He realized that to make progress a church must use progressive methods. He felt, as did Dr. Christian F. Reisner, Chairman Church Advertising Department, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, who said:

> "Jesus would not speak to empty seats if there was any legitimate way to fill them. Jesus performed miracles to draw the crowds to hear His message. The Pharisees quickly called Him a sensationalist. But the people heard Him and a world-revolutionizing movement was started."

Mr. West read an ad about the Parish Papers printed by The National Religious Press. A letter brought him the details of this co-operative plan and he instantly recognized it as filling the needs for church publicity. Shortly after starting the Parish Paper Idea in his church, Mr. West noticed a definite increase in attendance, greater activity among members, larger contributions. The change was so marked that at the end of the year Rev. B. F. West wrote us, summarizing his experience with the Parish Paper.

Makes Successful Pastor

"Our Parish Paper increased the attendance in Sunday school and church services during the summer months when it is difficult to keep up attendance." . . . "keeps non-resident members informed of our work, they respond with their offerings;" "With increased attendance comes increase in free-will offerings." "The Parish Paper does not cost anything . . . we placed $350.00 in a building fund for a new church . . . This is first year church treasury had $50 left in the bank for next year." "Affords an opportunity to present good religious reading; creates interest, causes people to think about the church and talk of its progress."

Will Help You Succeed

Rev. West's experience is not unusual—it has been duplicated in hundreds of churches through the co-operation of The National Religious Press. The church paper has demonstrated its value in church publicity. What Rev. West has accomplished you can duplicate in your own church—without expense to you.

The Stewardship of Self, Substance and Service

Matthew 25:14-30; I Peter 4:10

The Olivet discourse, of which our Scripture lesson forms a part, needs constant reading and re-reading in the days in which we live. It covers chapters 24 and 25 of the Gospel of Matthew, and depicts in a general way the course of events during the interval between our Lord's ascension and His return, dwelling more in detail on matters immediately preceding and accompanying the return. Criticism labels the content of these two chapters "apocalyptic" and dismisses the matter with a wave of the hand.

The discourse was given in answer to the question found in Matthew 24:3. The master traveling into a far country is none other than our Lord. To his own servants he delivered his goods; and in the words of Luke 19:13 said, "Occupy till I come," or, "Do business for me during my absence."

In person our Lord is in heaven. He appears there in the presence of God for us, acting in the capacity of High Priest and Advocate. See Hebrews 4:14; 7:25; 8:1; 9:24; 1 John 2:1. Though He is with and within His people through the Spirit, yet personally He is in heaven, from whence He will some day return. See Acts 3:20, 21. Then His servants will be judged concerning their stewardship and service. If we have been good stewards of the grace of God, we shall receive a reward. If we have misused His bounty we shall suffer loss.

In order to be good stewards of the grace of God the qualities of devotion, determination, and dependence are essential. The faithful Christian steward is devoted to his Lord. Somewhere in the spiritual experience of the faithful there has been a transaction in which the life has been deeded over to Christ that in all things He might have the pre-eminence. In other words, the true servant of Jesus Christ not only has a sin-bearer on whom his sins were laid, and by the shedding of whose blood they were forever put away, but he acknowledges also that He has been "bought with a price," and therefore is "not his own."

To maintain this attitude of devotion, spiritual determination is necessary. There are many tests of loyalty and obedience along the way.

Factors for Making the World Better—How Can We Help?

Matthew 15:13-16

In the Sermon on the Mount from which the Scripture verses are chosen, our Lord shows the ideal which His finished work would produce in human experience. The peculiar quality which distinguishes Christians from others is Christ-likeness. Various figures are used to express this quality such as "salt" and "light." Christ Himself is the light of the world, and its preserver from moral decay.

The world can become better only as people are saved out of it; only as they are converted to God; only as they receive the new life from God by which they become His spiritual children. This is God's revealed way. To substitute for this an educational program such as many church leaders are doing, is to produce refined pagans rather than regenerated people. A refined paganism can never be the salt of the earth, or the light of the world.

A careful study of "the world" as the Scriptures portray it, would go a long way towards clarifying our vision concerning world betterment and the things associated with that project. One small Bible book, such as 1 John will suffice to instruct any one concerning the mind of the Spirit in regard to "the world." In 2:15-17, we are warned, "Love not the world; neither the things that are in the world." The constituents of its life are, "The lust of the flesh; the lust of the eyes; and the pride of life"; and it is transient for it "passeth away." In 3:2 it is said to have no perception of the true nature and divine glory either of Christ or the Christian. In other words, the world is blind to spiritual values. The spirit of Antichrist is in the world and to it the false prophets and their adherents belong (4:3-6). Again it is altogether subject to the wicked one (5:19).

Acts 19:8-20

Educational missions as seen in the nineteenth chapter of Acts is a very different matter from educational missions now. As a result of Paul's teaching for two years in the school of Tyrannus, all who attended heard "the word of the Lord Jesus." This word was authoritative, powerful, redeeming, regenerating, accompanied by the evident approval of God who wrought special miracles by the hand of Paul, thereby accrediting His servant as His representative.

In many of our educational institutions today, even those supported by missionary funds, "the Word of the Lord Jesus" is not taught but questioned. It is not inerrant but faulty; not authoritative as from God, but limited as from man; while Christ Himself is often degraded to the level of mere man; and "miracles"? No, never. That would upset the evolutionary theory on which most of our education both at home and abroad is based.

For this reason thousands of the Lord's people who are scripturally intelligent and discerning, can neither give their money or support to those whose philosophy and teaching pervert the gospel of Christ. Being compelled to choose between the unproven and destructive theory which has never saved any one, and the gospel of God's grace which has saved every one who has believed it, they unhesitatingly and inevitably choose the gospel method. Having discovered in that gospel of the shed blood of Christ for sin, an unfailing remedy in their own case, they are immovably committed to its propagation and its defense.

To gather Christian converts together in schools and colleges and give them Christian education commands the loyalty and support of every true Christian, but to spend missionary money in teaching an unproven theory which is destructive of everything distinctively Christian, calls for unsparing criticism and unceasing opposition.

April 1
Lessons from the Psalms—The Easter Psalm
Psalms 16:1-11; Acts 2:22-27

Scripture is its own best interpreter The lessons of this Psalm can be gathered only by comparing it with other Scriptures such as 2 Samuel 7:12-16; Luke 1: 32, 33; Acts 2:25-31; 15:13-18; Revelation 22:16.

These passages are closely related to each other and teach us that to David there was promised a son through whom his house and kingdom should be established forever. This promise which took the form of a covenant and an oath (Ps. 89:34,35) finds fulfilment in David's greater Son, our Lord Jesus Christ. Luke 1:32, 33 plainly teaches this. Christ is both David's Son and David's Lord (Rom. 1:3,4). At His first coming He was rejected and by wicked hands was crucified and slain (Acts 2:23). Apparently the covenant concerning the house and kingdom of David was doomed to failure, but no, God raised Christ from the dead. David foresaw this. With prophetic foresight he speaks in Psalm 16 of that which finds fulfilment in our Lord's resurrection (Acts 2:30, 31). His soul was not left in hades nor did His body see corruption. The promise to David has not failed, neither have the predictions of the prophets which were based on the Davidic covenant. Not only so, but vastly more than the prophets saw, has been accomplished. See Ephesians 1:20-2:7. Our risen Lord is now the Head of the body, the true church, and believers are made members of His body, partakers of His life, and sharers in His victory. Truly may we exclaim, "What hath God wrought?" Through this man, crucified and risen, is proclaimed the forgiveness of sins, and by Him all that believe are justified from all things (Acts 13:38,39). Through His resurrection Christ becomes our deliverer from all the adverse forces of darkness, "our life," for we are in Him as branches in a vine; and "our hope" for the future, the pledge and pattern of what we shall yet be. According to Romans 5:1, 2, we have peace with God concerning the past, and standing in Christ for the present and for the future, we rejoice in the hope of the glory of God.

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Grant Stroh

WHEN WILL ELIJAH COME?

C. H. B., Boothbay, Me.

Question: Where, in the order of future events, is the coming of Elijah?

Answer: Malachi places it "before the great and terrible day of the Lord." John the Baptist, who prepared the way for Christ's first coming, was a type of Elijah. While it is not distinctly stated that one of the two witnesses in Revelations 11 is Elijah, this is the common interpretation. The coming of Elijah has no connection with the church, but with Israel. His coming will follow the Rapture.

RECENT BOOKS ON EVOLUTION

F. W., McConnelsville, O.

Question: Could you give me the titles of some of the best and most up-to-date books on evolution?

Answer: Since evolution is not a science but a philosophy, the best books are not necessarily written by scientists. Versus evolution we would recommend Q. E. D. by George McCready Price; Evolution, by Th. Graebner; Evolution at the Bar, by Philip Mauro; In His Image, by W. J. Bryan; The Other Side of Evolution, by Rev. Alexander Patterson. These are all small volumes, but deal clearly with the vital matters at issue.

RETURN OF THE UNCLEAN SPIRIT

W. S. B., Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

Question: What is the teaching of Matthew 12:43-45 about the unclean spirit?

Answer: What is described here is not a bad temper or some sinful habit, but an evil personality, a demon, who has come out of a man, finds no rest or satisfaction elsewhere and decides to return. Upon investigation he finds his former quarters "empty, swept, and garnished." Being unclean himself the spirit had left the place unclean and bare. Meanwhile the man has reformed and "cleaned up." But he is "empty," not Christ-possessed. The evil spirit takes advantage of the situation and returns with other demons even more wicked than himself. The words also have a dispensational application to the nation of Israel.

THE VIRGIN BIRTH

M. M. W., Kansas City, Mo.

Question: Is Dr. Aked right in his denial of the virgin birth of Christ?

Answer: According to the statement you enclosed Dr. Aked bases his denial principally (1) upon his rejection of the Bible accounts in Matthew and Luke, which he says are only "stories" like that of Balaam's ass and Jonah and the whale; and (2) upon an appeal to the opinions of "great theological professors in Europe." In other words Dr. Aked is a rationalist. He feels at liberty to reject any portion of the Bible that does not appeal to him as reasonable, since to him it is not a supernatural book. On the other hand the opinions of the rationalists of Europe have greater weight with him than the Word of God. The testimonies of the angel Gabriel and of Mary are set at naught. Is Dr. Aked one of those referred to by the Apostle John: "And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God"?

THEISTIC EVOLUTION

L. E. S., Washington, D. C.

Some who reject the theory of organic evolution, still wish to be respectably "modern." So they compromise and call themselves "theistic evolutionists." They claim that evolution is simply God's way of working. That "theism" and "evolution" are contradictory terms seems to be overlooked by these people. Evolution is naturalism. It is progress by the operation of resident forces. But since the ordinary processes of nature do not account for all of the phenomena of nature, these men introduced God as supervisor and director in order to account the sudden and surprising leaps which evolution sometimes takes. If it is necessary for God to intervene in order to cause the advances, which evolutionists claim, wherein is nature doing the improving? Surely if miracle or the supernatural is present then the thing they call evolution must be renamed, for the essence of evolution is unaided continuity of progress. If the process, with its extraordinary advance-leaps must be accounted for by the direct action of God, then the process cannot strictly be termed evolution. Creation and miracle are not properly in the category of evolution. Yet creation and miracle are necessary to account fully for either the geological or the modern eras. No hyphenated evolution will change its character. It is not a science but a false philosophy. It cannot be made orthodox by calling it "theistic."

CONCERNING WOMEN

P. H. F., Renata, B. C.

(1) Paul lays down the general principle of woman in subjection to man, as symbolized among the Greeks by the wearing of a veil. A woman who wore no veil was considered immodest or even immoral. Especially would it be an impropriety for an unveiled woman to pray or to speak in public. In 1 Corinthians 11:16 Paul appeals to the general custom among the churches. In a modern Christian community the same restrictions would seem out of place, yet the principle holds. If, however, the literal instructions be followed, the veil should be used and not a mere bonnet or other head covering.

(2) Concerning speaking or teaching in public, this is forbidden under certain conditions. For example, there should be no disturbance of the meeting. In 1 Corinthians 11:5 the praying and prophesying are permitted, only they must be done with that becoming modesty and decorum which the customs of the time and place require. Prophesying here means testimony or exhorting, not foretelling future events.

In 1 Timothy 2:11, 12, Paul is dealing especially with the relation of married women to their husbands. Women are not to be in authority in the church over their husbands.

It is wholly scriptural for women to be Sunday-school teachers, Bible readers, missionaries, and evangelists.

H. L. C., St. Louis, Mo.

(1) Women as pastors do not seem to be endorsed in the Bible.

(2) In our judgment the Bible grants women equal rights with man in the question of divorce on the ground of adultery.

BRIEF MENTION

C. E. O., Bird City, Kan.

The Book of Jonah is historical and should be taken literally.

P. J. A., Vermillion, S. Dak.

The rules for guidance in the case of an offended brother are found in Matthew 18:15-17. It is a serious matter, requiring immediate attention.

J. R., Gainsboro, Tenn.

The number of leading denominations in the United States is about eighty-five, but counting the various branches or varieties there are about one hundred and sixty-five.

R. S., Memphis, Tenn.

For amounts spent by Christians upon worldly amusements we would refer you to the Council of the Federated Churches of America, New York City.

E. C. W., Phoenix, Ariz.

It is our present opinion that the ten virgins in the parable are guests, and not the bride, i. e., not the church; but others, whose opinion we respect, think they represent the church.

E. L. H., Penticton, B. C.

Luke 23:43 is correctly punctuated. It would be puerile to change it to read, "Verily I say unto thee today." That was verily apparent. The force of what Jesus said was in the immediacy of the reward. Against soul-sleeping see Luke 16:23-31; Philippians 1:23; 2 Corinthians 5:1-6.

W. P., Traverse City, Mich.

Whatever may be the cause of worldliness and indifference in the church in rural communities the remedy is the same, namely, Christ. If people will not attend and support the church as they aught Christ must be taken to them personally and into their homes.

L. E. S., Madison, S. Dak.

(1) Movies and the modern dance were unknown in Bible times, hence no verses of Scripture directly condemning them. Are they good in themselves? Is their influence helpful? What sort of lives do they live who act in the movies, or who are infatuated with the dance? For guiding principles see Romans 15:2; 14:21; John 21:15-18.

(2) Christ's questions were not merely to test Peter's love but to develop it.

E. P., Augusta, Ga.

In all probability Adam knew what death was when God used the word in Genesis 2:17. He may not have known about the "second" death (Rev. 20:14), and just when he learned about Satan the Bible is silent.

W. K., Detroit, Mich.

It is difficult to determine the meaning of all of the Greek cities mentioned in the letters to the seven churches (Rev. 2 and 3). G. H. Pember gives the following: (1) Ephesus—relaxation; (2) Smyrna—myrrh or bitterness; (3) Pergamos—a tower; (4) Thyatira—she that is unwearied in sacrifices; (5) Sardis—renovation; (6) Philadelphia—brotherly love; (7) Laodicea—the judgment of the people.

J. M. R., Salina, Kan.

(1) Deuteronomy 1:22-23 states the occasion of the sending of the spies, while Numbers 13:1,2 gives God's approval.

(2) Moses died and was buried in the land of Moab (Deut. 34:5,6). The obscure allusion in Jude to Satan contending for the body of Moses seems to teach that the body was not allowed to decay. The re-appearance upon the Mount of Transfiguration gives further support to this.

Jesus in Gethsemane

Luke 22:39-48, 54

Golden Text:—"Christ also hath once suffered for our sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God." —1 Peter 3:18.

I. Jesus at the Mount of Olives (v. 39).

He went from the upper room under cover of night to the garden of Gethsemane, a favorite resort on the slope of the Mount of Olives a short distance east of Jerusalem. It is a place where the oil was crushed out of the olives; Gethsemane means oil press. There is a striking significance in Jesus' coming to this place. Olive oil was precious being used both for food and lighting. The bruising and crushing of Christ in this garden has yielded the largest blessings to the world. It has provided food for their souls and light for their lives.

II. His Companions (vv. 39, 40). Peter, James and John, who had been with Him on the Mount of Transfiguration were permitted to go with Him into the deep shadows of the garden. He took those who were best able to apprehend the meaning of the tragic hour to be His sympathizing companions. This was needed to prepare them as His witnesses. Then, too, as a human being He craved sympathy. Knowing the peculiar trial through which they would soon pass He needed them to prepare so as to be ready. They needed to taste the bitter cup of which He drank, and of which they too would drink.

III. Jesus Praying (vv. 41-44).

1. He Withdrew from the Disciples (v. 41). Even these disciples of the inner circle could not go with him. He tore Himself away from them for He must be alone in this darkest hour. He kneeled down and prayed.

2. What He Said (vv. 42-44). "If thou be willing remove this cup from me." The cup did not mean the physical sufferings of the cross, though they were very great. He did not now desire to escape from the cross and thus stop short of His redemptive work, for this was the supreme purpose of His coming into the world (Heb. 2:14). It was rather the revelation to Him by the cross which loomed before Him, of His identification with sin in becoming the world's Redeemer. By virtue of the holiness and perfection of His nature, He could do nothing else than shrink from it. He saw in this, the turning away of His Father's face. The cup then meant death as the bearer of sin. Knowing what was before Him, He came to Gethsemane for this specific hour. In this trying hour He consciously brought His human will into accord with the divine will. Though the cup was bitter, He bowed in submission to the Father's will. So great was the agony of this hour that His sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground. In this crucial hour an angel from heaven strengthened Him. He won the victory in submission to His Father's will and from henceforth went with unfaltering steps to the cross.

IV. The Disciples Sleeping (vv. 45, 46).

They had boasted of their fidelity, but could not watch with Him for an hour. He had issued a word of warning to them, but they were so benumbed with sorrow that they failed. He gently rebuked them, and commanded that they rise and pray lest they enter into temptation.

V. Jesus Betrayed (vv. 47, 48).

1. The Betrayer (v. 47). Betrayal was by Judas one of the twelve. He had enjoyed the most intimate relations with the Lord, eating with Him, listening to His teaching, witnessing His marvelous miracles and enjoying His confidence. This intensifies its sadness. Now he is guiding the mob to arrest the blessed Saviour.

2. The Sign of Betrayal (v. 47). It was the kiss, the token of the most tender affection and friendship. He now degrades it by making it the token of disloyalty and treason. Jesus' tender words to this infamous disciple shows the infinite tenderness of His heart. If Judas had been at all human this pathetic appeal would have smitten him to the very heart. How many professing disciples have proven their disloyalty to the Master and even betrayed Him! All who bear the name Christian, and especially ministers and teachers who deny the virgin birth, deity and vicarious atonement of Christ are following in the footsteps of Judas. May each one inquire, "Lord, is it I?"

VI. Jesus Arrested (v. 54).

The multitude with swords and clubs, led by Judas, invaded the sacred precincts of the garden and arrested Jesus and brought Him before the high priest. Peter followed Him afar off. Peter's down-fall may be traced to his self-confidence. He was sincere in his purpose but being over-confident and failing to watch and pray he failed in the crucial hour.

Jesus Crucified

Golden Text:—"He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed."—Isaiah 53:5.

We now face the greatest tragedy of all times. No record in the annals of history approaches it; it is the very climax of all history. Though unique in its blackness, from it flows streams of liberty and life for all the world. Let every teacher have the personal experience of Christ's death for him, and then get his pupils to see that Christ's death was instead of their own death. We escape judgment because judgment fell upon Him. He was made to be sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him (2 Cor. 5:21).

I. The Place of Crucifixion (v. 33). They led Him away to Calvary, a hill north of Jerusalem resembling a skull. "Calvary" is the Latin word and "Golgotha" is the Hebrew. This is a significant name for the place where man's redemption was accomplished. The skull is an apt picture of man's condition as the result of sin—life and intelligence are gone, leaving only the dark empty cavern which once contained them. Jesus was not crucified in the city for He was to suffer without the gate (Heb. 13:12). "The mode of Christ's death had been foretold under a variety of types and figures. The brazen serpent signified that He was to be lifted up. The lamb upon the altar showed that His blood must be shed. His hands and feet must be pierced. He must be wounded and tormented. His ears were to be filled with revilings. Upon His vesture lots were to be cast, and vinegar was to be given Him to drink. These and divers requirements as to the Messiah's death had been foretold in Jewish prophecy, and now the Gentile world came forward with a mode of death that marvelously combined them all. This was the cross."

II. His Companions on the Cross (v. 33). Two malefactors were crucified with Him. Their names are not given. This is a fulfillment of the Scriptures. "He was numbered with the transgressors" (Isa. 53:12).

III. His Forgiving Love (v. 34). He cried, "Father, forgive them." He doubtless had in mind not only the soldiers who acted for the government, but the Jews who in their blindness were ignorant of the enormity of their crime. He had no hatred in His heart. He yearned for their salvation.

IV. The World Revealed (vv. 34-43). Jesus Christ on the cross is the supreme touchstone laying bare the heart of the world. Take a cross section of the world at any time since Christ was crucified and representatives of their classes were found around Jesus on the cross. The cross is the judgment of this world (John 12:31).

1. The Covetous (v. 34). They gambled for His seamless robe right under the cross where He was dying. This represents those whose primary interest in Christ is a means to get gain. If they had had eyes they could have beheld a robe of righteousness being provided in His death to cover their sinful nakedness.

2. The Indifferent (v. 35). The people stood beholding. The great mass of the world gaze upon the crucified Christ with stolid indifference.

3. The Scoffers (vv. 35-39). (1) The rulers reviled Him for His claim to being a Saviour. They wanted a Saviour, but not a crucified Saviour. Many today are religious, but have only contempt for a salvation which centers in a blood atonement. They have uttered a great truth when they said, "He saved others," t he could not have saved Himself a others, because God's plan was to sav others by giving Himself. (2) The o'diers reviled Him for claiming to be a king. The title, "King of the Jews," had been placed over him in bitter irony, but it was true, for by right of the Davidic covenant He shall be King o v e r Israel (2 Sam. 7:8-16). Through His death He came into the place of kingship over all who will acknowledge Him. The fact that the superscription was written in Greek, Hebrew and Latin shows He was to be King over all the world. (3) The impenitent malefactor (v. 39). This brutal man joins in reviling the Saviour even when he was under condemnation.

4. The Penitent Malefactor (vv. 40-43). The conscious sinner who discerned the heart of the Saviour prayed for mercy. The salvation of this penitent man is a remarkable picture of the saving power of Christ. The man confessed his sin as against God and cried to Jesus for salvation. He saw that the dying man was the forgiving God. The fact that he acknowledged his sin as against God showed that he was penitent.

His request for Christ to remember him when He came into His kingdom shows that he recognized that the one who was dying on the cross was making atonement for sin and that He would come to reign as King. His salvation was immediate. Christ said, "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise."

V. The Death of Christ (vv. 44-46).

So shocking was the crime that nature threw around the Son of God a shroud to hide Him from the godless crowd. Darkness was upon the land at noon day. When the price of sin was paid He cried with a loud voice showing that He still had vitality, that His death was not through exhaustion but by His sovereign will. He died like no other in all history.

Review
Jesus the World's Saviour

Golden Text:—"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."—1 Timothy 1:15.

The method of review must be determined by the grade of the class, by the test of the teachers, and by the nature of the studies of the quarter. Three methods are suggested:

A. Centering in the Topic—Jesus the World's Saviour. This method is suggested by Dr. Crannell.

I. The World's Liberator.
1. From Diseases, Lessons 1, 5.
2. From "Legalism," Lesson 1.
3. From Pride, Lessons, 2 6.
4. From Selfishness, Lessons 2, 5.
5. From Prejudice, Lesson 7.
6. From the Sinful Past, Lesson 7.

II. The World's Teacher.
1. About Sin and Salvation, Lesson 3.
2. About Human Duty:
   (a) To Others, Lessons 2, 4.
   (b) To God, Lessons 5, 8, 9.
   (c) To State, Lesson 9.
   (d) With Money, Lessons 4, 8, 9.
3. About Prayer, Lesson 6.

III. The World's Sacrifice
1. Sacrifice Faced, Accepted, Lesson 10.
2. Sacrifice Rendered, Lesson 11.

B. Modern Applications of the Lessons. This scheme calls for reports by members of the class to whom assignments were previously made. This is taken from Peloubet's Notes.

Lesson I. What should we keep of the old-time Sabbath?

Lesson II. Why it is hard to be humble today.

Lesson III. Are our churches really open to the prodigals?

Lesson IV. What should our rich men do for our Lazaruses?

Lesson V. Men and women who deserve much gratitude and receive little.

Lesson VI. What may we reasonably expect from prayer?

Lesson VII. Why it is hard for a modern business man to be a Christian.

Lesson VIII. How the church should utilize its average members.

Lesson IX. How can we get our church members to give as much as they should?

Lesson X. Things that Christians do not grieve enough over.

Lesson XI. How the message of the cross might be brought to all men in a generation.

C. The Central Teaching of the Lessons:

Lesson I. There is no malady of man connected with soul or body which Jesus cannot heal.

Lesson II. Unselfishness will move one to humbly take the lowest place in life, esteeming others better than himself.

Lesson III. God is longing and waiting to welcome to His bosom the vilest sinner who comes with contrition of heart.

Lesson IV. The one who lives only for this life shall surely suffer agony and torment in the life to come.

Lesson V. Ingratitude is common to the natural heart. The Lord expects those who experience His salvation to give Him their love and gratitude in return.

Lesson VI. Those who pray to God in the right spirit shall surely get the blessings sought.

Lesson VII. The supreme purpose of the coming of Jesus Christ to the earth, taking upon Himself our humanity, and dying on the cross, was to save lost men.

Lesson VIII. Upon those who have not been faithful in the use of gifts the Lord shall execute judgment at His coming.

Lesson IX. We are responsible to God, but God measures our gifts by the extent of our ability.

Lesson X. Bitter agony was suffered by Christ when he bore our sins.

Lesson XI. In Christ's death a full price was paid for our sins.

The Walk to Emmaus
Luke 24:13-31

Golden Text:—Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen (Luke 24: 5,6).

I. The Walk of Two Discouraged Disciples (vv. 13-15).

Emmaus was seven and one-half miles northwest of Jerusalem. Just why they were walking this way we do not surely know. Perhaps their home was there, or they were merely walking to seek relief from their stunning sorrow. If they had believed what Jesus told them about His death and resurrection they would have escaped this great disappointment. Unbelief causes many heartaches and disappointments. One of these disciples was Cleopas, but the other is unknown. The topic of conversation was the tragedy of the cross and the resurrection rumors. So little had His teaching about His resurrection impressed them that the reports which the women brought were as idle tales to them. If they had believed what He said about coming forth from the grave they would have been expecting to hear just such reports as were being circulated.

II. The Unrecognized Companion (vv. 16-24).

1. Who he was—Jesus. While they reasoned together on the wonderful events of the last few days on this journey Jesus joined them. Even when He questioned them concerning their sadness they did not recognize Him. Many times we are so taken up with our sorrows and disappointments that we do not recognize Jesus though walking by our side!

2. His Question (v. 17). Perceiving their sadness and perplexity He sought to help them by calling forth a statement of their grief. This question surprised them and caused them to jump at the conclusion that He was a stranger in Jerusalem, for the condemnation and crucifixion of the great prophet of Nazareth were so recent and notorious that no one who had lived in Jerusalem could be ignorant of them. One valuable feature of the unbelief of the disciples was that it revealed the fact that they were not credulous enthusiasts but hard to convince. Out of this incredulity of the disciples developed the unshaken faith in the word of the resurrection.

III. The Scriptures Opened (vv. 25-31).

1. His Rebuke (v. 25). He did not rebuke them for not believing the strange stories they had heard, but for ignorance and lack of confidence in the Old Testament Scriptures. They had only accepted such parts of the Old Testament as suited their notions. Men and women who do not believe all that the Scriptures say, especially about the work of the blessed Saviour, are entirely blameworthy. The very center and heart of the Old Testament Scriptures is the death and resurrection of Christ. It is ignorance of the Scriptures and unbelief of the wonderful and complete redemption wrought by Christ that robs us of many joys, and power and efficiency as workers for Christ. Christ will be the teacher of all who will open their hearts unto Him.

2. Jesus Recognized (v. 31). While sitting at meat with the disciples their eyes were opened as they saw Him bless the bread and distribute it to them. We, too, can see the Lord on such common occasions as eating a meal if we have open eyes. Indeed we ought to see Him when eating, selling, buying, and in our recreations, for He has promised us His presence.

IV. The Effect Upon the Disciples (vv. 32-35).

They were so filled with joy over this revelation of the Saviour that they hastened back to Jerusalem to tell the other disciples of His resurrection. Those who have had the Scriptures opened to them touching the death and resurrection of Christ cannot help but hasten to make it known to others.

"And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring"—John 10:16.

In last month's issue we traced that little but forceful word "must" as it runs through the record of our Saviour's life. Here we meet it once again, and in no passage is it more impressive. "Them also I must bring"—sheep not of the Jewish fold of the days of His flesh, nor yet of the Anglo-Saxon fold of today, but other sheep, some from the jungles of dark Africa, some from the burning plains of India, some from the teeming cities of China, some from the yet unpenetrated depths of South American forests, the bleak mountain plateaux of Central Asia and the lonely islands of the Pacific. Must He bring these other sheep also? Will His heart not be satisfied, His will not be fulfilled, His task not be completed until these other lost sheep have been gathered into the fold? Verily, no! He died not for one race only, but for the whole world. The bride for the Lamb is not to be an American or a European bride merely, but an international bride comprising souls out of every nation and kindred and people and tongue.

One step further. If all this is so, then some one, yes, many a some one who loves Christ well enough, must go for Him to each of these neglected fields, and seek and find and bring home these lost but precious sheep of the Good Shepherd. And others must let go, and still others must help go. Christ has no eyes on earth to see and pity these lost souls but our eyes; no feet to go, no tongue to tell, no hands to reach forth and rescue but ours. He is the great Head and we the members of His body, and the Head is ever dependent upon the members for the execution of its will. The voice from the throne is still calling: "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" Who then that reads these lines will feel the need, and heed the call, and like Isaiah respond, saying: "Here am I, send me!"

"There are other sheep," the Master said,
"That are not of this fold;
I must seek them out, and bring them back,
From the mountains wild and cold.
They shall hear my voice and follow me,
They are waiting now to come,
But the under shepherds must go forth,
And gather the lost ones home."

THE BANDIT SITUATION IN CHINA

Letters now to hand from missionaries of the China Inland Mission in Honan, Northern Anhwei and Yunnan, as well as from Norwegian Lutheran missionaries in Honan, give full accounts of the bandit operations in those provinces, and in particular of the capture of various missionaries and other foreigners in Honan, and the harrowing experiences through which they passed until they either escaped or were released. The tale of burning and looting of cities, towns and villages, ruthless destruction of homes, crops and personal property, and of murder, mutilation and outrage perpetrated upon the defenseless populace, is truly heart-sickening.

One C. I. M. missionary writes: "In Honan there must now be tens of thousands of people homeless, their grain all burned, their winter firing consumed to ashes, and nothing remaining of what was once their home but four blackened walls surrounding a pile of smoking rubbish, the best of their cattle and all their horses and mules gone, their carts taken away, members of their families either dead, missing or violated. The suffering of these poor people this winter will be terrible."

It is a tremendous relief to learn that in Honan, where the worst of these troubles have been, the situation has apparently improved, the bandits having gone west to their old haunts in the mountains. It is reported that a punitive expedition of two divisions of the regular Chinese army was being sent against them. All the missionaries taken captive have recovered their freedom. They and the missions they represent, however, have suffered heavily in the looting of their personal effects and the destruction of mission buildings of several stations. They need our sympathy, prayer and help.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE IN CHINA

Sad and serious as the above conditions and the continued political strife and confusion in general in China are, it is possible to overestimate the gravity of China's present situation. There are some relieving features and distinctly brighter aspects. A well-informed resident in China states that not the whole, but only about one-fourth, of the great republic has been directly involved in these disturbances, the bulk of the country having continued under fairly normal conditions.

Future Chinese Christian Mothers

Eleven out of a larger group of orphan girls under the care of Rev. A. N. Cameron, Changsha, Hunan, China. What a blessed work to lead such little ones out of superstition, sin and sorrow unto Christ and train them to win others!

China's experiences since the Revolution of 1911 have after all been no exception to those of western lands following their similar political revolutions. In every case an interval, longer or shorter, of disorder and strife has preceded the effecting of stability in political and social affairs Those who know China best have confidence that with her splendid qualities which underlie these waves of unrest on the surface, she will weather the storm and in the end successfully solve her present problems.

But missionaries and Christians in general, who after all are China's truest friends, will feel that a happy issue for this great land from her present difficulties and dangers can come only through God's intervention and help. To this end unceasing prayer is urged upon all who know the Lord and love China that He will humble the nation and its rulers to a recognition of their need of reliance upon Him, and that He will raise up strong leaders of integrity, ability and fearless courage to unite the sundered factions and deliver China from bloody brigands and unprincipled politicians on the inside, and from greedy scheming powers on the outside.

MISSIONARY PROGRESS NEVERTHELESS

It is a cause for thanksgiving to God that despite disturbed conditions in China, and the dangers and difficulties involved for missionaries in the affected parts, most encouraging missionary reports continue to come from every section of that land.

China's Millions, the organ of the China Inland Mission, says: "The general outlook of the work throughout the field is distinctly cheering. This is certainly the day of opportunity in China, and much is being done to take advantage of it." Up to December 15 last, 4,900 baptisms within the C. I. M. during 1922 had been reported to headquarters, with a considerable number of centers still to hear from. Many special tent campaigns for the heathen, besides classes for Bible study and conferences for native workers and members, had been held with manifest blessing. Not a few of the Chinese Christians had pledged time for voluntary effort for the evangelization of the districts in which they live. The work of grace among the aboriginal tribes of southwest China continues unabated.

This great mission still appeals for sorely needed reinforcements, particularly doctors, of whom several are urgently needed for the existing hospitals. One C. I. M. doctor, for instance, at present has the "unenviable distinction" of being the only foreign-trained doctor in the whole of the vast province of Kansu with 10,000,000 people. How wrong, how criminal this is! Prayer, as nothing else, changes things; therefore let us pray.

NORTH CHINA THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

A circular setting forth the aims, standards, curriculum and work of this institution well merits attention. This seminary, located in the Shantung province, has been founded by the conservative Chinese leaders of the church in Shantung to help meet the demand arising from the inroads of "modernist" teaching among missionary institutions in China, for schools of ministerial training that shall be true to the Bible and the great essential doctrines of the Christian faith. It is highly creditable to the Chinese churches of that province that such a demand has been made and such a successful effort launched to meet this demand.

The present faculty of this seminary consists of three American and two Chinese teachers, with Rev. W. M. Hayes, D.D., LL.D., one of the ablest Presbyterian theologians in China, as its president. The need for such a school, and the blessing of God upon it, are evidenced by the fact that already it is crowded to capacity with students from five provinces of China, as well as from Korea, and many inquiries and applications for entrance are being received from every section of the country.

Many more such schools will be called for in China and the other great mission fields, under present conditions, to train men for the defense and propagation of the true gospel.

NEW WORK IN MESOPOTAMIA

One good result of the World War, among so many bad results, is a new opportunity for missionary work in Mesopotamia, due to that land having passed out of Turkish control and come under the British mandate. The Church Missionary Society formerly at work there has had to withdraw, but it has been happily arranged for the Boards of the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches of America to take up work jointly in that field. Five central stations are proposed, in two of which, Mosul and Bagdad, work has already been begun by Presbyterian and Reformed missionaries respectively.

MISSIONARY PERSONALS

Dr. S. M. Zwemer, the well known missionary leader and authority on Moslem lands, returned to America in November after a year spent abroad, partly in Egypt and partly in a careful survey of the Mohammedan fields in North Africa and Malaysia. His recent address at the Institute was full of up-to-date information, and as full of optimism concerning missions to Moslems because of the changes in the Near East making for greater missionary opportunity and influence.

Mr. E. E. Strother, ('07) General Secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor for China, writes of the encouraging outlook in his work since his recent return from furlough. He asks for prayer in behalf of the new C. E. topic books for 1923, of which 50,000 were to be distributed among homes in all parts of China for use in family worship and village nightly prayer meetings as well as regular C. E. meetings.

Rev. ('12) and Mrs. C. B. LeFevre ('16) have been engaged for some time in Bible training work for native evangelists in the Alliance Mission in Chile, S. A. They are now planning for a new Bible institute at Temuco, with a fuller course of training on lines of the Moody Bible institute. They have a splendid field and excellent material for training, and God is greatly using them.

THE SPIRIT OF THE RESURRECTION

Romans 6: 1-14

The spirit of the resurrection is:

1. A spirit of Power. Eph. 1:19, 20.
2. A spirit of Promise. 1 Pet. 1:3-5.
3. A spirit of Life. Rom. 8:9-11.
4. A spirit of Sonship. Rom. 8:14-17.
5. A spirit of Holiness. Rom. 1:4.
6. A spirit of Love. Gal. 5:22-26.

—Selected.

THE BIBLE HAS—

1.	An Origin	that is mysterious.
2.	A Unity	that is marvelous.
3.	A Depth	that is matchless.
4.	An Existence	that is miraculous.
5.	An Influence	that is mighty.
6.	A Fulfillment	that is manifest.
7.	A Proof	that is maturable.

THE PENITENT MALEFACTOR ON THE CROSS

Luke 23:39-43

I. Reverence for God.
Reasons:
1. Indwelling sense of sin.
2. Impending sentence of death.

II. Rebuke of the Thief.
Due to:
1. His railing on Christ.
2. His rudeness in conversation.

III. Repentance for Sin.
1. Public.
2. Personal.

IV. Recognition of Christ as:
1. Sinless.
2. Saviour.

V. Request of Faith.
1. Directed to the Saviour.
2. Definite in Substance.

VI. Reward of Faith.
1. Immediate.
2. Unmerited.

—Elizabeth Christensen.

THE POWER OF THE RESURRECTION

"That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection."—Phil. 3:10.

It is well to have the evidences of the resurrection clearly in mind and to know the infallible proofs that Jesus Christ rose from the dead on the third day so that it becomes to us a historic fact as well established as any well-known event of the past. But far better is it to know by experience that Christ has risen within the soul and that we have risen with Him to newness of life and that henceforth we are seeking those things that are above where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God.—Selected.

THE DELIVERED DEMONIAC

Luke 8:26-40

I. His Condition.
1. Demon possessed (2 Tim. 2:26).
2. Naked (Isa. 64:6).
3. Dwells among the dead (Eph. 2:1).

II. His Confession.
1. "Jesus, thou Son of God" (v. 28).
2. "What is thy name?" "Legion" (v. 30).

III. His Conversion.
1. Demons cast out (Col. 1:13).
2. Clothed (Isa. 61:10).
3. Dwells with the living (v. 35).

IV. His Commission.
To tell others (v. 39, cf. Acts 1-8).

—Clinton E. Garvin.

THREE LOOKS FROM THE TABLE

1 Cor. 11:26

The Lord's Supper is a solemn commemoration and recognition of redemption. The Passover type brings this to the surface.

1. The Backward Look—to the Cross:
He was "given" (Luke 22:19) and "broken" (1 Cor. 11:24) for our salvation.
His death makes possible our life.
It must be appropriated by us to be ours.
With this look, the ordinance expresses our gratitude for His death and our salvation.
It is for believers.

2. The Upward Look—to the Throne:
Christ is our life (John 14:19).
Our hope is in Him.
Our faith is in Him (Col. 3:1-3).
With this look, the ordinance is a testimony to His presence in us.

3. The Forward Look—to the Glory:
"Till He come."
When He shall appear (Col. 3:4).
What we shall be (1 John 3:2).
With this look, we are on a mount of vision with His glory all about.

"Jesus, Thy feast we celebrate;
We show Thy death, we sing Thy name
Till Thou return, and we shall eat
The marriage supper of the Lamb."

—H. E. Lininger.

PAUL'S VISIONS

"I was not disobedient."—Acts 26:19.

1. The Damascus Road, Acts 9; 26:14-19. The Disclosure of God—Conversion.
2. At Troas, Acts 16:9. The Direction of Life—Calling.
3. At Corinth, Acts 18:9. The Dedication to Task—Consecration.
4. At Jerusalem, Acts 23:11. The Deliverance of Self—Courage; God's care.
5. At Miletus, Acts 27:23. The Devotion to Others—Confidence, conquest.

—E. O. Sellers.

THE MARKS OF REPENTANCE

Illustrated by Peter's Fall and Restoration

(Luke 22)

1. It Excites the Lord's Compassion.—"The Lord turned, and looked upon Peter" (v. 61).
2. It Exercises the Mind.—"Peter remembered the word of the Lord" (v. 61)
3. It Exhibits Itself Outwardly—"Peter went out and wept bitterly" (v. 62).
4. It Expresses Itself in Work—"When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren" (v. 32). See his subsequent activity.

—S. R. Cambie.

THE GRACIOUSNESS OF GRACE

Titus 2:11-14

I. The Abundant Provision of Grace. "Bringeth Salvation."

II. The Boundless Horizon of Grace. "To all men" (all classes).

III. The Enlightening Characteristic of Grace. "Teaching us."

IV. The Negative Expulsion of Grace. "Denying ungodliness and worldly lusts."

V. The Living Energy of Grace. "We should live soberly, etc."

VI. The Waiting Attitude of Grace. "Looking for that blessed hope, etc."

VII. The Purifying Power of Grace. "And purifying unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

—James Ostema.

THE SAVIOUR'S SORROW

Lam. 1:12: "Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? Behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow."

1. The Sorrow of His Solitude:
1. Alone in His poverty (Luke 9:58).
2. Alone in His prayer (Matt. 14:23).
3. Alone in His purpose (Matt. 16: 21, 22).
4. Alone in His passion (Luke 22:41-45).

2. The Sorrow of His Shame:
1. The shame of His surroundings (John 1:46; Matt. 13:55).
2. The shame of His companions (Luke 5:27-31).
3. The shame of His humilation (Matt. 27:27-31).

3. The Sorrow of His Sufferings:
1. No sympathy from men (Mark 14:50).
2. No sympathy from God (Mark 15:34).

—Clarence H. Benson.

HOW READEST THOU?

Bible study, to be effectual in the formation of Christian character, must be

1. Prayerful, in dependence upon the Holy Spirit.

2. Reverent, in the attitude of subjection to His revealed will. We come not to the Bible to judge, but to be judged.

3. Careful, marking the words, and understanding the sense thereof.

4. Thoughtful, meditating upon the precepts of God.

5. Systematic, not flitting from promise to promise only, but gathering of the heavenly manna from all the Scriptures, "an omer for each day."—Concise Course of Bible Studies.

A CATECHISM FOR CHRISTIANS
To Be Repeated When Alone With the Lord

1.—Of Conversion

1. Have I ever felt the burden of the souls of the unsaved who attend the same church as I do?

2. Do I ever plead with God for their salvation?

3. Do I rejoice when I hear of any of them surrendering heart and soul to Christ?

4. Am I ready to speak a word of encouragement, and to lend a helping hand to young believers?

2.—Of the Habits of the Spiritual Life

1. Do I study to arrange my time so that every day I have a few minutes of soul-communion with God?

2. Do I give myself a chance of growing in spiritual strength by feeding regularly on God's Word?

3. Am I ever absent from God's house, where blessing and refreshment are promised, without a reason which I should be prepared to give to the Lord Jesus?

4. Do I cultivate the acquaintance of bright and earnest Christians whose influence is inspiring, and whose enthusiasm is contagious?

5. Are any of the books I read in my spare time such as would brace me and make me more devoted to Christ?

3.—Of Money

1. Do I realize that my money is a stewardship which I have received from God, and for which I must render an account?

2. Does what I spend every week on tobacco or sweets, on recreation or amusement, or papers and magazines, bear any comparison with what I give weekly to God?

3. If all I spent last year on myself were summed up, and placed alongside of what I gave to God in the same time, would I be ashamed?

4. Do I still give the same to God as I did some years ago when I was poor, or have I increased my givings as God has prospered me?

5. When I give to God, do I give cheerfully and willingly?

6. Does my giving to God cost me self-denial or sacrifice?

7. When I find it necessary to retrench, do I begin with my givings to God, or with my personal luxuries?

8. Do I realize that giving is a means of grace, and that it is an honor to be permitted to help on God's Cause?

4.—Of Sanctuary Sins

1. Do I attend church as regularly as I can, or do I sometimes stay away, making an excuse that I would never dream of giving to Christ?

2. Do I allow myself sufficient time to get to church so as to have a few moments to compose my heart before the worship begins? Or, do I now and again hurry in after the service has begun, and so disturb the other worshipers?

3. Do I ever allow my thoughts when in church to wander to my home, my business, my reading, or my pleasure? Or, when I take my place in my pew, do I spend a minute in silent prayer, asking that God would bring every thought into subjection?

4. Do I listen to the sermon as a message from God to me? Or, am I more taken up with the messenger, criticising his thoughts, his grammar, his style, or his manner?

5. Do I, on leaving church, so speak and act that the good impressions made by the worship are effaced? Or do I pray, ere I leave, that God would help me so to spend the rest of the day that the good seed may have a chance to take deep root in my heart?—C. J. T. M., in The Christian.

A lazy man's prayers are not very apt to be heard, for he doesn't undertake to help to answer them as far as he is able. As Spurgeon used to say, "Though God steers the ship, we must pull the ropes."

Bringing the first fruits and the sacrifices to the Temple
A Specimen of one of the 29 tail pieces

Bible lovers should read this historical romance of the times of the prophet Isaiah. It will make the reader, through its thrilling pages, live in the time and conditions that surround the Bible Stories.

What the Reviewers Say:

Professor of Semitic Languages, Princeton, N. J.:
"Within the limits of a Foreword it is impossible adequately to do justice to the scholarship and intrinsic worth of such a work as this; but, without flattery, it can safely be asserted that Mr. Schapiro has presented in a singularly fascinating way in its English dress, the greatest novel that has ever been produced in the Hebrew language. To say more would be like painting the lily or refining pure gold."

Charles R. Erdman (D. D.),
Professor, Princeton Theological Seminary.
"Most of us remember that the ancient Hebrews gave to the world its greatest literary masterpiece. It is therefore a privilege to be given access to the product of a modern Jewish author who has won a worthy place among the writers of fiction.
Even one who is unacquainted with the original, and who lacks your knowledge of Jewish literature, may be allowed to register his impression that in your translation this romance has lost nothing of its atmosphere and color, nothing of its passion and appeal. Your work will be praised particularly by those who have a taste for the unusual, the novel, the unique."

Edgar Whitaker Work, D. D.,
Pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, New York City:
"A mind jaded with the reading of 'Main Street,' 'Brass,' 'The Sheik' and such like novels of our time may well turn to Mapu's novel for a renewal of faith in God and in life. It is strong in its plot. We seem to hear the very tones of the Prophet Isaiah, and to feel the presence of the Assyrian host at the gates of Jerusalem."

The Living Church
A strong romance in which the Old Testament life becomes real and the scenes and beliefs of the Hebrews of the days of Isaiah live again. A remarkable work.

The Sunday School Times
With monumental scholarship Mr. Schapiro has mastered the spirit of one of the greatest uninspired books of its kind ever written in Hebrew, translated it from the native tongue of its characters into English without losing the tempo or grip of the original author, and thrown open a window of clear vision into the days of ancient Israel.
The thread of a great love binds together a description of events which will illumine the age of Isaiah as "Ben Hur" did the days of Christ. This book is not a "religious novel," merely. It is more than that—it is a masterpiece.

Every Bible Teacher, Student, Lover, should own this book.

GODLY FEAR

1. A Timely Exhortation.—"Be not high-minded, but fear" (Rom. 11:20).
2. A Noble Example.—"I was with you in weakness and in fear" (1 Cor. 2:3).
3. A Balancing Knowledge.—"Knowing the fear of the Lord," etc. (2 Cor. 5:11, R. V.).
4. A Saving Element.—"Perfecting holiness in the fear of God" (2 Cor. 7:1).
5. An Essential Condition.—"Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling" (Phil. 2:12).
6. A Holy Grace.—"Pass the time of your sojourning here in fear" (1 Peter 1:17).
7. A Remembered Danger.—"Others save with fear" (Jude 23).

3. Precaution to Silence Truth (Matt. 28:11-15).

IV. Evidence of Impartial Witnesses:
1. Public Observance of Sunday.
2. Public Observance of Easter.

—Clarence H. Benson.

RESURRECTION JOY AND POWER

The story is told of a young lady who once said to President Faunce of Brown University: "I am a scientific student, and I want to know if you can prove to me that Jesus Christ rose from the dead." He replied: "I think I can, but it is a great deal better to let Jesus Christ Himself prove it to you; I could indicate the line of evidence that establishes the resurrection of Christ as a historical fact, but it will be far better if you will ask Jesus Christ Himself to prove to you that He lives. I advise you to study His life and to ask Him to prove it to you." She went away, and after several weeks she reported the result of her experiment. She came to President Faunce with a face glowing and radiant with a joy, not of this world, and said: "Oh, President Faunce, Jesus has answered my prayer and has proved to me Himself that He lives; and I rejoice in the power of His resurrection." That is what Easter should bring to every Christian, a new sense of the power of His resurrection.

INGRATITUDE

"Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?"—Luke 17:17.

1. The Divine Thought about Ingratitude.
2. The Disparity of Thankfulness and Ingratitude.
3. Today's Reasons for the Absence of the Careless and Thankless Nine.
4. Our Reason for Gratefully and Reverently Thanking God with the Samaritan.

—Roy H. Brown.

Obedience is the only path that leads to the glory of God.

Patience is the guardian of faith, the preserver of peace, the cherisher of love, the teacher of humanity. Patience governs the flesh, strengthens the spirit, sweetens the temper, stifles anger, extinguishes envy, subdues pride; she bridles the tongue, restrains the hand, tramples upon temptation, endures persecution, consummates martyrdom.—Bishop Horne.

Truth Illuminated

By Shafts from Various Quarters

THE WHOLESOME INFLUENCE OF A GOOD MAN

"The keeper of the inn where he did use to lodge, when he came to Derby, would profanely say to his companions, that he wished Mr. Cotton were gone out of his house, for he was not able to swear while that man was under his roof." —Life of Cotton Mather.

A MATTER OF VIEWPOINT

A celebrated physician who always entered the sick room with a smile upon his lips was asked how he could be living among so many terrible diseases and yet not be overwhelmed by them. He replied: "I always look upon disease from a curative standpoint." The heart of Christ would have broken long before He reached the cross had not He looked upon sinning humanity from the "curative standpoint." If we would have His joy in us let us take His view of evil.

WEALTH IN THE RUBBISH-HEAP

The refuse of London, which 5000 men are continually engaged in getting rid of, was once a matter of great anxiety to the sanitary authorities. But now it is regarded as a mine of wealth.

Old tins and pans, we are told, are marketable. The ash goes to the land, the rags to the paper mills, the bones to the boilers for glue, and the decaying matter to the destructor to be turned into a valuable fertilizer.

In some instances steam is made by burning the rubbish, and electricity generated with the aid of the steam.

Even so, broken and wasted lives may be transmuted by the alchemy of divine grace into vessels fit for the Master's use.

HOW TO AVOID TEMPTATION

A man once asked an Eastern king if he could tell him how to avoid temptation. The king told him to take a vessel brimful of oil and carry it through the streets of the city without spilling one drop. "If one drop is spilled," said the king, "your head shall be cut off," and he ordered the executioners, with drawn swords, to walk behind the man to carry out his orders.

There happened to be a fair going on in the town, and the streets were crowded with people. However, the man was very careful, and he returned to the king without having spilled one drop of the oil. Then the king asked: "Did you see anyone while you were walking the streets?"

"No," said the man, "I was thinking of the oil; I noticed nothing else."

"Then," said the king, "you have learned how to avoid temptation. Fix your mind on God as you fixed it on the oil. You will not then be tempted to sin."

The Evangelistic Field

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

Dr. J. Gregory Mantle, was one of the speakers at the annual missionary convention at the Alliance Tabernacle, in Toronto, Ont., Jan. 28-Feb. 4.

Dr. John H. Elliott, reports having conducted a union evangelistic campaign at Twin Falls, Idaho, January 14-28. A spirit of unity prevailed.

Mr. and Mrs. John Imrie, assisted in a gracious meeting with one of the most influential churches in St. Joseph, Mo., in January, assisting Rev. C. Ferguson.

T. DeBoyce Franklin writes: "Am in the midst of a blessed meeting at Spring Valley, Minn. God's Spirit is moving in power, and souls are being saved nightly."

Leroy J. Mitchell, writes from Warren, Ill.: "We are in the midst of a fine meeting here. James E. Campbell is the musical director and soloist. Mr. Theodore A. Piper is the pianist and cornetist. From here we go to Mendota, Ill."

Dr. and Mrs. H. P. Dunlop report a blessed work of grace in a meeting at Southgate Gardens, Los Angeles district, in which 77 persons united with the Presbyterian church, out of 166 who went forward.

The Johnston-Swartzbaugh Party report a union tabernacle meeting at Abingdon, Ill. All of the churches of the city united in the movement They report there had been no general awakening in Abingdon since the Hicks and Galloway meeting eighteen years ago, when 700 converts were made.

Theodore M. Hofmeister, pastor, First Baptist Church, Greenfield, O., reports having resigned after two years and a half service, to return to evangelistic work. Dr. Hofmeister will make his headquarters at South Solon, Madison County O.

Robert McMurdo writes from Arizona: "During the month of January I worked the Madison District and tried to stir up interest in the prayer movement for a state-wide revival, conducted cottage prayer meetings, and preached in the high school auditorium. The Madison Baptist church joined the prayer movement and a weekly cottage prayer meeting has been started as the result of this.

Orr A. Cheek writes from Ponca City, Okla.: "I am with Evangelist Rayburn for the second season. We had a great year last year, having had over 5,000 people forward to the altar confessing Christ as their Saviour. About 2,300 have been converted thus far this season in three towns."

The Manlius Baptist Church of Wyanet, Ill., reports having closed a most helpful evangelistic campaign under the leadership of A. W. Littrell and D. L. Moody, of Columbus, O. There were 50 confessions, most of whom will unite with the church. This is an open country church of which Rev. Wayland Nickerson is pastor.

One hundred forty decisions for Christ were recorded in a recent campaign conducted by the Vom Bruch Evangelistic Party in the First United Brethren Church at Tyrone, Pa. In spite of the fact that the meetings ran through the holidays, closing on New Year's Eve, they were well attended. The party next went to Buchanan, Mich.

H. D. Kennedy and wife, write from Westfield, Ind., "A fine work is in progress here. Have recently closed a gracious revival at Angola, Ind., where many sought the Lord. Gave several addresses there, in the college, on the Bible, the deity of Christ, and the atonement. Will open next meeting at Garrett, Ind., Feb. 25, for four weeks.

The Nyburgs, evangelistic singers and children's workers, assisted Rev. Charles E. Bullen, pastor of the M. P. church, Byesville, O., in a four weeks meeting, closing January 28. There were 27 decisions for Christ and the church was quickened. They were to assist the same pastor in another campaign at Robins, O., the following week.

Theodore H. Osborn, reports having closed a meeting at Port Orchard, Wash., with a number of accessions to the churches; also at Orting, Wash., where they had large accessions to the churches. Mr. Osborn says that for 1923 he will not continue his evangelistic party, but will travel alone. His next meeting was to be at Bacoda, Wash.

C. R. Haudenschield writes from Mentesano, Wash.: "In our busy work, we have neglected to send reports of the good work the Lord is giving under our leadership. During November and December Mr. Thompson and I held two most gracious meetings at Olympia and Shelton, Wash. This was the second meeting at Olympia for me, having held a union meeting there some time ago with good results."

R. O. Wine writes: "Have just closed a three weeks meeting at Greenville, O., with 44 conversions. The church building proved to be too small after God's Spirit began to move upon the hearts of the poeple. Business men said it was the first spiritual awakening the city had had for ten years. I am now in the midst of another meeting at Pershing, Ind."

Harry Dixon Loes and Miss Birdie C. Loes report for the closing days at Muncie, Ind., one of their most successful meetings so far this season. Nearly 100 genuine conversions have taken place, a large number being husbands and wives for whom friends have prayed for years. The work among the students of the State Normal School was notable. The Loes assisted the pastor of the Normal City M. E. church.

John R. Snyder, Huntingdon, Pa., reports a very successful year, having held 14 meetings scattered from eastern Pennsylvania to central Kansas, including Philadelphia, Detroit and Kansas City. In the last named place three meetings were held in different sections of the greater city. A large number professed conversion and there were hundreds of additions to the churches where meetings were held.

Dr. Milford H. Lyon Evangelistic Party, report a union evangelistic campaign of 31 churches in New Bedford, Mass., beginning December 31. They had a tabernacle seating 4,000, and a choir of 600 voices led by Horace F. Erwin, a former Institute student. There was a fine spirit of co-operation among the pastors and the churches, with good cottage prayer meetings and committees in charge of the work. Their next meeting was to be at Fostoria, O.

Robert L. Selle, Conference evangelist of the Oklahoma Conference of the M. E. Church, writes: "We spent the month of December in a revival campaign in Richmond, Kan., with Rev. C. J. Knox. A. S. Clark was my co-worker. It was a blessed season of grace. Many found the Lord. Our November meeting was with Rev. H. S. Shook, at Wichita, Kan. In January we had a most gracious revival campaign at Green Mountain church, near Gladbrook, Iowa."

S. Graham Fraser, reports a union revival meeting in North Platte, Neb., where the Christian, Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian churches were united. The meetings were held in the First Methodist Church where from the very beginning there was a lively interest. Mr. Fraser organized an adult choir of more than 100 voices, besides a junior choir of 250 children. After the first two weeks Mr. Fraser, in addition to the musical work, took charge of the preaching as well as the singing. The meetings closed Thanksgiving night at which time the house was filled to its capacity. The results of the meeting were 185 professions and 300 reconsecrations.

Jack and Mrs. Cardiff report souls were brought to Christ, and they had a wonderful meeting at Binghampton, N. Y. They traveled by auto to nearby towns and God has wonderfully blessed the work. Mr. Cardiff has been temporarily associated with the Practical Bible Training School at Bible School Park, N. Y., and recently was asked to arrange with Hon. William J. Bryan to speak at the school. Mr. Cardiff says the Billy Sunday meeting at Binghamton was a wonderful success.

Harry O. Anderson reports having closed a fruitful campaign in Orange County, Calif. One pastor summed up the situation: "The chief problem, to make the people love the Lord as they do the climate." They confined their efforts mostly to the young people and reached in twenty meetings over 1850 young people. There were 189 definite decisions. Mr. Anderson's next meeting was to be with Dr. James A. Francis, First Baptist Church, Los Angeles, beginning February 6.

Charles O. Miller, singing evangelist writes: "Since leaving the First Baptist Church at Miami, Fla., as director of music last March, my wife and I have been back in evangelistic work, working in Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, Texas, Mississippi, Illinois, and Arkansas, closing our year's work at North Little Rock, Ark., in a tabernacle campaign with Floyd John Evans. This resulted in more than 200 additions to the church. We are now making our headquarters at Blackville, S. C."

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Vinaroff closed, December 17, a four weeks meeting in the First M. E. Church at Great Bend, Kan., where they assisted Evangelist W. D. Hamilton. There were 101 conversions of whom 42 came to Christ on the last night's service. A later report comes from the Vinaroffs from Helena, O. They had just closed a two weeks meeting at the Euclid Avenue U. B. Church, Dayton, O. The pastor considered this the most satisfactory meeting of his ministry. There were 40 conversions and 30 accessions to the membership of the church.

Rev. John W. Erskine and Ross E. Bowman, soloist and song leader, have been laboring together in evangelistic work. A very profitable service was held at the Lakeside Church, Muskegon, Mich., closing December 17. Twenty-nine decisions were made for Christ, and many other hearts were awakened to great Christian activity. At the time of writing they were in meetings at Swartz Creek, Mich. They say; "We covet the prayers of the MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY readers that we may be used of God."

Rev. H. D. Geist, Sunbury, Pa., writes: "Miss Sara C. Palmer has just closed what we consider a most successful series of meetings. The church has taken on new life in its different departments, souls have been saved, Christians revived, and family altars established." A later report comes from Frank C. Yost, pastor Sixth Street U. E. Church, Harrisburg, Pa., stating that Miss Palmer's meetings there were blessed with the presence and power of God, and the Christians wonderfully revived. Sixty souls had gone forward at the time of writing.

THE RESIGNATION OF MR. MESSER

Mr. L. Wilbur Messer, for thirty-five years general secretary of the Chicago Y. M. C. A., has resigned in order to become a volunteer worker in the organization. Since Mr. Messer came to Chicago the organization has grown from one building to an organization of twenty-five departments. When Mr. Messer engaged in "Y" work that organization served both men and women, but has been so changed that the scope of the organization now is among young men exclusively.

Bible Types of Modern Women, by Rev. W. Mackintosh, B. D.

Two volumes in a first and a second series. Bible characters are taken as types of present-day women. The addresses are vivid and original and the applications are fitting, making us realize that the Bible characters were taken from life. Their problems are our problems. Acquaintance with them helps us to understand ourselves.

200 pages. 7½x5 inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. $1.50.

G. S.

The Home God Meant, by Rev. George N. Luccock, D.D.

In this book the author endeavors to picture the home as God would have men and women to enjoy. In the fifteen chapters the author considers the most vital problems which concern the ideal home. This is a most helpful book and ought to be in the hands of young people who are contemplating marriage or entering upon the task of building a home.

God Our Contemporary, by Rev. John Henry Jowett, D.D.

This is a volume of fifteen sermons preached by Dr. Jowett in the last two years. He declares "God in Christ Jesus—Our Great Contemporary." He insists that only in the fuller reception of God's grace and the more matured understanding of His will can we find a sufficiency of resource to meet all the perplexities of a soul, and of the wider problems which attach to the reconstruction of human society. Since God is the dwelling place of all generations, our generation will find in God the light and strength for its tasks. This book is valuable not only for its content, but for its homiletic method.

The New Missionary Heroes Series for Young People.

David Livingstone, James Chalmers, William Carey, Pandita Ramabai, MacKay of Uganda, Gilmour of Mongolia, Abel of Kwato, James Hannington, John Williams, Heroes in Madagascar.

This is a uniform series of brief missionary biographies in separate volumes each of about sixty pages. Twelve of the choicest characters have been selected, and the engaging stories of these lives, so full of noble purpose, courageous daring and thrilling adventure, several of them ending in martyrdom for Christ, are told by various authors with such simplicity as to be easily understood by children, and yet with such accuracy and comprehensiveness as to be of real interest and profit to adult readers as well. These books are heartily recommended.

Types of Preachers in the New Testament, by Prof. A. T. Robertson.

The minor characters in the New Testament are presented in this book with such freshness and force as to make them real and vital factors in their own age, and suggestive to preachers and teachers in every age. Dr. Robertson is recognized as one of the greatest Bible scholars of the present time. His great knowledge of facts together with the reverent use of imagination enables him to enter a valley of dry bones and transform them into an army of living men and women.

Apollos, Barnabas, Aquila, Priscilla, Philemon, and a dozen other lesser lights of the New Testament history, are portrayed in this book in such a way that the mind is informed and the heart quickened, and the treasure house of the preacher greatly enriched.

Reigning in Life, by J. East Harrison.

The subtitle of this book, "Heart to Heart Talks on God's Provision for Victory Over Sin," indicates its aim and purpose. It is not too much to say that the aim is accomplished and the purpose fulfilled. Having read many books dealing with the victorious life, we unhesitatingly say that this is among the very best. It is comprehensive, containing twenty-one chapters which deal with every phase of the matter. It is scriptural, with abundant quotations and fine interpretations. It is well balanced, distributing the emphasis in such a way as to show the relative importance of the factors that enter into the victorious life, such as faith, separation, union with Christ, and the operation of God's power in the believer. Those seeking light in this direction will find it through a careful reading of this book.

Scientific Thinking for Young People, by Rev. Howard Agnew Johnson. Ph.D., D.D.

In a day when false science and misguided philosophy has confused the thinking of our young people a book like this is most timely. There can be no conflict of facts and truths, no conflict between true science, true philosophy and true Christianity; but when mere theories are substituted for facts then confusion begins. Dr. Johnson is a clear thinker and an experienced guide. He is not opposed to science; but while acknowledging our great indebtedness to science, philosophy and psychology, he indicates certain wrong deductions that have been made, and shows the value of correct thinking in science as well as religion. His frequent quotations reveal how wide the range his studies have carried him in his search for the truth. When rightly understood and interpreted the Bible is the only up-to-date scientific book upon religion.

An American Diplomat in China, by Paul S. Reinsch.

This is a most readable book in which the author, a man of letters, gives his readers vivid pen-pictures of the little world of national politics and international diplomacy at the capital of China, where he was an important figure as American minister during the eventful period of the World War. His account of such matters as the struggle between the monarchical and republican factions in the Chinese government, the rise and downfall of China's first president, Yuan Shih Kai, Japan's notorious doings with respect to Shantung and "the twenty-one demands," and China's entry into the World War, are of more than ordinary interest as coming from one who was in a position to know the facts at first hand. Dr. Reinsch gives evidence of being a keen observer, and weaves into his narrative many pleasant little incidents and interesting bits of description of life in China apart from his main theme. His references to mission work are few and incidental.

India Old and New, by Sir Valentine Chirol.

A book of solid value written by a thoughtful journalist whom seventeen visits to India, distributed over a period of forty years, have given a thorough mastery of his subject. The author's objective is a true appraisal of today's delicate political situation in India as between continued British control and the growing demand of the Indian people for self-government. He works steadily up to this by tracing India's history through the past centuries and citing the factors which have contributed to making her what she is today, and the events which have led up to the present crisis. Every part of the book is informing, but to the student of current events the sketch of the Hindu reformer Gandhi and his "non-co-operation" movement, is of particular interest. The author while an Englishman shows a freedom from national prejudice and dispenses praise and blame with evident impartiality. He is, moreover, an optimist regarding India and feels that with the exercise of proper restraint and reason a happy issue for all parties concerned can be hoped for.

The Shantung Question, by Ge-Zay Wood.

Few incidents have ever assumed such magnitude in international politics or provoked such universal and heated discussion as the so-called Shantung question. The author of this large volume was a member of the Chinese delegation to the Washington Conference, where finally an agreement was reached for the reversal of the Versailles Treaty's award to Japan of the Chinese territory formerly held by Germany and its restoration to China. He gives a full and detailed account of the Shantung question from its inception in 1897 to its alleged settlement in 1922. This account furnishes an illuminating but by no means flattering exhibit of the subtleties of international diplomacy, and this feature gives the subject an interest far broader than Shantung itself. Mr. Wood sees things as any Chinese patriot would be expected to see them, but he states every side of the case with perfect candor, and few if any unprejudiced readers will fail to see and to feel with him and his fellow-patriots in the issue. Eighty pages are given to the full text of all the treaties and official documents and correspondence in the case.

The Christian Worker's Manual, by H. S. Miller.

This volume is to be commended unreservedly to pastors, teachers and Bible students. The author, himself a teacher, has put into this book the rich fruitage of years of careful and thorough Bible study. While the volume is intended to be a handbook for those specified above, yet it will richly repay a careful study by anyone into whose hands it may fall.

All the great facts of redemption are stated clearly, accurately, even epigrammatically; and show deep spiritual intuition as well as breadth of study and depth of devotion on the part of the writer, who has the remarkable gift of packing sentences and paragraphs. Pastors should not only have the book for their own study, but they could scarcely do better than make the book the basis of a series of studies with their congregations. The book contains fifty-three topics on the three subjects of sin, salvation, and the Christian life, which, if made the basis of so many weekly studies would take a congregation practically through the Bible, giving them an intimate acquaintance with it, clear ideas of its great teachings, a high appreciation of its importance as a guide in life, a more imperative sense of the need of obedience to its great authority on matters religious, in short, such a pastor would have for his trouble a real Bible-loving people, a rare but highly desirable thing these days.

Racial Studies—New American Series.

Vol. I. The Czecho-Slovaks in America, by Kenneth Miller.

Vol. II. The Poles in America, by Paul Fox.

Vol. III. The Russians and Ruthenians, by Jerome Davis.

Vol. IV. The Italians in America, by Philip M. Rose.

Vol. V. The Greeks in America, by J. P. Xenides.

Vol. VI. The Magyars in America, by D. A. Souders.

These are a series of studies of the newer racial groups of European immigrants in America, designed by the Home Mission Council to give Americans a clearer and fuller knowledge of this new material which in recent years is increasingly finding its way into the body politic of America. The older racial strains which compose the nucleus of the American nation are well known, and their spiritual ideals well understood. But America is being re-made by the influx of these new and entirely different racial elements, and the fact that so little is known by the older section of the nation about the heritage and ideals of these newcomers, tends to a lack of interest in them, and stands in the way of such an attitude and such efforts as will best conduce to making them loyal and profitable citizens.

These studies present the European background of each group—social, economic and religious, give full facts as to their numbers and distribution in America, and set forth their potentialities if the proper spirit is shown them and the proper efforts are exerted in their behalf by the Christian forces of this country.

In every case the writer is a kinsman of the particular group or knows the people thoroughly from long and intimate relationship. The books are well written, their matter is clearly classified, and they contain a vast amount of valuable and interesting information on an obscure subject. Further books of the same series, dealing with the Albanian, Armenian, Assyrian-Chaldean, Bulgarian, Jewish, Jugo-Slav, Portuguese, Spanish and Syrian, are expected to follow later.

The Voice of Thanksgiving No. 3.

The Moody Bible Institute has on two occasions in the past compiled and edited a hymn book under the general title "Voice of Thanksgiving." These books were intended not only to meet the need of the Institute in its classes and devotional services, but also for the church or Sunday-school which desires a combination of the better gospel hymns and the hymns of the church.

Voice of Thanksgiving No. 3, which has but recently appeared, is no exception to this rule. It is a book of 363 songs, printed on the best paper, bound in full cloth, with words edited as to their fidelity to the truth by Rev. James M. Gray, D.D., and the music edited by the members of the Music Faculty of The Moody Bible Institute.

There are 125 songs in this book not contained in either of its predecessors. The old masters have been drawn upon to a greater extent than in the old books, —Handel, Haydn, von Weber, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Gottschalk, Dykes, Zundel, Palmer, Monk, Barnby, and Sullivan, are represented.

Of the more famous gospel writers we find works of Dr. Towner, George C. Stebbins, W. K. Kirkpatrick, and P. P. Bliss.

The newer writers are also given a large place, and every page of this valuable book, both in words and music, breathes forth a spirit of faith in Him and fidelity to His Word.

The fact that several editions have already been sold testifies to the popularity of the book, and should be more of a recommendation than anything we could say concerning it.

7¾x5½ inches. The Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 North La-Salle St., Chicago. 60 cents, postpaid.

Voice of Thanksgiving No. 3, Abridged Edition.

This is an abridged edition of the larger book. It was especially prepared for evangelistic meetings and Bible conferences, being smaller and more convenient to use in such circumstances. It offers a fair variety of suitable selections for all services of praise and devotion.

The hymn numbers are retained as in the unabridged edition, making it convenient to use with that book. It also contains at the end a selection of Psalms especially suitable for responsive reading.

Bound in manila covers, this book should be invaluable to evangelists, mission workers and Bible teachers.

96 pages. 7½x5¼ inches. The Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 North La Salle St., Chicago, Ill. 20 cents, postpaid.

THE DEATH OF WILBUR F. CRAFTS

Dr. Crafts, who died very recently, was twenty-eight years superintendent of the International Reform Bureau, and was widely known because of his activities on behalf of prohibition and similar movements. He was a terror to the corrupt lobby at Washington City, and was a prolific writer on moral questions.

He was born in 1849, being the son of a Methodist preacher. He afterward became a Congregational minister, and ultimately a Presbyterian minister, and remained such until his death. He was a somewhat picturesque character, but will be greatly missed by those who are particularly interested in moral reforms.

The Epistle of Paul, the Apostle to the Galatians, Notes Exegetical and Expository, by C. F. Hogg and W. E. Vine, M. A.

Bible students familiar with the authors' volume on the Epistle to the Thessalonians have waited with great expectation for the appearance of this companion volume on the Epistle to the Galatians. And what a treasure house it is! A luminous "foreword" concerning the gospel which Paul preached prepares the student for a clearer understanding of the controversy between Christianity and legalism, both in the apostolic age and now, which by the addition of some extraneous element would "pervert the gospel of Christ."

This foreword is followed by introductory notes dealing concisely with the writer of the epistle, its authenticity, its date and its destination. Then comes the analysis and outline of the epistle, together with some observations on the marginal notes, all of which add value to the whole.

This leads to the body of the book—"Notes Exegetical and Expository." Here the Bible student is made to "rejoice as one that findeth great spoil." He is led through the epistle by a guide who knows the way, and who stops long enough at every point of interest to make wise suggestions and to indicate lines of truth that the student can pursue for himself. The preacher and teacher of New Testament truth, and especially the expository preacher of the Epistle to the Galatians, should by all means get hold of this book; there is nothing comparable to it.

The book has three indexes. The first one indicates the various subjects dealt with in the epistle. The second, presents the Scriptures referred to in the other books of the Bible, and the third serves as a guide to the Greek words which are explained in the notes. The method of treatment of these Greek words is threefold. Sometimes an analysis of the word in the New Testament is given, at other times a complete list of its occurrences will be found and frequently the synonyms of the word are presented.

The student of the New Testament, and especially of the Pauline epistles, will have a growing sense of gratitude to God and to the authors of this book for the simple, yet masterly way in which the great truths of this epistle are made available both to the reader of English and the Greek text.

The New Testament (Parallel Edition), by James Moffatt.

What is known as "Moffatt's Translation" of the New Testament has been before the public for several years. This new edition is parallel with the Authorized Version. The author claims that it is a more accurate translation because made from a better text. Be this as it may there are also serious lacks. In his "Introduction" to this new volume the author takes cognizance of some of these. The lack of rhythm and diction he attributes to changes which recent grammatical research into the Greek has necessitated. In his opinion the lack of dignity in the translation is offset by gains in the way of lucidity and intelligibility.

We wish to mention a still more serious lack, one of which the author probably is not conscious—the lack of spirit and the atmosphere of reverence. In our judgment the explanation of this lack lies in the attitude of the author towards the New Testament itself. According to his own statement he treats it as he would treat "any piece of contemporary Hellenistic prose." There is no indication that he has any greater reverence for the New Testament than just that. For example, the material in the epistle of Paul to the Corinthians is fragmentary and has been re-arranged. "It is also probable that genuine notes of Paul have been worked up by a Paulinist who afterwards wrote 2 Timotheus, Titus and 1 Timotheus in that order, sometime during the next generation." As to 1 Peter, this was originally a pastoral letter and may be dated in its present form about the seventh decade of the first century. 2 Peter is in no way authentic, and nobody knows who wrote James, "which is one of the enigmas of the collection," but the author probably was "merely a Christian teacher," who lived at the end of the first or the opening of the second century. Hebrews and Jude, which are of unknown authorship, may be placed anywhere between A. D. 70 and A. D. 90. The "First Epistle of John" so-called, was written as a sort of pendant to the fourth Gospel and by the same author (not named), or by "some writer belonging to his circle;" while "Second and Third John were written by some unknown presbyter." The Apocalypse was written by "a Christian prophet called John," and "Now-a-days is read as a magnificent semi-poetical rhapsody." With such radical and modernistic theories as these do we wonder at the lack of dignity and especially the lack of reverence in the translation?

BIBLE CONFERENCE AT BUFFALO

This conference was held February 18-23 in the Calvary Presbyterian Church. The speakers were Rev. John C. Page, representing the Institute as Bible teacher; Rev. Herbert W. Bieber, D. D., pastor of the Church of the Covenant, Bala-Cynwyd, Pa.; Rev. Prof. Robert Dick Wilson, D. D., of Princeton Theological Seminary, and Rev. A. L. Lathem, D. D., pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, Chester, Pa. Mr. Talmadge J. Bittikofer was song leader and soloist.

MR. SIDNEY T. SMITH CONDUCTING BIBLE CONFERENCES

Mr. Sidney T. Smith, Christian business man, Bible teacher and a trustee of the Institute, conducted a Bible conference in Halifax, N. S., January 15-23, assisted by Harry Clarke, '19, as song leader. The attendance was large, hundreds were turned away, and many souls were saved. February 11-16 they held a conference at the First Presbyterian Church, Detroit, of which Rev. C. R. Scafe, '00, is pastor. From Detroit they went to Galesburg, Ill., for a five days' conference, and then to Vancouver, B. C.

MISSION HOLDS MOODY MEMORIAL

The "Home, Sweet Home" City Rescue Mission, Bloomington, Ill., held a well-attended memorial service for D. L. Moody on the afternoon of February 4, at the Castle Theater. A special musical program was arranged for by the choir of the Second Presbyterian Church. Will Shelper, superintendent of the mission, gave a memoir of the life of Mr. Moody. One professed conversion and an offering of nearly $100 were the fruits of it.

The Mission intends to make this memorial service a yearly event in order to keep before the people the memory of D. L. Moody.

DR. ROBERT H. GLOVER, F.R.G.S.

Rev. Robert H. Glover, M. D., Director of the Institute's Missionary Course, has been elected a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain. This distinction has been accorded Dr. Glover on the ground of his long residence and extensive travels in foreign countries and his writings and public addresses on those countries and their peoples.

Dr. Glover was a pioneer missionary in south-west China and then for many years in charge of the administrative work for sixteen different mission fields, under the Christian and Missionary Alliance, traveling annually in various parts of the world. His itineraries included Japan, China, French Indo-China, India, Thibet, the Philippines, Syria, Palestine, Egypt, Panama, the West Indies, Porto Rico, and many of the South American republics.

CLEVELAND CONFERENCE COMMENDED

The following letter tells its own story:

"Cleveland, O., January 5, 1923

"Dr. James M. Gray,
Moody Bible Institute,
Chicago, Ill.:

"The Local Cleveland Committee that worked with you and your organization in putting on our successful Bible conference of November 5-10, 1922, desire to express to you their gratitude and deep sense of appreciation for the conference.

"The program was excellent. The speakers were of such marked scholarship and ability that they challenged attention, and their messages carried the truth home to all listening minds. Your own splendid expositions of Romans, and your convincing address on 'The Integrity and Credibility of the Word of God' will be remembered by those who heard you for a long time. Such men as Dr. Kyle, Dr. Robert Dick Wilson, Dr. Lathem and Dr. John Roach Straton are men around whom can be built a strong and effective program. We wish to thank you for bringing to us such men for our sessions.

"We wish to commend the efficient management and Christian courtesy of your organizer in the Extension Department, Mr. G. H. Meinardi, and also express our appreciation of the fine service rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Bittikofer.

"It is our conviction that the Christian forces in any city will receive a great blessing by co-operating with you in such conferences.

"Yours sincerely,
"John T. Raymond, Chairman.
"Wm. A. Pollock, Secretary."

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

Dr. J. E. Conant conducted evangelistic meetings in the First Baptist Church, Logan, W. Va., Jan. 21–Feb. 10. From there he went to DuBois, Pa., for a union meeting under the direction of the DuBois Bible Conference, which closes March 2.

The pastor of Floyd Street Presbyterian Church, Lynchburg, Va., reports: "We have had a great blessing through Mr. Guille's preaching several remarkable conversions and a very manifest quickening of the spiritual life of many. The audiences were representative of every denomination, and nearly every church here, and I am sure other churches beside my own will feel the effect of the meeting through the blessing it brought to some of their members."

Sometimes ministers of churches hesitate to employ a Bible teacher because of the expense involved, but this pastor had no trouble in financing it, and says that "a by-product of the meeting was an offer from a member of my church to bear the expense up to a hundred dollars of my taking a course of study at The Moody Bible Institute."

Following Lynchburg, Mr. Guille taught the Bible over a circuit of eastern cities, embracing Hagerstown, Md., and Shippensburg, Harrisburg, Allentown, Reading and Johnstown, Pa. Then he went to Winnipeg, Man., for service at Elim Chapel.

Miss Elinor Stafford Millar closed a good meeting with Union Mission, Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 28, and appeared several times on the program of the Scranton Bible Conference conducted by this department before she visited Washington, Ill., where she gave inspirational addresses for a week under the direction of the Ministerial Alliance.

Dr. Henry Ostrom, associated with Mr. George S. Schuler, of the Music Faculty, filled an engagement with the Birmingham, Ala., Y. M. C. A. early in January. At later conferences in Florida, notably at St. Petersburg, where the sessions were held in the Baptist Temple, and where Dr. Gray was the leading teacher, and at Jacksonville, where the sessions were held in the First Presbyterian Church, and where Dr. Howard Agnew Johnson thus served, Dr. Ostrom was one of the speakers. At the latter place, Mr. Homer A. Hammontree led the singing. Dr. Ostrom later addressed conferences at Gainesville and Tampa, Fla.

Rev. Gordon Watt, M. A., of Aberdeen University, Scotland, who represents in this country what is known as the Keswick teaching on the deeper life, begins his work under the direction of the Extension Department at Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 21; Shippensburg, Pa., Feb. 23; Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 25; Reading, Pa., Feb. 28; Allentown, Pa., March 2; and Lebanon, Pa., March 4.

On the advice of his physician, Mr. Watt will not remain in America through the heated term. His visit will terminate early in June. He still has some open time in April and May.

Miss Virginia C. Williams followed her work with Dr. Milford H. Lyon in New Bedford, Mass., by teaching the Bible in Westminster Presbyterian Church of St. Louis, Feb. 18-23, and in the Austin, Tex., Y. W. C. A., where she was formerly general secretary, Feb. 26–Mar. 5.

Mrs. O. T. Graham, chairman of a local committee which recently held a successful Bible Conference in Muskogee, Okla., at which Dr. Gray and Dr. Fitzwater of the Institute Faculty and Mr.

Guille of the Extension Department were the teachers, said in a recent letter that it had been "the most far-reaching of any yet held in the results so much desired."

Mrs. Graham has long been the successful teacher of a large class in the Scofield Correspondence Course. Now, as an outcome of this conference, there is to be a Bible class among the men in Muskogee, known as "Gray's Synthetic Class."

PERSONALIA

Millard F. O'Neal, '20, after graduation, accepted a circuit of three Tennessee country churches that were closed, at a salary of $400 a year. God's blessing has attended the work, with many professed conversions. Recent revivals have added many to his churches. Address, Mosheim, Tenn.

Pending decision of the Presbyterian Board on her application to go to Africa, Ida M. Reifsnyder, a recent graduate, is acting as secretary to the pastor of her home church, and is working in the Sunday-school. Address, 123 W. Fishers Avenue, Olney, Philadelphia, Pa.

Sunday-school attendance at the First Presbyterian Church, Duluth, Minn., has almost doubled through the efforts of Luke E. Marvin, '09, superintendent. Rev. C. A. Montanus of the Institute, recently addressed the teachers' meeting on the value of correspondence courses.

Mrs. James W. McElree, '21, is assisting her husband who is director of religious education at the Hammond Avenue Presbyterian Church, Superior, Wis. She superintends the Junior Department of the Sunday-school and directs missionary education in two home mission fields, South Range and Itasca.

Joseph E. Kirkwood, '05, missionary of the American Sunday School Union in Clearfield and Jefferson Counties, Penn., reports: "Twelve years ago, at Big Soldier Mine I found an abandoned chapel, windows broken and door standing open. Across the street was a saloon and a dance hall. We organized a Sunday-school; the saloon has gone forever, and the Sunday-school remains with an average attendance of 100." He has nineteen union schools under his care.

Miss Armenia Thompson, '20, and Miss E. Grennan, a one-term Moody student, are doing missionary work in the Philippines, at Lingayen, Pangasinan. Miss Thompson teaches in a Bible Woman's Training School and does evangelistic work. Miss Grennan is a mission hospital nurse.

Ivy E. Craig, '19, whose address is American Board Mission, Mt. Silinda, S. Rhodesia, S. Africa, wrote, October 22: "Again I request the prayers of the Institute family. Am rejoicing in souls saved, and a revival and deepening of the spiritual life of the many young people in our schools."

On the death of her husband four years ago, Mrs. Ada L. Heyse, '02, succeeded him as pastor of the First Congregational Church, Melvin, Ill. Resolutions were adopted by the church recently, expressing warm appreciation of her devoted service and renewing their pledge of allegiance and support.

Mrs. Elma Dale Martin, of 3125 College Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., has organized forty-two classes in and about her city. She selects the leaders and makes the outline of study. She says that all she has taken in the way of Bible study was by correspondence through the Correspondence Department of the Moody Bible Institute, and is an enthusiastic friend of that work.

Daisy F. Eggleston, '18, closed a meeting in the M. E. church of Rush, Pa., the last Sunday of January, and opened another meeting in Rowayton, Conn., where she remained during the month of February. She then went to Noxen, Pa., where she is now conducting a meeting.

Melvin C. Smith, '21, has accepted a call to organize a branch of the Trinity Lutheran Church at Rockford, Ill. He finishes at the Maywood Lutheran Seminary in April.

Elsie M. Hopkins, a former evening student, is in England resting after a period of strenuous labor in Belgium. Two years ago she left Chicago for Belgium, "the land of her adoption."

Mr. and Mrs. George Woodley, who have been in Kijabe, Kenya Colony, Africa, and are now on furlough, were recent visitors at the Institute. They will be in this country until the end of the year, making Findlay, O., their headquarters.

Jessie Miller, '19, and Elizabeth DeYoung, '20, are engaged in mission work in Penukonda, S. India. Miss Miller writes that the MONTHLY is their chief source of spiritual instruction.

At a Sunday-school social recently held in the First Baptist Church, Arthur, Ill., the pastor, E. C. Shute, '15, was presented with a gold watch as a token of love and esteem.

Supported by the Central Presbyterian Church of New York, Annie M. Hall, '20, is teaching in Dry Hill, Ky.

E. C. Hunt, '12, became pastor of the Presbyterian church, Palmyra, Mo., Oct. 1. During the previous seven years he was pastor of the Riverside Presbyterian Church, St. Joseph, Mo.

Jean Shewell, '20, is teaching the Bible in each of the eleven grades of a large cotton-mill school at Greenville, S. C., in addition to her regular primary grade work.

Helen E. M. Henderson, '19, (nee Helen E. McQuilkin) and Mr. Henderson are doing missionary work among the Koreans in Hingking, a town in Manchuria, seventy-five miles from the railroad. Their son, Bruce Hayes Henderson, born Oct. 17 last, has the distinction of being the first white baby born in Hingking. Mrs. Henderson says, "Scattered through this vast country are Christian churches—constantly growing groups who remain true to the faith, though persecuted on the one hand by the Japanese, and on the other hounded for money by Korean independence agents."

C. G. Steward, '18, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Flatriver, Mo., and J. W. Maxwell, '20, songleader, recently conducted a two-weeks campaign at Belgrade, Mo. There were 19 professed conversions.

Since leaving the Institute, Mabel E. Shultz has been doing pastoral work in the United Brethren Church, Swanton, Neb.

Mabel E. Allen is now located in Chungking, China.

Hazel Ryckman, '19, is now stationed in North Nigeria, West Africa, among the Rukubas. The attendance at the mission services there has so increased that the hut which served as a meeting place has been replaced by a church.

Howard D. Jane, '22, is pastor of the United Brethren Church, Odon, Ind. Since he graduated from the Institute he has been studying at the Oskaloosa College, Oskaloosa, Ia.

George C. Crockatt, '13, is now pastor of the Hyde Park Presbyterian Church, St. Joseph, Mo.

E. H. Lewis, '20, is a member of the Ohio United Conference of the Evangelical Church, and is stationed at Fairhope Evangelical Church, Louisville, O.

During two years, A. E. Danly, '02, and his wife have been doing mission work at various points in Oregon. They are working in association with the Presbyterian church.

Doris James, '16, has been teaching for more than two years in The Piney Woods Country Life School for training colored children in Christianity, character and service. Only one other white person is connected with the institution.

B. Estella Zimmerman, '11, A. Fern Houser, '10, and Miss Tallet, a former evening student, are conducting a day school, orphanage, and Bible training school for young women in Guatemala, Central America. Their Bible training course is adapted from the Moody Bible Institute course. About 150 are enrolled in the day school.

Dr. A. W. Lagerquist, '90, missionary of the China Inland Mission, is working at present in Taichowfu, Chekiang, in a district suffering from flood and famine.

M. F. Rasmussen, '14, has been pastor of the Ensley Baptist Church, Ensley, Mich., for nearly four years. He conducts a well-attended Friday night Bible class, teaching the Scofield Course.

T. P. Sims, '22, is now teaching the Bible in a high school in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Bernard B. Sutcliffe, '04, formerly of the Institute Faculty, now pastor of Calvary Presbyterian Church, Portland, Ore., recently closed a very successful ten days conference with Mr. H. A. Ironside as principal speaker. Dr. W. B. Hinson was also on the program.

D. Lauck Currens, '14, now pastor of the Schwamb Memorial Presbyterian Church, Charleston, W. Va., preached a series of sermons in January as follows: How Jonah Spoiled His Name; How a Fish Saved His Life; How He Made a Million Converts; How He Pouted Over Others' Religion.

Greetings to the Institute family have been received from the following members of the December, '22, graduating class: Margaret Gruenewald, Luella Shaver, Helen Shellenberger, Muriel Sim, Lloyd S. Erb and Raymond D. Fortna. On the train eastward, following graduation they had a "real Moody Institute fellowship service in song and testimony." All but one stopped over at Niagara Falls. From there they branched off to their homes in several different eastern and southern states.

Rev. Norman H. Camp '01, who some months ago returned to Bible teaching and evangelistic work after three and one-half years as superintendent of the Chicago Hebrew Mission, attended the Founder's Week Conference with Mrs. Camp. Since October 10 he has held five Bible teaching meetings in various southern towns and cities, chiefly in North Carolina, assisted by Rev. H. W. Roth, as music leader.

Helen R. Honeyman, '22, assisted her father, Rev. R. M. Honeyman, in evangelistic meetings at Inwood, L. I., N. Y., in February. There were sixty-four professed conversions. They will have two more campaigns for the spring and one Bible conference, and then take up work in connection with the Bible conferences at Montrose, Pa., for the summer.

Dr. J. H. Ralston officiated at the funeral in Chelsea, Okla., January 29, of Mrs. D. Rees-Jones, who departed to be with the Lord, January 26, soon after the birth of her first-born son. Rev. D. Reese-Jones, for two years pastor of the Chelsea Presbyterian Church, is an Institute graduate of 1916, and Mrs. Jones had worked for a time in the Correspondence Department. All the Chelsea churches united in the Sunday evening service at which Dr. Ralston preached, and on Monday virtually the entire community attended the funeral. Mrs. Rees-Jones was loved and respected by all.

PUBLISHER'S STUFF

Our readers will appreciate the following letter from a missionary in the field, among the many to whom we are sending the Moody Bible Institute Monthly from our Missionary Fund. Will those subscribers who have so kindly contributed during the past year, read this letter, that they may know the blessing their contributions are bringing to the workers. We will be very glad to receive additional remittances for our Missionary Fund as the demands in this way are greater than the supply.

"Yongch'ang, China, Nov 20th, 1922.
"Dear Friend:

"I do not know who you may be but you must be a friend in sending me the Moody Monthly all this time. Accept my thanks though belated. The only reason I have for not acknowledging the gift sooner is, because it is difficult to write and thank a person when you do not know who they are. I have enjoyed the Moody Monthly very much indeed and thank you so much.

"I am in a new field, the station having been opened a little over a year ago.

"On January first of this year I opened a dispensary and up to the present date five thousand two hundred people have been helped medically. Many, many more have come in but had to be turned away either my medicine giving out, or else they were not within my power to help them. I only endeavor to treat simple ailments. They bring in the lepers, palsied and the blind, and even idiots and expect me to heal them. Very old people come in and expect me to cure them. I told one group of women one day if I could cure the ailments of all you old people then none of you would ever die; then they all had a hearty laugh.

"Many understand clearly what you say while others do not understand a single word for the simple reason their mind is occupied with the height of our nose, the complexion of our skin, the color of our hair, etc. The ground needs to be prepared first before one can plant seed. "We need much prayer.

"ANNA KRATZER.

Many subscribers may wonder what the Publishing Agent has been doing with the letters they sent in during December, and later, in regard to the plan proposed to send the Moody Bible Institute Monthly to all subscribers for a brief period after expiration. Some said "do it"; some said "don't." Some said "make them pay"; some said, "trust them." Some said, "anybody ought to know they could not get along without the Moody Monthly." Others said "they would forget to pay." As the Publishing Agent wanted something on the subject for this number of the magazine he picked up two letters coming to his desk from the Subscription Department on the subject, and quotes the same below:

"————, Kansas.
"Moody Bible Institute Monthly:

"In reply to your question about renewals will say that any person who wants to do right should write at least a card and tell you to stop the monthly or renew it. If they do not have the money at the time, tell you about when they would have it. This would obligate them to pay about the time they said they would. However, in my judgment the best and safest way is to notify them month before their subscription expires and if you do not get a reply in time to continue without losing a number, stop it till you hear from them. You know they can renew any time they want to. The old saying is, 'a thing worth having is worth asking for,' and it is the only safe method to do business. Renew my subscription for one year beginning with the January number. Find enclosed check for same. "Yours truly,

"————, "————, Mississippi.
"Moody Bible Institute Monthly:

"In December I had one of your 'What would you do?' letters, in regard to continuing to send your Monthly to subscribers after subscription had expired. I wanted to write you then to do just what you are doing to me now—continuing to send my magazine after my time is out. Any one who would want it discontinued would write you, and if they did not would certainly pay for the numbers they received. I know of course this cannot be collected by law, but believe you would lose more by discontinuing the magazine in cases where the subscriber wanted it continued, but would not take the trouble to take the matter of renewal up again. * * * I cannot think of any one reading the Moody magazine and not being willing to pay for it. The day may come—we can never tell—when I may not be able to pay for it, but I will certainly say so. I often receive calls for subscriptions to the Moody Bible Institute work, and there is nothing in which I am more interested, than the work the Institute is doing, not even the work of my own (Presbyterian) church, but what am I to do. The church is always needing money to carry on its home and foreign work, and I have pledged myself to support its needs. * * * Long life to the Moody Bible Institute, and the principles it stands for. Some of us take what the magazine says, as "the law and the gospel," so do not fail us. I am enclosing my subscription.

"Yours truly, "————"

The Publishing Agent cannot tell you how much he appreciates the kind letters received from subscribers

THE PACIFIC GARDEN MISSION'S NEW QUARTERS

The Pacific Garden Mission, which in the last forty years has never closed its doors to the needy at 67 West Van Buren Street, and in which has been converted many a bum who later has made a name for himself known the length and breadth of the nation, will be moved into new quarters at 650 South State Street, it was announced by the trustees.

Meeting at 29 South LaSalle Street in the offices of the National Life Insurance Company of the U. S. A., were wealthy Chicagoans, who for years have taken time from their business to devote it to the interests of the Pacific Garden. Those present were Albert M. Johnson, president of both the mission and the life insurance company; Charles E. Coleman, Thomas S. Smith, John Nuveen, George W. Dixon and Louis A. Crittenton, general superintendent. The transfer of the deed to the new three-story home of the mission has just been made by them.

Founded by the Clarkes in 1877

Founded in 1877 by Col. and Mrs. George R. Clarke, the mission was first situated at 386 South Clark Street. Five years later it was moved to the Van Buren Street address, where, despite changes, panics and disasters, its doors have never been closed a single night to the needy."

"Billy" Sunday and "Mel" Trotter Converts

"Billy" Sunday, America's most widely known evangelist, is probably the mission's most famous convert. In a letter, dated 1902, Billy relates the story of his conversion. In company with other baseball celebrities of the day—about 1887—he heard singing of hymns and was invited by Col. Clarke to attend services.

" 'Good-bye, boys, I'm done with this way of living,' I told my friends," wrote Sunday. "I went every night for a few weeks to the mission, when one night Mrs. Clarke invited me forward to the altar. I went and professed faith in Christ."

The long list of those saved from the flotsam and jetsam of Chicago streets in those days, includes Mel Trotter, another widely known evangelist, whose sensational divorce proceedings were in the public eye a few months ago; Harry Monroe, successor to Col. Clarke, as superintendent of the mission; Dick Lane famed safe-blower and burglar, and later intimate of Melville E. Stone and H. H. Kohlsaat; Dick Callahan, west-side gangster and "pal" of the notorious "Butch" Lyon; Robert Atkinson, who, salvaged from the slums in 1890, is now a missionary in Japan, and Bob ("Razor") Fenton most famous pickpocket on the western hemisphere in his day.

Until the new State Street mission is thrown open for service, the Van Buren Street haven will continue to do business, greeting nightly audiences with its single and familiar message—"The Son of man is come to seek and save the lost."

MISSION TO THE BLIND IN HEATHEN LANDS

This mission has headquarters at Victoria, Australia, Mr. Robert A. Byers being president. The movement is interdenominational, and the objects are the rescuing of blind children from lives of hopelessness and degradation, and providing for their physical comfort in Christian surroundings; to increase the output of the Braille literature for the blind; to extend home teaching; to send out evangelists, Bible women and teachers, especially in the East where the blind are in such great numbers and where their existence is so pitiable. The income of the organization for the year ending September 30, 1922, was a little over £600, and practically all expended. The treasurers are Minnie Alsop and Jane Hind, 102 Union St., Windsor, Victoria, Australia.

THE MAGIC GATEWAY

I turned the cover of a book,
And found it was a gate
Into a field where one might look
Unwearied, soon and late.
The dreams of every land and sea
Were all about me there.
Kind spirits came and talked with me,
And flowers bloomed everywhere.

I saw the years that long had sped,
The wondrous scenes of yore.
The mighty past gave up its dead;
They lived and spoke once more.
The greatest minds that ever thought,
And hearts that ever beat,
Came, and their richest treasures brought
To lay them at my feet.

WHY GOOD BOOKS?

Every congregation cannot hear the most judicious or powerful preachers; but every single person may read the books of the most powerful and judicious. Preachers may be silenced or banished, when books may be at hand; books may be kept at a smaller charge than preachers; we may choose books which treat of that very subject which we desire to hear of. Books we may have at hand every day and hour, when we can have sermons but seldom, and at set times. If sermons be forgotten, they are gone. But a book we may read over and over until we remember it; and if we forget it, may again peruse it at our pleasure or at our leisure.—Richard Baxter.

"SOWING" TRACTS

The seed is the Word of God. The "living" Word has properties of life. If we sow this seed God will see to it that it is multiplied and that the harvest will be for His glory. He has said, "My Word shall accomplish that whereto I sent it."

Tract distribution enables one to "sow beside all waters." We cannot all use the human voice, but we can send out these little messengers for Christ. We can reach those near at hand as well as those in the uttermost parts of the earth. They can go where we cannot; they speak without getting tired; they know no fear; their going costs little; their usefulness can be multiplied without end; they do not even need an audience-room. They can go into homes, cars, shops, factories, stores and even on the streets. Scoffs, jeers and taunts have no effect on them. They stick to their story and tell it over and over again. They find their way to shut-in ones with perhaps the only message they ever receive. They work while we sleep. Their work is endless and will continue after we have gone. When we get "home" we shall be thrilled with the life-story of these little messengers.— Heartsease Leaflet.

ANSWER THE CALL!

Many thoughtful men and women, with full or part time at their disposal, are conscious, we believe, of a "call" to carry the glad tidings of full and free salvation to a lost world—or to that part lying near them. Such a divine prompting should not be turned aside or smothered. The reader need only consider how influential a book, a pamphlet, or even a tract has been with him to appreciate what such a message in print might be to another person. An individual, a family, yes, and even a community, has been mightily stirred by the Spirit-directed reading of the printed gospel. Was the need ever greater than now? Was the means of transportation any more convenient? Were good books to those interested ever more accessible for sale and distribution?

DEVOTIONAL BOOKS OR THE BIBLE?

Many so-called devotional books have been given to the world. They have large value for some, and the world is richer because they have been written. It is no disparagement of such books to say that in so far as they are substituted for the Bible they do injury. If one has time for these and for the world's greatest book of devotion, well and good; but they cannot take the place of the Bible. At best they serve to call attention to the transforming truths which are given to the world in the Word of God. Those who would find comfort in their grief, strength in hours of weakness, hope when discouraged, who would know God as revealed in Jesus Christ, will be helped by nothing so much as by thoughtful study of the Book of books.—The Baptist

NOON-DAY PRAYER TO BE INSTITUTED UP-TOWN IN NEW YORK

Announcement is made that beginning New Year's Day, a service for prayer will be conducted daily from twelve to one o'clock.

A representative committee, which will have these meetings in charge, has secured for this purpose the assembly room of the New York Bible House, No. 5, East Forty-eighth Street, New York City, because of its central location and the interdenominational character of the Bible Society.

In view of the widely felt need for spiritual awakening, the committee has issued this call for special prayer. No controversial topics are to be discussed. The meetings are to be specifically for prayer, and not for biblical or doctrinal discussions. The co-operation and attendance of all Christians are earnestly desired.

HOT COALS FROM A BURNING MESSAGE

Professor J. Gresham Machen of Princeton Theological Seminary thrilled his large audience during Founder's Week Conference at The Moody Bible Institute, when he presented the issue between the so-called liberal and conservative branches of the church today. Below are two of the high points of his message, which appears in full on page 349 of this issue of the Monthly.

"The chief modern rival of Christianity is not Mohammedanism or Buddhism, but the naturalistic liberalism, which is almost dominant in our large ecclesiastical bodies today."

Referring to the words of Christ, "Ye shall be my witnesses," he said: "It is a complete misinterpretation of these words if you say that the witness is merely what Christ has done for you in your own souls.—Paramount in it is the witness to the plain historical fact of the resurrection of Christ.—When a witness gets up on the witness stand it makes very little difference what the cut of his coat is, or whether his sentences are nicely turned; the important thing is that he should tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. That is the important thing for the Christian preacher and for every Christian worker today. —We should tell the story which is at the basis of Christianity and tell it straight, and full and plain."

For thirty-six years The Moody Bible Institute has recognized the need for men and women grounded in the great truths of the Bible, fearless on the witness stand, and determined to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. To meet this need it sent out during 1922, from its Day Classes alone, 244 witnesses who had completed their training. During the same year the total enrollment in its Day and Evening Classes averaged about 1,400.

Any Christian having $100.00 or more to invest, and wishing to cooperate in such work, should write for complete information concerning the Institute's Life Annuity Contracts. Give the date of your birth when writing. Address:

EDITORIAL NOTES

"He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life."—John 5:24.

One day when Napoleon was reviewing troops, the bridle of his horse slipped from his hand and his horse galloped off.

Cut from the Loaf

A private soldier ran, and laying hold of the bridle brought back the horse to the emperor's hand, when he said, "Well done, captain."

"Of what regiment, sire?" inquired the soldier.

"Of the guards," answered Napoleon, pleased with his instant belief in his word.

The emperor rode away, but the soldier threw down his musket, and though he had no epaulets on his shoulders, no sword by his side nor any other mark of his advancement than the word of the emperor, he ran and joined the staff of commanding officers.

They laughed at him, and said,

"What have you to do here?"

He replied, "I am captain of the guards."

They were amazed, but he said, "The emperor said so, and therefore I am."

And he was.

Concerning Christian Education

The Federal Council of the Churches in America recently broadcasted an address from one of its secretaries urging a more unified program of Christian education, and laying the responsibility upon the Sunday-schools, the week-day church schools, the private schools, and the public schools. He said that the standardizing educational agencies of the country are on record that when the schools teach the Bible as effectively as they teach other subjects, Bible literature will be accepted for admission to college.

One wonders just what is intended by teaching the Bible and Bible literature. If it were limited to a knowledge of the facts, the contents of the Bible, and the whole Bible, it would be a happy day indeed when the Christian educational program would be so unified. But if it means the Shorter Bible instead of the Bible which God gave us, and if it means the modernistic interpretation of the Bible based on the findings of the destructive criticism, the longer such a unified program is postponed, the better it may be for the Christian religion pure and undefiled.

If pastors and other Christian leaders of this country would be put in touch with a practical method for teaching the Bible, the real thing, to our boys and girls in day schools, let them address Rev. A. L. Lathem, D.D., of Chester, Pa. His plan is so highly valued by the Moody Bible Institute that a place is found for him periodically in its curriculum, in order that its students may be qualified to introduce it in their future fields of service. He is also as far as possible, on every program of its Bible conferences throughout the country for the instruction of the pastors who attend. But a postage stamp is all that is necessary to obtain a copy of the annual report of his own school, which is an eye-opener to a serious and earnest reader. Ask him for it.

A Course in Jewish Missions

We consider this subject of sufficient importance to all our readers for editorial attention. It was first spoken of in our issue of December, 1921, when it was stated that for some time a feeling had been growing among Christian Jews, and also among Gentile Christians engaged in Jewish evangelization, that the time was ripe for a forward movement to bring the gospel of Christ to the lost sheep of the House of Israel.

Hitherto a hindrance to greater progress in that direction, it was also stated, had been a lack of proper training on the part of missionaries to the Jews, both Jewish and Gentile. Only comparatively few had been fully equal to the task, which calls for a knowledge of Hebrew, Jewish history, Rabbinic literature, and the Yiddish dialect, not to mention Messianic prophecy with its Jewish interpretation, and the refutation of it from the Christian standpoint.

The Moody Bible Institute had long desired to add such a course to its Educational Department, but the opportune time had not seemed to arrive until the Hebrew Christian Alliance learning of the Institute's desire, and sharing in it, appointed a committee to advise with the Institute and secure students.

Correspondence was immediately begun with a Jewish Christian scholar, Rev. Joel Levy, who a month later accepted a call to the chair of Jewish Missions in the Institute, and whose letter was published in our issue of March, 1922.

Mr. Levy was taken seriously ill soon afterwards and passed away June 11 (see an appreciation of him in our issue of August, 1922).

Since his death, the search for a successor has led to the selection of Rev. Solomon Birnbaum, director of Emmanuel Neighborhood House, Baltimore, Md., who was the unanimous recommendation of the educational committee of the Hebrew Christian Alliance.

Mr. Birnbaum is an Austrian, in which country, and in Constantinople, he received his early education. In the last-named city, and while still a student, he confessed Christ and was baptized in the United Free Church of Scotland, but dates his real conversion to Jesus Christ later under the benign ministry of Pastor Dolman, head of the Church of England Mission to the Jews in Wansbeck, near Hamburg, Germany. Pastor Dolman has been more or less in constant touch with Mr. Birnbaum in the intervening years, and speaks of him both as a student, a worker among the Jews, and a Christian man, in the highest terms.

Coming to England to continue his education, Mr. Birnbaum entered London University, taking his theology at St. Johns Hall, Highbury, from which institutions also have been received commendatory letters. He took his B. D. from the University in 1914, and in 1916 honors in the Semitic languages and comparative religions, in St. John's Hall. Some of this latter work was by correspondence while he was engaged in gospel work in Leeds and London, under the London Society for Promoting Christianity amongst the Jews.

Mr. Birnbaum enters upon his work in the Institute about May 1, and the earnest prayers are desired of all our readers interested in the salvation of the Jews, that the blessing of God may rest upon the work then to be inaugurated. Contributions toward the support of the chair will be welcomed, and the cause will be furthered also by extending the information throughout the evangelical churches of the world and in gospel missions to the Jews.

Russia's Awful Impiety

A correspondent deeply interested in the evangelism of Russia and acquainted at first hand with conditions there, would like us to refer editorially to that which took place in Russia January 6, the Russian Christmas, and which has been spoken of as staging the most impious ceremonies of which history gives any account.

The effigies of some thirty gods or prophets of religion, including one of the Supreme Being, were paraded through the streets of Moscow and finally burned as a protest against all religious faith. Newspapers carried cartoons ridiculing everything which decent people respect, even if they have no personal knowledge of the things of God. The authorities of Russia were a party to it, or, if it was not officially inspired, it was at least permitted and condoned.

The whole proceeding was spoken of as a war against heaven, and it seemed to be an advance step by a seething, sinful, lawless world to throw off all restraint and control, either by God or man. Surely Satan is preparing the world for his superman, the Antichrist, with all his reign of hate, terror, and anarchy. It is the red star of bolshevism flaunting its challenge against the white star of Bethlehem.

Our correspondent assures us, however, that the people of Russia are by no means all in sympathy with this red propaganda, but that many of them are eager to hear and to receive the Word of God. It is a strategic center, and the enemy presses hard against it, for he well knows its importance. Will God's people be equally alert to press the battle to the gate in getting in the Scriptures to Russia and aiding in the evangelizing of that great land? Material aid for the suffering is certainly a pressing need, but hundreds are interested in its supply where one thinks of the Bible and the gospel and the deeper needs, both present and future, of human souls. We will continue to forward any means placed in our hands for that purpose.

The European Reparations Tangle

It seems to us that all sensible people ought to agree that the Administration program for solving this difficulty is the only practicable one. That program was placed before the world with Secretary Hughes' customary lucidity in his address at the meeting of the American Historical Association (New Haven), when he said that an independent commission of men competent in financial affairs could accomplish more than a general international conference. He had no doubt that Americans would be willing to serve on such a commission, which might be kept free from responsibility to foreign offices and from all political instructions. One distinction that he made clear is that while this problem is really a world problem, both economically and morally, yet it is primarily European for the reason that it cannot be solved without the consent of the European governments, and so far as America is concerned, she has never been asked to serve in the role of arbiter among the latter.

One can but echo the inquiry of Secretary Hughes, "Why should not governments invite men of the highest authority in finance in their respective countries to do this thing, men of such prestige, experience and honor, that their agreement on the amount to be paid and on a financial plan for working out the payments, would be accepted throughout the world as the most authoritative expression obtainable?"

For Better Juries

The verdict in the first of the trials in the Herrin (Ill.) massacre acquitting the prisoners, brought into bold relief "the presence and potency of a poison in the veins of the body politic, which, if not cleared out, will incur the death of American democracy in this section of the country."

The words quoted are from the Boston Evening Transcript, and strange to say, they do not refer to the Herrin case at all, but to the report of a retiring attorney-general of Massachusetts as to the state of things in the jury system of two of the principal counties in that state. The plain meaning of these revelations is, as the editor of the Transcript says, that "our jury system is on the point of breaking down through the debasement of the material of which juries are composed, and their susceptibility to corrupt influences and to those of class and prejudice."

Time and again in other states judges have felt that juries rendered verdicts so greatly at variance with the sworn testimony and proved evidence presented that they have discharged them from further service in their courts. And what more can judges do?

But the Transcript thinks that the people at large can do more. It thinks that a commission of citizens might be established to select properly qualified men for such service. But we doubt it. It might be possible in a few communities, but not in most, certainly not in our large cities, unless the whole nation were as aroused to the danger as when recently we were attacked by a foreign enemy.

In the judgment of the MONTHLY however, here is where the power of the pulpit should be displayed. The preachers of our land can do more to lay the ground work for better juries than all our courts, legislators, commissions, and newspapers combined. They can thunder, not at our officials, not at our political systems, but at sin in the human heart and its consequences before the bar of God. They can insist upon the supreme authority of the Bible and they can devote their precious opportunities to the explanation and enforcement of its holy text. They can make men see that there is such a thing as being held accountable for perjury and bribery and every corrupt and corrupting influence. They can make them believe that hell is a reality, and that there is a time and place where "there is no shuffling," and where "The action lies

In his true nature."

It is often charged against Christians who believe in the Bible "from cover to cover," and especially those of us who are looking for the coming of the Lord, that we are too mystical in our ideals, that our heads are in the clouds, and that we have no real interest in the political and social status of the world about us. But rather is the opposite the case, and if those who take the other view would only join us in a real old-fashioned revival of the Whitefield, and Finney, and Moody kind, based on the inspired Scriptures and kindled by the preaching of the great doctrines of our holy faith, the fountain heads of justice in our courts would begin to show the results.

Two Ways of Looking At It

The Chicago Daily News in an editorial on "Signs of Church Progress" cites approvingly the conference at Cincinnati from which came the announcement that the Methodist Episcopal church and the Methodist Episcopal church South are nearer to complete re-union than ever before. But the Southern Methodist thinks that such a union would be simply the surrendering of Southern Methodism to the rationalists. If such should be the case it would exhibit a queer kind of "church progress," would it not?

Advertising Bible Truth

We have had our attention called to a copy of the Muskogee Times-Democrat containing a paid advertisement entitled, "How Christian Science Contradicts the Bible," which occupies a space of four and a half by eleven and a half inches, and must have cost a good many dollars. As to its content, it appears to be part of a sermon by Rev. A. C. Dixon, D.D., now of Baltimore, which is sufficient to guarantee its virility of statement and its harmony with the truth. The layman who paid for it has embarked on a form of Christian propaganda which is one of the best possible in our day. It is not new, but it does not begin to be employed as it ought to be, and we commend it with great earnestness to all who have the means to employ it.

Broadcasting Sermons

The First Presbyterian Church of Seattle, Washington, of which Dr. Mark A. Matthews is the pastor, has a machine in operation by which he is talking to thousands in homes, hospitals, public institutions, and camps. Some of his sermons have been heard as far as Logansport, Ind., and Alberta, Canada. The service is sent out three times on Sundays, at 11, 2:30 and 7:30, and Dr. Matthews is now trying to extend the work from a national as well as a religious viewpoint. He is trying to raise money to purchase transmitting sets for magno-vox phones in logging, construction, and milling camps where large numbers of men are gathered every Sunday.

We know Dr. Matthews, and are confident that when he speaks on either religious or national topics he speaks true to the Bible on the one hand and the constitution on the other. Therefore we take pleasure in making this announcement of his plans and his appeal to friends throughout the country for the twenty-five to fifty thousand dollars he is asking for their accomplishment.

Dr. Matthews has completed about twenty-one years of service as pastor of this great church in Seattle, whose record for home and foreign missionary work is among the first in the land.

Misrepresentations of Darwinism and Its Disciples

By William Jennings Bryan

An Address before the ministers of Chicago and others, at the Moody Bible Institute

LADIES and Gentlemen: It is a little embarrassing to speak twice on the same subject on the same day, and in part to the same audience, though I take it for granted that some, possibly many, of those here this afternoon will not be out tonight, and so I have wondered how I could divide up what I want to say without too much repetition.

The difficulty is, that if you have a way of presenting a thing that you think is the strongest you know, you do not like to take a little less strong manner of presenting it, because you want to give the very best to each of the audiences.

I feel like a minister I heard of who did not object to preaching the same sermon twice. He said if they remembered hearing it before, it was worth repeating, and if they did not remember it, it would be new to them.

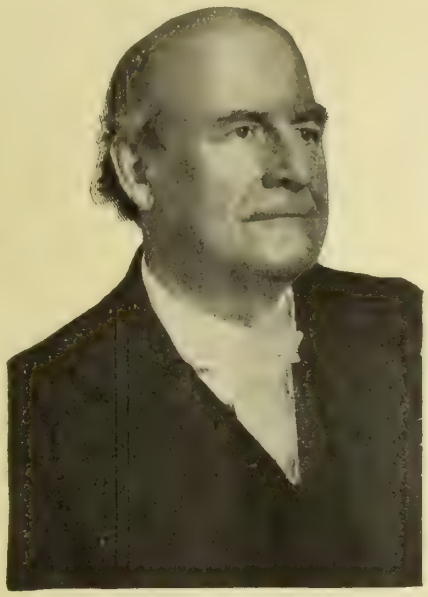
Now here is how I solve this problem; I think the audience this afternoon is a little different from the audience I will have tonight; that is, I think that this afternoon there is probably a larger percentage of live, earnest, religious workers than I will have tonight, and therefore I will say some things that I will not need to say tonight, and they will be more appropriate this afternoon because they will help you in the work that you have to do.

No Republicans Present

I do not suppose that I have a single person in this audience to convert this afternoon. This audience is much like one I had at a high school down near Jacksonville, Ill., in 1884; that is, this is religiously like that politically. As I went from the rear of the little school house up to the front, one of the Democrats stopped me and whispered, "Hit 'em hard. There isn't a Republican here." He thought that was a good audience where I could hit the Republicans because there were none there.

As a matter of fact that is not my idea of an audience, and I have very seldom had one like it. There are always some Republicans who will slip in to disturb the peace. I would rather speak to an audience with Republicans, if I was making a political speech, than an audience of Democrats.

Now this may seem strange to you but I will explain it. I heard of a criminal lawyer, who said he did not like to defend a man who was innocent. Whenever he defended a man who was innocent he was oppressed by the thought that by some mistake of his that innocent man might be convicted, and the thought of being responsible for such a blot upon a man's life was so great that he just did not like to defend an innocent man. But he was willing to defend a guilty man for if he was sent to the penitentiary he deserved it any how.



Hon. Wm. Jennings Bryan

You may get from this story why it is that I feel more free when speaking to Republicans than to Democrats. When I am speaking to Democrats I feel they are all right, and I cannot do them much good, and might possibly do them harm, and the responsibility that rests upon me when I think of doing a Democrat harm is too great. When I speak to Republicans I know I cannot hurt them and I may help them.

And so when on a religious subject, if I am speaking only to Christians, there is not the opportunity to do good that there is where there may be some who could be brought to say that I presented arguments they had not heard before and that I had convinced them. When I am talking to an audience like this, all I can hope to do is to increase the enthusiasm, and that is a great deal.

Politics Applied to Religion

You will pardon me if, after the experience I have had in politics, I apply in religious presentations something of the rules I have applied in politics. I found a long while ago that there were two things I had to bear in mind in a political speech. One was to convert those who were opposed to me, but that is the smallest part; the largest part of a political meeting is to increase the enthusiasm of those who are with you that they may go out and do more individual and effective work.

In other words, the primary object of a political meeting is to raise the temperature. Now Democrats, and Republicans too, vary in temperature from just above freezing up to the boiling point. The Democrat who is just above freezing must be handled very carefully, for a little drop in the temperature—and he is gone. But if you can raise him up to the boiling point he will take care of himself, and so it is with you.

Now I want this afternoon, more than tonight, to raise the temperature. If there are any Christians here just above freezing I want to raise them to as near the boiling point as possible. Why? Because when they get to the boiling point they work. I want to increase your religious zeal.

The speaker in politics furnishes arguments for the masses to use. The number of converts made at a political meeting is not large, but if the speaker can present the arguments to those who are with him, they can go out and with his arguments in their own opportunities make more converts than can be made in any meeting.

And so this afternoon I am coming to you not as a minister, but just a layman, and I want to say this to you: the only embarrassment I have in making a religious speech is, that when the papers accept my religious speeches they are apt to leave the impression that I have turned aside from politics to religion. That was suggested recently by a man who introduced me, that I had suspended my political work to engage in a different kind.

This is a mistake—I have not turned aside from politics. "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's." As a citizen I am interested in the form of government. There is nobody more interested, and I stand ready to defend popular government against anybody on earth.

I am interested in the perfecting of government. I tell the people that they should prize American citizenship; it is the greatest in the world, and the way to prove that you believe in it is to recognize the responsibility, and as a citizen take part in making that government as good as human wisdom can make it.

I do not ask the people to think as I do, but I ask them to think. I would rather have a man think and differ from me than just agree with me without thinking, for if I should happen to make a mistake, those who follow me without thinking will follow me into error; but if I can make the people think, I will trust their arriving at a true conclusion.

The Right Is Sure to Win

I learned from my father, and I have grown in the conviction during the years, that God stands back of every life with an arm strong enough to bring the victory. The moment I decide a thing is right, I have not the slightest doubt of a final triumph, no matter when it may come. I do not try to guess how fast a reform is going to grow. It is easier to tell the direction of the wind than to measure its velocity. I can be sure a thing is going to triumph, but I do not know how many things are going to delay it and how many things are going to hasten it.

My observation is that more things come unexpectedly to hasten a triumph, than things to hinder it. And it is my faith in the ultimate triumph that makes me patient and willing to wait. I believe every citizen ought to be more anxious for the triumph of that which is right than for that which he thinks to be right, for he may be mistaken. So much for politics.

Whenever I go into politics I agree with those I am working with, I do not care what religion they may have; and when I come to discuss religious subjects I do not care what politics a man may have.

But I am here this afternoon to do religiously what I have been trying to do politically for forty years. I have been doing this politically upon a large scale and in a national arena, but the plan is the same; my methods are the same; and my purpose is the same; and that is to advance the triumph of truth.

I believe we ought to be perfectly frank with each other; that every difference of opinion ought to be fought out, and one of the things that is going to help to do this is to clear away the underbrush so that the man who fights the Bible will have to fight with his face toward the foe and his whole body in sight.

Driving Them into the Open

Now I cannot do everything, but there are certain kinds of work I can do, and this is one of the kinds—bringing men out from under cover. I heard a story once, I do not know whether you will understand it or not. You may not be far enough west to see the point but it applies to this case. A man, a cattle man, was riding in a car one day, just a day coach. It was a warm summer day and just in front there was a bald headed man. After a while the cattle man noticed the man running his fingers through the fringe of hair. First on one side and then on the other, then back behind the ears, and finally he leaned forward and said,

"Run 'em up in the clearing and you can catch them."

My business is to help run them up in the clearing. My business is to take care of the excuses that men give and make them give the real reason.

I learned that in politics. Sometimes you hear a man make a speech and when he gets through he has not given a single reason that influences him. I feel like going up to him and saying, "Now give your real reason."

That is what I am going to do in discussing this question. Error always hides behind misrepresentation, and the moment we expose the weakness of the opposition—of those who believe in the Darwinian hypothesis, who call themselves evolutionists with various definitions, they begin to hide themselves.

I say to you there has not been a single evolutionist who has made a single honest argument in defense of his position in the last two years, in all their talk in the papers—not one. Every one has hidden behind misrepresentation. Error can never defend itself when it is exposed. It always hides.

Let me show you what they are hiding behind now. Lots of Christians have not the slightest idea what is going on in this country. They have not the slightest idea what the ministers are thinking about on the average, and some of them do not tell what they are thinking about it. They are not discussing the real issues, and if they do, they use language that the audience does not understand.

May I give you

A Bit of Personal History

to show you how I was brought into this? Do you think I was looking for a fight? Do you not think I have had fighting enough for one man? I started in when I was a young man, and I have never been able to get through with one fight before I got into another. It is one "paramount issue" after another, and a paramount issue in politics only lasts one campaign, and hardly through that. It changes from one thing to another. Why? Because new things are coming up all the time. I have never yet advanced a new principle in government. I have never yet proposed a new thing in politics. I have always been defending the old things. Every proposition upon which I have taken my stand has been a time honored proposition. I have been standing for that which had all experience back of it.

I mention this as an illustration, for so it is when I come to this question; I am standing by the old things. I am standing by the Book. You sang just before I began to speak,

"Faith of our fathers, living still."

It is the faith of our fathers that we stand for. I have not asked anybody to believe anything that has not been a creed of the church for hundreds of years. I believe in the Apostles' Creed. I cannot be disturbing the harmony of the church when I stand for what the church has always stood for. It is the fellows who are trying to change the creed who introduce discord, and upon them is the burden of proof.

I never thought of this doctrine of whether man came from the monkey or not, for probably twenty-six years after I left college, aside from the jokes we sometimes read in the paper which usually run about like this:—

A boy came home from college and said to his father,

"Father, I find I am descended from the monkey."

And his father says,

"You may be, but I want you to know I am not."

Now, that is about all I thought of this question for twenty-six years after I came out of college, and I could not have told you until just a few weeks ago whether or not it was taught in college when I was a boy.

A few weeks ago I spoke in Los Angeles, and when I was through a professor who taught me science came up and said,

"Mr. Bryan, I want you to know you did not learn any evolution from me when you were in college."

It made no impression on me, but as I went around to make speeches in colleges I came up against it and felt its influence among the students.

Finally I decided I would investigate it, and I went to the highest authority to find out. I went to Darwin himself. After reading Mr. Darwin's Descent of Man, I said, "It is a lie. There is nothing in it." I said more, "That book does not belong in the library of science; it ought to be in the library of humor;" and that is where it is going some day. As soon as I get the time I am going to write a pamphlet on the humor of Darwin.

Well, after that I went on, and did not pay much attention to it. Every time I would make a religious speech I would just put in a sentence or two to indicate that I did not believe in it and went on with my work.

This went along for some years; just incidental references to it, rejecting it. But the war came on, and I had a growing feeling that Nietzsche's philosophy had something to do with the war, and that feeling grew until I got Nietzsche's book and read it, and I found that Nietzsche fathered every atrocity and brutality practiced in the war. He had taken and followed Darwin to the ultimate conclusion.

Nietzsche not only denied God, but overturned every standard of morality. He recognized but one virtue—one and only one—that of power. His doctrine is that you shall trample ruthlessly on anything in your way, and that a man ought not to turn aside from his own progress to feel sympathy or pity.

He praised Napoleon as the greatest man of his century. Why? Because he made war respectable again! He pictured Napoleon with an ideal of France, of him in control of France, and France in control of Europe and the world, supreme in power.

Darwinism Back of the War

When I got to understand what Nietzsche really taught, I found that Darwin had been taken and made the basis of the doctrine that might makes right.

In the summer of 1915, the year after the war broke out in Europe, I was at Winona Lake, president of the Association at that time, and I introduced Rev. A. C. Dixon who had been preaching in London, and he told this incident. He said that he was preaching in his church in London and was blaming Nietzsche for the war, and when he got through a man came up to him and said in a brogue so German that he wondered how he had failed to be interned, "You mustn't be too hard on us Germans. Remember Nietzsche got his doctrine from Darwin."

Since that time I have read the Science of Power, by Benjamin Kidd, an Englishman who takes Darwin and shows the foundation there of the doctrine that might makes right, and who goes on to extend and amplify it.

So I began to feel a little more earnestly about the effect of Darwinism. I had found that Darwin was undermining the Christian faith, and then I found he had become the basis of the world's most brutal war, and then I found that Benjamin Kidd pointed out that he is the basis of the discord in industry. All this on the foundation laid in the survival of the fittest, or the individual fighting for self and no one else; the most cruel, brutal, selfish, doctrine ever proposed in this world, by civilized man! That is the basis of

The Turmoil That Disturbs the World Today

There has never been a time since Christ was born when there was as critical a situation in industry in the world as there is today, and I believe the root of it is in that brutal doctrine of each one for himself and the Devil take the hindmost. It is a selfish doctrine; it destroys brotherhood.

And so I went on, and the more I saw of it, the more I began to feel that I knew something the people ought to know. Therefore, two years ago I went up to Ann Arbor and delivered a lecture on a Saturday night. I had had an invitation before to speak on a religious subject on Sunday, and so when I got up there I said, "I am not going to leave until tomorrow afternoon, and if you want a religious meeting I will be glad to speak."

It was set for twelve o'clock not to interfere with the churches, and there were about 4,500 people in the hall. I gave a part of my lecture, just a part, on Darwinism, and quoted from him. I have not a word to say against Darwin except what I can uphold by what he himself said.

Now a few days afterwards I received a letter from a Methodist preacher whom I had met at Ann Arbor. He wrote a kind letter and said he was so sorry that I had dissented from Darwin as he was afraid I would lose my influence with the people!

I wrote my answer over several times before I got it down where it would go through the mail. I do not recall a letter that made me quite so indignant. Here was a Methodist preacher in the principal Methodist church of Ann Arbor, who not only did not defend the Bible from the attacks made upon it in that university, but who did not want me to defend it for fear I would lose my influence with the thoughtful people!

That was the last straw. I went to work to prepare an address on Darwinism, not like the little one I had delivered there with a few sentences about it; this was all on Darwinism. I printed 5,000 copies of it and proceeded to circulate them.

Afterwards a student wrote me of the criticism it had aroused from a professor. I wrote to the young man and asked if he would circulate my address if I would have some copies sent to him. He said he would, and I went to one of the newspapers whose publisher said he would print my speech if I would buy 2,000 copies. I bought the 2,000 and the young man distributed them. He put notices on the campus, and took some to a book store, and watched the crowd buying them, until the papers were all gone.

The next time I went through there the young man came to the depot and gave me a printed speech by the president of Ann Arbor University, who said, "There is no conflict between science and religion."

If he had stopped there I could have endorsed it, but he did not stop there. He went so far as to say that if you could not reconcile religion with biology, psychology, etc., as taught in that institution, then throw your religion away for science is here to stay!

Challenging the Universities

I say that a man who puts a scientific book above the Bible has no right to a dollar collected by taxation from the people! He has no business to it. Is not the Bible here to stay too? As a man paid by taxation to be the head of a great state institution, what business has he to put science above the Bible? A book on science that changes every few years against the unchanging Word of God?

Every time I make a speech on this subject I hear from somebody else. I went to a so-called Christian college, and after I had made my speech a professor telephoned to the organization responsible for my being there and protested against my being allowed to make a speech like that!

Talk about intolerance! If any church attempted to put out a preacher who was saying "I do not believe one word of the Bible," the newspapers would talk about the intolerance of the church that tried to deny freedom of speech and conscience to a minister, and yet that professor protested against my being allowed to defend the Bible in a Christian college!

I went up here to Madison, and a Methodist preacher told me what a Catholic girl told him. She came out of a class room much disturbed and said: "Professor," for the Methodist preacher was teaching in the University, "our professor just said the Bible was a collection of myths. I do not like to doubt a professor, but I have always been taught to believe that the Bible is the Word of God."

I went to Madison, and spoke there in the gymnasium to 1,950 persons, who paid admission, and I called attention to the fact that in that institution they had a professor who was teaching that the Bible was a collection of myths, and I said a man had no right to assault the Bible before his class when he was paid by the tax payers to teach in the school.

The president of the University sat on the platform and the next day he gave out an interview criticizing the meeting, but not mentioning the professor's teaching that the Bible was a collection of myths!

I have had a controversy lasting about a year and a half with the president of that University on the subject of evolution and the theory of man's ascent, but he has not yet explained why a professor should be allowed to teach that the Bible is a collection of myths.

A Baptist preacher told me, Dr. Straton, of New York, that one of the officers of his church told him that when he was in Columbia University, the professor of geology told his class at the first lesson to lay aside all they had learned in Sunday-school before they commenced the study of geology.

Over in Pennsylvania, I met a man on the State committee of Sunday-school work. He had a son at Yale studying under a professor of whom it is said that no student went out from under his teaching who was not showing the effects of it.

Chicago Public Schools

And so I went on over the country and found in most of our colleges this was going on.

I came here to Chicago, and was lunching at the University Club. At the table sat a man who was teaching in a college in this city.

We came to discuss this subject, and he said,

"Mr. Bryan, let me tell you what my experience was. Last fall my daughter was in her first year of high school. She came home one day and said,

" 'Father, you have always taught me to believe in miracles?'

" 'Yes.'

" 'Well, we are the only ones who do.'

" 'Where do you get that?'

"And she told me her teacher in English literature told them."

Now that was the first year of high school in Chicago.

He said, "I went to the high school and found the teacher and said,

" 'Did you tell my daughter that there were no miracles?'

"She said, 'Yes, sir!'

"But I said, 'Why? What business have you disturbing my daughter's religion?'

"This teacher had just come out of one of the normal schools of the state of Illinois, and she said, 'I am here to teach the truth and that's the truth.' "

These teachers say, "Why do we attempt to inject religion into the schools?"

My answer is, Why do they butt into religion when they are employed to teach in our public schools? What business has a teacher of English literature to tell a young lady in her class that there are no such things as miracles? What right has she to tell a student the Bible is a lie? If she is there to teach simply the things we teach in school, why does she not let the religion of our children alone?

I was out to California this last summer and spoke on what was being taught in our schools, and a young man came up to me and said he was in high school, and on the first day in one of their classes a teacher called one of the students up and took his hand, and said,

"See this place here? That is where there was a toe once."

And he pulled back his sleeve and said, "See how the hair slopes down? That's because when the monkeys held on to the trees the rain ran down their arms!"

The other day a lady wrote me from Idaho and said, "Mr. Bryan, have you ever seen the little book entitled, How the Present Came out of the Past, by Margaret E. Wells, published by Putnam's Sons?"

I wrote a book store in New York to send me this book, a little book in two volumes, which this woman told me they were teaching to the children in the schools in Idaho.

In the first volume on page 13, there is a picture of a chimpanzee, and on the opposite page in child language, just one syllable words, it tells how our ancestors resembled the cunning little apes and monkeys. It had a picture of a house in a tree, and said they lived in the trees, just ate roots and berries and such things. They wore no clothing but probably had hairy skins. This is what they are teaching to the children!

The other day I saw a little item in the paper. (I am telling it just as I saw it, so if there is a mistake it is not mine.) It said two committees, that of the National Educational Association and that of the National Library Association, a joint committee, had recommended twenty books for the libraries, children's books for all the public libraries in the United States.

I looked over the list. Robinson Crusoe was there, Tom Sawyer was there, but there were no Bible stories there. Not one Bible story book in twenty!

I thought that was strange and then I looked it over again, and I saw, Van Loon's History of Mankind. Did any of you ever see it? There is a great deal being said about it in the papers. I sent down to New York to get it, and almost on the first page I saw an illustration of life coming up from the lowest form, up through the animals until finally there was a man waving his hand, a tracing of man down to the animal.

I did not have much time to give it, but a member of my family took it up and came to me and said:

"Did you read through that?"

"No," I said, "I didn't."

He said, "They mention you in there."

I was interested to see where I came in the history of mankind.

It said that when Darwin gave out his hypothesis that answered the Bible story of creation, he was persecuted for a while, and the author added, "Even as I write William Jennings Bryan is talking about the menace of Darwinism!"

There was no place in the library for telling about Bible characters, nothing there worth while for a child to learn, but it was important that they should be told this story and have it illustrated by a picture showing how man came up from the monkey!

Now that is what I have been finding out.

Yesterday morning I was in Des Moines and a member of the committee that invited me there was with me. The train was late, and he sat with me while I had breakfast and regaled me with some things he had found. One of the publishing houses, one of the big denominations, had sent out Sunday-school literature—he is going to get it for me, and if I had it I would tell you what house it was but I do not want to do that until I have the material before me.* He said this had a dialogue between an uncle and a nephew, in which questions are asked and answered, and the uncle traces man up from the animal. And that is among our Sunday-school literature.

I spoke last June at Kansas City. There was some little controversy for a while as to whether I was to speak or not. I was invited, and then it was withdrawn, and then restored and I finally got there.

The audience commenced coming at 2:30 and waited until 9:00, and they were ready to hear. But before I had a chance to say anything on the Bible side, they had a man deliver a lecture early in the program. I got this from a Presbyterian minister who wrote to me, as there seemed to be some fear lest I would say something on Darwinism, and so they had this man give a lecture, illustrated, showing how man came up from the animal.

That is what is going on and what has brought me into it.

I shall have to tell you how I feel about it. If I am going along the street and see a burglar entering a house, I would not care whose house it was, if I do not warn that person, I feel like a partner in the crime. And when I see a brute doctrine entering our schools to take away what is more precious than anything a burglar might find in a house, if I do not warn the parents of the children I feel like a partner with them.

That Kentucky Legislation

Down in Kentucky last year a resolution was introduced, or a bill rather, and it proposed to prevent the teaching in the public school of atheism, agnosticism, and Darwinism, or any other hypothesis that links man with the animals, and provided penalties.

I got the blame for it. I was down there and advocated a measure for prohibiting the teaching of these things in schools supported by taxation, but I am not responsible for that bill.

I happened to be away from home. I had met the author of the bill in one of my meetings, but I was not there, and did not get a chance to see it until some time after the legislature had turned it down.

I said he ought not to have put in any penalties. We are not dealing with the criminal class; we are dealing with educated people who think they are doing a great service when they tell people they are descendants from the animals. All we need is a law making it unlawful. All we have to do is to declare it unlawful; we do not need any penalties.

The papers took it up, and as I say, I got the blame for it. I have nearly always been mentioned in connection with that bill.

And what did they say? They said that we were trying to take Kentucky back to the Dark Ages! We were trying to deny freedom of speech and conscience, and they had prominent people connected with the church interviewed, and they declared that it would be a great mistake to shackle learning, and not a paper told the truth.

We were not attempting to shackle learning, we were not attempting to suppress truth. And, my friends, not a single paper told them that it was defeated by one majority because the president of the State University, and the professors, stated in writing that they were not teaching it.

That is the way they beat it by one vote; by declaring that they were not teaching it, and yet all those papers talked about Kentucky wanting to go back to the Dark Ages, by shackling the truth!

But, my friends, they were teaching it and they cannot hide behind that any more.

An Oligarchy of Scientists

A few days ago they had a meeting of scientists, whose Association is said to contain 11,000. It was said to be for the advancement of science. They met at Cambridge, Mass., where Harvard University is, and passed a resolution, declaring that they believed in organic evolution in plant life, in animal life, including man, and protested against any legislation that attempted to prevent the teaching of this in the schools.

Now that Association held it's last annual meeting at Toronto, Ont., December 28 a year ago last December, and Mr. Bateson came all the way from England to speak on evolution. This was the same Association and Mr. Bateson a distinguished scientist who specializes on biology, spoke on evolution and took up every effort they have made to find the origin of species, and he told those people that never a single effort had succeeded.

Every man in that Association knows that they have never yet been able to find one single species that ever came from another, and Mr. Bateson says, "We still have faith in evolution, though we have our doubts about the origin of species; but do not be discouraged, we may find it tomorrow!"

Now that is the latest thing that a scientist of prominence said to those people, and yet they hold a meeting this year and resolve that they unanimously believe in it; and insist that there shall be no law against teaching it.

My friends, I want you to know that there is set up in this country an oligarchy, 11,000 scientists against 40,000,-

Picture Story Papers* (May 14, 1922), Methodist Book Concern.

000 of Christians, who impudently declare that the Christians have got to pay them their salaries but cannot direct as to what they shall say.

History gives us no example of any such oligarchy in all the past. Despots of the past sometimes put on the taxes heavily and took the money themselves, and sometimes appointed favorites above them, and sometimes killed those they disliked; but that is all they ever did. But here we have the so-called scientists who have taken the right to fashion the religion of this country for 100,000,000 people, and want you to pay them for it! They take your religion away from your children, and when you say anything, they say, "Do we not have freedom of speech in this country?"

Now I want to give you the issue. Do not let them fool you. They say we are going to interfere with freedom of conscience. Not a bit of it. I never heard a person who announced that he was opposed to freedom of conscience. We believe that in this country an atheist has as much right to be an atheist as a Christian has to be a Christian, and I shall oppose any law that attempts to bind any man's conscience.

Nor would I interfere with freedom of speech. I believe an atheist has as much right to teach atheism as a Christian to teach Christianity. I believe an agnostic has as much right to teach agnosticism as a Christian to teach Christianity. Can they ask anything more?

But the time has come when the atheists and agnostics think they have more rights than the Christian has in this country. They are not satisfied to have the rights we have. They want privileges that we do not have. If a Christian wants to teach Christianity in this country, what does he have to do? He must build his own college. If a Catholic wants to teach Catholicism he must build Catholic schools and colleges. If Methodists want to teach their interpretation of the Scriptures they must build their own schools and colleges. Every denomination has its own college and it teaches Christianity according to its own interpretation.

Now if the Christian must build a Christian college in order to teach Christianity, then an atheist must build an atheistic college if he wants to teach atheism. Do you know of any atheist colleges? There is not one college in the United States with "Atheistic" above it, nor one where they say, "Come all ye who want to hear agnosticism." Why? Because there is not a person in the United States who would sacrifice to contribute to any such college to teach any such doctrine. Christians will sacrifice because they believe in the doctrine they preach. What atheists and agnostics expect to do is to come in and take charge of the tax payer's money, and in public institutions in a Christian land draw salaries and sponge on the public while they take from the children a faith that is priceless, and substitute a brute doctrine that brings him down to a level of an animal and takes all his aspirations away.

That is what is going on in this country and what I want Christians to know, and when they know it just leave it to them. They will stop it without violating any principle, but in harmony with the spirit of our land.

What Does Mr. Bryan Believe?

There have been quite a number who honored me by their attention, and in attempting to answer what I said, have asked, "Does Mr. Bryan believe the earth is round?" "Is Mr. Bryan going to dispute the law of gravitation?"

What has that to do with this subject? If anybody disputes the law of gravitation, have him throw his hat up in the air and watch it come down. If you want to prove that the world is round ask anybody who has gone around it.

But suppose you said to some man, "I do not believe the law of gravitation," and you threw your hat up and watched for it to come down and it did not come down but stayed up there. And then suppose he should say to you, "Oh, but wait a million years, you cannot expect it to come down all at once."

Are you going to put evolution in the same class with the law of gravitation? Why, my friends, the law of gravitation was here before Newton was, and it was not changed in the slightest afterwards. If a man threw his hat up in the air before Newton came it came down just the same. Newton simply put into scientific language a fact that was and of which everybody had knowledge. Did that disturb Christianity?

And about the earth being round. Why if anybody says it is not just say, "Go on around it." Anybody can prove it. Is that like evolution?

Here are two things, and they say, "These are just like evolution."

What is the difference? In the first place, nobody has ever been able to prove evolution. Darwin says there existed about 200,000,000 years ago a few germs of life on this planet. And when we say, "Darwin, are you sure of that?" He replies, "That is my best guess."

Then we ask, "What does your son think about it?"

"Well," he says, "my son thinks it was about 57,000,000 years ago, but my son has not had as long to guess as I have so he did not make it quite so long."

"Darwin, did anybody ever guess less than that?"

"Oh, yes, some say it was only 24,000,000."

"Did anybody ever guess higher than that?"

"Oh, yes, some guess as high as 306,000,000."

You will understand how incorrect they are when one man guesses ten times as long as the other, and thinks he is equally credible.

They are trying to show you how much better a religion they can build on evolution than on the Bible, and they say they can prove that all animal life came from one germ, and all plant life came from one germ, and back of these two is the germ from which both of them came.

That would have been a great time to live when only one germ had two children, one animal, and one plant! And yet they want you to believe it; and if you do not believe it then you are an ignoramus!

Compliments of The Continent

I had been called everything it was possible for men to call me, and cursed in every known language. But I had to wait until I got into this subject to find out what a really mean man I was. The Continent, a Presbyterian paper, had a nice editorial about me, but wound up by saying, I had never counted for as much intellectually as morally. Just think of it! Even a Republican never questioned my intelligence. That was left for the Presbyterians to do. After I had been in political and intellectual life constantly and actively for thirty-three years, and had come up against about everybody in this country one time or another, some little fellow sitting in a back room in a religious newspaper office says, "Mr. Bryan does not know anything, so he cannot understand this subject!"

If there is anything I can prove by documents that stand among such men, it is that I am an educated man, educated according to their standards. My parents believed in education. My father was a scholar, and my parents said I was to have an education and I was called in and told their decision. I am not trying to claim any great beginning; they deserve the credit, and the land in which I live and the age. They told me I would spend two years in the academy and four years in college and take up my law studies afterwards—and I did.

I studied everything they put in the course and passed in all of them and then they said, "William"—no they called me Mr. Bryan, by the time I graduated, "Mr. Bryan, this little piece of paper certifies that you are a Bachelor of Arts." Three years afterward they gave me another little piece of paper, and said, "This shows you are a Master of Arts."

Then I went to a law school and studied everything in the course and passed every one, and when I finished they handed me a little piece of paper, and said, "Now, Mr. Bryan, you are a Bachelor of Law." Then three state universities sent for me, and I made a speech, and got a little piece of paper saying that I was a Doctor of Law. Then three colleges sent for me, and I made speeches there, and they each gave me a little piece of paper which they said indicated I was a Doctor of Law. So I have six of them. I do not use them, but if these fellows don't quit calling me an ignoramus I am going to have some cards printed and do what I never did before, put those letters—LL.D., six times, a whole string of them up and down that card.

Common Sense Needed

If it requires diplomas and degrees to understand this subject, I have got them to burn—but it does not. It just requires common sense. Every person in this audience can understand it just as well as any scientist, whether he traces his ancestry to the jungle or whether he was born of God. God did not make these important things so hard to understand. Whenever you find anything hard to understand remember that it is not a fundamental thing.

Why, my friends, do we not select juries without any educational basis! There is not a state in the Union that requires you to present a certificate of learning to be on a jury. A jury, not one of which ever went to college, can fix the death penalty to hurl a soul into eternity. A jury can decide a question of property—on one side a man with a hundred millions, and on the other side a man who has not where to lay his head. They decide questions of the family, of marriage, or divorce. Questions of the guardianship of children are decided by a jury of no educational qualifications, and yet these men tell you you cannot tell until you have gone through several colleges, whether Christ was conceived of the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin, and so you will have to let them tell you.

My friends, that is not true. If Darwin's descendants ever sue me for slandering their ancestor it will not disturb me because the burden of proof is on them. When the trial is called, and the sheriff goes to the window and calls out, "Oyez, oyez, witnesses for Darwin please come into the court," not a one will come.

Then the sheriff will turn to me and say, "Mr. Bryan, since the burden of proof is on the plaintiff, and since his witnesses are not to be found, you will not need to call yours."

But I will say, "Please, judge, for the sake of some of these professors let me call my witnesses."

And when he asks me for their names, I will say, "Just take an alphabetical list of all the species in the world—about a million and a half—animal and vegetable, and ask them one question, judge, just one question:—

"Has there ever been any change in your family?"

Every one will say, "Not in my family."

Now who could not decide a case with no witnesses on one side and a million on the other? Does it take a professor to decide that? It must take somebody who does not care for facts to decide for Darwin against all the evidence against him.

Nebraska Against Africa

They have never been able to secure any worth while evidence to connect man with the brute and they cannot find it. They think they have frequently. Somebody found a decayed tooth in Nebraska, just one tooth in a gravel pit. There was no skeleton there, no skull, no jaw-bone, just one tooth; and he hastened to New York, and asked Professor Osborne to examine it. Osborne was so excited that he called in other doctors and they held a post mortem on this animal with one tooth, and solemnly decided that that tooth came from the animal nearer to man than any other that had yet been found! The scientists were just getting ready to settle down in the belief that at last they had overthrown the whole Bible with a single tooth, when somebody in Africa found a skull and decided that that skull was the skull of the animal nearest to man that had just been found, and then they had the scientific world divided into two groups, as to whether the first man came from Nebraska or from Africa!

Well now, I do not care a fig about either one, but when anybody gets into a controversy with Nebraska, I am going to count on Nebraska, for I lived there for thirty years. When it comes to a controversy between Nebraska's decayed tooth and Africa's skull, count me for the decayed tooth.

My friends, do you not think that if they will try to build the philosophy of life upon a tooth or the skull of a monkey man, that it is strange? They are trying to link man with the animal when we are trying to raise man toward the throne of God. They take your boys and girls and turn their attention to the jungles when they ought to be teaching them to look to God for inspiration and to Christ for salvation and guidance.

I cannot talk any longer but I want to express my appreciation of coming here and to have you understand that it makes a great deal of difference what we believe. I want you to take this Bible, this Word of God, and let the world know you believe in it; that you believe in God and that you believe in Christ, for that Christ is the basis upon which civilization must be built.

How Evolution Strikes the Rhymester

MONKEY, OR MUD?

By Rev. John S. Kempster, Lyndon, Ill.

Well, goodness me! whatever next, 'twould give a man the "gapes"
To hear his former ancestors were only grinning apes!
The evolution theory now in some respects is fine,
But let us use our common sense, and somewhere draw the line.
The story told in Genesis is, that Almighty God
Did in His image make a man, and formed him of the sod;
Then as one act did yet remain to now complete the whole,
He breathed in him the breath of life, and made a living soul.
Yet, sad to say, this brief account of how man first was made,
Hath failed to satisfy some folks, and hence their great tirade.
They're forming theories of their own, (we plainly see they're hurt;
It kind of spoils their vanity to think they came from dirt).
Yet dust we are, and unto dust shall every man return;
So let us live and play the man, and well this lesson learn,
Each man to his opinion (my heart now gives a thud);
Let others claim the monkey—I'd rather have the mud.

WHY NOT UP-TO-DATE?

By Miss Mabel E. Kerr, Port Huron, Mich.

If yer sprung from apes and monkeys,
In an evoluti'n way,
Will yer jest perlitely tell me
Why did evolution stay
Way back thar in early ages,
Sted o' keepin' up-to-date?
Why not man a present product
Of the monkey and his mate?

Why the missin' link's still missin'?
Kind o' curious, don't yer say,
Why all natur' has forgotten
This here evoluti'n way?
Peers like God might jest be sayin',
Back a long, long time ago,
In the days of His creatin',
What He meant that yer should know.

Modernism and the Minimum of Faith

By Rev. A. Z. Conrad, D.D., Pastor, Park Street Congregational Church, Boston
An address at the Moody Bible Institute, stenographically reported

AGAIN let me say how gratified I am to be in this great city of Chicago, and to go to the heart of it, and find the heart beating true to the great heart of the Eternal. I cannot tell you how I rejoice in the magnificant service being rendered to the church of God and to modern civilization by an institution such as this.

I am to speak to you for a while on the subject, "The Mistakes of Modernism, the Irreducible Minimum in Christian Belief, and a Triumphant Church."

We are hearing a great deal today about the mistakes of evangelical Christianity from our friends the philosophers. It may not do any harm for us to turn the tables and consider the mistakes of Modernism. I will call your attention to some thirteen of them.

Thirteen Mistakes of Modernism

The first is the assumption that because a thing is modern it is necessarily new. Modernism can make no claim to newness. There is nothing new about it. Certain groups of men have come upon the scene today and declare that for the first time in the history of civilization a true revelation is coming through them to the world, but it is not new. Every utterance of Modernism is only a rehabilitation of things which have been often said.

The second mistake is the assumption that in so far as it may seem to be new it is true and in the line of human progress. But every student of the history of the church knows that the great movements of progress, political, social and religious, have emanated from men whose convictions have been great upon the lines of what we term traditional Christianity. I say it positively and confidently. Modernism can make no claim to the authorship of great forward movements in the nature of ethical reform, of spiritual or of human progress. It takes tremendous convictions to lift the world out of the rut and face people upward who have been facing downward, and forward who were facing backward, and Modernism has not the conviction which will do that thing, because the conviction which accomplishes this is reached in the truth which is absolutely timeless. Newness has nothing to do with trueness. Neither has remoteness nor antiquity. Truth is as timeless as God. Because a thing is modern therefore gives it no prestige with people who think and think profoundly.

The third mistake is that the unaided human intellect can deal successfully with the great spiritual realities, that the unaided human mind can compass all the truth necessary to salvation and human perfection. It is a great mistake, because if it were true the world would have found satisfaction in the world, in the superior attainments or superior men, but the world never found such rest. The unaided intellect is not capable of dealing successfully with the profounder, deeper things of the soul. When we enter into the realm of the soul we must have illumination and greater acumen than is given to us naturally. No man is sufficient to grasp the greater truths pertaining to life here and life beyond without God. He must have assistance, but Modernism proclaims very glibly that nothing is essential except painstaking and persistent inquiry by the natural mind.

A fourth mistake is that the Bible is man's ripest and best word about himself and God, and not God's best word about Himself and man, a difference as wide as the poles. With a great deal of gravity Modernists condescend to speak of the Bible as a very superior book, but only on the level of the natural human intellect, the unaided mind, and not supernatural revelation.

Books That Emphasize the Certainties

A fifth mistake is the assumption that when we enter into the realm of religion we are in that of the speculative where absolute certitude is not to be expected. It is Modernism's conviction that there are no absolute finalities of which we can be sure as we can with respect to material things. That is absolutely untrue. We are surrounded by truth when we enter into the realm of theology, and can come to finalities just as absolute as any other truth we may discover.

Park Street Church, Boston

I would commend to students Dr. Harris' book which follows along in a logical way the process whereby man attains to certainty and emphasizes how positively certain we may be with respect to the great matters of the soul. I also commend those two noble volumes by Dr. Madison, The Growth of the Spirit of Christianity, in which he shows by contrast what the unaided mind discovers, and what is discovered by the mind resting in the Word of God. These two books furnish a great foundation for extensive study of truth. A third is the greatest book from the standpoint of Christianity given to the world in a decade, that of Edwards, The Holy Spirit the Dynamic of the Church. All these books emphasize the absolute certitude of our traditional faith.

Another mistake of Modernism is that sin is a misfortune and that we are victims. That sin is a disease and not a diabolical, iniquitous, damnable thing that comes up through deliberate departure from God and violation from His law. Modernism wants us to treat sin pathologically and not redemptively, but Jesus Christ made a definite proclamation of His conception of sin when He went to the cross to eradicate it.

Modernism makes a further mistake in assuming that the progress of the world is to be accomplished by culture. No one disparages culture. Association with refined things refine the soul, but Modernism makes the mistake of believing that they can save the soul. They can no more save the soul than Lady MacBeth can cleanse her hands by walking to and fro and crying, "Out damned spot"! It did not go at her command. The soul of man can only be cleansed through the cleansing power of Jesus Christ, through His atonement. Modernism therefore is met squarely by the Book.

Again, Modernism presents Christ only as the great example of self-effacement and martyrdom. But his death was vastly more than martyrdom. It was a voluntary sacrifice of life, that man might have life and have it more abundantly.

Lesson from a Steel Plant

Then again Modernism makes the mistake of declaring that prayer is an excellent exercise morally, but not a procuring cause. We hear a great deal of the self-efficient bigotry of man who assumes that God would change any of His plans to meet any human requirements. They say prayer is not a procuring cause but merely a subjective satisfaction through association with the invisible and real, whereby we come into a more happy relation with God. But prayer is power procuring. It gets us into the presence of God and brings power to bear upon the problems of life.

I stood one day in a great steel plant. I went to speak to the men at the noon hour. Here were hundreds of men who at the signal of the whistle left their tables where they had been working, and as they left there was a silence all through the establishment. These men had been taking great steel shafts and paring them down to one sixteen-thousandths of an inch. Not one had any capability for that. Only a steel machine can do that with hardened steel. I noted when the men went back to their tasks they geared themselves into a great central shaft that ran all through the factory, threw themselves as it were into that power which was turning by a great generating force near at hand. Every man became a thousand men when he called power to his task. That is what prayer does. By faith we gear into the infinite, and when a man has learned the secret he discovers that prayer is a procuring cause, and not merely a helpful exercise.

Modernism inveighs against creeds, and says that a creedless church makes for freedom and self-expression. Does it? On the court house in the city of Worcester, Mass., these words are written: "Obedience to law, that is liberty."

What is a creed? An orderly statement of great truths and our individual conception of them.

Why this inveighing against creeds? As a matter of fact a creedless church is a spineless church, a church that never does anything in the way of reclaiming men or establishing missions in far off lands. The church with a creed believes things, and the church that believes things, does things.

Why is it that the liberal church in New England has made no progress in the last hundred years? Where have they established missions? Have they sent any Livingstone to Africa? Any Judson to Burma? Have they produced a Newton? A Knox? A Taylor? Have they caused any desert places to bloom with the flower of Christian graces? After one hundred years of vast expenditure of wealth they have nothing more to show for it than they had one hundred years ago.

But what is true of the evangelical churches of Boston? They have been multiplied in proportion to their allegiance to truth as stated in the great creeds of the church. These are facts not to be disputed or controverted.

Modernism is simply trying to rid the church of the great statements of faith. They are historic, but are not to be received merely for that, but because they are found in God's Holy Word and are true. I believe in the Apostles' Creed from beginning to end. I love to recite it, but large numbers of New England churches will not permit the Apostles' Creed to be recited because they believe in a creedless church. What they do believe in is an effeminate, ineffective church. This is one of the great mistakes of Modernism.

A still further mistake of Modernism is that the utterances of Jesus Christ are subject to revision by man. His mistakes can be corrected, it says. The moment you take that position you have eliminated all the authority of Jesus Christ. You have made Him a creation of man and not the power of God unto salvation. You hear in some pulpits today, and read in some books, "Jesus Christ was greatly mistaken in this," which to you is a blasphemy, because you believe in the finality of the utterances of Jesus Christ, and that when Jesus has spoken, that ends it. That is final with me. I am willing to risk my eternal destiny on the fact that Jesus has spoken and what He has said is final. Modernism denies this. Therefore, shall we not take issue with it?

"All Scholars," a Misleading Phrase

Then again, Modernism says that modern discoveries and archeology discredit traditional belief. The traditional belief regarding the Bible and the atoning work of Jesus have been discredited by the discovery that man evolves upward and is perfected unaided and without redemption! But the Bible declaration is definite regarding this and meets Modernism squarely and you cannot take both. If you take the Bible you cannot take Modernism.

Another mistake of Modernism—and I shall not have time to dwell further upon these mistakes—have you heard it? "All scholars," have you ever heard that? "All scholars" have repudiated the atoning work of Jesus Christ.

Professor A. P. Fitch came to deliver an address before the Congregational Club of Boston (Lord have mercy on the colleges with such men as instructors!). He came before the Congregational Club and said: "All scholars have come to perfect agreement regarding the person of Christ. He was born the way all of us are born. No scholar of any distinction today, or any man of average intellectual ability believes in the deity of Christ."

Later on, with reluctance, the Congregational Club passed a motion saying: "The Congregational Club believes and glories in the deity of Jesus." But it was passed by a bare majority!

"All scholars" as a mark of fine scholarship is a very elastic term. It may have application to one line of thinking or another, but as a matter of fact the profoundest and most intensive thinking is never done except through the indwelling of the Spirit of God. The man who stands nearest to God, manifest in Jesus Christ, will do the deepest thinking, the longest thinking, the strongest thinking, and the most dependable thinking. The greatest scholars of today and of all time, are the scholars who have been under the illumination of the Holy Ghost. "All scholars,"—never allow yourself to be stampeded with those two words.

What Is the Irreducible Minimum?

That is to say, what is the least you can believe and still be truly and honestly called a Christ-ian, a Christ-man or Christ-woman?

What is the least you can believ I will tell you. You must have a beli in the personality of God. There is n much difficulty of conviction ther You must have a belief secondly, in t fatherhood of God. God has a lovi interest in humanity through whi man can have a certainty for well-bein He has a fatherly interest.

You must have a belief also that Jes Christ was God manifest in the fles You have the Bible for it, and the activ ties of Jesus Christ in favor of it.

You must believe in the Holy Spiri He truly is the dynamic of the individu life, and the dynamic of the church.

You have to believe in the necessit of individual regeneration. Modernis stresses social redemption and soci salvation. We hear a great deal of i When these men who are proclaimin social salvation will bring just one, n one thousand, but just one person wh was down in sin and became conscious o iniquity and through the proclamation o social salvation said, "I will arise and g to Christ for cleansing," and the respons has brought a cleansed life, a life mad over by the proclamation of social salva tion, then we will have reason to stop an think a little while. It can show no suc results.

There is a social salvation. Bu how? By the salvation of the units o society. By the redemption of the in dividual; the transformation of th individual life. Modernism emphasize sociology as against theology, and talk about better housing as the finest expres sion of humanity; better feeding; bette clothing and environment. Never ha there been a life regenerated by environ ment. To be a Christian you mus believe in regeneration. When you rejec it you reject the essence of Christianity

To be a Christian you must have belief in the resurrection of the dead an the immortality of the soul, and in th judgment to follow, the separation of th just from the unjust. You have to be lieve in judgment before you can believ in Christ. No one has ever found in th Word of God, nor in the utterances o holy men, such pictures of the results o guilt and the results of belief in Christ a Christ Himself has given. He spoke i parables that man might see. He spok in parables because the truth was so tre mendous that was the only way to portra it.

You have to believe in the sufficienc of the inspired Word of God, otherwis you have no Christianity, but only tradi tion. There is no Christianity unles Christ is truly portrayed.

You must have a belief in the triumph of the kingdom, to be a true Christian It is the most wonderful picture eve drawn by human imagination. It ha to be realized by the marvelous portraya of Jesus Christ. With his cross impend ing, the shadow falling upon His path knowing full well His disciples woul leave Him in fear, and His enemie crucify Him, He went on with His por trayal. Then, in that marvelous utter ance He said, "Be of good cheer I have overcome the world." The victorious Christ! You have to believe in the complete victory of our Lord.

Jesus' Triumphant Return

Another factor in the irreducible minimum is a belief, which I hold confidently, as to the triumphant return of Jesus Christ, concerning which there is no reason for any one to have doubt. I believe in the triumphant return of Jesus Christ, a visible return, and that He will come to His own.

We are living in a time terrible in its manifestations of iniquity and tribulation on every hand. This world has never seen a tragedy equal to the tragedy on a colossal scale which is being enacted in Russia, where guilty men, law-hating men, gospel-despising men, Christ-defying men have undertaken to change civilization, and bring in a new order to humanity. Every crisis of humanity seems to pale into insignificance with the awful calamity brought about by Lenine and Trotsky. They are murderers of the worst type, and on a larger scale than has ever been known. They have no God, no government, no law.

There you have sin as it is approaching its finish. And is it not true that sin when it is finished bringeth forth death? There you have the natural man. If you want a picture of the whole world with Jesus and Calvary left out, see Russia as represented by Lenine and Trotsky and you have it, a dark, black, burning revelation of evil, because it is man giving himself free expression. Self-expression is good when it is the expression of redeemed self, but evil when it is the expression of self allowing sin to control and have the body.

"I Believe in a Triumphant Church"

"It is your father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

There you have the proclamation. Our own country is not free from calamity nor any state. None of the cities can point their finger at any other. With our police strike in Boston we can well afford to be quiet when other cities give expressions of lawlessness, such as is manifest in Chicago. And, by whom? Not by the people who own allegiance to the Lord Jesus.

Do you know the ones who will ultimately save the world from its viciousness? It is those who have faith in the redemptive realities to humanity. I long to see America rise in her might and join hands with every other nation and say, "Let us have peace, and peace forever," but that will never come about by conferences. It will only come about through Christian faith and its wider promulgation. But do not despise conferences, for they are more or less creative, but my friends, the great need of today is a new vision of Christ our Lord.

I conclude with this. You and I have nothing to fear. The Lord is a great God and a great King above all kings. In His hands He holds the corners of the earth, and gathers up the mountains as a very small thing. His purposes are not to be thwarted or overthrown by men. If you are on the side of God's Word, Jesus Christ, the apostles, you are on the winning side. I would rather be popular with the prophets, and the poets, and the apostles, and above all with Jesus Christ in glory, than to be popular with the crowd that will honor you with degrees and give you a high position along ecclesiastical lines in proportion as you repudiate traditional truths.

All a man has to do in Boston if he wants to be invited to say prayers in Harvard College is to rise and say, "I have made a great discovery that I have been in error. I have come to complete repudiation of many of the traditions of the church. A rosier day has come, and we in this latter day, with the wonderful illumination granted to us through science and the great discoveries of our day, have now a gospel that is more rational." All I would have to do is to say that, and sometime within the next week or two I would be asked to say prayers in Harvard and conduct services.

My friends, we have nothing to fear. It is our business not to concern ourselves a whit with what man says but only with what God says. Let us take our position firmly and positively. Line up beside Christ. The day has come when every man and woman with convictions must have the courage of those convictions and make declaration of that without fear or favor. It is ours to take our stand firmly by the Cross and fight for the truth in every circumstance. Who are to be the liberators of the future? Those who have the greatest reverence for the law of God. That is liberty. The world is still in bondage; multitudes of souls are still in bondage; a great dark spiritual bondage, who are yet members of the church. They need something of the courageous convictions of those who have the fear of God and know it, and they will yet put things right in the ecclesiastical world. I say confidently, and without hesitation, the hope of the church in America for the immediate future lies with the great Bible institutes. They must furnish the leadership which will conduct the people out of darkness into the marvelous light of truth

The Witness of Protestantism Against Romanism

By Rev. F. B. Meyer, D.D.

A Thursday morning sermon in City Temple, London, England, stenographically reported for the Moody Bible Institute Monthly

"And they said unto the woman, Now we believe, not because of thy saying: for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world." John 4:42

The Protestant faith, as we are all aware, existed some centuries before the name itself was coined. We may speak of St. Paul, the apostle, as the chief Protestant. But fifteen centuries passed before the 19th of April, 1529, when the Elector of Saxony headed an influential deputation into the great hall of Spiers in order to protest against the emperor's decision to limit the rights of true liberty and religion. These were called Protestants, and their followers derived the same title.

The central thought in Protestantism is from the word "testis" which, as you know, stands in English for "witness." So that every time we read the word "witness" in our Bible, the Roman Catholic reads "testis" in the Latin Vulgate.

Rev. F. B. Meyer, D.D

The prefix "pro" reminds us how in the war with the Boers the word "pro-Boer" was constantly used. Pro means "standing for," "in behalf of," "on account of."

Therefore when we use the word Protestant, we really mean that we bear witness to something that is clearly defined, and that we stand for it, on behalf of it, to propagate it, to maintain it.

Surely the sentences we have already cited as our text and the story out of which they come prove to us the immense power of witness-bearing. Not argument, nothing destructive, but everything constructive, positive, emphatic.

Her witness, on the part of this woman, really brought the whole of Sychar to the feet of Christ; though ultimately they did not rely on her witness because it had brought them likewise into face-to-face fellowship with Himself. And the whole of the city that Jesus had redeemed congratulated themselves that they now knew Him, not simply because of the testimony of the woman, who must have been a soul of great power, or she never would have influenced a whole city as she did, but because they had been brought into personal and living contact with one whom they recognized as the Messiah.

We, therefore, are here today to bear witness, and I want to intimate some of those great out-standing features of witness bearing which are probably familiar to all, but need to be reiterated on such an occasion as this.

I

We bear our witness as Protestants to the fact that the soul of man can come into right relations with God through the private study of the Word of God under the teaching of the Spirit of God.

We hold that that study will commend itself to every thoughtful soul who feels that God speaks to it from its pages. We no more doubt that than we doubt when we are standing on the sea beach that we breathe in the ozone together with the distance of the horizon and the expanse of the heaven above.

The Bible bears its own witness to the earnest and devout mind. I stand there and listen to the Saviour speak. I hear Him talking to Nicodemus. I am deeply moved as He calls sinners to His side and describes them as the lost sheep, the lost money-piece, and the lost son. I come presently to stand before the cross. I see Him dying for me. The sight touches my heart. I come into face-to-face fellowship with the Redeemer and His redemption.

Proceeding, I listen to the great teachers, to Augustine, to Luther, to Wesley, and to others, and I gladly receive the fresh light they shed upon the sacred page. But directly they begin to dictate to me what I shall believe or disbelieve, then my soul revolts. I have received directly the eternal words of life. They may help me along the lines on which I am already thinking, but they have no authority to command this, or the other interpretation to which they may have arrived.

The essential principle of our faith is that the Holy Spirit in His illumination is not given simply to pontiff or priest, but to every humble soul, man or woman, who pores over the sacred page and desires the teaching of God Himself.

We have two or three witnesses: The external authority of the Word of God; the internal working of the Spirit of God, which gives us an intuition which is even more correct in its decisions than the findings of the intellect; the confirmations of experience. And when in this way we have been brought into union with the Eternal, there remains in our minds a certainty.

A friend of mine, going into a room of a Roman Catholic, found Spurgeons' photograph on the wall. She, having expressed surprise, received the answer: "He often helped me." And then, discussing the decisions of the church as far as he knew them, he indicated that he was not at all sure of the ultimate result.

How different from Blaise Pascal, emerging from the Catholic church. He writes (the manuscript being found after his death in 1654), "The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God, not of philosophers and savants, but of those who seek Him. Certitude! joy! with floods of tears."

How little we understand the meaning of that hour, unless indeed, we have passed through it! I think we feel this as we stand together here and face the eternal future, the infinite horizon, with such assurance. So that, with the Word of God on the one hand and the enlightening Spirit on the other, we have a certitude, a certainty, which enables us to face the future and the past.

II

We surely stand and witness as Protestants, that the church is composed of all those who are united with the Lord on the strength of the testimony of the apostles.

Directly a soul unites itself by living faith to the Saviour, whether that soul has passed through the rite of baptism or not, if it is brought truly into union with Jesus Christ, apart from all ceremony and teaching and law, that soul is part of the Christian church, inhabited by Him that filleth all in all.

One would have thought scholarship would have saved people from the mistake of thinking that the church was founded on an apostle. Most of us know the difference between petros, a pebble, and petra, the bed-rock from which the pebble is hewn.

Our Lord had received from Peter that great confession when he said that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of the living God, and Jesus turned to him and uttered that great announcement, carefully choosing His words, "Thou art a pebble, and upon this bed-rock, upon the basis of union with the Son of the eternal God, upon that will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

And that Peter took it in that sense is clear, because in his own epistle he says, "To whom coming as to a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God and precious, ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual structure."

Therefore we dare to affirm that the dying thief who in the last hour cried to Christ, that he, equally with the apostle Paul, or the greatest saint of the living God which has ever adorned Christianity, are component parts in the church of the living God, which was built, not upon Peter, but upon the fact of the eternal Sonship of Jesus Christ.

III

Will you note that also the power to bind and loose, and the power of the keys, is not confined to the apostle merely? We witness to this as being the function of the whole church.

In the eighteenth chapter of Matthew this power to bind and loose is attributed to the church meeting in the name of Christ. It is a very remarkable statement.

The church, by her prayer, saved Peter from execution. She has a binding, restraining power over evil. And when the church sent forth the disciples, she was loosing them against the powers of evil.

It is surely an interesting matter to feel that the power to bind and loose is therefore not confined to the apostle. He had the power, and as a man was able to exercise it, but the church has the power also. In her union with Christ she has the same power.

Was it not with the key that Peter opened the door of faith to the Jews at Pentecost, and Paul the door of faith to the Corinthians? Do you not believe that Brainerd opened the door of faith to the Indian, that Judson opened the door of faith to the Burmese, and Carey to the Indian?

And do you not think that the teacher who bends over the infant class is also seeking to unlock the mysteries of the kingdom of God?

There are holy men, there are groups of people who are living evidences that the Holy Spirit has power to restrain evil and to promote good, and to unlock to the yearning, humble soul the treasures of God's grace.

IV

We bear witness also to the fact that we need no intermediary between ourselves and the Eternal.

The idea of a priest seems to be indigenous to the thought of man. You remember in Judges where we are told that all men did as they would, Micah invited a priest to his home and said, "Now God will do me good, seeing I have a Levite to my priest."

Men have always longed to get some holy man who would stand between them and divine purity. "Come here," says a man to his fellow, "be free from the fret of life, live wholly before the Eternal and then intercede for me, uplift and comfort me."

That is the ideal of a priest. The priest is called in to baptize a child, to administer extreme unction to the dying. The priest listens to the confession, and pronounces words of absolution. The priest takes the bread and wine and professes to make it into the body and blood of Christ. Against that we protest, believing that the soul through the Spirit has direct contact with the Great Spirit.

None of us know the wonders of our nature. We sometimes have glimpses into ourselves through nature, literature, art, poetry, or music, and we learn the wonders of that nature with which we are endowed, and are content to learn.

We forget that we are endowed with the spirit, which is our aptitude to the eternal as our body is the aptitude to the material. The ego, i. e., the soul of man, stands between two worlds, the eternal and the material, the spiritual and the natural, so that either he can descend from the soul to the body or he can ascend from the soul to the spirit. And when he ascends that spiritual staircase into the upper story of his nature, the spiritual, if the windows are clean, he sees into the eternal, his whole nature becomes illuminated, and the throne of the spirit appears.

Then it is that spirit touches spirit. Then it is we reach out our hearts and almost touch the mountain tops of grace. Then we say to the priest, "Be gone, we need you not"! God will have stooped to us, and we have risen to Him, and our High Priest has entered into the highest, constituting us kings and priests to God.

V

We bear witness also to the fundamental doctrine of justification by faith.

Luther was perfectly justified when he said that this is the crucial, the final test. From the moment when Luther's eyes caught the words, "The just shall live by faith," he saw that Jesus Christ was the Lamb slain before the foundation of the world.

When a soul has been convicted of sin, and is in an agony of self-despair, it looks about for help. It is impressed with fear and anguish, until presently the transcendent thought breaks in upon it that in the eternal purpose, and by the grace of the infinite God, the death of Jesus Christ was the eternal redemption for sin.

We are saved, not by our works, but by accepting the extraordinary, pardoning, free mercy of God. We hold that directly a man, by repentance and faith, realizes the pardoning love of God, he enters into close relationship with the eternal world and with God Himself.

Such a faith as that leads to works, but the works are not co-essential with the faith. It knows that it is forgiven, accepted in the beloved, and it enters into union with God and thereafter the fruits follow. But the saved one works down from the cross and not up to it. He is crucified with Christ, and through his death to self a new light and power bursts on him like a river to make glad and beautiful his life.

VI

We also bear witness that the Holy Spirit is the alone Vicar of Christ.

This is all-important. To misapprehend this is to misapprehend Christianity.

We believe that Jesus, sitting on His throne, is our Advocate or Paraclete. This is fundamental. But the Holy Spirit has become the Vicegerent as the administrator and representative of the eternal Saviour. And so we believe it to be one of the signs of the apostasy, one of the symptoms of the last days when we find a pope or any man sitting at the temple of God and giving out that he is the vicar of God.

We hold that there is no vicar of God. No administrator for God other than the Holy Spirit leading the church to worship and service. The Holy Spirit is the true Vicar of Christ, and no one else dare to intrude.

VII

Lastly, we come to realize that our great testimony to the world is, after all, not to the death of Christ so much as to the Christ that died, yea, rather that is risen again.

Is not this fundamental to your life? We all thank God that we stand on redemption ground. Christ has put away sin; something has been done for us that has not been done for angels. He inherited, not the nature of angels, but human nature, and in that human nature made expiation for the sin of the world.

We can never forget that, and when that is granted, we hear Him saying—it comes floating over the waters as they ripple round the Isle of Patmos: "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive for evermore."

When we go into cathedrals and churches of the papal church, we find the image of Christ on the cross everywhere. We are bidden to take the steps of the cross, concentrate our thoughts on the expiatory sacrifice.

If you are going to use this in the sense that Paul used it, in the sense that "I am crucified with Christ," I agree. But surely we must not be always looking back, but up to the living Saviour, who day by day is ministering to His church as the bridegroom to his bride.

And when we come to the table of the Lord, are we not in the same position as the disciples were that night? He said: "This is my body." But He was sitting there. He said, "This is my blood." But He was there, and able to drink with them.

When we are sitting at the holy table it is not simply to go back long past, but to realize that He is in our midst, breaking the bread, pouring out the wine, having fellowship with us over His death, and the results accruing from it. We are not ever looking back through the centuries, but looking up into the face of Him who is ever present.

Let us believe that the Spirit of God is brooding over our lives, working with the Word. But in addition to all that, there is the thought of the living Christ. We realize the truth of His words, "I am the beginning, the end, the first, and the last."

That is our witness.

I am not here to say an unkind word of men who, though greatly misled, are, many of them, seeking after holiness and purity. This would not add to our argument.

We stand here for those truths for which our fathers died; we cannot forget that. And there are men and women amongst us who would die again. For our own sake, for our children's sake, for our country's sake, we must be Protestants.

When we compare Protestants and Protestant lands with Spain or Spanish America or Ireland, how much we have to thank God for! The advances of the Romish church are very insidious and persuasive, and it becomes us to maintain our clear and undiluted witness to the truths we have here enunciated.

And as we do so, may we hope that those who hear us may say as they said to that Samaritan woman: "We have heard him ourselves, and know that this is the Christ."

Qualifications of a Witness, Legal or Christian

By Hon. C. W. Wells, Owensboro, Ky.

IF this were a sermon, the text would be the words which our Lord, when about to leave the earth, addressed to his disciples, "Ye shall be my witnesses."

We use the word "witness" in two senses. One who merely sees something is said to witness it, and, one who testifies about something that he has seen or heard or knows, is said to be a witness to it.

Christ did not use the words in the former sense, for He uses the future tense when about to leave the earth, and when His disciples could no longer witness Him in that sense.

What He evidently meant was that His disciples should testify for Him. Apparently He was thinking of the contest between Himself and Satan as a litigation, the subject matter of which is the mortal souls of men. Satan claims them by reason of possession, but He claims them by reason of purchase, having given His life blood for them. When, in this great litigation, He summoned His disciples as witnesses, He conferred on them great honor and laid on them great responsibility.

Importance of a Witness

In the administration of justice through the courts, the witness plays an important part. He is a necessary factor in every case where there is an issue of fact. However learned, impartial and able the judge; howeve, capable and eloquent the attorney; however intelligent, honest and unbiased the jury; however faithful the sheriff and other officers, justice cannot be administered, or the law enforced, without the witness. Though you should employ all the attorneys at the bar, you could not recover your property from one who wrongfully claims it, without a witness to testify to facts that indicate that the property is yours. One may be guilty of willful murder or any other flagrant crime, but the most able and eloquent prosecuting attorney can never procure his conviction without a witness to testify to facts indicating his guilt.

Now, just as the administration of the civil and criminal law depends on the witness, so the propagation of Christianity and the outcome of the great contest between Satan and Christ depends on the faithful witnessing of His disciples.

There is a story to the effect that when Christ returned from earth to heaven He was talking with the angel Gabriel about His work on earth. Gabriel asked what provision He had made for the spread of the gospel. He said, "I told it to Peter, James and John, and a number of other faithful disciples, and the plan is that they shall tell it to the others of this generation, and those of this generation shall tell it to the next, until the end."

Gabriel asked, "But suppose Peter, James and John should fail to tell, or that those to whom they tell should fail, or that sometime some generation should fail, what other plan have you?"

The Saviour replied, "I have no other plan."

The apostle Paul, addressing Christians, said, "Ye are living epistles, known and read of all men." Comparatively few read the written revelation that we call the Bible. Most people form their impression of Christianity from their reading of the lives of professing Christians.

Qualifications of a Witness

Let us consider some of the qualifications of a good witness.

1. He must know something relevant to the issue. Generally speaking, his testimony is limited to a plain recital of what he has perceived through one or more of his five senses. He is not allowed to state conclusions arrived at by a process of reasoning. The attorney may argue, the judge decide questions of law, and the jury draw conclusions from facts disclosed by the testimony; but the witness must neither argue, decide nor draw conclusions, but confine his testimony to a simple relation of fact.

Likewise, the Christian witness must know and be able to testify to facts. Creeds are important, but they must be based on knowledge. If a professing Christian only believes that perhaps there is a God, and perhaps Jesus was His Son, and perhaps there is some advantage in trusting in Him, his testimony is not worth much. The good Christian witness is one who can say with Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," or with Paul who said, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." The basis of Christian testimony is experimental religion. Formerly all applicants for church membership were required to relate their "experience." They were expected to have experienced something about which they were competent to testify. The practice has fallen into disrepute, but it is still true that the effective witness for Christ is one who has experimental knowledge of Him.

2. Although the job of a witness seems simple enough, it is nevertheless true that a witness should be intelligent. Trained faculties perceive facts more clearly and state them more lucidly. Many good cases have been weakened by the ignorance of an honest witness. Not only should a witness have the power of perceiving things clearly, but a reliable memory and the faculty of expressing himself well. Thus equipped, he is not so likely to become tangled on cross examination. A lawyer is always glad when he can introduce in behalf of his client a well educated witness with a fund of general knowledge, although the things which he wishes to prove by him may be quite simple.

Likewise, while intelligence and education may not be necessary qualifications of a good Christian witness, they are certainly helpful. Trained faculties perceive spiritual truths more readily than untrained, and can certainly express them more intelligently both by word and act. A good education makes one a better Christian witness, and it is especially important that one have a good working knowledge of the Book of books. Paul's advice to Timothy was: "Study to show thyself a workman, approved of God, rightly dividing the word of truth." When we remember that the principal work given us to do is to testify for the Master, this injunction of Paul's might well be translated thus, "Study the Scriptures that you may be an efficient witness."

3. The testimony of a witness should be consistent throughout. If the witness says one thing on direct examination and another on cross examination, or if it can be shown that on some other occasion he made statements inconsistent with his testimony, its credibility is reduced. This is a common method of impeaching a witness.

It is equally true that the testimony of a Christian witness should be consistent. Satan is a shrewd cross examiner and knows how to take a witness unawares. If the witness fails on such cross examination—if by his words or his conduct his testimony at any time is inconsistent with his Christian profession, then the effect of the latter is necessarily weakened. One's testimony should be the same whether at home or abroad, or in the company of saint or sinner.

4. The testimony of a witness is more effective if backed by a good reputation. On the other hand, if his reputation for veracity is known to be, or proved to be, at all shady, his evidence will have no effect, because the jury will not believe him. Another common way of impeaching a witness is to prove that his reputation is either generally bad, or bad for truth and veracity.

In the case of the Christian witness, a good character is even more necessary. A word of testimony for the Master does not go very far, if there are known flaws in the character of the one who testifies. On the other hand, there is no more effective testimony for the Christ than the consistent, faithful life of one of His followers.

We are familiar with the story of the infidel who sometimes attended the church of which a great preacher was pastor. The preacher made special sermons to refute the infidelity of his distinguished listener. One day the infidel made a profession of religion and presented himself for membership in the church. The preacher was elated. He asked the erstwhile infidel which sermon had convinced him of the error of his way. He replied, "I must answer you truthfully and say that not one of your sermons reached me. I was able to answer all your arguments; but there was one argument which I could not answer. That was the faithful, unwavering life of the humble janitor of this church."

This story helps us to realize the importance of keeping our record clean in the sight of men, if we wish them to heed our testimony for the Master. Our actions speak louder than words.

5. The witness should be absolutely unselfish. He should not be subject to any sort of bribe, or color his testimony in the least in order to court favor with a litigant, or with the hope of any sort of reward. Temptations along this line are numerous and witnesses frequently succumb to them and the administration of justice is hindered thereby.

The Christian witness should likewise be unselfish and should never allow his testimony to be weakened by any chance of reward to himself. Satan offers all kinds of bribes and rewards, financial, social, political, and even ecclesiastical, and it is a faithful witness indeed who can always withstand.

6. Also, a legal witness should be courageous. If he testifies falsely or colors his testimony in the least, because of fear of a litigant, he deserves the censure of all right thinking people. There are many such cowardly witnesses, and they are the cause of many miscarriages of justice. Many criminals prevent convictions by intimidating witnesses.

Likewise, cowardice causes many professing Christians to wobble in their testimony. Satan is an adept at intimidation. If one heeds his threatenings and fails to testify for the Christ —if he refuses to take a stand for the right, or to oppose evil,—if he fails to throw his influence on the right side, or remains silent when he ought to take a positive stand on any moral, social, political or religious issue, because of fear of what Satan or his followers may do for him, or his, in business, socially, politically, or otherwise, he is as much a traitor to his Christ as the cowardly legal witness is a traitor to his country.

7. Every good citizen should be always willing to be a witness. One of the chief difficulties in enforcing all laws, especially the prohibition law, lies in the fact that there is a prevalent indisposition to play the role of witness. For one reason or another most people avoid the duty of reporting or testifying about violations of the law.

While the writer was serving as county judge, good citizens frequently told him of certain violations of the law. When asked to swear to an affidavit in order that a warrant might be issued, they would almost invariably say, "No, no, not me. I don't want anyone to know that I have had anything to do with it." It was frequently difficult, often impossible, to persuade good citizens that it was their duty to take whatever risk was necessary in order to start a prosecution against law breakers; and that otherwise the wheels of justice could not begin to turn.

We have frequently heard a boast something like this, "I never go about the court house. I have never been either a juror or a witness, and will not be, if I can avoid it." Now it is bad enough for one to avoid service as a juror. If good people decline to serve on juries, they must necessarily be filled by the other class. One who himself avoids such service has no right to complain of miscarriage of justice.

However, it is even more reprehensible to shun service as a witness; for, if one declines to serve as a juror, any other citizen can take his place; but, if one who knows something about which he ought to testify, avoids the duty, no one else can take his place, and the administration of justice is seriously hampered.

That one has never been a juror or a witness is not a thing of which to boast. On the other hand, if one has had an opportunity to thus help in the administration of justice, and has sidestepped the duty, it is a thing of which he should be ashamed.

Likewise a professing Christian should be not only willing, but anxious, to testify for his Master on all proper occasions. Instead of avoiding places and occasions when he may be called on to show his colors, he should seek them. The marching orders say, "Go." There should be no shirking, no reluctance in assuming and meeting the obligation of testifying for the Master on every proper occasion. "Let your light so shine, etc." One of the best ways or a Chriistian to let his light shine is to play well his part as a good citizen, fncluding the duty of being a legal witness when occasion offers. Certain it is that one is a poor witness for his Lord and Master who is unwilling or afraid to be a witness against a moonshiner or a bootlegger. Christianity and good citizenship go hand in hand. They cannot be divorced.

Powers of Destruction Beneath Our Feet

The following appeared as an editorial in the Chicago Journal of Commerce under the title "Spectacular America." We reproduce it not merely as an interesting recital of a great natural phenomenon, but as a lay testimony to the inspiration of the Bible, and a warning to an ungodly and unbelieving race of men.—Editors

SIXTEEN years ago a million acres of Alaska were reserved by act of Congress for the preservation of a natural" monument." In this territory was Mount Katmai in its entirety a volcano of great possibilities (as later events demonstrated), and lakes and springs of both hot and cold water. Alaska has yielded many wonders, from boiling water out of the ground, to lava out of mountains, but its most prodigious natural performance occurred ten years ago on June 6, 1912, which scientific men have but lately been able to record with accurate details.

Mount Katmai Exploded

On that date the Mount exploded and blew away into dust two cubic miles of solid rock. The whole top of the mountain disappeared forever in that titanic release of irresistible power from its confinement under the surface of the earth.

Nothing to compare with it in spectacular grandeur, in concentration of force, in the obliteration of an enormous pile of solid rock, ever before was recorded. President Griggs of the National Geographic Society tells us that had it happened in New York City the roar of it would have startled all the central states east of the Mississippi. The sulphur fumes released would have permeated the atmosphere clear to the Rocky Mountains, and all the works of men in the lower part of the Hudson River territory would have been destroyed along with all living things.

What occurred in remote Alaska when the rocky summit of Katmai was pulverized by the mighty strength of the explosion was this:

The trees in the dense forests of 1,500 square miles were flattened to the earth; ashes more than a foot deep were scattered over an area as large as the whole state of Delaware, and the Katmai River, navigable for boats requiring a depth of six feet of water, turned into a vast quicksand five miles wide.

Abroad, the dust stirred by the upheaval spread through the air all over the earth. It was so thick that students of solar radiation working in the Desert of Sahara had to postpone their enterprise for a year.

The Hint It Contains

There is a hint in this great event of what might happen to our good old Mother Earth as a whole, if the "end of the world" as described in prophecy, should actually occur.

We know little or nothing of the pent up energies imprisoned under the cool shell on which we exist. They are beyond the comprehension of man, immeasurable in our puny conceptions of power. We have penetrated the crust of the earth but a few miles—a mere scratch under the surface, but we have gone deep enough to convince scientific men that the terrific force of intense heat in the great depths is sufficient to wreck the whole world when conditions favor the general expansion of the gases generated in the interior. Volcanoes are regarded as safety valves through which the interior "blows off" at intervals.

Many fear that the removal of vast quantities of natural gas and oil are leaving unoccupied spaces below that later will cause trouble for mankind. We do not harbor such apprehensions, but the performance of Mount Katmai ten years ago, just understood in all its appalling features, may well convince us that the inspired writers of the Bible revealed a true knowledge of the powers of utter destruction which struggle for an outlet beneath our feet.

A Secular Editor on Percy Stickney Grant

The following from the Adrian (Mich.) Daily Telegram will take the place of an editorial which we have been asked to write on this latest ecclesiastical freak.—Editors.

DR. PERCY STICKNEY GRANT, rector of the fashionable Episcopal Church of the Ascension, of New York City, has had himself and his congregation on the first pages of the newspapers during the last two weeks. One writer congratulates the Gotham rector on his accomplishment, while another sardonically declares it no achievement whatever; that the Rev. Edward Hall of New Brunswick, N. J., whose dead body was found with that of Mrs. Mills, his choir leader, has outdone him so far as publicity is concerned.

Both comments are of a superficial sort although the critics are not entirely to be blamed for taking the case lightly. Dr. Grant belongs in the ranks of a considerable following in the ministry that are extremely self-conscious of their own penetrating intellect and their own revolutionary views upon theology. These men are taken much more seriously by themselves than by anyone else.

For a number of years the New York clergyman has been attracting attention to himself by the saying and doing of unusual things. Back in war time it was through testifying for a preacher who had been accused of connection with a flag burning. After the war he organized a night forum inviting to his pulpit speakers from all classes of life, and this was more or less of a sensation inasmuch as his parish is made up very largely of wealthy and fashionable people. He got on the front pages again when he protested against the deportation of alien agitators, likening their case to that of the Pilgrim fathers who came here seeking religious and political freedom. Two years ago he announced his engagement to marry Mrs. Lydig, a wealthy divorcée of his congregation, and later attacked the church canons on marriage and divorce when the bishops refused to sanction the proposed marriage. A baby was left on his doorstep and he took it into his home until it later died. In the last year and a half he has launched periodic attacks upon church doctrine and upon its interpretation by the authorized officials.

It is perhaps enough to justify a Chicago bishop in a suspicion that Dr. Grant's recent disavowal of the divinity of Jesus Christ and his attack upon the consecration of the church indicate his preference to leave the church as a martyr rather than as a clergyman sacrificing his calling to enter into a forbidden matrimonial alliance.

That is beside the question, however. For our part we are ready to concede that what Dr. Grant thinks of divinity and of church consecration is a matter of his own conscience, and that such a belief in itself is not a subject for criticism. What the church authorities think of them and what they decide to do about them also is a matter of the church's conscience and is out of the realm of public discussion. The point is clearly raised, however, of the propriety of a minister capitalizing his profession and his own particular pulpit by the promulgation of unusual or startling personal views upon fundamental questions of faith and doctrine.

We must confess to little taste for that sort of indulgence. Dr. Grant protests that to deny him the right to air his own personal views from the pulpit is equivalent to denying a citizen of this country free speech in political matters. The figure of speech is weak, for a minister of any faith or creed, as we interpret his position and status, is an ambassador rather than a private citizen. He has accepted, with his calling, a responsibility and a trust to speak for and in the interests of that faith and creed. When his convictions begin to clash with his accepted duty it is time for him to resign his post, just as it would be incumbent upon an ambassador to do so if he found his views differing from those of his people and his government.

If Dr. Grant finds himself in disagreement with the canons of his church that relate to marriage and divorce, or in disagreement on any other matter of doctrine, we believe he should carry his case to the bishops and officials of that church and not to the public. If he has joined the ranks of the doubters and disbelievers, then his place is with them, not in an orthodox pulpit. It smacks of rank self-interest and a warped sense of the fitness of things, if not an actual betrayal of trust, when a minister makes a soap box of his pulpit.

We think the public is apt to be less concerned over doctrinal matters than is the ministry itself. It sees in Christianity as exemplified by the many Christian churches a revelation of fundamental truth that cannot be denied. It hungers for and needs the application of this truth to all phases of life. Christianity does not have to be proved or justified in this day and age. It is a kingdom on earth that is recognized by all thinking people, but it must have, if its interests are advanced throughout the earth, sound, true ambassadorship.

Such ambassadorship has nothing in common with Dr. Grant's tirade about the canons of his own church or his particular views upon divinity and church consecration.

ONE-CENT BIBLES ARE BACK

The largest single Bible order ever placed by an organization in the United States has just been given by the American Bible Society. One and a half million volumes, consisting of the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, Acts and Proverbs, in English and Spanish.

These little books are to be uniform in size, sixty-four pages each, with a separate heavy cover and will be sold throughout the United States and South America for one cent each. This is the first time since the war period the society has been able to produce the volumes at this price. Advance orders to the number of 800,000 have been received.

SERMON ON THE MOUNT

The highest point at which holy communion is known to have ever been celebrated is on Notch Mountain, just opposite the Mount of the Holy Cross, in the Rocky Mountains, where three ministers of the Episcopal church of the Western Diocese of Colorado made a pilgrimage, reaching an altitude of over 13,000 feet. Bishop Benjamin Brewster read the service. The observance of this solemn religious rite in these unique surroundings with the great cross in the background was made possible only after an arduous climb into the snow-capped mountains, starting from Red Cliff, an important mining camp on the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad.

A STOMACH'S DIARY

"10:00 A. M.—Oh, dear! Another warm day. Wonder if I'll be abused as I was yesterday. If I am, I'm going to strike. Just disposed of a half-chewed breakfast. We ran for the train, which meant I was so juggled about and so tired that it took me twice as long to do my work. Hope she gives me an hour or two of complete rest before anything more comes my way.

"10:30 A. M.—Two glasses of ice-water have just arrived. It will take all the energy I can pump up in the next hour just to warm me up to normal again.

"10:50 A. M.—Half-chewed breakfast did not satisfy her and she has bought some peanuts and started again.

"12:00 M.—Peanuts have been drifting along steadily ever since. Think she has finished them, too.

"12:30 P. M.—Decided she wasn't very hungry, and instead of a good solid dinner sent me down a cold egg-nog heavy with chocolate. Could have managed it all right if it hadn't been so unnaturally cold, but that made it terribly difficult to deal with.

"1:10 P. M.—More ice-water.

"1:40 P. M.—Was mistaken about the peanuts: she found another handful in the bottom of her vanity bag, and now I am getting them again.

"2:05 P. M.—More ice-water.

"2:10 P. M.—She has been lifting some heavy books and as usual used my muscles, instead of her arm muscles. You see, she's never had any proper physical education—soft, flabby, slouchy sort. Tired me almost as much as a six-course dinner.

"3:20 P. M.—Furtive fellow has brought us a box of caramels. Just heard her say, 'Oh, dear! I don't feel a bit well. The milk in that egg-nog must have been sour.'

"6:30 P. M.—We played a set of tennis before dinner and here I am all tired out and a lot of work to do.

"6:50 P. M.—We were invited by a sissy sport with a belt on his coat to have a soda before going home. Had a lemon phosphate and then had to run for a car.

"7:00 P. M.—Fried 'taters, cucumbers, veal cutlets, catsup, cookies and canned blueberries. What do you know about that?

"7:45 P. M.—We are strolling down to the corner with a knock-kneed guy in a sport shirt and white pants for a pineapple walnut college ice.

"8:20 P. M.—Got home and found somebody had made some iced-tea. She drank two glasses. I tried hard to keep the tea and the college ice separated, but they mixed in spite of me. I go on strike.

"8:30 P. M.—I have sent back the college ice and the iced-tea.

"8:40 P. M.—Returned the blueberries.

"8:45 P. M.—And the peanuts.

"9:00 P. M.—Can't get the doctor.

"9:17 P. M.—Doctor found at the movies. Mother thinks it's a weak stomach she inherited from her father. Knock-knee suggests it's the beastly weather—the big boob!

"9:45 P. M.—Doctor says it is from a bilious temperament. Good-night!"—The American Journal of Public Health.

IS BROADCASTING SERMONS WISE?

A clergyman arises to announce that the test of eminence for the ministry hereafter will be the candidate's ability to "put his message across by way of the radio," and numerous other clergymen, agreeing with him, are fitting themselves for this new trying out. The churchmen are digging pitfalls, if not for themselves, at least for the material edifices of religion. If the radio fans are encouraged to sit at home and listen in on broadcast sermons, what necessity will there be for the maintenance of church buildings? It may seem an excellent idea to carry the church to those who will not carry themselves to church, but what is to be the end of it all?—Eastern Methodist.

RELIGIOUS LITERATURE RECEPTACLE

The Tract Society of Muskogee, Okla., prepares receptacles for religious literature, which can be placed in public places. These are properly inscribed and can have almost unlimited use.

For further information about these, write Mrs. T. J. Philpin, 510 Jefferson St., Muskogee, Okla.

A New Work on Prophecy By Philip Mauro

THE SEVENTY WEEKS and THE GREAT TRIBULATION

This work is the outcome of fresh and original studies

It contains a complete exposition of the Last Two Visions of Daniel (Chaps. IX-XII) and the Olivet Discourse of the Lord Jesus Christ, which, taken together, form a connected and comprehensive Scheme of Prophecy, embracing both the First and Second Comings of Christ.

The exposition of Daniel XI—so bewildering to most Bible-readers—will be a great boon to many.

The clear identification of "The King" (Dan. XI. 36) is a feature of deepest interest.

The vexed question "Will the people of God pass through the Great Tribulation?" finds in this Book a happy solution.

The volume will commend itself by (1) the full and convincing proofs given in support of every interpretation, and (2) the Simplicity and Clearness of the Expositions.

FOUNDED BY D. L. MOODY IN 1886

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

March 15, 1923.

To Christ's Witnesses Everywhere:

It was reported recently that a certain theological seminary received something like three-quarters of a million dollars as its share of a denominational "drive," and yet it has under its care probably less than fifty students.

Nevertheless, if these were being taught that the Bible is a divine revelation, and if they were being sent out to preach redemption to a lost world through the sacrifice of Christ, what true Christian would begrudge a single dollar?

But when we have reason to think differently, alas! When we think of them as going out to tear down the faith their fathers have built up, we should be insensible indeed if a cry of pain and protest did not arise.

Will not Christian men and women who still believe the "Scripture cannot be broken," and in the Saviour who said so, be entreated to aid a school of the prophets whose students are counted by the hundreds from every denomination, from every state of the Union and almost every country of the world?

What draws these students here? Not boasted human learning, not liberal scholarships, not social privileges, not magnificent buildings, not peculiar doctrines of any kind. Let those in whose hearts the love of God beats ask them what draws them here. Or even better, let them come and see for themselves.

We ask no funds for endowments that later generations may spend according to their own pleasure rather than that of the original contributors. Our need is for current expenses, to put into flesh and blood today, to balance our books at the close of our fiscal year, April 30.

We need more than $150,000 to do this, but what is that in comparison with the millions that are being given today for secondary things by those who ought to put the Gospel first?

Hundreds of readers will see this who could give the Moody Bible Institute in large sums if they would. Where you have given a dollar hitherto please send ten, where you have given ten please make it a hundred, where you have given a hundred please make it a thousand.

D. L. Moody said, "The monument I want after I am dead and gone, is a monument with two legs, going about the world--a saved sinner telling about the salvation of Jesus Christ."

The Institute in Chicago which he founded thirty-seven years ago, is building that monument every day by the grace of God. Will you not help us to do it by sending an immediate remittance? See page 377.

Faithfully yours in Christ,

James M. Gray

Founder's Week Prayer and Bible Conference

Conducted by the Moody Bible Institute

February 5-9, 1923

(Note: In giving our readers a stenographic report of some of the important addresses of the Conference, we have endeavored as far as possible to report the speakers verbatim. Any omissions by the reporters, or errors, are subject to correction by the speakers. Other addresses will be published in our pages as opportunity serves from month to month during the year. We pray this report may bring the same blessing to our many thousands of readers as the Conference did to the large congregations privileged to attend.)

Founder's Week of 1923

By Rev. James M. Gray, D.D.

EACH Founder's Week Conference has its own characteristics, distinguishing it from every preceding one, and that of this year is no exception.

Many remarked on the number of new speakers this year. Professors J. Gresham Machen, of Princeton Seminary, and Leander S. Keyser of Wittenberg College, Rev. W. S. Gottshall of the Mennonite General Conference, Pastor Philpott of Moody Tabernacle, and Dr. Donald McTavish, of Toronto, were all with us for the first time, and all maintained the best traditions of the past for intellectual ability and spiritual unction. Comment was made on the fact that these men who had never met before, or ever stood on a Moody Institute platform, should have found themselves so thoroughly in accord in their views of the truth, and so free and joyful in its proclamation under our auspices. There was an interesting variety in their messages also, apologetics, dogma, the surrendered life, evangelism—all were accentuated without previous arrangement.

Our former students were more to the front in this Conference than at some other times, which gave us much pleasure. Reference is not now made to the Alumni business meeting or the fellowship meetings in the dining halls which are always occasions of social and spiritual exuberance, but to the addresses given by several of the students on Student Day and on Missionary Day,—Miss Palmer, Miss Saxe, Miss Reynolds, Miss Grace, Rev. A. G. Johnson, of Chicago; Rev. J. T. Raymond, of Cleveland; Rev. R. L. Evans, of St. Louis; Rev. Howard C. Fulton, of Grand Rapids, and others.

How proud we were of these men and women as they told us of their work, and exhorted and cheered the younger generation following in their footsteps!

Missionary Day this year was never surpassed, the missionary pulse in the Institute never beat more strongly than now. At least six ex-missionaries are on our staff, in addition to others who have children on the foreign fields. Dr. Glover, the Director of the Missionary Course, was very successful in the speakers he secured for this day, and especially in the case of Dr. Maurice Frater, of New Hebrides, and Rev. Charles W. Abel, of New Guinea. Seldom has any company of Christians been privileged to listen on the same occasion to two such men fresh from scenes of cannibalism, and successors to pioneers like John Geddes and James G. Paton, and the martyrs Williams and Chalmers. Their addresses morning and evening will not soon be forgotten, and the impress of them will remain in the lives of hundreds of consecrated young men and women who heard them. The newspapers, reporting the closing meeting of the Conference on Friday evening, said that 800 young people had dedicated themselves to Foreign Missions if the Lord opened the way. This was too large an estimate, doubtless, but 600 would not be far from the actual truth. To some of us it was the most memorable sight ever witnessed in the Moody Bible Institute.

How much the music contributed to the glad and happy uplift of the Conference! Mr. Bittikofer was on the platform nearly all day long and every day, leading with his accustomed animation, and knowing just the verse to strike up for spontaneous singing at the right time. No one could have failed to be struck with the singular appropriateness of the duet sung so effectively by Mr. and Mrs. Latchaw on Wednesday evening, prior to the heart-searching address of Dr. McTavish on the satisfaction to be found only in our Lord Jesus Christ. But the most exhilarating moments were those when the Auditorium choir (the choir of the four o'clock hour on Sundays), sang at one of the morning hours the "Hallelujah Chorus," and on the closing evening, Mozart's "Gloria." The great address of Mr. Benson on Wednesday evening on "The Earth the Theater of the Universe," illustrated by the stereopticon, and that of the following morning by Professor Keyser on "Creation, the Work of God," made the occasion which all recognized for the singing of the "Hallelujah Chorus," and into which all entered with the profoundest spirit of worship.

This brief introduction to the addresses following, should not conclude without mention of the contribution of real blessing to the Conference which was made, and generally is made, by our Household Department. Mr. Stauffer, the acting head of that department, reported that during the five days of the Conference a total of 11,902 persons were served in our dining rooms, an average of about 800 at each meal. This department also had charge of the lodging of the guests, all of whom appeared to be made comfortable, and invariably spoke of their entertainment with cordial appreciation.

We are very grateful for it all, and do continually say, "Not unto us, O, Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy and for thy truth's sake" (Ps. 115:1).

Christianity vs. Modern Liberalism

By Rev. J. Gresham Machen, D.D., Assistant Professor of New Testament Literature and Exegesis in Princeton Theological Seminary

This address is here printed from stenographic notes made at the time of delivery. The substance of the address appears in more extended form—a book entitled "Christianity and Liberalism," which was published in February by The Macmillan Company.

I WILL read a few verses from the First Epistle to the Corinthians, fifteenth chapter, beginning with the first verse:—

"Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand;

"By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain.

"For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures;

"And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures:

"And that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve:

"After that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.

"After that he was seen of James; then of all the apostles.

"And last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time.

"For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.

"But by the grace of God I am what I am; and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I laboured more abundantly than they all; yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me.

"Therefore whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed."

In the time allotted me this afternoon I shall not try to settle the religious issue of the day, but try to be bold enough to present that issue as briefly and clearly as I can, that you may be aided in settling it for yourself.

But presenting the issue sharply and clearly is by no means a popular business at present. There are many people at the present time who, as Dr. Francis L. Patton has aptly put it, prefer to fight their intellectual battles in what may be called a condition of "low visibility".

Presenting the issue sharply is regarded by them as an impious proceeding. May it not discourage contributions to mission boards? May it not prevent church consolidation and cause a poor showing in church statistics?

But for my part I am glad to tell you that my sympathies are with those men, whether conservatives or radicals, who have a passion for light. The type of religion which delights in the pious sound of traditional phrases regardless of their meaning and shrinks from controversial matters, will never stand amid the shocks of life.

Professor J. Gresham Machen, D. D.

Liberalism a Misnomer

When you get beneath the traditional phraseology used everywhere today to the real underlying issue, you discover that that great redemptive religion called Christianity is being attacked within the church by a totally different type of religious thought and life, which is only the more opposed to Christianity because it is making use of traditional Christian phraseology. That modern non-redemptive religion which is attacking Christianity at its root is called by various names. It is called Modernism. It is called Liberalism.

All such names are unsatisfactory; the latter in particular is question-begging, because the movement is regarded as liberal only by its friends. To those opposed to it it seems to involve a narrow attention to certain facts, and a closing of the eyes to others that are equally vital.

But by whatever name the movement may be called, the root of the movement is found in Naturalism, and by that I mean the denial of any entrance of the creative power of God, as sharply distinguished from his works in nature, at the beginnings of Christianity.

When I use the term "Naturalism" it is in a different way from that in which it is used by the philosophers, but in that non-philosophic sense it expresses fairly well what is really at the root of that which is called by a degradation of the original noble term, "liberal religion."

The Importance of Doctrine

What then are the teachings of modern Naturalism as over against the teachings of Christianity? At the beginning of the discussion we are met with an objection which goes to the very roots of the matter. People will tell us that teachings are unimportant. They will tell us that even if the teachings of modern naturalistic Liberalism are entirely different from the teachings of Christianity, yet the two may turn out to be fundamentally the same, because teachings and doctrines are unimportant. All creeds they tell us are equally good for they all spring from Christian experience.

Well now, my friends, whether the objection is well founded or not, we ought to observe exactly what the objection means. I will tell you what it means, it means that we are falling back into a fundamental skepticism, because if all creeds are equally true, then since the creeds are contradictory one to another, it follows with inexorable logic that all are equally false, or at least equally uncertain. To say that all creeds are equally true is the same as to say that all creeds are equally false or equally uncertain; and when you say that creeds make little difference provided there be a unitary Christian experience, you are falling back into agnosticism which fifty or seventy-five years ago was regarded as the deadliest enemy of the Christian church. That enemy has not been made a friend, but has been made only more dangerous, by being received within our walls.

Christianity they will tell us is a life and not a doctrine. Now that seems to be a devout and pious utterance, but it is radically false all the same, and to see that it is false you do not need even to be a Christian, you need have just common sense and common honesty. For when you say that Christianity is this or that, you are making an assertion in the sphere of history. You are not saying what you think ought to be true, but what you think actually is a fact. When people say that Christianity is this or that—some have ventured the absurd assertion that Christianity is democracy—when you say Christianity is this or that, you are making an assertion in the sphere of history. It is just like saying that the Roman Empire under Nero was a free democracy. It is possible that the Roman Empire under Nero might have been a great deal better if it had been a free democracy, but the question is whether as a matter of fact it was a free democracy or not. So when you say that Christianity is a life, not a doctrine, you are making an assertion in the sphere of history, because Christianity is an historical phenomenon exactly like the Roman Empire, like the kingdom of Prussia or the United States of America.

What Does the Charter Say?

Now before you can determine whether Christianity is this or that, you have to go back to the beginning of the Christian movement. At the beginning of the life of every corporation is the incorporation paper, commonly called the charter, and in this paper are set forth the objects of the corporation. It is conceivable that other objects may be more desirable than those set forth in the incorporation paper, but if the directors use the name and resources of that particular corporation to pursue these other objects, they are going ultra vires of the corporation. It is the same fundamentally with Christianity. It is conceivable that after further investigation we may have fresh views about it. It is conceivable that the founders of the Christian movement were wrong, and that we in the twentieth century can better their program. It is conceivable that they had no right to legislate for all subsequent generations. That is a matter for us to determine in the light of the evidence, but at any rate the founders of the Christian movement did have an inalienable right to legislate for all generations that should choose to bear this name of Christian.

Therefore, if you would honestly determine what can bear the name Christian, you have to go back to the beginnings of the Christian movement. Now the beginnings of the movement constitute a fairly definite historical phenomenon; there is a certain agreement as to what Christianity at its inception was, possible even between Christians and non-Christians, because we have certain sources of information which are admitted to come from the first Christian generation, like the passage we read today—sources which give us definite information about the beginnings of Christianity.

The Christian movement began a few days after the death of Jesus of Nazareth. I can see no good historical justification for calling anything that existed before the death of Jesus of Nazareth, Christianity. At any rate, to be cautious, I will say that if Christianity existed before that time it existed only in a preliminary stage. Evidently after the death of Jesus of Nazareth there was a strange new beginning among His disciples, and that new beginning began the movement which caused the spread of the Christian religion out into the world.

Now, what was the character of the movement at its beginning? For one thing, it was not merely a life as distinguished from a doctrine. Do not misunderstand me. It certainly was a strange new kind of life; anybody who came into contact with those early Christians recognized that they were living an entirely different sort of life from the people around them. It is perfectly clear that the first Christians were living a new type of life, a life of strange purity and strange unselfishness.

Something Happened

But how was that type of life produced? I will tell you the way modern leaders of the church would have expected it to be produced. They would have expected the first Christian missionaries to go forward and say: "We have been in contact with a wonderful person, namely, Jesus of Nazareth, and our lives have been changed by that contact. We call upon you, our hearers, to submit yourselves to the contagion through us with the life of Jesus of Nazareth."

That is just what people are saying today. That is what modern men would have expected the first Christian missionaries to say, but as a matter of historical fact they said nothing of the kind. They produced a new type of life not by exhortation, not by the contagion of personal influence, but by the proclamation of a piece of news; they produced it by the account of something that had recently happened.

That seemed a strange thing to the people of those days—to change men's lives not by telling them to be good, but by giving them an account of things that had happened. It seems strange today, it is what Paul called the foolishness of the message. It seemed to be an absolutely foolish way of trying to change the lives of men, but to the historian it is perfectly plain that that is the way they went at it.

Do you want me to tell you what the first Christian movement was in Jerusalem? They did not say, "Submit yourselves to the spell of Jesus Christ and be children of God the way Jesus was a Son of God," but they said, "Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; he was buried; he has been raised on the third day according to the scriptures." It was an account of things that had happened and an account of the meaning of the happenings, and when you get those historical facts with the meaning of the facts you have Christian doctrine. Christ died—that is history. Christ died for our sins—that is doctrine. We have that at the very basis of all Christian work; it was there in Christianity in the first century, and today Christianity, as then, is founded upon the account of something that happened.

What I mean can be summed up in the first chapter of Acts—the eighth verse—"Ye shall be my witnesses in Jerusalem, in all Judea, and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

Now it is a complete misinterpretation of these words if you say that the witness is merely to what Christ has done for you in your own souls. That is not the way the words are meant. Paramount is the witness to the plain historical fact of the resurrection of Christ. If there is some skeptic here, I do not need to argue with him about the historical value of the book of Acts, or whether Jesus really spoke these words, because all historians, whether Christians or not, ought to admit that it is a good summary of what the Christian movement at its very beginning was; it was a campaign of witnessing, an account of historical facts; Christ died; He was buried; He has been raised.

The Christian Worker a Christian Witness

Well then, if the Christian worker is fundamentally a witness, it is important, despite modern impressions about it, that the Christian worker should tell the truth. When a witness gets up on the witness stand it makes little difference what the cut of his coat is, or whether his sentences are nicely turned; the important thing is that he should tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. That is the important thing for the Christian preacher and Christian worker today. Do not misunderstand me. It is a sad thing if you tell the truth with your lips and if your life belies your message, because then the more true the message the greater your sin, for you are bringing despite upon the truth. On the other hand, it is a sad thing when a man uses the gifts God has given him in order to proclaim things which are false. Therefore, the first thing is that we should tell the story which is at the basis of Christianity and tell it straight, and full, and plain.

It does make a vast deal of difference what our teachings are, and it is the fundamental business of the Christian church today to set forth the teaching of Christianity truly and plainly in opposition to the teachings of the modern rivals of Christianity. And the chief modern rival of Christianity is not Mohammedanism or Buddhism, but naturalistic Liberalism, which is almost dominant in our large ecclesiastical bodies today.

What then, briefly, are the teachings of Christianity over against the teachings of Liberalism? We have just said that Christianity is an account of something that happened, not something that always was true, but something that happened about 1900 years ago, when God saved man through the atoning death of the Lord Jesus Christ.

But before you can understand that gospel, that account of something that happened, you must know first something of God, and second something about man. These are the two great presuppositions of the gospel message, and it is these presuppositions, as well as the gospel message, to which modern Liberalism is diametrically opposed.

It is opposed to Christianity in its view of God, and in its attitude toward God. Now in the Christian view of God there are many elements, but one element is absolutely fundamental, and gives consistency to all the rest. It is the awful transcendence of God, the awful separateness of God; and it is that element in the Christian presentation of God upon which despite is being cast everywhere in the modern liberal church, because it regards God as fundamentally just another name for the great process of nature as it is. We find ourselves in the midst of a vast process, and to that vast process is applied the name of God. That is what people mean by the immanence of God.

Now do not misunderstand me. God according to the Christian view is immanent in the world. God is everywhere—"closer to us than breathing," but immanent in the world not because He is identified with the world but because He is the Creator of it and upholds the things which He has made. The fundamental thing in the Christian notion of God is the sharp distinction between all created things and the Creator who is the explanation of all mysteries.

It is strange that men can call that a new vision of God which obscures the distinction between God and man, and involves God even in the sin of the world! How men can call such a view of God a new revelation is strange, because pantheism as it is called, is just as old as the hills, and has always been with us to blight the religious life of man. Modern Liberalism even when not consistently pantheistic, is at any rate pantheizing since it seeks to obliterate the sharp distinction between God and man, and involves God in the sin of mankind. Very different is the holy and living

God of the Bible and of Christian faith!

Liberalism Denies Sin!

In the second place, modern Liberalism differs from Christianity in its view of man. It differs because it obliterates the distinction between man and God in the way I have said, but it differs in a more fundamental manner still. At the very basis of modern Liberalism in the church is a loss of the consciousness of sin. You can examine the religious literature of the present day, the Sunday-school lesson helps and the sermons, and you will find that the characteristic thought through the whole of them is a profound satisfaction with human goodness. The modern preacher has no words too strong to express his scorn of the Christian view of the awfulness of sin.

A few months ago I stopped in a distant city and went to what seemed to be the leading church. It was the day when the new Sunday-school teachers were inducted into their office; and the preacher preached a sermon about Christian education and told his people, especially those who were to train the young, that formerly there had been a terrible view that children were lost in sin and needed a Redeemer. And he got a laugh from his congregation by quoting the old theologians about the awfulness of sin under which all men were born in this world and the need of redemption in order to escape the righteous judgment of God. He said, "People really used to believe that all children were born in sin and needed the Saviour, Jesus, but we have learned in these days that it is our duty as Christian teachers merely by the teaching of Jesus to draw out the good that is already in them."

The question arose in my mind why he quoted the theologians, why he indulged simply in the vulgar ridicule of them, when he wanted to cast ridicule upon the doctrine of the retributive justice of God; because he could have raised a better laugh if he had quoted the words of Jesus!

Jesus said more awful things about the terribleness of sin and the retributive justice of God than any man, and it is exceedingly strange how men at the present time who claim to have Jesus as Master (they speak of him always as "the Master," but they do not speak of him as Lord or Saviour), who claim to have Jesus as their authority in the sphere of religion, will proceed in the same breath to cast despite upon the things which are at the very center of His teaching, and at the very center of Christianity, as is the awfulness of the guilt of sin.

Do you want me to tell you what the fundamental fault with the church today is? It is this—the modern preacher, whether in the Sunday-school class, or in the home or in the pulpit, is feverishly engaged in an absolutely impossible task. He is engaged in calling the "righteous" to repentance, in trying to bring men into the church, and at the same time permit them to retain their pride in their own goodness. Even our Lord did not succeed in calling the righteous to repentance, and probably we shall be no more successful than He. At the very basis of Christian preaching is the mystery of the consciousness of sin and that is produced by the Holy Spirit, and when a man comes under the conviction of sin his whole attitude is changed.

These are the two presuppositions of the Christian message—the Christian view of the awful holiness of God and the Christian view of the terrible guilt of sin. God could only bring sinful man into His presence through the atoning death of Jesus Christ our Lord, but the account of that gospel is found in the Bible and with regard to the Bible modern Liberalism differs fundamentally from Christianity.

The Bible Absolutely Unique

The Christian view of the Bible of course makes the contents of the Bible absolutely unique. You might have all the ideas of the Bible in some other book, but you would have no Christianity; because Christianity is an account not merely of things that always were true, but an account of something that happened, and unless the thing really happened then we are still hopeless under the guilt of sin. It all depends upon the question whether, as a matter of fact, the eternal Son of God did take our sins upon Him and die instead of us on the cross.

According to the Christian view of the Bible it not only contains an account of something that happened, but contains a true account, and thus there is added to the Christian doctrine of revelation the Christian doctrine of the inspiration of the Word of God, and upon that doctrine despite is everywhere being cast today. Men are always talking about the "mechanical" view of inspiration, which makes the Biblical writers little more than stenographers. But as a matter of fact the Christian doctrine of inspiration does not deny the human characteristics of the biblical writers, nor display any lack of interest in the human means that these writers had for gathering their information, but it holds that by the Spirit of God these writers were preserved from the errors which are found in other books, and thus gave to us the only infallible rule of faith and practice.

The Seat of Authority According to Liberalism

But what does modern Liberalism substitute for the authority of the Bible? Sometimes a totally false impression is produced that it substitutes the authority of Jesus.

That is altogether false, because when asked what they consider the authority of Jesus, we discover that modern Liberalism rejects a great many of the recorded words of Jesus. It does not believe that Jesus ever spoke some of them, because in His recorded words in the gospels are some things most hateful to it. Modern Liberalism says that not everything recorded of Jesus in the Gospels was spoken by Jesus, and we must sort out the words which were spoken by Him and reject the rest.

But suppose we press it further. We shall discover that even in the reduced Jesus of modern liberal reconstruction there are some things abhorrent to the Liberal church, and modern Liberals if pinned down to it will say that they do not believe everything Jesus said was true, but they will say they are still Christians, they are still His followers, because they still hold to the central life purpose of Jesus.

Well, what was the central life purpose of Jesus? According to the Gospel of Mark the central life purpose of Jesus is found in His atoning death. "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and give his life a ransom for (instead of) many."

These words are of course abhorrent to the Liberal Church. But when you ask what the central life purpose of Jesus was, you will find you are in the mire of dispute, and that they will accept as authoritative only a few of the sayings of Jesus, not because they are His sayings, but because they happen to agree with their own opinions. The real authority of the modern Liberal is not Jesus, but it is, as men say, "Christian experience."

But what do you mean by Christian experience? What do you mean by Christian experience as authority? Surely you do not mean merely a majority vote of the organized Church. Do you mean, then, individual experience? But this is endlessly diverse, and therefore what you will have substituted for the true authority of the Word of God, is no authority at all but the shifting emotions of sinful men.

But people say what a foolish thing it is to depend upon a book! It all depends upon the book, my friends. The Reformation of the sixteenth century was founded upon the authority of a Book! May that Book again set aflame the world, and may the present bondage give place again to the glorious freedom of the sons of God!

The Christian View of Christ

When you come to the contents of the Bible everything points to the central figure—Jesus Christ. What is thought of Christ, first, by the modern liberal church and second, by Christian men?

At this point a further perplexity arises, for ask the modern liberal preacher his view of Christ, and he will say with great conviction, "I believe in the deity of Christ, I believe that Jesus is God."

We hear much like that today. People say, "Why, after all, this great preacher is most orthodox because he believes in the deity of Christ, and those who are objecting to his presence as a leader in the church, are mere uncharitable heresy hunters.

Do you not see, my friends, that, when they say Jesus is God, the value of that utterance depends upon what they mean by God? That little word "God" is not a bit more beautiful than any other English word. The value of it depends altogether upon what you mean by it, and when the modern liberal preacher says he believes Christ is God, he may mean God exists in all the world, God exists wherever life pulsates through humanity, and only appears fuller and plainer than any other place in the life of Jesus.

That is what is often meant, and of course that is very far from the Christian faith. Very often when he says Jesus is God, he means to use the term in this way: "We have given up," he says, "the old notion that there is a Creator and Ruler of the world. We know nothing about that—that is metaphysical. The word 'God' is useful merely as expressing the highest object of men's desires." So when they say Jesus is God they do not mean that Jesus is the supreme ruler of the world, but simply that Jesus, though a man like the rest of men, is the highest thing we know.

Such men are further removed from the Christian faith than Unitarians. Unitarians at least believe in God, whereas these men speak highly of Jesus, call Jesus God, only because they think low of God, not because they think high of Jesus.

In another way also such men are inferior to Unitarians, inferior in the plain matter of honesty. When they say, Jesus is God, the truthfulness of that utterance depends altogether upon the audience addressed. I do not mean to deny that such liberal preachers do believe in the very core of their hearts that Jesus is God, they certainly mean that. But the great trouble is, they know perfectly well those words are going to be taken by the simple minded hearers whom they address in a way totally different from the way in which they mean it. They are offending therefore against the fundamental principle of truthfulness of language. The assertion, "I believe that Jesus is God," is truthful before an audience of theologically trained persons who understand the modern way of thinking about God, but if it be addressed to a simple minded people, then the language is untruthful and all the best motives in the world cannot possibly excuse it. Nothing can possibly excuse language which is not in accordance with facts.

Simplicity of the Cross

Liberalism is different from Christianity also as to salvation. What is the way of salvation according to the Christian account? Two aspects are to be distinguished. In the first place, the basis of it all is in the atoning death of Christ. According to Christian belief that is a very simple thing. Men talk about the theory of the atonement as though it were a subtle thing, but you can put it in words of one syllable. We deserve eternal death. The Lord Jesus Christ, because he loved us, died instead of us on the Cross.

That certainly is not incomprehensible. It is mysterious in its depth of grace, but it is a thing that a child can understand. Do you want me to tell you what is difficult? It is not the simple Bible presentation of the death of Christ, but the manifold modern effort to get rid of that simple presentation of the Cross in the interests of human pride.

The modern liberals pour out the vials of their scorn upon the Bible presentation of the Cross of Christ. They speak of it with disgust as involving a "trick" intended to placate an "alienated God." Thus they pour out their scorn upon a thing so holy that in the presence of it the Christian heart melts in gratitude too deep for words.

People talk about Christian experience. My friends, where can Christian experience be found if not at the Cross of Christ, at that blessed place where a man knows that in a great mystery the guilt of his sin was taken by the Holy One, and borne instead of him on the Cross?

The very nerve of the Christian view of the Cross is that God Himself makes the sacrifice for our salvation. Where can love be found except at the Cross of Christ, the one who died, the just for the unjust? "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son." There, and there alone, is to be found the love that is love indeed.

The New Birth

This work of Christ is applied by the Holy Spirit of God in the new birth. You will hear very little about the new birth in modern preaching. Modern missionaries will tell you, you must give up the thought of winning individual converts in mission lands. For the new birth they are inclined to substitute "the social gospel." But at the very centre of Christianity are the words "Ye must be born again."

Justification by Faith

That is the work of the Spirit of God, the application of the work of Christ. But in applying the work of Christ the Spirit makes use of faith. People who have found salvation know what it means.

Liberals talk about faith in Jesus, but they mean simply admiration of Jesus. They talk about it as if the basis of the Christ life were "make Jesus Master in your life." The Y. M. C. A., in recent years, has put the declaration of purpose to live the Christ life as somehow being on a par with the reception of the salvation which is found in the Cross of Christ. I do not see but that that is the exact opposite of faith. That means that you are trusting in your own works. Faith means not that you do something, but that you receive first the gracious gift of God. When the Lord Jesus has died for you you accept it without work of your own. You accept the gracious thing He did. And then by God's help the good life follows.

Victory Assured

Christianity is fighting a great battle today. It is one of three great crises in the history of the Christian church. One came in the second century when Christianity was almost engulfed by paganism in the church in the form of Gnosticism. There was another in the middle ages when legalism was almost dominant in the church, similar to the modern legalism which appears in the liberal church. Christianity today is fighting a great battle, but I, for my part, am looking for ultimate victory. God will not desert His church.

A SIGNIFICANT MANIFESTO

Some months ago a group of eminent English leaders, including Dr. L. P. Jacks, editor of the Hibbert Journal; Dr. A. E. Garvie, and Dr. W. B. Selbie, issued a manifesto, in which this note was sounded: "Civilization itself seems to be on the wane . . . the nations are filled with distrust and antipathy for each other, the classes have rarely been so antagonistic, while the relation of individual to individual has seldom been so frankly selfish. . . . It is becoming increasingly evident that the world has taken the wrong turn, which if persisted in, may lead to the destruction of civilization."—The Christian Century.

AN UNUSUAL EXPERIENCE

March 21

Just as we are about to go to press with this issue of the Monthly, several page proofs are lost in the snow; not exactly lost, but snowbound. The storm of Sunday, March 11, cut us off from wire communication with our printers, but mail continued to reach us during the week. We were almost through and sent the last page proofs Saturday, March 17. That night Mt. Morris, Ill., was completely cut off from the outside world by the snow storm. The Publishing Agent sent telegrams and requests for long distance phone connection without response. Tuesday morning we started for Mt. Morris and learned only when arriving at Oregon that it was impossible for a train to get through. Engines with plows and large crews were working at both ends of the line. We secured a ride with a farmer on a bob sled—having to detour from the regular road—several feet deep with snow in many places—and drive six miles over fields and side drives to our destination. Here we are trying to complete the forms and hoping every hour for the most welcome toot of the locomotive with our precious proofs. If your copy of this issue is late you will understand we have been working under difficulties, both with the increased size of the issue, and the storm to handicap us.

God or Matter, Creation or Evolution, Which?

By Professor Leander S. Keyser, D. D., Wittenberg College, Springfield, O.

MY address this morning is the first of a series on "The Problem of Origins." The subject is divided into three parts: (1) The origin of the universe: (2) The origin of man and woman; (3) The origin of sin and salvation.

There is one book in the world, and only one, which throws a clear light on the problem. On the other hand, the speculations of men have always been obscure, uncertain, and unsatisfying both to the intellect and to the heart. That book is the Bible—a book pretty well known in the Moody Bible Institute, if one may judge from the number of times it has been referred to, read and quoted since I have been in this auditorium.

The origin of the universe—how much speculation has been expended upon that problem, and most of it futile! It has remained unsolved by science or philosophy. But turn to your Bible—and see how simply and rationally the problem is solved; for at its very threshold the Bible says, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." Is not that beautiful and uplifting?

At this point I must break into the logical sequence of my discourse to explain an important point. It is this: There is no contradiction between the first and second chapters of Genesis. Dr. Driver—like many others of the Graf-Wellhausen school—in his Introduction to Old Testament Literature, tries to show that these two chapters contain variant accounts of the creation, and cannot be reconciled. For that reason he and the critics of his kind accept the documentary theory and the composite authorship of Genesis and the whole Pentateuch.

Now, the reason why some critics see contradictions between these two chapters is that they have failed to find the true key to their interpretation. Let us see if we can discover it. The first chapter gives a general account of the creation of the whole cosmos, including man. Then the second chapter, so far from giving another and a discrepant account, describes more in detail just how God brought man into being, body and soul, and then proceeds to tell how He prepared the garden of Eden as man's habitat.

Therefore, since the two chapters narrate different historical events, there can be no disparity between them.

On this matter, and others of like importance, I call your attention to Dr. Keil's commentary on the Pentateuch.

A Confession of Faith

Before going further, I would like to make a confession of my faith—and I make it with a bounding joy, namely, that I accept ex animo the first three chapters of Genesis (and, of course, those that follow) as actual history. I do not believe that they are myth, legend, allegory, or mere Jewish tradition.

Professor Leander S. Keyser, D. D.

My conviction is that they describe precisely the origin of the universe, of man and woman, and of sin, and then add the proto-gospel promising that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head.

May I add (I hope without boastfulness), that I have arrived at this conclusion after years of study and investigation, also after years of Christian experience, which were preceded by a season of deep doubt and virtual infidelity. I do not know how to account for my Christian experience, except by the creative history recorded in the early chapters of the Bible, telling me, with the rest of the Book, that the God who made me a new creation in Christ Jesus also created the world and all that is therein.

Oh, how satisfying it is when you can rest upon this inspired history, my brethren! How reassuring to the soul that longs for certitude and reality!

While I seem to be talking around my theme thus far, I have been steadily coming to it—the origin of the universe. The discussion is based on Genesis 1:1: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth."

Note—"In the beginning God"! Can one think of a better way to begin the universe than to begin with God? It begins with the transcendent Being, who existed before the beginning of time. How majestic the initial teaching of the Bible!

"In the beginning God created"! The verb is bara, to bring something into being that had no prior existence. What does that mean? It means that God is a personal God, all-powerful and all-wise. Otherwise He could not have created this vast universe ex nihilo. What a conception for a man to achieve and express in the childhood of the world? Such a conception could not have come up from beneath; it must have come down from above—from God Himself. And note what it means for our comfort. If God created the universe, each of us may come boldly to the throne of grace with a child's trust and simplicity, and say: "Father of this vast universe, I lay my hand in Thine; lead Thou me in the way Thou wouldst have me go!"

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." That completes the symphony. How did Moses know that the rest of the universe is greater than this little earth on which we live? He mentions "the heavens" first. He lived centuries before Ptolemy, Copernicus and Galileo, and yet, when he describes the creation of the universe as a whole, he names the heavens before the earth. Still, he gives most of his attention subsequently to the earth, because it must have been revealed to him that the earth was to be the arena of the greatest transactions conceivable: the creation and history of mankind and the redemption of the human family through the incarnation of the eternal Son of God. It is marvelous, the wisdom of this biblical writer!

Evidence of Supernal Wisdom

This initial verse proves the Bible to be of divine origin. I cannot conceive that a book written in the primeval history of the human race could begin its narrative in so divine and majestic a way without divine inspiration. Other religions never rose to the conception that God created the universe ex nihilo. All of them tell you that the gods were evolved out of the primeval all, or substrate, of the universe and then began to operate in crude and absurd ways upon the material of the cosmos, trying to mold it into shape. Even Plato and Aristotle, wisest of the Greek philosophers, never were able to lift their thought to the conception of a pure divine creation, but believed that matter was eternal, and that God merely its framer and artificer. On the other hand, the writers of our pure monotheistic Bible, mastered the exalted conception that God created the universe, and therefore is its complete Sovereign and beneficent Upholder. Is it not a proof of supernal wisdom?

At this point a difficult question may arise. Where did God come from? Who made God? There are few people who have not been puzzled at times over that perplexity. It was the problem that troubled poor Professor Tyndall in his day. He says that he often could not sleep at night for worrying over the question, Who made God?

Here is the way to deal with it—at least it is one way: There is something now; the universe is here, and we are here. Since there is something now, there must have always been something; for if there ever was a time when there was nothing, nothing could have ever been. Therefore there must be some ultimate reality which has always been, which has existed from eternity.

Now, what kind of an ultimate and eternal reality are you to posit and believe? Is it not infinitely better to accept a personal and all-wise God than mere crude, unconscious material substance? Let us not be groundlings! If you believe in God, in the personal, infinite, all-powerful and all-wise God, then you have some One on whom to rest your soul in perfect serenity and satisfaction; and you may know that sometime all your perplexing problems will be resolved, your sins forgiven, your diseases healed, and your afflictions comforted and allayed. That is the only way to live a stabilized life in this world of sin and mingled joy and sorrow.

Differing World-Views

In the next place, we shall examine briefly, a few world-views that differ from the one presented in the Word of God. There is materialism. This is a materialistic age. Many of the so-called scientists of the day have gone over utterly to this philosophy, and seem almost to glory in the fact that they have crowded God out of the world. And yet materialism is a very crass and superficial view; it holds that the only entity is matter; those higher realities—mind, soul, spirit, these the materialist declares are nonexistent. Thought is only the result of secretions in the brain, just as bile is the result of secretions in the liver. Do you not see, therefore, that the materialist thinks in the lowest terms possible? He seems to be incapable of thinking along the higher lines, in purely psychical, ethical and spiritual terms. Is it not strange and sad that there are people, some occupying high places in educational circles, who actually glory in the denial of the existence of the soul and of all spiritual realities?

But wherein lies the weakness of this crude theory? Let me propose a few questions to the materialist: If matter is the only reality, how could personalities like us men ever have evolved out of impersonal substance? Can something higher and nobler come out of something lower merely by means of resident forces? Ex nihilo nihil fit.

What the mind craves is an adequate philosophy; what the soul desires is an adequate religion. And surely materialism does not posit an adequate religious or philosophic basis of the universe, and especially of the higher and finer phenomena it exhibits! If you will put the personal, omnipotent and omniscient God portrayed in the Bible back of and in the universe, then, and then only, do you have an adequate basis and cause for all its phenomena.

Let us look at the question from another angle. Belief in God, or in some kind of a supernatural being, is all but universal. No tribes have been found, however low in the scale of civilization, who do not have some kind of religion, some conception of the supernatural. Religion seems to be inborn. Some one has said that "man is incurably religious."

And, besides, in many heathen countries the religion of the people is the most dominant force in their lives. Now, if there is no entity existent but material substance, and yet it has made almost all the peoples of the world believe that there is a God, then, by that very token, material substance must be a universal falsifier! Therefore, its testimony cannot be accepted on any subject. Even when it makes the materialist believe only in material substance, it may be fooling him! So I repeat, materialsim is an utterly inadequate philosophy.

Another humanly devised theory says that matter is eternal, therefore it was not created. Plato and Aristotle held that view; so did the Gnostics and Manicheans, heretics of the early Christian centuries. Plato and the Gnostics maintained that matter was evil. Aristotle denied this, although he held that God was only the framer and artificer of the universe, but not its creator.

What is lame about this theory? It is this: There cannot be two eternals subsisting side by side, nor two infinites, nor two absolutes. The absolute and the relative may subsist simultaneously, but there can be only one absolute and self-existent Being. Therefore to say that God and matter are both eternal is a contradiction, a metaphysical impossibility. The biblical doctrine of God as the eternal Being and the Creator of all finite and relative existences is again triumphant.

H. G. Wells' Theory of a Finite God

A few words must be said regarding the modern doctrine of a finite God. John Stuart Mill held that view; so did William James, the psychologist; so does H. G. Wells today. Since sin and suffering are in the world, they try to exonerate God from blame by declaring that He is finite, and therefore could not prevent their occurrence. Then they add, that we are in the world to help God out of His dilemma, and perhaps some time He and we together may succeed in winning the victory over evil.

What shall we reply to the exponents of this theory? It is a hopeless and helpless doctrine. It makes God a helpless being, and that is fatal to anything like solid hope and comfort. If God was not strong and wise enough to prevent the advent of sin into the world, how will He ever be able to overcome sin? Our assistance will do Him no good, because, since He created us, our strength can add nothing to His power. Indeed, since the majority of people in the world do wrong and add their opposition to Him, that would only seem to increase His burden, and make Him the more feeble. So, you see, what an inane doctrine it is.

The only doctrine that puts courage and fiber into the human soul is the doctrine that God is supreme, all-powerful and all-wise, just as the Bible portrays Him. Then it follows that since He permitted sin to come into the world, He knew that He could deal with it adequately, and in His own good time overcome it. May you and I be on His side when that time comes, so that we may share His triumph and be partakers of His glory!

And what shall be said of the theory of evolution so much in vogue today? This is so great a subject that it would be better to deal with it at length and in detail when it is touched upon at all. Yet there are a few propositions I wish to present for consideration.

The advocates of evolution seem to hold that it is sufficient to account for all things. Instead of remaining modestly in the realm of empirical science, its exponents are ambitious to formulate a philosophy of the universe. So we must enter the domains of both science and philosophy in dealing with the theory.

First, we ask, how can evolution account for the origin of matter and force? Could matter and force have evolved out of nothing? Can evolution account for the origin of life, or self-consciousness, or conscience, or spirituality?

"Evolution" means to roll out. Could something roll out that was not previously rolled in?

Evolution is a series of gradual and progressive changes brought about by means of resident forces. That is practically Le Conte's definition, and it is the only scientific one, the only bona fide article. Could the non-living evolve into the living by means of resident forces? Could the non-conscious evolve into the self-conscious? Could the non-moral evolve into the moral? Could the non-spiritual evolve into the spiritual? Is it not an axiom of human thought that every effect and event must have an adequate cause? The necessary answer to these inquiries will prove that naturalistic evolution is utterly inadequate; its champions are guilty of the logical fallacy of violating the law of causality.

How the Term "Evolution" Is Misused

There are those, however, who advocate "theistic evolution." I have nothing but the kindliest feeling for those who are making so desperate an effort to salvage theism and Christianity and at the same time hold on to the evolution theory. But from the viewpoints of both science and philosophy their efforts are futile, for the moment God is introduced as personally active in the process, that very fact nullifies evolution itself, which means progressive changes "by means of resident forces."

If God enters personally into the process, something new is constantly being injected from without to make it progressive and push it forward; and surely that is not what the scientists mean by evolution. That God does develop—note the word—many things in a gradual way, no one will deny; but that is miles and miles away from what is meant by evolution.

Thus the proponents of theistic evolution misuse the capital term, "evolution" in the argument. God creates and preserves and develops, but He does not evolve—unless you use the word "evolve" in an elastic and unscientific sense.

Should it be said that, when God created the primordial material—perhaps the universal ether—He endued it with all needed potencies for its subsequent evolution, and then left it to itself, to be controlled by secondary forces, we reply: That would be the Deism of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, which spent its force long ago and proved its futility. It would mean an absentee God or a mere spectator God—a view repugnant even to the "modern mind," which insists on the divine immanence in all cosmical processes. Thus theistic evolution is shown to be a contradiction of terms.

I propose in the place of all these humanly devised theories the doctrine of Christian theism, which includes at least three terms in accounting for the cosmos —creation, miracle and development. Let us not suppose that we can exhaust all the manifold divine operations with only one term. Let us not be afraid to use as many terms as are needed to account for the universe and all its diversified phenomena. Only in that way can we prove ourselves to be both Christians and philosophers.

God the Unifier

The rest of our time will be devoted to a few of the positive theistic arguments.

Note the rationality, the "sweet reasonableness," of the biblical world-view. If God created the universe, we can account for its unity; for it is a cosmos, not a chaos. The word universe is derived from unus, one, and verto, to turn; therefore it means "turned into one." It is a uni-verse.

If the one God created it, as the Bible teaches, then it must be a unity, an organism, because it was brought into being by one mind. Is not that true philosophy?

What does philosophy always try to do? It always tries to find the unifying principle amid all diversity. Men intuitively believe that the universe is one, else they would not call it the universe. Now, what is the greatest and deepest unifying principle of which we know anything? It is personality—the ego that binds all variety into consistent and vital oneness. It is your egoity that makes and keeps you one and the same being through all the years. That is the reason you always use the first person singular when you think and speak of yourself. You always say "I" or "me," never "we" or "us."

Your body has undergone many mutations. Perhaps it does not contain an atom that it possessed when you were a boy. How many changes have occurred in your mental processes and operations! How often your opinions about things have changed! How different many of your emotions are from what they once were! Your moral and spiritual faculties have undergone many alterations, and yet you are the same person that you were at your birth—the same ego. You said "I" then, and you know you are the same "I" you were in those days. One thing has endured through all the years—your personality; one thing has unified all your life amid all the mutations.

Let us apply our argument to God and the universe. What is the one adequate unifying principle of this universe amid all its limitless diversity? The divine personality, the divine egoity—the self-conscious God who holds all together in beauty and concord. Where else will you find an adequate unifying principle? But granted that this philosophy is true, it is adequate. And, thanks be to God it is the philosophy which is taught in the Holy Bible!

"Holy Bible, Book Divine, Precious treasure, thou art mine!"

Another thought comes to us with much comfort and uplifting power. The biblical doctrine of creation explains clearly the design so obvious in the cosmos. Purpose connotes intelligence and will, and they in turn imply personality; therefore the teleological argument or the argument from design, is valid as a convincing proof of the existence of a personal God. In no other view can you find a rational explication of the obvious marks of design and adaptation in the world of nature and the realm of reason. Why not accept the clear and obvious explanation instead of running blindly after some obscure cause?

The Saint's Security

The biblical world-view has another decided advantage. If God created the universe, He is its complete Sovereign. If He could create the universe, then He can control it. He is its physical and moral Governor. Whatever He may permit in His inscrutable wisdom, you and I may feel secure that the universe can never go beyond His control. To every opposing force, however subtle and powerful, the omnipotent One, is able to say, "Thus far shalt thou go, and no farther; here shall thy proud waves be stayed"!

What a comfort to repose securely on the divine sovereignty! That is why we Christians can always re-echo Paul's great statement, "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are the called according to his purpose."

Then, too, we may rely utterly on Christ's promise, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved"; for we know that there is no power anywhere that can thwart His decree and purpose. Is not that solid comfort? Will not the doctrine of Christian theism give stability to every believer's life? We pillow our heads on the divine sovereignty.

I cannot let you go without adverting briefly to two more thoughts. The view of Christian theism satisfies man's ethical needs. Why? Because, if you remove God from the universe, you have no basis for morality. There must be an ultimate ground and source of right. Every one ought to be able to see that. If there ever was a time when right was not, right could never have been, for it could not have evolved out of a non-moral basis.

But morality can be predicted only of personal beings with rational intelligence. moral perception and free will. We never call minerals, vegetables and animals moral beings, because they are not personalities. Therefore the ultimate ground of right must be a person—God. Here again the biblical doctrine of theism gives us an adequate philosophy of the moral phenomena in the universe.

The same is true with regard to man's religious needs, which are clamant in the very depths of his being. The biblical doctrine of God as a personal Creator, Preserver and Redeemer correlates with man's religious needs and aspirations, because man can hold real communion only with a personal God. He cannot hold true communion with the impersonal god of pantheism, or the abstract idea of humanity in the Positivism of Comte.

I conclude by reiterating that the biblical doctrine of God offers the only adequate basis and explanation of all the phenomena of the universe, natural, psychical, moral and spiritual.

"We sing th' almighty power of God,
Who bade the mountains rise;
Who spread the flowing seas abroad,
And built the lofty skies.

"There's not a plant nor flower below
But makes thy glories known;
And clouds arise and tempest blow
By order from thy throne.

"On thee each moment we depend;
If thou withdraw, we die.
Oh, may we ne'er that God offend
Who is forever nigh."

WASHINGTON AS A CHURCH CENTER

Many of the religious bodies of the United States have built or are preparing to build church edifices which in a way will be national in their significance. Some of the churches as well are making the city of Washington in a sense the headquarters of educational and religious endeavor.

The Episcopalians already have partly built a great cathedral, which stands on a height commanding a view of the city and the Potomac valley. In a way the building will be a national cathedral of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States of America.

Two large Presbyterian congregations in Washington are just about to combine and to erect a church building which it probably is intended shall be national in its significance and in its influence. The Universalists are to build a new church which shall be a capital city home for all Universalists, and which, so to speak, will be a sort of cathedral for the adherents of their faith. The Methodists and the Roman Catholics already have several educational institutions in Washington. The Methodists are developing the American university, while the Catholics are developing a university of their own. Both churches have several large and flourishing places of worship in the capital of the country.

The Unitarians are erecting what may be called a national church on the heights of 16th Street. For years the Unitarians worshiped in a comparatively small building in a downtown district. President Taft attended services in this church during the four years of his administration. The ex-President, now the chief justice, is one of the helpers in the work of creating a Unitarian church center in the capital.

Under our Constitution we can have no national church, and it is a good thing that this is so. It seems, however, that the Christian bodies of the country are not overlooking the value which comes from a proper representation of their faiths in the capital of the country.

The Old, Old Story

By Pastor P. W. Philpott, Moody Church, Chicago

YOU will find the Scriptures I wish to call to your attention in Luke 2:16; 24:51, and Acts 1:11, a fragment from each: "The babe lying in a manger" . . . "He was parted from them and carried up into heaven" . . . "This same Jesus who was taken up from you into heaven shall so come as ye have seen him go."

Luke is the author of them all. He is the one writer who gives us a biography of Jesus from the cradle in Bethlehem to the Mount of Olives from which He ascended and went back to heaven.

Indeed there is only one other Gospel that makes mention of the ascension; Mark in a very brief way refers to it. Matthew records His birth, but makes no mention of the ascension; neither does John. Luke tells us the story of His birth and of His ascension, and he tells us the story of His ascension twice.

We get the story from this writer from two aspects. In one he looks back to Bethlehem, and the ascension is necessary to what began there; and in the other, he looks forward to the second advent, and makes that necessary to the completion of things.

In other words if the story of his birth is true as recorded, then His life could not possibly end in undistinguished death like that of other men. There must be something else. The creed which hundreds of thousands recite every Lord's Day, and which states that He was born of a virgin, must of necessity go on to say, "He ascended up into heaven," and add, "From thence He shall come again to judge the quick and the dead."

That is old fashioned theology, and I am surprised that some who recite the creed will take up stones to stone you when you say that you believe it is literally true.

A Time to Reaffirm Faith

I have come to the conclusion that we have reached a time when we must reaffirm our faith in some things that are absolutely essential to our Christian faith, and one of these is the virgin birth of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. There has been for years a wide-spread and determined effort to set aside the authority of the Scriptures. Sometimes they try to exalt the books of men to a level of the Book of God. In other cases they would bring down the Book of God to the level of the books of men, but in either case the effect is the same, the authority of the Word of God is destroyed.

I have a feeling that this leaven that has been filtering through our religious schools is more responsible for the waves of lawlessness that have been rolling over Christendom during the last ten or fifteen years, but especially the last five, than some people are prepared to admit. The last barrier to a condition of absolute lawlessness is the Word of the living God, and when that is broken down the world will be lawless indeed.

Now in these attacks upon the Word of God the main point has been the virgin birth of Jesus Christ. If we can disprove the record of the incarnation, then the whole house of faith must collapse and we have nothing left.

A little time ago a certain young man was ordained to the Christian ministry, one of a number as to whom it was stated through the press that they had refused to affirm their faith in the virgin birth; indeed, two of them said positively they did not believe it at all, and the other four would not commit themselves. A day or two afterward I was taking lunch with a lay member of that denomination, and as we were talking about the statement, I said to him, "Do you ever expect to hear any of those men preach on the resurrection of Jesus from the dead? Should you ever expect to hear any one of them talk about His ascending up from Mount Olivet and going back to God?"

And he replied, "I don't know that I should."

Of course not. If we doubt the virgin birth, surely sooner or later we shall doubt the resurrection and the ascension, and everything else that is essential.

It was about forty years ago that Dr. Dale, of Birmingham, made the statement, "The storms of criticism now are bursting about the venerable head of Moses, but Moses is not the objective; the time will come soon when the tempest will break about that one holy Head." And the tempest has broken on the head of the Son of Mary, who was the Son of God.

Reasons for Faith in the Virgin Birth

Now we are asked to give an answer to every man who asks us a reason for the hope that is within us, and I want to give you some simple reasons why I believe the virgin birth.

First of all, the records of His birth are stamped with the seal of heaven. When you read the stories of the virgin birth of Jesus as given by Matthew and Luke, you recognize a touch that stamps them as divine. They are as pure as He of whom they speak. That is a simple reason, but it is a good one for me.

And then again, I believe in the story of that birth for the reason that Matthew did. He believed it was the fulfilment of a prophecy made 750 years before. "A virgin," said God to Isaiah, "shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call His name Immanuel." And we may go back beyond Isaiah and the patriarchs to the first great promise God ever made the human family. "The seed of the woman (a unique expression), shall bruise the serpent's head." This is the only instance in all history where a virgin gave birth to a son. I believe that story.

Then, the incarnation is the only explanation of Jesus. There is no other way of accounting for Him; for His perfect manhood; for His miracles; and for His holy sayings. He is the only sinless man the world has known. I believe the world believes He was sinless, holy, undefiled, separate from sinners, yet tempted in all points like as we are, sin apart. There was no response in Him to anything that was unclean, and mark you, friends, the Devil and the world had the microscope upon Him from His birth. Can you explain it? Can you explain the life, the miracle of Jesus in any other words than those of Matthew 1:22, "His name shall be called Immanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us"?

Oh, it was a great day when He was born in Bethlehem of Judea! A great day when God gave His Son "that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life"!

Why Christ Came to the Earth

Now let me give you what I deem the threefold purpose for His coming.

1. He came to make God known, to reveal to man what God is like.

I had a letter from a brother a few weeks ago who had dropped into our church. He said, "I have heard a great many choruses, but never anything that equalled your young men's chorus in the rendering of "Does Jesus Care?" It was wonderful. "But," he added, "your theory about substitution, and Christ's coming to reveal God, and all that, I do not believe. All I need to do is to walk through Lincoln Park some nice spring morning with its flowers and birds. That is a revelation of God to me."

Now I know God speaks through nature. "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork; day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard."

But think of the wonderful scenes our missionary brother threw on the canvas a little while ago. What a wonderful country, what flowers, what fertility, but what darkness, what degradation, what shame, what death, until they heard a name! What name was it? Jesus, precious Jesus!

He came to make God known. Oh, see Him with the sinful, the sad, the sick and sorrowing. Should we ever have known God was like that had He not come?

About two years ago on a cold winter morning at 2:30, my wife said to me, "There is some one at the door."

I went down and there was a man. He said, "Are you the preacher?"

"Yes, sir."

"There's a girl dying, and she wants you to come and pray with her."

"I will go."

He turned to go, and then came back.

"I ought to be fair. It isn't a very nice place.

"I know—I will be there."

When I got to the house I found a girl in her early teens dying, and five or six of her own kind, standing about her.

As I looked upon that child my soul went out in pity and desire to help and save her if I could, but I thought first I would say something about her suffering.

"You have been very sick, my child."

"Oh, yes," she said, "but that's not what is bothering me—I am dying, and I am afraid to meet God. Isn't there a story in the Bible about a sheep that went astray, and the shepherd going after it until he found it?"

"Yes."

"Read it to me."

And I found that wonderful story which never had more meaning to me; and when I got through reading it, I told her the other story of the Good Shepherd who gave His life for the sheep, and then offered eternal life to them without money or price.

Then I knelt and prayed, and as we prayed, she sobbed and sobbed. I never was in a prayer meeting just like that one. When I arose from my knees, I shall never forget the picture! she put her hands together like a little child and said:

"Oh, girls, girls, I am that poor lost sheep, but the Shepherd has come to me, and I just believe He hugs me right to His very heart tonight."

O, I was so glad I believed the old story! What has the new theology to say to anybody like that?

The next morning when I went to call again the undertaker had been ahead of me.

See how much poorer we would have been if Jesus had not come! "No man hath seen the Father at any time. The only begotten of the Father, he hath declared him." He hath made Him known. Oh, bless God forever more!

2. But He came to do something else. Not only to reveal what God is like, not only to answer that great void in the human heart, but to make it possible for us to go right into the very presence of God and as children call Him Father, and finally, stand in His presence without spot or wrinkle or any such thing.

And in order to do that He must of necessity die. For without the shedding of blood there can be no remission of sins. He is the Mediator, no angel was worthy, so a body was prepared for Him. The children are partakers of flesh and blood, "He likewise took part of the same that through death He might destroy him who had the power of death, that is the devil."

I am glad He died. It makes it easy for everybody to die who trusts in Him.

I stood by my little boy of seven and a half years, our baby boy. One day a terrible disease came upon him. They took him to the hospital and wouldn't let us see him. But one day they said, "Come." They dressed me up like a doctor and I went in and saw his life going out.

He said, "Daddy, why are you dressed like that?"

"They don't let people come in here without these clothes on."

"Daddy, am I going to die?"

"I am afraid you are, my boy. Are you afraid?"

"No, I am not afraid; Jesus is with me." "But," he said, "I wish some of the others had gone first. It wouldn't be so lonesome then."

Dear little heart, he made it easier for me to go when my hour comes.

See what I mean? People who put their trust in Jesus and who believe the old fashioned gospel die well. Somehow a testimony like that is a great balm for a human heart. Jesus is with me. He not only destroyed the one who had the power of death, but He delivered them who believe out of a life of bondage through fear of death. Believers pass through the valley without fear.

3. He came also to identify Himself with our humanity for another purpose. He came to carry back our humanity to the very throne of God. The man Christ Jesus is standing in the glory at the right hand of God. The man Christ Jesus. Years ago I heard Dr. A. J. Gordon say, "That for Christ to become a man and yet remain God, is not more inexplicable than that we should be made partakers of the divine nature and yet remain men." I bless God it is true.

Who was it that got up out of Joseph's new tomb, and met Mary that morning in the garden? She thought it was the gardener, but when He said "Mary," she said, "It is Jesus. That is His voice."

I am glad that death did not change the tone of His voice.

I am glad my mother's voice will be just the same when I meet her in heaven.

Then you remember, when He walked along the way to Emmaus with the two disciples and sat down in their little home, He put up His hands to ask the blessing. They must have seen the print of the nails in his hands then, for you remember they recognized Him and He disappeared!

They hastened back to Jerusalem to tell the disciples, and while they were telling the story, "Jesus Himself stood in the midst!"

Jesus Himself, who had been on the cross three days ago! Up there in their home and then in this upper room! They were frightened at first, but Jesus said, "Fear not, it is I myself; handle me and see, a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have."

The very same Jesus. They went out with him as far as the Mount of Olives, and while He is in the act of blessing them, He is taken up until a cloud enveloped Him out of their sight.

The very same Jesus, the feet that had trodden those hills in Judea and Galilee, the hands that broke the bread, the face over which the tears flowed as he wept over their city, up to the very throne of God! Stephen saw the heavens open and testified, "I see the Son of man, standing at the right hand of God."

It is the same Jesus, and He is coming back again! I don't want any other. I want to see the same Jesus.

An old friend used to tell of a woman on a flat boat on the Mississippi river who fell over board. A man jumped after her and managed to save her. The passengers thought they would take up a purse and present it to her. "Thank you very much," she said, "but I want to see the man who saved me."

That is the person I want to see. And some day He is going to come from the sky and change these bodies of our humiliation like unto His own glorious body. That state and condition is going to be more real than anything here.

Now, what I long for tonight is that in this conference some man or woman may definitely receive Jesus Christ as his or her Saviour, and look back upon this hour, as some of us can look back to other hours, when the great transaction took place and we were born of God.

It can be yours tonight. I wonder if somebody will say to this company of praying, believing people, "O that I knew where I could find Him!" You will find Him in Christ, if you tonight will let your will go, and say, "Yes," and open the door of your heart to Him.

THE BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY CHANGES LITERARY SUPERINTENDENT

Rev. T. H. Darlow is retiring in April from the service of the British and Foreign Bible Society. He will have the joy of knowing that his literary gifts of a rare quality have been given with rich profit to the society, which serves the best of books. Not only has he superintended the periodical literary work of the society, but he has edited, along with Dr. H. F. Moule, the Historical Catalogue of Printed Editions of the Holy Scriptures. This took twelve years to finish. It became at once a standard book of reference, worthy to be ranked with the greatest in this kind.

Rev. Edwin W. Smith has been chosen to succeed Mr. Darlow. He has been a missionary in Central Africa, a chaplain at the front, and an agent for the Bible society, in each of which offices he has approved himself to those who have had the means of knowing him.—British Weekly.

The Double Imperative of the Gospel

By Rev. Charles R. Scafe, Pastor, Central Presbyterian Church, Detroit, Mich.

I COME to you tonight with one of the very familiar passages of Scripture, and I suppose that is the reason it has been pressed upon my heart. I could not get away from it. There are other themes I should like to have used but this one seems to be before me always.

It comes under the head of the double imperative. It is found in the third chapter of John. It was the burden of my life when I went out from the Institute to begin preaching the gospel of the saving power of God. It was the need of the world, but I seemed to be unable to present it in such a way that the world would listen, attentively and sympathetically. It nearly always angered folks, and the more I said it the more I could see why it should anger them, and at the same time I could not change the message, for as I read in the third chapter, so well known to you, the climax of the declaration of the Son of God unto Nicodemus, I heard Him say, "Ye must be born again."

As I sought to solve all that meant, I discovered that if Nicodemus needed to be born again there was no one in the world who could claim that he was on a plane of greater religious perfection than he, and therefore could claim exemption from the declaration of the Son of God. No matter which way I turned that message it would ring out clear and true, and I knew that I had to be true to the declaration of Him who loved me and bought me, not with silver and gold, but with His own blood, and the very heart of His message was, "Ye must be born again."

The world resented it, and when I tried to explain why, because Jesus spoke of it, it did not remedy the difficulty. I said, "But here the Lord tells us the reason—that which is flesh is flesh, and that is the reason," but the more I would press that is the reason, the more resenting folks would come back and try to justify themselves, and speak of the great attainments of humanity, many of which I had to acknowledge. But I knew that after all they were really wrong, that on account of all flesh being sinful flesh, they must be born again.

I went to the West and preached it, and they told me it might be all right in the East, but they said when you come west you have to change your message.

I went back then to the East, and was asked by a good old Yankee woman why I came east? "Don't you know the wise men came from the East?"

I said, "Yes, but can you tell me the rest of the story?"

"No."

She was a sharp speaking, Yankee woman, and I said, "Very well, let me give you the rest of the story. The wise men came from the East, and went out to the West in order to perfect their knowledge, and then they came back east and told their brethren. I was born on the shores of Lake Champlain."

I went to Boston, and held a meeting there, and they seemed to resent this same message. Then I remembered something about Boston, and said,

"Can you tell me about the experiences of this city when the policemen went on strike for twenty-four hours?"

They were telling me many things about the city, historically. They glory in their attainments, but when you mention that thing they do not wish to talk about it. They want to turn their backs on that twenty-four hours. Homes were wrecked; lives were ruined; men, women and children were literally dragged in the dirt. But I said, "That which is flesh is flesh," and "ye must be born again."

I went back to Spokane, Wash., and spoke, and there was a spirit of resentment, but I said, "Can you tell me something about Armistice Day?" No, they did not want to talk about Armistice Day in Spokane.

I am almost afraid to speak now lest I am misunderstood, but I will not go into detail.

Armistice Day had come, and to show special honor unto the American Legion, they said, "A company of the Legion will look after the safety of the city of Spokane, and the policemen will take a twenty-four hour rest."

Now men of the Legion—I am not holding it up against the Legion, I am simply telling facts, that is all. Every boy from the church went out into the army and should be a member of that Legion, but at the same time, these are facts. Spokane blushes to this day when she thinks of the twenty-four hours when they gave the policemen a vacation, and put their safety in the hands of an unstarred company of men. "That which is flesh is flesh." There was no regard for property, or sanctity of life or person in the city of Spokane during that time.

I went down to Philadelphia, and preached there in the Fourth Church, and found a resentment again to this, and I said "Lord, what is the trouble?" There must be something the matter with my preaching because no matter which way I look I see the reasonableness of your demand, "Ye must be born again."

Finding Something New

Then I read that chapter over. I read it over and over. An elder in our church, just recently, as he was reading these chapters in our Bible study class, said, "Why I have found things in that third chapter of John that I had never seen before, and I thought I knew that chapter." So did I. I read it over and over and I saw another word. I saw the same word in another relationship. I heard the lips of Jesus saying to humanity, "Ye must be born again." I saw the result of my preaching on men and women, turning away from it as if it were making an unreasonable demand upon them. They felt as if in some way something was grasping them and pinning them down in some place that was not fit for a man or woman to stand in, and then I listened, and I heard Him say, "I must be lifted up."

Oh, men and women, there a flood of light came over that third chapter that I had never seen before! I knew the sinfulness of the flesh. No one had to tell me about it. I knew the demands of the flesh; no one had to instruct me, but I did not know the great thing He was trying to tell until it was revealed by divine revelation. "I must be lifted up."

I went back to the world and began to preach from the standpoint of the double imperative, and there was more power in the message, and there was a heart appeal that humanity could not resist. I saw all of the harshness going away, and I saw a wonderful thing; Jesus the Son of God, putting Himself under the same restrictions that He places me under. I saw that He had put something on Himself in the same way with the same language that He put something else on me. That in a way linked us up with Him in the same class, in an experience that we might possibly seek to draw back from so far as our own part was concerned, but as I recognized that great union of persons in the work, I gloried to think of His statement, "Ye must be born again."

It came to me to be the most tender of all of His utterances, for He said to me as it were, "Do you not know in order to make that possible, I must be lifted up?"

Lord, if I would enter into that glorious presence I must be born again. If thou wouldst have the satisfaction of thy heart, not willing that any should perish but all should come to repentance, thou must be lifted up!

He has said it, and I knew it to be true. I knew it was true. Oh, men and women, when I discovered that great truth, and said to myself, "Is it possible that He has descended to that place where He is willing to say even of His own glorious self, 'I must' as well as 'you must'?"

Then I thought a little further, and said, "There is something more to this than that which I have discovered." It seemed its meaning was just beginning to open up. What does it mean to me to be born again? It means the change of the old man into the new. Peter puts it, "Until we become partakers." So may we become partakers of the divine nature.

And then if I must be born again it would bring to me liberation from the nature of Adam and of C. R. Scafe, and that was what I wanted to get rid of. I had fought against it but failed, and tried it again, but here I said, "Well now, there is nothing very great then in His demand upon me, but a humbling of myself to make it possible for me to become a child of God, an heir of God and a joint heir with Jesus Christ." We are to be linked with Him in the work of His kingdom, and then we are to be with Him and to be like Him.

Would I draw back then even from the necessity of the new birth? It is that which we receive that indicates to us whether the price was too much or not. Is it not so? If I pay ten dollars for something and it be worth the ten dollars, I do not grumble about the price. I say I have received my money's worth. But this is so much above that which human illustration can bring to us, for all I have to do is to come acknowledging the fact that I need a change of nature for I am flesh, and then I may find a way into a new nature and relationship.

I said, "It certainly is glorious," but I turned away at once and I said, "But what does it mean to my Lord when He says, 'I must be lifted up'?"

I had you sing that song tonight, "Nor Silver, Nor Gold," because it seemed to give the very thing that I am trying to bring out. "What would it mean to you Lord, in your part of the contract?" And, as I turned to the Word of God I found that He would say unto me, "Well, my part of the contract means that I had to leave the Father's house. My part of the contract means that I was to come into a world of sin and be a partaker of a body of flesh and blood and bones. My part of the contract means that I would be known among men as a man of sorrows and acquainted with griefs. It meant that the world would say, 'His face was more marred than the face of any man.' My part of the contract would mean that they would spit upon me, they would jeer in my face and nail me to the cross, and with your enemy the conflict would wage until my soul should be made an offering for your sin and I should make my grave with the wicked souls, with the rich who were wicked too, and even descend into the place of the dead."

Oh, friend, could I just get you to see all that which came to me! Could I just get you to see that which put the power into this heart of the message of God to me as I went out into the world! I love to go now and say unto them, "Ye must be born again," because I would say to the sinner, "Come now and listen. Jesus links Himself with you in the great plan of redemption."

And as I spoke on that subject back yonder as I did in that church in Philadelphia, there were souls that night that yielded to God who said twenty-eight years ago, "We turned away, for the message seemed harsh." It broke their hearts. Does it work? Oh, how much it will do—the lifting up of Jesus of Nazareth!

An Indian Witness

I stood on the platform up among the pines of the mountains of Colorado. Around us were sitting the Indians. Nine tribes of them were represented. We had slept in the tepee and in the tent. They were gathered about us now ready for the evening meeting. On the platform there was an Indian, not very large, he was in fact undersized, but an active little man, well along in years. We asked him for a testimony and he gave it to us. Briefly it was this:

"I was brought up a warrior from my childhood. When the great rebellion came I went with Custer as chief of his scouts. Up yonder in Montana one day, Custer said to me, 'Monteith, I don't need you any more; you go back home.' I said, 'All right, General, I go back home.' I went back home; next day General Custer he's killed."

It was rather a nice way to put it. He had led General Custer all the way up. Now he told him to go back home. Next day he was killed.

I believe if Custer had kept that man and his scouts, the enemy never could have gotten into his camp.

In his tepee had hung nine human scalps. He wanted to be the big chief of his tribe. It was the goal that he had set his heart on; just to be a big chief. So these nine human scalps; they were all enemies taken in fair battle and fair Indian fight according to their methods of fight.

He said, "You ask me why? I tell you. I was trained that way. I never heard of Jesus until I was forty-two years old."

I shall never forget the flare of his black eyes. There were a number of whites in the audience. He pointed his finger from one to the other, and there came a positive ring in his voice, as he said, "I never heard of Jesus until I was forty-two years old, but when I heard I believed."

Oh, what a dagger! The wild man of the woods had heard once; he believed. Before me were many who had heard many times and did not believe.

And when he believed, the human scalps were laid away, his long hair was cut off; his blanket was laid away, and he stood there an ordained Presbyterian minister.

Does it work? In closing I want to make this statement. I have been in union work longer than most anybody else I know. Most folks who have never been in union work know how to solve the problem right away. Some of us who have been in, however, for a long time know better. In that work there are twenty denominations in one church, and preaching in three different languages, and today it was all brought back to me again, and as I thought of that old Indian, I turned to the Book and I read in the Word of God of certain scenes in heaven, and it said, "The four and twenty elders cast all their crowns at the feet of the Son of God." And I said, "Well, thank God, here is an old Indian who will cast his crown down there one day."

Ah, friends, it is by the great fact of which I have just spoken, "I must be lifted up." "Ye must be born again." What fellowship in that great work of salvation! I am the redeemed; God is the Redeemer; I the gainer of everything; God for the time being seemingly the loser.

And I would say to you students of the Moody Bible Institute go out and cry to the world with all the confidence of ministers of the Son of God, "Ye must be born again," and when you do say it, say it with a joyful ring in your voice, and send the echo of the heart to His own words, "I must be lifted up."

SOME POSERS FOR THE EVOLUTIONIST

If the history of mankind is upward evolution, why should the Chinese have known of gunpowder and the mariners' compass before the Christian era and have lost them again? Why should we see today only the pitiful traces of the splendors of the Mogul empire in the palaces and tombs of India? Why should the Hindu race have gone backwards for 400 years? Why should the stupendous ruins of the 12th to the 14th centuries of Angkor in Cambodia and of Borobodaer in Java be pointed to today with amazement? Why should the very art of manufacture of the enamelled tiles of the empress' summer palace in Peking and the method of working the color into the walls of the Alhambra at Granada be lost arts which perished with the ancient Moors? Why should the Egyptians be ignorant of the arts of astronomy and mathematics which enabled them to erect the great Pyramid of Cheops upon the principle of squaring the circle and at the point where it should absorb its own shadow at noontime at the vernal equinox? By what methods in the absence of hydraulic machinery were the gigantic stones lifted into their places at Karnak and Palmyra? What caused the loss of the artistic knowledge which produced some of the marvelous gold and feather work of the Aztecs and lost the very knowledge of the location of the wonderful ruined cities of Central America?

Surely anyone who is a seeker after truth must recognize that the progress of mankind is really only in certain directions interlaced with retrogression and decadence in others.—James Bowron in The New Age.

The Character and Experiences of the Redeemed

By Rev. W. S. Gottshall, Bluffton, O.

I HAVE been at the Moody Bible Institute many a time. I have come in here quietly; I like this atmosphere; I enjoy the association and the fellowship.

I need not say more about it, yet I should like to say what a benediction has come to me through the life of the founder of this Institute. As a young preacher, although I never had the privilege of hearing him, I devoured his printed sermons, and I shall never forget that morning when I took up a paper, and in a heavy headline it said that D. L. Moody had died. I sat down and wiped the tears from my eyes, and those beautiful words he said when he was about to pass over, for he said he never would die, and that is true—"Life is receding and heaven is opening"—I have often used in my addresses.

Then this Institute has helped me. When I was taking charge of a mission in Pennsylvania, a small church of just a few members, we had built a church and paid all the money we could spare and still had fifteen hundred dollars debt. One time a young man from the Institute came, and I talked the matter over with him, and I said, "When you go back to the Institute, ask the students to pray that we may pay our debt." I set a special hour when they were praying at the Institute, and we were praying in that mission, and I can say to the glory of God that it was only a short time when the debt was paid and we had money in the treasury. You helped us to pray.

My theme this morning, as announced by Dr. Gray, is a great one, "The Character and the Experiences of the Redeemed."

I

1. The basis for it is the children of Israel and their redemption, and the first thing that impresses me is this—that redemption is all of God. What could the children of Israel do to redeem themselves? Absolutely helpless; they were entirely under the power and domination of Satan. And what can one do to redeem himself? People are trying it nowadays; they have all kinds of schemes to help themselves out of the difficulty, but redemption and salvation is all of God. He is the Ransomer and the Ransom. He paid the price, and paid it to Himself, for God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself.

2. And then another thing that is very humbling is the fact that the children of Israel were redeemed, and everybody else is redeemed not because of what they were, or are, but because of what God is. Before He redeemed Israel from Egypt He revealed Himself in a way that He had never revealed Himself before. He said to Moses, "Unto Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob I have revealed myself as God Almighty, but by my name Jehovah (Saviour) have I never been known unto them." So the first impression Moses must have had was that God was going to redeem Israel, not because of what Israel was, but because of what He is. Israel surely was not lovable, but God was love. You and I were not lovable, but God is love, and that is why He redeemed us.

3. Then again we see that redemption is by blood, the blood of the Lamb. All the first born of Egypt were under the sentence of death, and it made no difference whether they were Egyptians or Israelites, the first born of Israel were just as subject to being killed on that fatal night as any of the first born of the Egyptians, but God told the children of Israel how to escape, and instituted the Passover. "Kill the lamb, and sprinkle the blood on the door posts and lintel, and wherever I see the blood, there I will pass over."

That word "pass-over" means "brood over." "When I see the blood the judgment will pass over, but I, God, will stay, like a hen that is brooding over her chickens when the storm is coming, that she may protect them from the storm." So the Lord would stay wherever the blood was.

Jesus Christ is your Passover, and mine. The sentence of death that should have struck you and me struck Him, and the judgment now passes over, but God stays, God is with us.

4. We are redeemed from the guilt of sin by the blood, but it means the applied blood. It does not make any difference whether they just kill the lamb; they must apply the blood to the door post and the lintel, for if the blood is not there, they will not escape; and if the blood of Jesus Christ is not applied to your heart and mine, we will not escape. Jesus died on the cross to redeem everybody, but unless by faith it is applied to the hearts it will after all, not save us.

5. And then we are saved by God from the power of sin. Just as God took His people through the Red Sea, closing the sea behind them, so the Holy Spirit took you and me with Christ through death over on the other side, through the process of the new birth. It is a miracle, and accomplished only by the power of the Holy Spirit.

That was the time that Israel really began to live, because the Word says, "This is your birthday," "This is the beginning of months for you." God took the seventh month and made it the first month. Before that they really did not live.

My friends, is it not true that before souls are born again they do not really live? They may exist, but they do not live, and they will have no credit for anything they do. Thousands of people are going to be disappointed because they think they are doing a great deal of good. They are very philanthropic; they believe that every cup of cold water that is ministered to a needy person will be rewarded; but they will be fooled, because it must be done in the name of Christ, and it will never be done in the name of Christ until you are in Christ. You only begin to live when you get into Christ, and then only can you perform any living works; before they are all dead works.

6. Then I notice that when God redeems, he redeems from and to. Not only from something, but to something. He redeemed Israel from Egypt, a type of the world, and from Pharaoh, a type of Satan, into the promised land—not into the wilderness. God never wanted the children of Israel to perish in the wilderness. He did not redeem them for that purpose. They must die for their unbelief, but God redeemed His people for the promised land.

The promised land is a type of the victorious Christian life. God did not redeem you to be a miserable or a weak Christian, but that we might enjoy the fulness of the Christian life.

II

Well, now, what is the particular character of such a people?

1. They are to be first of all, a holy people. You know before the children of Israel were taken out of Egypt God, through Moses, told them that they should prepare for the feast of unleavened bread, but they never ate that feast in Egypt. They ate it after they came out of Egypt.

Leaven is a type of evil. The leaven was omitted from the meal offering because the meal offering is typical of Christ's lovely life, and that is a sinless life, absolutely sinless.

So God said they should get ready for the feast of unleavened bread, a memorial of their deliverance from Egypt, just as the Passover was a memorial of the escape from death of the first born. The children of Israel never ate the feast in Egypt.

2. The second thing that is characteristic of redeemed people is that they are a separated people. Moses' demand that Israel go three days' journey into the wilderness to sacrifice, is a clear indication that they must be separated from Egypt. Pharaoh proposed four compromises. "Why not worship your God right here in Egypt? What is the use in going out?" But Moses said, "We cannot do that. It would be an abomination to you. The minute Israel begins to kill the cattle and offer sacrifices, your people will stop us. We must get out of this country to worship our God."

"If you must go out, do not go far." "No," Moses says, "we cannot do that. We must go so far that there will be no desire to come back."

"If you are to go out, leave your wives and children here." But Moses does not accept that.

Then the last proposition, "If you do go, let your wives and children go, but leave your property here, your cattle, your herds." And Moses said, "I will have no compromise; not a hoof shall be left behind; we must have them to sacrifice unto God."

My dear friends, I wish we could appreciate this. God said to Israel, "Do not do after the people of Egypt that you have left behind; neither shall you do according to the Canaanites where you are going," and it is exactly so in the New Testament. That is God's plan for the church, because as God has a people in the old dispensation that are to be a holy and a separated people, so God in any single dispensation has a holy and a separated people.

In the sixth chapter of 2 Corinthians he puts the two contrasts over against each other—righteousness and unrighteousness, light and darkness, believers and unbelievers. There is the temple of Belial and the temple of God. How can these have any fellowship and communion with each other? Wherefore, "Come ye out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, says the Lord Almighty."

God is in the separating business. He is trying to separate the sinner from His saints, the righteous from the unrighteous, the unbeliever from the believer. But the Devil is in the federating business. He tries to get everything together that he possibly can.

3. Again these redeemed people are a people for His possession. He says, "Every first born belongs to me." Why? Because in Egypt every first born had been redeemed by the blood of the lamb, and whatever God redeems He claims, and it belongs to Him. "Ye are not your own," says Paul to the Corinthians. "Ye are bought with a price; therefore serve the Lord with your bodies and with your spirits which are his."

We do not belong to ourselves. Jesus Christ paid the price and we belong to Him. In the sixth chapter of Romans it says, "We are servants of the living God." Now we cannot serve God and Satan. God says repeatedly, "They are mine."

III

And now what are some of the experiences of these redeemed people?

1. The first thing that impresses me is the joy. They were singing. When they had crossed the Red Sea and saw their enemies perish in the sea they were singing a song of redemption, a song of joy, a song of gladness. They never sang in the wilderness, but when they came to the end of the journey they sang again.

How was it when you were saved? I will never forget the day when I was conscious that I had my sins forgiven. That was the day when the safety valve was opened and I could not contain myself any more. It was a day of joy. The Christian life is a life of joy and rejoicing.

2. Then they had a light in that trackless forest. The Shekinah glory, which is the dwelling place of Almighty God is over them by day and shelters them from the heat of the burning sun. It is a pillar of fire by night and lights up that great camp of twelve miles in diameter. By day and by night they have the presence of God. In the day of prosperity as well as in the night of adversity we have His presence. That cloud was leading them. When the cloud lifted they pulled stakes and moved on, and whenever it rested they pitched their tents and put the Tabernacle right under the cloud.

God came down to us on that wonderful day of Pentecost and is today leading us. The blessed Holy Spirit, one with the Father and the Son, He is our Guide.

3. And then God made provision for them. There was nothing in the desert. Pretty soon they got thirsty and could find no water. And when they did find water it was very bitter. That is the place where so many young Christians fall; they cannot stand these tests that come to us in the Christian life. Israel began to murmur and wonder why God had brought them out of Egypt. But God showed them a tree. They did not discover the tree, it was revealed unto them. They put the tree into the water and it was sweet, and you all know what that means. There is a tree that has so much to do with your comfort and sorrow. If we put the cross into our bitter experiences they will become sweet.

They went on and water was again absent, and God said to Moses, "Take thy rod."

You know there were two rods, the rod of Moses which was the rod of judgment, and the rod of Aaron, the rod of Jehovah. God said to Moses—"Take thy rod and strike the rock," and the water flowed out of the rock. It is the rock of judgment, and in 1 Corinthians it is explained that that rock is Christ. The judgment struck him and water flowed from that rock.

Now that water of course is a type of the Spirit. After Calvary comes Pentecost, but there is never a Pentecost before Calvary. There can be no water until the rock is smitten and that rock is Christ. And they drank of that water.

But that is not all they needed. They needed food. There was nothing to eat in this wilderness. God was teaching His people to depend on Him. The wilderness journey is a very barren place for Christians. Israel began to murmur against God again; and they looked back to Egypt and longed for its flesh pots and for its garlic.

It is very deplorable today to see how many Christians have such a longing for the flesh pots of Egypt. They left their hearts back there.

But God sent them manna from the skies—a form of salvation. That word manna means "manhu" or, "What is it?"

John explains it in the sixth chapter of his Gospel. Jesus said, "Your fathers have eaten manna in the wilderness, the bread that came down from heaven, and have died, but I am the living bread, the bread that gives life."

Christ is the life-giving and the life-sustaining bread. Tell me, dear friends, what is it that feeds your soul, that gives you such a satisfying portion that you have no more longing and desire for the flesh pots of Egypt? Can you explain it? It is "manhu." It is a wonderful mystery and always will be.

IV

I would like to speak a little of the conflicts of Israel, because they are important in the conflicts of the Christian. A holy people will never be without conflict.

All our enemies are generally classed under three heads—the flesh, the world, and the Devil. I should like to change the order and say that the Devil comes first, because he is always on the scene, and he is really the beginning factor in all our conflict.

Now there are several enemies of Israel that are typical of our conflicts as Christians.

First, those who represent the flesh, the Amalekites and the Edomites, both descendants of Esau, who was at enmity with Jacob, and in his hatred tried to kill him. They represent that type of the flesh which is at enmity with everything that is good.

The Amalekites attacked Israel in the desert from behind, and you remember how Moses was on the mountain top—a type of Christ at the throne of grace pleading in our behalf. It was not down in the valley that the battle was fought, it was fought up in the mountain where Moses was praying and Aaron was holding up his hands. And it is not down here that our battle is fought, but up there where Jesus Christ is at the throne of grace pleading for us while the Holy Spirit is fighting in us. If the battle is won, God wins, and to Him be the glory.

"WE KNOW"

We know many things from the precious Word. We know that we have passed from death unto life; we know that whereas we were blind, now we see; we know that Jesus ever liveth to make intercession for us; we know that all things work together for good; we know whom we have believed, and are persuaded that He is able to keep that which we have committed unto Him: we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is; we know that when our earthly house of this tabernacle is dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. God be praised for the absolute certainties of the religion of Jesus Christ! "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen." And yet we know not, as we shall know, the things which God has prepared for those that love Him.

The Satisfying Life

By Rev. Donald McTavish, D. Sc., Toronto, Ont.

TONIGHT I wish to speak on "The Satisfying Life." The text to which I will particularly refer is in John 4:13, 14:

> "Jesus answered and said unto her, Every one that drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing up into eternal life."

In that much read book, If Winter Comes, the author makes his hero say something like this, "One knows what it is, what it looks like with ants. They are plugging about like mad, not knowing one another, nor caring, because they all seem to be looking for something. I wonder . . . I wonder—are we? Is that the trouble? All looking for something . . . You can see it in half of the faces you see. Some wanting, and knowing that they are wanting something. Others wanting something, but just putting up with it, just content to be dissatisfied. You can see it. Yes, you can. Looking for what? Love? But lots have love. Happiness? But are not lots happy? But are they?

"It goes deeper than that. It is some universal thing that is wanting. I think it is something that religion alone can give. But it does not give it to them. Light, some new light to give every one certainty in religion; in belief? Light?"

And here's another quotation I want to read. "A coal merchant, in northwestern New York, said to a man the other day, 'When we were poor we looked forward to the time when we would have our own home. We got that. Then we wanted a summer home and we got that. Then we needed a southern winter establishment, and we got that also. And then a lodge in the woods of Maine. We have them all now, and they are shut up most of the year while my wife and daughters are hurrying feverishly through Europe looking for something. I sit at home and dig for more money to get something else.'"

I think if I talked for an hour I could not picture more perfectly the condition of thousands of people in this very city than those quotations—looking for something. They can never be satisfied with some thing and they do not know it. It is some One they need, and that One is Christ. There is an unsatisfied life, and in this fourth chapter of John you have a picture of one of that great multitude of the unsatisfied in this Samaritan woman. The story is familiar, and I am not going to dwell particularly on the details of it, but here you have a remedy for the unsatisfied life. What is the source of it? Is it available?

Now Jesus Christ, Himself, is the water of life. "The water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into eternal life."

Rev. Donald McTavish, D. Sc.

Water! You and I do not know the value of it. You and I have never been thirsty unless there are some here who have lived in tropical countries. You need to travel for hours over the burning sand or blistering rocks with a tropical sun over your head and ten thousand pores of your body crying out for water, to come at last to a poor pool, to try there to slake that awful burning thirst.

That is what thirst is. And yet, my dear friends, there is scarcely a comparison between that condition of the body and the condition of thousands in this world tonight with a thirst of the soul.

I think there is nothing more pathetic than to see people hurrying with their pitchers to this well and that, seeking for water, only to be disappointed. Go out on any street tonight and see them hurrying somewhere to get something that will satisfy that craving of the soul. It will never be satisfied.

If there was ever a man that had the opportunity of gratifying himself with things it was Lord Byron, and you are familiar with what he says at the end.

> "My days are in the yellow leaf,
> The flower, the fruit, the leaf are gone;
> The worm, the canker and the grave,
> Are mine alone."

And there were few men in the nineteenth century in England that had greater opportunities of gratifying his desires than Mr. Wilford Blunt. He traveled all over the world. He particularly explored Syria, Arabia, Persia and Mesopotamia. He spoke Arabic like a native. He had a great stud of Arab horses, and took great pleasure in them; but at the end of his life, according to his diary, when he was dying in sad disappointment, this is what he said:

"A black melancholy is on me caused by my sense of failure everywhere in life. My poetry; my eastern politics; my Arab horses, were all strings to my bow and they have one after another snapped, and today looking through my memoirs I perceive how slackly they are written and how unworthy they are, yet the diaries are full of things that are too important to destroy them and too unimportant to preserve them, and they overwhelm me with despair."

There you have it. "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again."

Now Jesus Christ is the water of life and He satisfies the soul's thirst in a three fold way.

What Christ Satisfies

1. He satisfies the soul's thirst for Love. This Samaritan woman was like a vine torn, or fallen, from its trellis, where it should be growing up into the sunlight and bearing its luscious fruit. It is crawling on the ground, and its tendrils have laid hold on every noxious weed and every decaying and putrid thing. That is the picture you have here. Is it possible to restore a life like that?

Yes. But it costs a great deal. "Being in an agony He sweat as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground." And on the cross of shame he cried out, "I thirst," just that you and I might have the thirst of our souls forever quenched. And out of the darkness that fell upon that awful scene he cried out, "My God! My God! Why hast thou forsaken me?" Just that He might be able to come to you and me, and say, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee," and that we could sing, even if it should be in our dying hour.

> "Yea, though I walk through death's dark vale,
> Yet will I fear no ill,
> For Thou art with me, and Thy rod
> And staff me comfort still."

Yes, it cost a good deal. Paul sought to express that and gathered it up into one brief sentence, when he said, "He loved me and gave himself up for me." That was the wonder of wonders to the apostle Paul.

Now the heart of man was made to love, just as the eye is made for light, and the ear for sound. And the heart can never be satisfied until it finds the true object of love, you can never satisfy the human heart with some thing.

You see a child playing with a doll who seems to be perfectly happy, perfectly satisfied. Is it? By and by the sun strikes upon the head of the child and it begins to throb with pain. What happens? The doll is laid aside and the question then is, "Where is mother?"

You cannot satisfy the soul with things. It is a person the soul craves for, and there is only one that can fully satisfy, and that One is the Lord Jesus Christ.

"The water that I shall give him," "he shall never thirst." Even this Samaritan woman had a dim idea of that. "I know that when Messiah cometh he will show us all things." And when the sacrificial blood of Christ touches the soul the sin and the pollution passes away, and we become new creatures in Christ Jesus, and we can sing—

"I came to Jesus as I was,
Weary and worn and sad,
I found in Him a resting place,
And He has made me glad."

How many people here tonight could say "amen" to that?

2. In the next place, He satisfies the soul's thirst for Life. Not simply life to be copied; not some kind of arrangement by which the hand is enabled to copy the headline, and only makes at best a miserable scrawl.

No. Idealism is a defective gospel. That is not it. It is not simply an example or a model that we want, but it is the power to copy it.

How many of us have to confess—"The good that I would do that I do not; but the evil I would not do that I do?

"Oh, that a man would rise in me, that the man I am would cease to be."

It is not simply a copy we want, a model, but we want the power to copy it—and whence does it come?

It comes through the Christ who died for us, and who is willing to dwell in us, and to be to us everything we need. "The water that I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing up into eternal life."

When we get Christ in us we are independent of circumstances, just the things round about us, that is what the word means—circumstances.

There are many lives that are just like float wood. They are at the mercy of circumstances. They float away in every direction in which the wind blows. But with Christ within us we are independent of circumstances. It does not matter what they are.

Over in the midst of the English Channel a strong fortress has been built on the rocks. Ceaselessly the waves of the Atlantic are beating up against those walls, and you ask how does the garrison live inside? They cannot drink that salty, brackish water. How do they live?

This is the way. They sunk a well down below the ocean until they touched the springs of fresh water, and so they are independent of circumstances. They have water within the fortification for themselves, and it is so with the believer in whom Jesus Christ is enthroned.

You remember that beautiful, wonderful statement of the prophet Habakkuk, "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labour of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stall."

If He take away everything what will you do then? "I will rejoice in the Lord, and I will joy in the God of my salvation." Independent of circumstances. That is what Christ does for us. Giving us an age-abiding life. "The water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into eternal life."

3. He satisfies the soul's thirst for Light. Not upon mere abstract questions of freedom and free will, and fate and testing, but the pressing problems of the human soul; the problems of sin and salvation, He gives light upon that.

Sin is moral darkness. The two persons of whom the sinner is most ignorant are himself and God. He neither knows himself nor God, because he is in moral darkness. The darkness hath blinded his eyes, and the sad thing today is that some are only indifferent to it. They are content to be in that condition and if they are, Christ has no attraction for them.

Now Jesus Christ gave twofold light to this woman. First, He let her see herself, and then He let her see Himself. He met her need for light.

He said to her, "Go and call your husband." Christ cannot overlook sin. He is the true physician, the true surgeon. The surgeon does not go into the hospital to a patient with a dangerous tumor, and cover it over with a pink plaster and sprinkle rose water on it. If he is faithful he takes his sharpest lancet and cuts it out.

Jesus Christ can pardon any sin of any penitent sinner no matter how deep the dye is, but he cannot overlook any sin. He cannot make light of any sin. "Go call thy husband and come hither."

The woman had said, "Give me this water that I thirst not, neither come all the way hither to draw." Yes, there are people like that, quite willing to make a convenience of religion. If religion will give me a better place in society, help me to a better position, add to my store of pleasures, then I will patronize it, but if not, I will renounce it. "Give me this water that I thirst not, neither come all the way hither to draw."

Jesus said to her, "Go and call thy husband." She said, "I have no husband." "Well said, 'I have no husband,' for thou hast had five husbands, and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband. Saidst thou truly."

What is her answer? "Sir, I perceive—" Ah, do you? "I perceive—," The light is striking into her soul. She sees things now she never saw before. "I perceive that thou art a prophet. You seem to understand me. You seem to know more about me even than to this moment I have known about myself."

But what did she do? You know when a sudden blaze of light comes upon you, you put up your hands to shield your eyes because it hurts. So when Jesus Christ let the light flash into her dark soul it hurt, and she put up what we have learned to call during the war, a camouflage. She wanted to get Jesus turned aside from the personal appeal to the discussion of the general religious question.

Oh, yes, there are thousands ready to discuss general religious questions, but they want to keep away from the personal appeal.

But Jesus Christ would not be turned aside. He tore aside her camouflage and gathered up the truth in that great and pregnant sentence, "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." He left that woman with her soul black with sin standing in the presence of the holy God.

What did she do? She went away we are told, afterwards, and she told her folk in the city, "Come, see a man that told me all things that ever I did."

As a matter of fact Christ did not tell her all things. He could not have done it. It would have taken hours and hours to do that, but that was the way it appeared to her. Her whole past life, blotted with sin was there before her eyes like an open book. "Come and see a man that told me all things that ever I did."

He showed her herself, and then He showed her Himself. To see sin without a Saviour is despairing, and so He says to her, "The water that I shall give him—the water that I shall give him," the priceless satisfying gift. As I have intimated, what was that gift but Christ Himself. In John 6:35, Jesus says, "He that believeth on me shall never thirst."

She expressed the hope that Messiah would come sometime, and show her everything. What was His answer? "I that speak unto thee am he."

That was a solemn moment. There was this woman with her sin exposed, face to face, with the only one who can put it away. That was a solemn moment, because she can do one of two things that men and women are doing all the time. She can yield her life to Christ, or she can rise up and turn her back upon Him and go away.

That is what people are doing now. Perhaps there may be in this audience, those who when the meeting is over will pick up hat and coat and walk out and turn their back upon that very same Christ, as they have often done before, and go away.

You are free to do it. I cannot corner you, and Christ will not if you are determined to do it, but He longs to have you. He longs to give you the very thing that you need!

How He Satisfies

A word now about the availability of it. "I that speak unto thee am he." "The water that I shall give him."

What is to be done with that water if the thirst is to be quenched? Why it is to be drunk, of course. That is a commonplace thing to say but it is important. It is not to be discussed or to be analyzed; that is not the purpose of water. It is to be drunk.

But yet how many are doing that with Christ? Oh, they admire Him all right, they analyze Him, and they discuss Him. They do everything but receive Him.

John says here in this first chapter—"To as many as received him to them gave he the right to become the children of God; even to them that believe on his name." You see He showed her herself that He might bring her to Himself. That was His purpose. She was thinking of a distant Messiah. She was standing in His very presence. She is startled to find herself face to face with Him. What should she do with Him?

You know what she did. What have you done with Him? What will you do with Him tonight? Is yours the unsatisfied heart? Say to yourself, "Am I busy day by day, doing this thing and that thing, but am I satisfied? Do I drink, and drink again, and still thirst? Has the thirst of my soul ever been quenched?"

That is the question to ask. "How can I be satisfied? Where can I find Him?" Where better than what He says here, "I that speak unto thee am he."

"Speak to Him for He hears,
Spirit with spirit may meet,
Closer is He than breathing,
Nearer than hands and feet."

He says, "Behold I stand at the door and knock. If any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come unto him and sup with him and he with me." I do not know how the Lord Himself could have made it plainer or simpler than that.

A little girl who heard this statement about Christ coming into her heart, said, "Is that all? Will He come in if I ask?" She was told He would, and she ran away into her room and got down on her knees by her little bed, and said, "Please, Lord Jesus come into my heart." Then she jumped up, and said, "Now He's in."

That is it. If I talked for a week I could not make the thing plainer than that little child. He is here, waiting to be received in all His fulness.

I remember a devoted man of God, Wesley Bailey, telling a story in my church, at Toronto, years ago. He is the founder of the mission to lepers in India and Asia. He said many of the lepers were glad to receive Christ. He brings light into their lives. He is their only hope and comfort. There they are dying by piecemeal.

One evening he was having communion with them. They stand up in a row in front of the communion rail, and a piece of bread is put in the hand of each, and then they are given the cup.

They were standing there one evening, one of them terribly disfigured; his eyes eaten out with the disease; his toes gone from his feet so that he could barely stand; his fingers eaten off; the palms of his hands had lost all sense of feeling; but there he was with Christ in his heart. The missionary put the piece of bread in his hand as he did the rest, but when he spoke the word of reception, all received the bread except this man. He was still holding out his hand, for he could not feel that the bread was in it. The sense of feeling was gone. He was waiting to receive what was in his hand, until a brother leper seeing the situation, said to him, "Take it brother; it is in your hand."

That is it. You do not need to go out of this auditorium tonight to receive Jesus. He is here. I think if He was ever in any place He must be in these meetings where there is such a sense of His presence. Oh, let no one tonight go away without Christ.

A Woman's Testimony to Bible Teaching

By Miss Grace Saxe

AS I look back over the way which the Lord has led me, I feel like crying out with Jacob, "I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the truth which thou hast shewed unto thy servant." I believe the more we get acquainted with God, the more that grows upon every one of us.

Only a few times had I the privilege of hearing Mr. Moody preach, and only once of shaking hands with that great man, but through eternity, I will thank God that He put it into his heart to establish this Institute because the greatest of all the benefits and mercies I have received came either directly or indirectly through this blessed place.

Years ago when I was a careless business girl in St. Louis it was a Moody Bible Institute student who induced me to go to the meeting where I heard for the first time the message which made me consider the lost condition of my soul, and led later to my conversion. And a few months afterward when I was a struggling young convert, another student told me of the Institute where young men and women might get a knowledge of the Word of God. Then, when I came here it was the Institute teachers and lecturers who opened this wonderful Word to me and gave me a love for it, and showed me how to tell it to others. Moreover when I had finished the two years' course, it was still another student who opened the way for me to enter public Christian work, and kept me in that work for a few years almost against my will.

I may say further, that during these years of teaching the Bible, when the battle has been raging and the winds of doctrine have swept the strongest off their feet, I have turned back in thought to the Moody Bible Institute, standing here as firm as the rock of Gibraltar for the faith once for all delivered to the saints, and have gotten new courage to go on.

Miss Grace Saxe

So I say that throughout eternity I will have cause to thank God for having put it into the heart of D. L. Moody to establish the Moody Bible Institute.

Early Experiences in the Institute

I have been asked to say something regarding the work in which I have been engaged. The fact that God has been able to do any work through me ought to be sufficient encouragement to any one who has entered this school for training, because of all the unpromising material, I was about as much so as you can imagine.

I had only been a Christian a few months when I came here. I had never been associated with Christian people much, so I was ignorant of spiritual things, and of Christian conversation, or ways, or thoughts, or feelings. I was wayward, willful, conceited, self-opinionated, and it was very unpromising material indeed that I presented to the Institute.

I was so ignorant of the Bible I hardly knew there was an Old and New Testament. I was so ignorant that I expected when I entered to only remain three months because I thought that by that time I would know the Bible from cover to cover. When Dr. W. W. White, in the first lecture I heard, in the Major Prophets, spoke of the Assyrian situation, or the Babylonian menace, or the ten lost tribes I was all at sea. I had never heard of the Assyrian situation and did not know there were ten tribes, to say nothing of knowing that they were lost.

And then Dr. Gray came along, and said the way to begin Bible study was to begin at the beginning, and read straight through, and ask the Holy Spirit to teach you what it meant, and continue to read it over and over until you did understand it.

That seemed sensible, and from that day to this I have urged upon all whom I have advised about Bible study, that however else they may study the Bible, it is absolutely necessary to have an intelligent idea of it as a whole.

The first Christian work I attempted to do in this Institute was not successful. In those days the women students got what was called street visitation work. We were given a certain street which was our parish, the idea being to get acquainted with the people and win to Christ those who were not Christians. Wells Street below Chicago Avenue was my territory.

I was a business woman, and I always wanted to do things in the quickest way possible. So with a great deal of zeal but no knowledge, I started out and rang the first door bell. When the woman appeared, I asked if I might come in and read the Bible and pray, and I found myself on the outside with the door shut.

I thought I had done my part, and I went to the next door with the same message and the same result, and also several other doors. At least I was getting over the ground, and I had no idea that it would last more than that day.

But at last I came to a house where the occupant said she would be very glad to have me come in. And then came the thought, "What shall I read?"

I opened the book at random and it happened to be in Chronicles. I sensed it that this was not exactly the message appropriate to the occasion, but I thought any other part might be just as bad and I stumbled on. The lady herself led in prayer. I think she took pity on me.

I went straight back and told Miss Strong, who was superintendent then, that I believed successful street visitors were born and not made, and I was sure I could not remain.

But I stumbled along in that way, and after several experiences which I will not tell you, I did really become discouraged, and did not believe I could ever do any Christian work. I would try to finish the course and have the satisfaction of knowing the Bible for myself, but as for doing any Christian work, I had failed so repeatedly, I resolved that I would not try it.

But when I had finished the two years, Charles Alexander came from Waterloo, Iowa, and said several high school girls had just been converted and they wanted some woman to come out and teach them to study the Bible. He had an idea that when people had been converted, they should be induced to study the Bible, and so I was invited to go.

I flatly refused. Never would I attempt anything like that. After Miss Strong had urged me, and Mr. Alexander urged me, and I had refused repeatedly, Dr. Torrey met me in the corridor—I suppose Mr. Alexander told Dr. Torrey I had refused, and he, Torrey, said in his quick short way: "Miss Saxe, there must be something radically wrong with your Christian life. You have been here two years; you have had all the instruction at the Institute, and now when we consider you should try to do this work, you will not even make an attempt to do it!"

Surrendered at Last

That sent me to my room and to my knees, and there I saw Jesus Christ in a new way. It was that day at the end of my two years here, that I really surrendered to the Lord and was ready to let Him have His way. I said "Lord, I will do the next thing that is asked of me.

"Already I had arrangements made to go back into the business of court reporting which I had been doing before I came, but I said if the Lord wanted me to go to Waterloo or any other place I would try.

That very hour I received a telegram, "Won't you reconsider and come out to teach these girls?"

And I did go, but with the feeling that I would show them I was a failure as a Bible teacher and then they would let me alone and never ask me to do it again.

I saw those girls just in the state I had been in two years previous, converted, eager to know the Bible, and I thought I ought to know more than they after two years of study, and so I stayed.

I got a love of teaching the Bible, and from that day until a year and a half ago when I broke down in health, I have been teaching the blessed Word of God.

I followed evangelistic campaigns for three years. After a campaign was over I would stay for a month or two and teach the Bible. When Dr. Torrey and Mr. Alexander went to England, they invited me to go and teach the Bible at the close of their evangelistic campaign, and I had the privilege of two blessed years there. And then a year or two later, I was asked to go to Egypt, and there I spent a year teaching the Bible among the missionaries and native Christians. I was also in Palestine for a few months, and when I returned, Mr. Sunday invited me to join his party to teach the Bible, and for the last ten years I have been with them.

"Billy" Sunday's Work

Many of you I am sure, have been in Mr. Sunday's meetings, and some of you in the Bible classes, but for those not familiar with them I will say, that the object Mr. Sunday had in view when he asked me to join his party, was to get the people studying the Bible, not merely while we are having the campaign, but after the meetings were over.

So I held classes during the campaign following the afternoon sermon, and in the mornings in the homes of the women of leisure, and in the evenings while Mr. Sunday preached in the tabernacle I would hold a Bible class in some nearby town or suburb. For instance, when we were in Chicago we held classes in Evanston, Lake Forest, Oak Park and such places.

Those familiar with Mr. Sunday's work, know that we have cottage prayer meetings in the mornings where a little group of neighbors get together to pray for the meetings and for their neighbors.

We used to have these every day, and at the close of the campaign we used to call those in charge of the prayer meetings together and have them turn them into permanent neighborhood Bible classes. I used to show them how to begin and carry on informal and simple studies.

Sometimes we would have as many as two hundred of these neighborhood Bible classes. Once a month the leaders got together and under the leadership of one selected they would go over the lessons for the next four weeks and then go back to their neighborhoods to teach.

In some places the classes have continued for years. In Wichita, Kan., they continued for eight years. In Cincinnati there are about a hundred neighborhood Bible classes. It depends largely upon the leader, but anyway, after they are organized, a great many go on in different ways.

I ask them to begin very simply and after they have studied in that way for a while and learned that they can get something out for themselves, then go into deeper lines of study.

I do not know how you feel about it, but when I was in the Institute, there was one course of study I did not like at all, and that was Chapter Summary. We had to (when I was here) go from the first chapter of Genesis to the end of Revelation, and answer four questions on every chapter. Live or die, we had to do it.

But since I have been working with these young converts, that is the very method which has been the most successful for getting the largest number of people to studying the Bible.

Improves the Chapter Summary Method

My plan is a little different. Instead of four questions I have ten!

But you would be surprised to see how enthused they get over Bible study. I suggest that they take one book, and stay with that book until they know it. And then take one chapter and this list of questions—the ones that you have and a few others. And then read the chapter carefully and prayerfully, and close the book and try to answer the questions:

"What is the primary subject of this chapter?"

"Which is the most precious verse to you?"

"What are the different things it teaches about Christ?"

"Is there in this chapter any example for me to follow?"

"Did any one in this chapter do anything that I ought also to do?"

"Is there any error in this chapter which I should avoid?"

"Any command in this chapter? Did God command anything that I ought to do?"

"Is there any promise for me to claim?"

"Is there any prayer that I should echo?"

It seems so simple that sometimes people think it is too simple; but where you have young converts and people not used to studying the Bible they become discouraged if it is too hard, so sometimes I get them to pledge that they will try at least two chapters.

When in Dundee, Scotland, I explained the plan to a company of ladies one evening, and the next afternoon I had a class of men and women, and one man said practically this:

His wife came home from the first meeting, and said there was a woman from America there who told them a way to study the Bible. She thought it might be interesting and asked him if he would not join her and try a chapter. She had pledged herself to try at least one chapter. He was reading the newspaper and very grudgingly said, "I suppose so."

He said he knew his wife would not quit talking until he did, so he thought he might as well yield first as last. And she said,

"Which chapter shall we try?"

"It doesn't make any difference to me."

"No, you must choose a chapter."

And so he chose the last chapter of 2 Chronicles although he did not know what was in it.

They began at 10 o'clock, and he grew so interested that they went on until after 12 o'clock.

He said for the first time in his life he felt a sense of power in reading the Bible. He had sat in many Bible classes, and listened to lectures and remembered many facts, but nothing that opened the Bible for him so he could get one thought out for himself.

When I first heard these lectures at the Institute I thought, "Oh my, I never in the world can get anything like that, but when I really tried, and looked definitely to God for the answer to some question, I found the Holy Spirit was no respecter of persons, and that He could teach me some of the great truths just the same as He could these great men.

I always ask them to make these classes evangelistic, and invite all their neighbors whether Christians or non-Christians into the homes. In one class, thirteen different men and women rose at different times and said that they had passed through Mr. Sunday's campaign untouched, that they were not church-going people, but that through these informal meetings, reading and talking over a chapter with their neighbors, they had come to see that Jesus was the Saviour, and were ready to accept him. Every class ought to be a soul-winning class.

Food for Hungry Hearts

I was interested this afternoon to hear Mr. R. L. Evans of St. Louis, speak on the need of the world, and how true his statements were regarding communities and churches! I feel with him that in every community and church there are hungry hearts that do not know what they are hungry for, but who would eagerly grasp hold of Bible study if it were presented to them in a way that they could understand.

In that very town, Waterloo, Iowa, where I first began, one of those girls now has a Bible class, Mrs. H. Fisher, who is doing a remarkable work in Bible study

Another, an alumna, I think, is doing the same. You would be surprised at the number of people she has got interested in Bible study. She has a large Sunday school class; then a class of about forty young school teachers and others; three classes in a neighboring town; and in the high school a "friendship" class. She has ninety students in one high school and about forty in another. She also started two classes in the evenings, following a revival in two different churches.

I believe that this, just as was said this afternoon, is the great need, and I believe the responsibility rests heavily upon us who have had the privileges of this wonderful Institute to try to get people to study the Bible.

The last time I heard Mr. Moody he said one night to the women students—"Get your friends to study the Bible." He repeated it over and over—"Get your friends to study the Bible." That is what we need to do today.

How New Guinea Savages are Enriched

By Rev. Charles W. Abel, of the London Missionary Society

I FEEL it to be a very great responsibility to speak to you tonight. We ought to be on the lookout for great things as the outcome of these meetings, and of the prayers of this great conference.

I am addressing young men and women in a large number of cases who have today heard a voice which has been no human voice, but the voice of their Master. And I am anxious in anything I say at the close of this conference to make that voice more definite and imperative. I would that as the outcome of our meeting tonight there might be an army of men and women filled with zeal for Jesus Christ, who shall send forth a message to the ends of the earth, which will thrill the hearts of those working for our Lord in lonely places.

We have had a tremendous feast today of all kinds of missionary information and inspiration. The need of many fields has been pointed out to us, and in proportion to our opportunity to help is our responsibility.

I want to deal this evening with some phases of missionary work, which are seldom perhaps brought to your notice. I take as my text, or motto, words which the apostle Paul wrote in his first letter to his Corinthian converts, "In everything ye are enriched in him." I want to speak about the enrichment which comes into the life of a backward people like the savages of New Guinea, with their acceptance of Jesus Christ.

1. First, let us notice that these people thirty-two years ago had a very limited mental horizon. For instance, so far as I could see they had very little knowledge of the past. They had no history. If a native was asked to look back, he looked, as it were, into a dense fog. He could not tell you anything about his origin, or even about the generation which had immediately preceded him. He tried to forget, and he did forget everything that was behind him. That was part of his religion. The past was a sealed book to him.

When the gospel comes into the hearts of a people like this, what does it do for them? Look at the enrichment it is to a man when you clear away the mists from the past and allow him to go back through the great Book and understand God's dealings with Abraham, and enable him to see his own part in that great early covenant; or when you take him back to Calvary, to the cross of Jesus Christ. The past becomes something new and glorious to him.

2. Then, the Papuan had very little idea of the future. I am not talking about the future life; he believed in that. But he never planned, as we do, for the days far ahead. I do not think my people ever looked farther forward than nine months. I put it at that period because they used to make gardens, and plant yams and taro, and it was generally from six to nine months before their vegetables matured; but I do not think they ever looked beyond that limited period.

If you were to go tonight and tell the people in New Guinea, who are untouched by the gospel, that some great disaster would overtake them in five years' time, they would not be distressed, because they have no power to project their minds forward so far ahead.

But this is not the case with the Christian people within the community. Two or three years ago a government official and a white man went through my district to procure land. Twenty years ago they would have had no difficulty in this matter. The natives anywhere would have been tempted with a few articles, which are mere rubbish in our eyes—a few yards of turkey red, a small box of fish hooks, a few beads, and the temptation would have proved irresistible. They lacked the foresight which would have induced them to hold their lands for a coming generation. These two white men went to one part of the district and tried to buy land, but the owner said, "No, I will not sell my land. I have children and grandchildren, and they are being educated at the mission station, and I am going to hold my land for them and their children after them."

Thus we have enriched these people to this extent also; we have given them an interest in the future.

3. And, more important still, we have given them a look upward, a spiritual vision. What uplook did they have before they heard the gospel do you suppose?

We were speaking this morning about the fearsome spirit-world which environs these people. I have not time to tell about the religion of the Papuan, but everywhere the dark underworld of spirits haunts him. He cannot escape from it:—in his house, or up in the mountains; in his garden, or out at sea on his fishing or bartering expeditions, everywhere the spirit-world follows him, and fills his life with a miserable fear. Their one excuse for inhuman practices is, "We must do these things; our fathers did them and the spirits of our fathers demand that we do them too."

And the gospel comes, and in place of this terror, these people become acquainted with the comfort and power of the Holy Spirit; they are able to look right up into the very face of God, through Jesus Christ. This is the great enrichment.

4. Let me show you what this means to my converts. I am reminded as I speak to you that today on my station in New Guinea, from one to one-thirty, there has been the usual half hour of silence. There has been no hammering, no noise; all industries have ceased. Men and women have gathered together to ask God's blessing upon their lives and the lives of others. This is their daily half hour of prayer. I am reminded of this by a letter handed to me on this platform, direct from New Guinea, written in a native language, by a native convert. How did he know I was here? I suppose I was so rejoiced when I first heard some months ago that I might be asked to come to this conference, that I wrote and told him I might be here, and he took it for granted that God would send me, and so he addressed his message to me here. But he reminds me that prayer is being offered today for me, and for you. I want you to realize the fact that these one-time savages and these children of cannibals, are today bearing us up in prayer to God. That is the enrichment, the direct enrichment, which comes to savage people through the gospel of Jesus Christ.

5. But I want to draw your attention to some other blessings which the Papuan has received with the gospel. Consider his enrichment in learning to give. When I first went to New Guinea there was no word in the native language to represent "gift" as we understand that word. They had a word, ainauia, which meant, "I give you; you give me." It implied exchange. Outside a very narrow family circle there was no such thing as giving without expectation of return.

In those early days we used to be quite alarmed if some one left a bunch of bananas on our veranda; we knew very well the donor expected two or three bunches of bananas in return! It was therefore not an unmixed joy to receive a present! They never gave something for nothing. There was no such thing in those days as a collection in aid of God's work. But, to let you see how matters have changed in thirty years, I went recently into the office of the London Missionary Society and asked the secretary to tell me what the contribution of one New Guinea district was last year, and he looked up his books and said, "I cannot tell you the exact figure for the last year, but I can tell you the total for the last two years," and it amounted to over $5,000. That was not money that they were giving for a hospital for themselves; or for teachers for their own children, though they need a hospital and teachers; but it was money given because they love Christ, for His work in China, and India, and Africa, and wherever the Lord would use it. Have we not enriched the life of our people by teaching them the Christian grace and privilege of giving?

6. Then, take music. They tell us there are places in the world—I do not think there are very many, but I know there is one at least, where people cannot sing. They have no ear for distinctions in sound, no capacity for melody. A missionary who lived and worked on an island in the South Seas, call Pukapuka, told me that he might announce any one of two hundred hymns in his church, but his congregation would never vary the tune; they all sang only one note, though they would not all sing in the same key.

When I went to the east end of New Guinea and started my work, I found the natives very deficient in anything that could be called music. When my wife joined me she remarked on their lack in this respect. I told her, what I believed to be true, that these people were doing their best. My wife, however, was not convinced. She felt sure she could improve matters if only to the length of getting the women to sing in the higher register. Patience and perseverance has been rewarded, and today, wherever you go in my district, you will find a choir who can sing and read music. They sing these same anthems and hymns to the tunes which you sing, and they sing them sweetly, and in all the parts. You will even find small children who have learned to read music, and they, too, will pleasingly sing you their choruses, their songs of praise to God.

Preaching From a Boat in the New Hebrides

I want you to consider the great thing that came into the lives of these people who were almost unable to express themselves in song a few years ago, and who can now lift up their voices and their hearts in sweet praise to God. It is something which they certainly appreciate very highly themselves.

7. Then, take the wonderful enrichment of love. You heard what Dr. Frater said just now about the lovelessness of the heathen. There was no word for love in our language. In my translation I have twice changed the word I first used for love. We are reading love into the word we have adopted, because they are learning what love is since they came to know Jesus Christ.

When I first went to New Guinea it was the custom all through my district for an infant whose mother died in childbirth to be buried alive in the grave with the mother. You might take notice that you have here a problem in savage life. It had to be so. Who would look after another woman's child? There is the problem. Who was to take care of it? Failing the mother, there was no one, and so it had to be buried alive. The heathen are a loveless people.

Some few years ago I told a young Christian man to go to the end of my district to do some work for me, and I gave him a letter for delivery on his way back at a village a little way inland. In a heavy storm my messenger anchored his launch in a safe harbor, put on his oilskin coat, and southwester hat, and proceeded along the native track through the forest to the place where the letter had to be delivered. On his way he passed a man and a woman who were quarreling, and he judged that their disagreement was about an ill-favored child the man carried in his arms. He went on, finished his work, and later in the day, was returning in the rain, when passing the place where he had met these people, he thought he heard a cry. Remembering the incident of the morning, he waited until he heard the cry again. Then he searched in the undergrowth of the forest until he found the child where the mother and father had thrown it out to die. I want you to mark what happened. That man, because his heart was open to the love of Jesus, went down on his knees, took off his oilskin coat, tenderly wound the outcast child in its folds, and carried it to his launch, took it home, and gave it to his Christian wife to mother.

Is not that a noteworthy change? Is not that an enrichment for these once loveless people? And it comes wholly through this great and glorious gospel.

8. Then, again, let us take education: the romance of the beginnings of things—teaching these people to read, and to write, and to count. Believe me, it is sometimes hard work. Some of you who are thinking of missionary work make up your minds that this is not play. My people can only count up to twenty. They have a word for each digit of the hand. They say, "One set of digits." That is five. Then they go over it again for the other hand, and say, "Put them together." That is ten. Then, of course they go on to their toes. They go through the same process on their feet, and when they have all their fingers and toes accounted for, they say for twenty, "One dead man." In my church I never give out hymns in the native language, because if I had to announce hymn No. 131, I should never find time for the sermon.

But despite difficulties, we have succeeded in teaching a large number of our people to read and write, and to do many useful and clever things which would have seemed quite beyond their powers when we started our work amongst them. And in consequence of the early training of a new generation, we are dealing today with a body of youth of both sexes which give great promise of still better things for the days to come, and which give us hope that the Papuan will yet make his special contribution to the real wealth of the world.

9. And then I want you to notice the great enrichment which comes into the lives of many of these Christians when we teach them useful industry in place of their old savage activities.

A great part of their old savage energy has either been destroyed or forbidden. In consequence of Christian teaching and example they have discarded many heathen practices which entailed much labor. They have also been compelled to abandon their inter-tribal fighting, a practice which, at least in preparation, took up much of their former time and activity. We have therefore been diverting their energies into new and healthy channels: and this again has greatly added to the enrichment of their lives.

I have a boy in my mission who is a son of one of our first converts. This youth, Daniela, is a most excellent cricketer. He plays frequently against the white men in the neighboring township. I had to say to him one day, "Daniela, you can do nothing well, except play cricket. It is a good thing to play cricket well, but only if you can do something else well, something that is worth-while." The youth thanked me for my straight talk to him, and said he would try to do better. Now I want you to follow Daniela's fortunes for a few minutes.

Some years ago I received permission from the British and Foreign Bible Society to translate the whole of the New Testament in the language of my tribe. Previous to that we had been limited to four books only. My growing church was sorely in need of the Epistles and I had translated most of them when the World War broke out in 1914. My manuscript was throughout that long struggle locked up in my safe. It was difficult to explain to my converts that we could not send this manuscript overseas without fear of losing it because the two great Christian countries represented in their island, Great Britain and Germany, were at war with each other. In 1918 I received permission to spend a thousand dollars in printing machinery and to get a qualified printer to come to me from Australia to do some of this work on my station, and at the same time to teach a few of our youths how to print and publish such books for ourselves.

The man came; he turned out to be a capable tradesman and also an excellent teacher. I gave him three youths as his pupils, the oldest of whom, this boy Daniela, was under seventeen years of age. After the printer had been with us three and a half months he told me one day that he would like to return to Australia by the next steamer which was leaving in two weeks. I remonstrated with him and expressed my disappointment that he should be leaving without giving these Papaun youths a fair opportunity of learning his trade. My printer, however, insisted that he had fulfilled his contract; he said that these boys were able to produce similar books to the two he had printed, without his further supervision. This sounded, of course, incredible; but he left by the vessel as he had suggested, after being in New Guinea from start to finish exactly four months to a day. Within that time his machinery had had to be brought over from the port to my station and erected and put into commission.

Kwato Extension Association, Inc. Mission Headquarters in the New Hebrides

Since he left us these native youths whom he taught have issued five books, two gospels—St. Luke and St. Matthew; the Acts of the Apostles; the Epistle to the Romans; and a separate book containing the minor Epistles of St. Paul. I brought these volumes home with me and handed them to the secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society in London. A little later I received a communication from the society asking me to put their imprint on every copy of these books, and offering to pay me for the cost of producing them. I was to refund them from purchases as I was able to dispose of them to the people of my district. These books are so carefully and skilfully printed that it would take an experienced eye to detect that there was anything at all wrong with the workmanship. That is a remarkable witness to Papuan capacity and determination. It is by no means an isolated instance of their desire to do things worth doing, and to do them well.

So you see we are introducing new interests like this into their life, and these sons and daughters of wild men are being taught to do skilful work as printers, and carpenters, and bookbinders, and what not.

Is not that an immeasurable improvement upon the fighting, and dancing, and useless activities of their old life? And this, too, has come to them with the gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

In closing, let me say one word as to the enrichment to these people in the opportunity they now have of taking a personal part in service for Jesus. They are able to go forth amongst their fellows and tell them what they have experienced themselves of the love and power of Christ in their own hearts. Truly, "in everything" they are "enriched in Him."

MODERN PAGANISM

Bishop Charles D. Williams, of Michigan, in a New Year sermon in New York said:

"There are too many people today who look upon life as a picnic and who say, 'I must have a good time.' * * * They fail to accept the fact that life is a solemn march between eternities.

"National power in this commercial age serves chiefly commercial aggrandizement. Narrow, selfish nationalism and petty, fanatical patriotisms have rent our common humanity everywhere into senseless, suspicious, bitter antagonisms. The result was the explosion of the great war, for which we were all in our several degrees responsible, and which has made Christian civilization a byword and a mockery, and all but wrecked irretrievably the world order. And yet we will not learn. * * *

"Pleasure is the one end of life, the one concern of the thoughts and actions of many. 'I must have a good time'—life is a holiday excursion, a picnic ramble through the world, not a solemn march between the eternities on a God-given mission.

"Jazzitis, as some one has put it—jazzitis, musical and moral, is the characteristic disease of many of our youth.

"These are all symptoms of the new paganism of the day. If it becomes dominant it can end only as the old paganism ended, in destruction of our civilization and the wrecking of our individual lives."

The Missionary Symposium

Presided Over by Rev. R. H. Glover, M. D., F. R. G. S., Director of the Missionary Course of the Moody Bible Institute, who introduced the speakers in the following order:

AARON JUDAH KLIGERMAN
Of the Chicago Hebrew Mission, Representing the Missionary Field in Russia

"Leave the Jews alone" many church members say to us, and some pastors also, "Leave the Jews alone, they are all right, they have their own religion, and their own Bible, and do not want Christ."

I have not time to show you that the religion of the Jew today is not the Old Testament religion, but a man-made religion and very burdensome. The people were once known as a people of the Book, but now there are thousands of Jewish homes where you will not find the Bible, and tens of thousands of Jewish men and women all over the world who do not know a thing about the Bible. Yes, even here in America.

As to the argument that the Jew does not want Christ, you have before you this afternoon missionaries from the foreign field, and you may ask them, if anywhere in this world there is an individual who expresses a wish to know Christ until the Holy Spirit reveals it unto him that Christ is the one solution for his troubles. Once we come in contact with the Jew and show Him that Jesus Christ of the New Testament is the Messiah of the Old Testament, and the Holy Spirit speaks to Him and opens his eyes, then he calls out, "Where is He that I may accept Him?"

As to the dissatisfaction of the Jewish religion, permit me to read to you an extract from a Jewish paper of the present month, which represents thousands of mothers in Israel.

"In memory of my only child, Jacob, who died February 1, 1922. Today is a year since I lost my only child, my son Jacob; a year of hopeless waiting; of days filled with deep mourning and sleepless nights. Walking through the streets I look into every young man's face, imagining that soon you, my love, will come and take away my loneliness, and make it a thing of the past. My child, my companion, my joy, and my friend. I am only waiting for death to call for me. There is no ray of hope for me. Day after day I visit your grave and on the grassy ground do I fall and call for you. A year is gone and what next? There is no hope for me; the same dark path; the same loneliness."

She, my friends, is only a representative of many who have no hope in the Jewish religion. What are we to do for them? Shall we not give them Christ who is the only hope?

WILLIAM G. KENSINGER
Of the Mennonite Denomination from the Congo Inland Mission

I believe that the reason some of the fields in Africa are not accounted for by missionaries, is that when some students come to the Institute they have already decided where they are going. I know when I came here, I had already planned where I was going and what I was going to do, and I did not think so much about permitting the Lord to decide for me.

Then, going out of the dining room one noon, the leader of the Africa prayer band said, "All who want to pray for Africa come to Massey Chapel at 1:15; even though you are not going you can at least pray for Africa."

So I went there and began to pray for Africa, and the Lord put Africa on my heart. Now I am back here to tell you to have an open mind and an open heart and let the Lord Jesus Christ point out the way for you.

There is one thing I have learned in Africa and that is this, that if you want to go to Africa and do not have the love of Jesus Christ in your heart, you had better stay home, because that is the only thing that will cause the African to put away his superstitions and all the things that have been hampering him for generations. The only thing that is going to do any good to the African is the love of Jesus Christ.

In closing, I should like to make two points. In Paul's epistle to the Romans (1:14), we have, "For I am debtor both to the Greek and to the barbarian; to the wise and to the unwise." He realized his debt. And in the next verse he said, "So as much as in me is, I am ready." That is the next point—"I am ready."

MRS. KENSINGER

"The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life of whom shall I be afraid?" (Ps. 27:1). This verse has comforted me many a time while out in Africa. And another verse that the Lord gave me seven years ago just before I came to the Institute, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

Thank the Lord He has been with me alway. We have seen many, many of the dark natives come to the Cross, and we have seen them converted.

And just here it comes to me that two weeks from Saturday we have ten young people sailing for that very field. The Lord is hearing and answering prayer. We came home with a burden on our hearts that more workers might be sent out, and more money, and our prayers are being answered.

We have a prospering work. I wish you could see the bright faces of the natives as they come to chapel, how they shine for Jesus!

REV. W. B. COLE
From the Fukien Province of China, Representing the Methodist Episcopal Mission

A young Chinese Christian pastor came down from his little station up in the hills, and, as is the custom, went in to see the missionary teacher. He said "Things have not been going very well with me lately. I wonder if you have forgotten to pray for me."

And I have had an experience a little different from that. Sometimes things have been going wonderfully well in the work, and I could account for it in no other way except that some one over here was praying for that work.

One of the biggest revivals started down close to me. One of the missionaries was an invalid and could do nothing but pray, but all day he prayed for a revival to come to Hingwha. At that moment a young Chinese pastor whose two children had died was set to thinking about his life and his ministry, and it took him to his knees for two days and nights. He then came before his church and started to preach, and what do you think he preached about. He told in simple language the story of the Cross, how Jesus died for the sins of mankind. He preached to an audience, many of whom were preachers and professing Christians, but who were still unregenerated. And as He told that story they melted in tears, and then started the greatest revival our part of the country has seen. It was a meeting the influence of which is still bearing fruit. It was backed by prayer from this end.

MISS MINERVA S. WEIL
Representing the Reformed Church in U. S. A., also from China

When I was eight years old my mother said in my hearing she hoped some day one of her children would go as a missionary.

Ten years later while attending a conference, I knew that I was the one to have the privilege. There were hindrances then, and later on I became indifferent. But by God's grace, in 1915 I heard Miss Grace Saxe give a missionary address in Philadelphia, and I was one of the thirty-three who volunteered for Christian service. I hoped it might be in the home field, but the Lord was very gracious and allowed me to go to the foreign field.

I wanted to train for Y. W. C. A. work, but God definitely directed my steps to the Moody Bible Institute, and less than two years later just as definitely directed my steps to go under the foreign missions board of the Reformed Church in the United States of America.

Our work is in Shinchow, Hunan, China, 1,000 miles from the coast. It takes us from seven to eight days to travel the last 150 miles.

Under the preaching of His word we have seen many turn to God from the worship of idols. I have in mind one woman who was the first of seven wives. We had the privilege of telling her the gospel story for the first time. A year later she was baptized. And another who came from what we call the house of widows, because there are so many living together.

She used to laugh right out in the meetings. It amused her to see any one having fellowship with an unseen God. She too was converted, and through her prayers three more were brought in.

Eleven of our women received certificates for Bible study a few weeks ago, and we are to start a Bible training school for women next year.

I covet your prayers. "Except the Lord build the house they labor in vain that build it."

REV. GEORGE WOODLEY
Of the Africa Inland Mission, in East Africa

As I was sitting here I could not help but wish that more of your faces were black. I would feel more at home as I talk to you.

But I want to recommend one thing to you; if you have any foreign field on your heart come to the Moody Bible Institute or some like Institution before you go out.

I have been trying some of the God-inspired Moody methods in Africa. On Sunday night we have our inspirational meeting and our report meeting. I say, "Boys and girls, I want you to go out into the village, out into the gardens and paths, and talk to people as you meet them, one by one and two by two."

We conduct that meeting just as we used to conduct our meetings here when we had our report hour. I would say:

"How many did you speak to this afternoon?"

And their hands would go up, one perhaps would have spoken to one, another to two, ten, fifteen.

Then I would ask:

"What did you speak about?"

And they would tell us and how they presented the subject.

I find that the methods that used to work here at the Institute are working out there.

There has been a great revival of personal work and now through some of the methods of the Moody Bible Institute many people have been brought to a knowledge of Christ Jesus.

Sometimes as I go to the schools far out from the mission station, I wonder how I can get some of the natives to come to the meeting, and then I think of how Mr. Meeker would tell us that he would go up and down the street sometimes and call out that they were having a meeting tonight! And so I start down those paths and valleys, and call out, "Come in all you people, we are going to read in the house of God!"

God is working out there. The African Inland Mission has 12,000,000 people in their wake, but there is still a great need. You can look 1,000 miles this way and 1,000 miles that way, without a missionary at work, without a witness for the Lord Jesus Christ. Although we have more missionaries than any other society in Africa, we are calling for 100 missionaries for this coming year to go out into that dark country.

MISS JESSIE HARRELL
From the Nyasaland Mission, South Africa, laboring under the Dutch Reformed Mission, but now appointed to go back under the South Africa General Mission

I also like black faces. I have had the privilege of being in British Central Africa for five years, and while my little message may have a note of sadness in it, it is nevertheless true.

Mine is a field where there are many nominal Christians, and many missionaries, but there is a great spiritual drouth and I am asking that you will especially pray for the outpouring of God's spirit on us. That is the only thing that will head off the oncoming of Mohammedanism from the north to the south of Africa—nothing but the outpouring of God's Spirit on the missionaries and the native Christians.

There are native Christians in Africa who are just like Christians in this country, only nominally so, and what we want them to be out there is what you want here, out and out Christians. We want them to be missionaries among their own people, and we will never see this unless there is a real out-pouring of God's Spirit that Christ may be made real to them.

Do you know what the Mohammedans say to Christians? They say, "What is the difference? You read the Bible, we read the Koran. You believe there is but one God, we believe there is but one God. You say Christ is the only prophet; we say Mohammed is the great prophet."

So there must be something more than just telling them that Jesus is the Son of God, and also in letting them learn to read it. There must be the opening of the eyes by the Spirit of God before they do the things that they would do if God was really manifest in their lives.

So I pray that God will put it on your heart to pray more for mission work and for missionaries that they may do the work that God has really sent them to do, and for the Christian natives that they in turn may go forth to teach their own people.

MR. VARTAN ATCHINAK
A native Armenian, at head of Bible Lands Gospel Mission, with headquarters in Mt. Lebanon, Syria

I praise the Lord for his great gift of salvation to me. The Bible Lands Gospel Mission, is an interdenominational mission, trying to meet the growing needs of that place, and we are in this country to make known its importance and purpose, in order to get your interest and prayers in the work.

Our brothers have been taken up and compelled to deny the Lord Jesus Christ by saying, "There is no God but one and Mohammed is his prophet." Some who would not say so, had their hands tied behind them, and then they took an axe and slowly chopped their heads off. One convert was burned alive, while praying, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do."

I praise the Lord that when trials and tribulations come they have proved their faith in a God who is able to protect and keep them. The people in those countries have been put through all sorts of persecution to make them renounce the Lord Jesus Christ.

We have a school in Mt. Lebanon, with about 200 children. Of these about thirty-five are from the Mohammedan religion. Sixty-five of them are from the Roman Catholic and Greek Catholic churches. The others come from Christian homes. The Lord is doing a wonderful work. Oh, let us pray for this work among the people of the Bible lands.

MRS. ATCHINAK

I also praise the Lord for His wonderful love to me, because He brought me from darkness into light, and since He brought me He burdened my heart for the souls that are perishing in the Bible lands, and put it on our hearts to start this school to prepare young souls for the work of God, to be native missionaries, for they were saved and they were really on fire for God. I wish I could take you and let you see these schools. When they are recreated themselves, they are willing to present the love of Christ to others, and we are getting beautiful news from the home, how the Lord is blessing. We lately received some letters from them saying, "The Lord is blessing wonderfully here. We are praying for a revival, and the revival is beginning."

A Mohammedan man was converted to Jesus Christ and baptized. His family rose against him and wanted to kill him. He fled away and has been now two years with us, and now he is glad to let others know that he is a Mohammedan saved by the blood of Jesus Christ.

I know another man who came from the college. He said that when he was a young boy he used to kneel down and pray with his mother, but when he went to college he forgot all about it, and became an infidel, but when he came to that school and saw the power of the Lord he knelt down and accepted Jesus Christ.

We are in great need of three consecrated women at least, to go and help us. We have 200 children in the school and many houses are open, but we must have workers.

REV. F. A. STEVEN
Of the China Inland Mission

I have not anything very fresh to say, but I am speaking to fresh hearts, and many who have not heard me here before.

I come as a representative of the church of Jesus Christ in China. The Chinese people and missionaries alike, thank you for your fellowship in prayer, which has meant much and means much today in building up the cause of Christ in that land. I come to beg of you not to slacken in your prayers.

These are perilous times in China as well as in other parts of the world. Not a few among the educated Chinese themselves have drifted and are taking their side along with the Modernists and destructive critics of the Bible. Thank God, a thousand times—thank God, that the great majority of the Chinese Christians and Chinese preachers are standing by the old Book and ring true to its teaching. This was notably true in the great conference held last spring in Shanghai. Whenever a Modernist was speaking there was an ominous silence, and when a man spoke out clearly and fearlessly for the truths of God's Holy Word, then there was evident response in the hearts and in the voices of the Chinese delegates who were present. The church in China is going to become self-supporting, and self-propagating, and self-governing. The Chinese are a virile race and they do not need and do not intend to be longer under the foreign people, but the time of transition and change is a time of real danger, and a time that calls for much grace on the part of the foreign missionary—the grace of humility, the grace to step to the rear.

I pray God that He may choose many, many more young men and young women from the Moody Bible Institute to go forth to China. There are no missionaries in the China Inland Mission for which we thank God more whole-heartedly than for those who have come from this Institute.

REV. C. S. FOSTER
From the South Africa General Mission, South Africa

The African is looking for something that will satisfy his soul. We know the one thing that can satisfy is the Lord Jesus Christ.

I remember hearing a native evangelist tell this story at one time. He said a man came from another tribe into a local village and told the people he had the medicine of life. The people gathered around him and brought their guns and beads, and such things as they had, and put them down at his feet, and he then gave them some of this marvelous medicine that even if a man died he would come back to life again in a day or so. The man left the village with his gifts. A few weeks passed by and one of the villagers was stricken and died, but the villagers were still hopeful. Had they not given him this medicine? Would he not come back to life? And so they left him in the hut; they failed to bury him until his body became a mass of putrification, and then they realized that they had been deceived.

The heart of the African is seeking for life, and you and I have the medicine, the true medicine of life. Are we not debtors to take the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ to these people in heathen darkness? The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; and this is just as effective in Africa as it is in Chicago.

Young men and young women, but particularly young men, what are you going to do with your life? When you look into the future and think of the countless millions in Africa, China, South America, who have never heard the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and then as you think of the sacrifice at the cross of Calvary, you see nothing is worthy of the name of sacrifice that any human being can do in order that men and women may know the Lord Jesus Christ and be saved.

MRS. C. S. FOSTER

There are some here who would gladly go to Africa, or to some other land, if the Lord would open the way, but the door seems shut for you. Perhaps you have applied to a mission and have been rejected because of ill health or some other reason, but still there is a very real work for every one of you to do, as intercessory missionaries if you will only see it. Paul said, "Ye also helping together by prayer for us." For the missionary, and the missionary needs your prayer.

But this afternoon there is more than that. The missionary, the native Christian, the native worker—they all need your prayers. When you consider the years and years of superstition and fear that are behind them and that from their childhood they have been taught to believe in evil spirits, they are afraid not to observe certain customs for fear their own welfare may be at stake. Sometimes we find that when there has been a child with its upper teeth coming through first, we have found that they believe that child should not live; and so they put it out in the bush for the wild beasts, and of course in the morning nobody knows what became of it. Now because of these fears it of course is very hard for the Christians. When these things come up what shall they do? If they come into their lives, if they are sick, what shall they do? They want to live the right sort of life, but only God can deliver them from these customs and break these fears, and oh, how much they need your prayers!

It might be well even for you to consider some field and ask for a missionary for whom you could pray, and write to hear about his or her difficulties and problems, and about the native Christians, and what they need you to pray for in particular, that you may have a real part in some definite place as your field, even if you cannot go.

MISS MARIA ATKINSON
Japan

Friends, I do not bring you a message from Hottentots or uncivilized cannibals, but I bring you a message from a land that is coming to the fore by leaps and bounds, but the message I bring to you is that it is a Christless Japan. Only one tenth of one per cent of the Japanese population has been Christianized. It is indeed virgin soil. The young people of Japan are breaking loose from the old faiths and customs and are drifting, they know not where. They do not know what it is that they need to anchor them, but we know it is only the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ.

On every hand we find open doors. I have been into the homes and into the hospitals, and have sat at the bedside of the sick and dying and I can testify that their religions do not satisfy. Oh, as I heard you sing that song, "My Anchor Holds," and contrast it with the anchor the heathen have—they have no anchor that holds.

Yes, they are looking forward—looking for something. I see a young girl as she goes and looks out of the window and some one says, "What is it that you are doing when you go to the door and look out so?" "There must be a God somewhere that hears and answers my prayer." And when she hears of the one true God, she says, "This is the God I have been feeling after. He is the one I want."

O friends, these splendid young people need the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Then the spirit of God is working in them; He is leading them to see the fallacy of their religions and something beyond, and O I beg you to send out to them men and women well grounded in this old Bible. All the errors in the church that are here at home, you will find out there—Modernism, Christian Science, and all those other things. I would make that appeal to these young people who expect to go out, if you have any doubt whatever in your heart as to inspiration of the Bible, and as to the Cross of Christ, you had better not go to Japan.

DR. GLOVER

Now I have a surprise for you. Some folks want to see some black flesh. Well we have it, so Dr. Woodley's eyes will rejoice. We have one of Africa's sons here this afternoon, a very distinguished son, worthy of our honor. We have the son of an African king, and this son of an African king is an M. A. from an English university; a doctor of divinity; an F. R. G. S. of England; a very distinguished, highly educated Christian missionary leader; president of a missionary society; the principal of an institution for training of native evangelists in the Gold Coast, Africa, Dr. Mark A. Hayford.

DR. HAYFORD

The gospel is the power of God unto salvation. That is a fact and one that is just as true of the African as of the American. My father was a minister of the gospel. He was the king of my country. I was to be the king of my country, but he chose to be a minister of the gospel. He was elected to the ruling house, and he was head of that house, but he became a minister of the gospel, and when I became a Christian I decided that I would find out whether there was anything of power in Christianity. Now I asked, "What was the test where I can find that power which ought to anchor everyone who seeks the Lord and follows Christ." I was told: "This is the victory that overcomes the world, even our faith," and I said, "Shall I put this to the test?" and I as a young man went through many phases of temptation and I felt that every time I was tempted I should run to Christ.

We are trying to impress upon our converts in Africa that the power that overcomes the world is faith in Christ, this personal, loving Saviour, and they find there is power in Christianity. Our people realize the fact that there is something in Christianity.

In that part of Africa which I represent, during the past twenty years we have established forty-five churches, and we have converts numbering about 10,000. The evangelists have gone out with one great hope before the people; they have held out before the people the fact that Christ was able to save them from their sins, to pardon their sins, to save them and to keep them.

MISS N. BROSTROM

From China, Representing the Danish Lutheran Mission

(Miss Brostrom said that she was unable to speak English and Dr. Gray asked her to give a message in Danish. To this he had those who understood Danish respond by repeating John 3:16 in Danish. Then others on the platform gave John 3:16 in their language).

MISS MARGARET REYNOLDS

From the China Inland Mission

"Rejoice in the Lord always, and again I say, Rejoice. Let your moderation be known to all men. The Lord is at hand." "In nothing be anxious but in all things by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your request be made known unto God, and the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus." "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." "Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it."

REV. WILLIAM TAYLOR

Of the China Inland Mission; in China for Thirty-two Years

Over thirty-two years ago was the last and only other time I have spoken from this platform, and that was at one of the farewell meetings before leaving Canada for China. It has been a real privilege to labor these years in China.

As our many friends have said, I too can say, that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation, and that we have in China an increasing number of those who are converted, and further, that we praise God for some degree of church growth. In my own field we have some 160 paid Chinese workers; formerly all were supported by funds from other lands; now some thirty of these are entirely supported by the local Chinese churches, and over thirty are partially supported.

In regard to prayer, may I ask your prayers first of all for the home missionary body in facing the present menace of Modernism? It has been estimated by those who know, that about one third of the foreign missionaries in China are to some degree, at least, tainted with Modernism. And then will you pray for the great unreached multitudes of China still untouched? Probably the most liberal estimate made leaves nine tenths of China's 400,000,000 still without the chance of hearing the gospel. And will you pray for the missionaries and for all the workers there, that they may abide in Christ and depend on the power of the Holy Spirit?

And may I appeal to you all as Christian people to live what has been called the wider life; not only the deeper and higher life, but also the wider life, taking into your life the thought of John 3:16.

MR. BRADLEY

Organizing Secretary, of the Egypt General Mission, who has seen service in Egypt

Just a verse from Zechariah 4:, "This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel saying, not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts. Who art thou, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain."

When speaking to Christian people in the home lands about work among the Mohammedans their thoughts instantly turn to the difficulty. Of course the difficulties are enormous. Apostasy from this religion is punishable by death. But we must not magnify a difficulty into an impossibility. What are seeming impossibilities to man, can become gloriously possible with God.

Politically today, there is a great uniting force in Mohammedan lands, but religiously there is a work of disintegretion going on. Leading men in Egypt, and Persia and in other parts, have ceased to believe in heart in the Mohammedan religion, so here we have a unique opportunity to bring Christ to them.

The doors are open as they have never been before, and thank God there are thousands who would go through fire and water for Jesus Christ, and who are witnessing a good confession for Him in the land of Egypt today.

Let me tell you about one man who was at a meeting of converts. After he was converted his own people became his bitterest enemies, starved him, beat him, had him imprisoned, and finally they tried to soak him in oil and burn him alive; but today he is one of our evangelists doing a magnificent work. Shortly after his conversion he gave a copy of the Scriptures to another Moslem and spoke about Christ. The man spit in his face, cursed him, and tore the Scriptures up and threw them down. He saw that man some years subsequently at one of our conferences for Mohammedan converts, a blessedly saved man.

There was never a time when the Christian needed to pray for kings and those in authority as at the present time. Pray for the decision with regard to Turkey, for if it is not soon settled there is a possibility of an uprising throughout the Moslem world, and all missionary work may come to an end.

The years of service of these eighteen missionaries, represent 294 years of missionary effort all over the globe.

Publisher's Stuff

By the Publishing Agent

YES, this is a wonderful issue of the Moody Monthly!—In more ways than one.

First, the contents—the regular editorial contributions.

Second, the addresses of Founder's Week Conference.

Third, the large circulation—45,000.

Then there is an increasing appreciation by our readers of the Monthly. The editor is getting to know you better because of your kind cooperation, by letters commenting on the editorial contributions.

The writer is getting to know you better by the kind and helpful letters about the Monthly and your advice about advertisements.

If you do not get an answer to each letter it does not mean that your letter has not been considered. We take all your letters and gather from them the general consensus of opinion.

Changes in Policy

We have made a few changes in caring for subscriptions, which are favored by a large number of subscribers.

Your expiration date is to be restored to the addressing label. Some time ago we discontinued this practice as it saved us the cost of making new stencils each year. Now we have a new addressing system and as new subscriptions or renewals are received the expiration date is added to the address. Also the order number is put on the plate. When writing please refer to your order number as it appears on the wrapper.

Subscriptions Extended

For a couple of months we have continued to send the Monthly to subscribers whose subscriptions have not been renewed. It has met with a quite general approval. Those who do not want it can have it discontinued. Those who do want it will have 30 or 60 days longer in which to renew. This is quite an advantage to those who may be ill at the time, or short of funds, or away from home, or not able to care for it for some other reason. But, please let your renewal come in as quickly as possible!

Why wait until your subscription is out? Why not treat it as you do your bank account? Deposit $2.00 for a year, or $7.50 for five years, before your account is overdrawn. Do it now!

A Few Letters in Today's Mail

Read these few letters selected from many received just today—March 15—from subscribers—then you write another letter please—and—remember the missionary fund needs your help to send the Monthly to those at the front. Ten 10-cent gifts are as good as a dollar. Don't refuse because you cannot give largely. If I should ask you for a quarter personally, would you give it for a missionary? Send it along. Now read these:

"I am not sure when my subscription for the Monthly is due. I prize it highly and do not wish to lose a copy. I send you one year's subscription with this. L. B."

"Dear Friend: I have two monthly magazines unpaid for. Inclosed please find 50 cents. I intend to send in for one year very soon—so glad you continued the magazine. I will pay for whatever comes soon. Sickness has prevented my full subscription. M. J. C."

"Find inclosed $10.00 to renew my subscription to the Monthly and the balance to send it to Missionaries, home or foreign. * * * Have been very ill and could not attend to anything. Please excuse delay and thank you for not stopping the Monthly. It is a bright, shining light in these dark days of growing unbelief. Am sending it also to my missionary in China. E. R. T."

"I am inclosing $2.00 for the renewal subscription of my magazine. For unavoidable reasons I am late with it this year for which I am sorry, but thank you very much for still sending it so I did not miss a number until I could spare the money. Thanking you again, I remain, as ever, a friend of the Institute. L. A. R."

Christian Home Magazine

Greetings to the readers of Christian Home Magazine. We are glad to welcome you to our large and growing circle of the Moody Monthly. By arrangement with Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, and the committee of the Family Altar League, we are transferring all subscriptions to the Moody Monthly list. You will receive the Moody Monthly for the remaining numbers of your subscription. If already a subscriber, your credit with Christian Home will be added to your subscription to Moody Monthly.

A New Building (Remodeled)

Yes, another building has been secured with quarters for the Moody Bible Institute Monthly and the Publication Department of the Institute. A formal opening to the members of the Institute was held February 15. Would you like to see some pictures in the new building? Maybe we can get some for Publisher's Stuff in the near future.

Another Subscription Campaign

Every subscriber get another! This month! The Moody Monthly sells itself if some one will take time to send in the order with $2.00.

Extra Copies of This Issue

What Other Editors Are Saying

J. H. Ralston

The purpose of this department is to give the views of editors of periodicals, chiefly religious, on matters of interest to our readers. In publishing what they say, we are simply endeavoring to give information with no intention of endorsing or repudiating the views printed, although from time to time, comment may be made upon them in our editorial pages.—Editor.

GRANT'S EFFORT FUTILE

Evening Gazette, (Cedar Rapids, Iowa)

The Rev. Percy Stickney Grant will not have to face a heresy trial because he cast some doubt on the divinity of Christ. Bishop Manning of the Protestant Episcopal church, who demanded that Dr. Grant recant or resign, says there will be no trial because the New York minister does not make clear whether he really doubts Christ's deity.

If Dr. Grant sought to fill his church by stepping into greener pastures of biblical interpretation he has succeeded. If his purpose was to stimulate debate, he has succeeded in that. But if he sought to cast doubt that would undermine a faith two thousand years old he has failed, as have others before him. His effort was a little more conspicuous, but no less futile.

WHEN CIVILIZATION BEGAN

Home and Foreign Fields (Nashville).

Roger Babson tells of a famous debate as to when civilization began. One man argued that modern civilization began with the use of the horse. His opponent took the position that man graduated from the aboriginal to the industrial period with the discovery of the wheel. "Economic history, however," concludes the statistician, "strongly suggests that both of these men were wrong, and that modern industry started at the moment when one man found that he could trust another. With the invention of credit modern industry was born. When a man found that he could trust his brother, then the first loan and the first partnership were formed. Hence it can be said truly, that integrity or truth, a fundamental product of religion, is the foundation of safe industrial growth." And in this principle of mutual trust and confidence is to be found the stability of our Christian enterprises. Let us be as honest in our discharge of obligation to God as we are in meeting our obligations to our fellowman.

ROMISH VIEW OF PROTESTANTISM

The Presbyterian

Significant, too, are these words in a theological journal of the Roman Catholic church. It is not bad for us at times to see ourselves as others see us: "The changed attitude of Protestantism towards the Bible is nothing short of a complete right about face. For the Reformers there was no other rule of faith. In the inspired Word of God was the only truth clearly spoken to men, obviously intelligible, patent to all who ran or read. Now professors in Protestant seminaries throw out, with a careless toss of the hand, whole books of the Scripture, essential passages in the Gospels, any chapter or verse that does not please their fancy. As for faith without works, we have seen that original doctrine of Protestantism stood on its head, until it reads now, not faith without works, but works without faith; or, to put it more plainly, it makes no difference what you believe, as long as you do what you consider right. No wonder that Protestantism has become year by year less religious and more purely social in character. The day is past when Protestantism thinks its faith worth fighting for."

COST OF PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

Daily News (Chicago)

In his interesting articles in The Daily News on the various aspects of the prohibition question, David Lawrence, using official figures, argues that the cost of enforcing the Volstead act is not nearly so large as the general public has supposed it to be. Indeed, if certain estimates be accepted, the conclusion follows that prohibition enforcement is actually profitable to the government.

Congress, it is said, appropriates $9,000,000 for that purpose, while the total collected by the government in the last fiscal year in fines, taxes and penalties, bond forfeitures, and so on, in connection with prohibition enforcement was $7,770,000. The states, of course, collect fines on their own account. On top of all this there is pending a suit which may yield between $40,000,000 and $80,000,000 to the federal treasury in additional penalties.

The facts and figures supplied by Mr. Lawrence are striking. But a recent discussion in the appropriations committee of the House of Representatives served to disclose items not to be found in the favorable official statistics. Thus it was said by a representative of the Department of Justice that the cost of prohibition enforcement to the federal government was at least $14,000,000 a year, including the $9,000,000 directly assigned by congress for that task. The indirect and invisible items are generally overlooked, but they are as real as the others. Moreover, a deficiency appropriation of nearly $500,000 is asked by the Department of Justice, and prohibition enforcement has played a conspicuous part in causing the deficiency. * * *

The question of cost alone will not, of course, determine the fate of the Volstead act. Moral and social issues are involved that outweigh the economic and administrative. Still, in estimating prohibition costs to the treasury and to the country all proper items should be duly included.

SEMINARIES AND CEMETERIES

The Continent

One of the few irresistibly humorous jests available for a public speaker in addressing a religious gathering is to say: "Theological cemeteries—oh, I beg pardon, I meant theological seminaries." This is good for a laugh at any time.

To be sure, it is not strictly new. The history of theological education is such that it could hardly have originated at the time of Noah, but the internal aspect of the jest suggests its possible origin somewhere about the time of Balaam. At any rate, it is of a good antiquity. But it is always possible to use it as though it were a fresh inadvertence. The joke goes best if one is denouncing seminaries for not being "true to the old faith," though it must be remembered that the one place in any community which is absolutely true to the past is exactly the cemetery. It would spoil the joke if hearers bethought themselves of that * * *

Seminary was "a term originally applied to a nursery-garden or place where seeds are sown to produce plants for transplanting."

A theological seminary is a place where seeds are sown, where growth occurs, and from which men go out to produce harvests of truth. Any one who would put a cemetery hand on a seminary would wrong the future of the church. But any one who would have a seminary disregard the past and the laws of growth in men and in truth would soon turn it into a cemetery. It stands between the past and the future, responsible for knowing much of both and for helping men to carry over into the future the values of the past without its limitations. Those who man a seminary have no simple task; the one thing they may be expected always to do is to keep themselves and their work vital and growing. But they need not think they can do it so well as to prevent the continuance of so rich a jest as the one which has been mentioned. Without that jest, what would some speakers do?

PERVERTING JUSTICE

Chicago Tribune

James Smith, who murdered a crippled cigar clerk to obtain money to pay a professional bondsman for his release on a previous robbery charge, has been granted a ninety day reprieve by Gov. Small. He was to have been hanged in the Cook county jail today.

Thus does sentimentalism, or the politics which appeals to it, continue to pervert justice. Everything, within reason and without, is done for the protection and edification of the criminal; and almost nothing for the protection and edification of society. A morning newspaper which has been friendly to Gov. Small quotes the governor's son-in-law as saying that his family is not in favor of capital punishment. That may or may not be true. A bit of corroborative evidence is that Gov. Small commuted the death sentence of one Ignatz Potz for sentimental reasons last summer.

But in any case, such reprieves as the present pervert justice. There is no doubt whatever that "Jaunty Jimmie" Smith committed a brutal murder in the course of another crime while out on bail for still another crime. He was to be hanged, not for revenge, but for the protection of society through the example it would set before other potential murderers.

If the law's purpose is to be effective the penalty must follow as quickly as possible upon such crime. Every delay due to sentimentalism, legal trickery, or red tape helps to defeat the purpose of the law, even though the sentence eventually may be carried out. The sentimentalists are never interested in the innocent potential victims of crime, but always in the criminal. Thus, through delays, they develop a popular sentiment that the criminal is being abused and tortured. When he is hanged, if ever, the details of his crime will be more or less forgotten and the hanging will stand out in many minds as an independent incident, only slightly related to any crime. The potential benefit to society will be largely lost and the true aim of justice defeated.

The governor has a legal right to take such action, but in the name of justice to society he has no moral right to do so.

CAMP MEETING IDEAS OF SCIENCE

New York Evening Post

The declaration of the American Association for the Advancement of Science that it believes the doctrine of organic evolution unassailably established is about as important in itself as would be a declaration that it believes in the Copernican theory of the solar system or the Newtonian theory of gravitation. Every person exposed to a high school education knows that while there is a conflict of opinion over the agencies causing and shaping evolution, and while Darwin's work upon this subject has been revised, the fact of the evolution of man and other forms of life is involved in no more doubt than the fact of the earth's rotation.

What we really need is not an assertion of this elementary fact by scientists, but the co-operation of theologians and scientists in an attack upon the purblind dogmatists who are trying to represent science and theology as in conflict over evolution. The British association in its Hull meeting this summer chose a more effective course. It invited the Archbishop of York, Dean Inge, and other clergymen to address it, and they refused to assume any conflict between science and theology at all. Dean Inge declared that the doctrine of evolution had irresistibly modified the outlook of mankind upon not only science but history, politics, and sociology; was it not to modify theology? He pointed out that dogmatic adherence to the letter of the Bible —our "fundamentalism"—requires us to frame religious faith within the Ptolemaic astronomy, but that if faith is to be vital, it must be framed within the vital universe.

Here in America there was a real semblance of conflict between scientific and religious truth when Draper and Andrew D. White wrote their books on the subject. The noisy pretence of a conflict now being kept up is the work of ignorant people who know almost nothing either of science or theology. Representative theologians laugh at them. It might be said that if science and religion are not in collision, their proper relation is one of friendly indifference. In reality, it should be one of friendly co-operation, and Cambridge might well emphasize the fact.

What Are the Wise and Unwise Uses of the Lord's Day?

Isaiah 58:8-14; Psalm 118:24

The two closing verses of Isaiah 58 suggest both the wise and the unwise use of the Lord's Day. The unwise way is expressed in the phrases, "thine own pleasure," "thine own ways," "thine words."

The assertion of self to the exclusion of God is the essence of sin whatever form that assertion may take, whether it be the pleasure of self, the ways of self, or the words of self. The dethronement of self and the enthronement of God in one's being is the ultimate purpose of our redemption and is also our highest good.

The first day of the week reminds us of this truth; it is the resurrection day, the day on which our Lord was raised from the dead. His resurrection marks the beginning of the new humanity in which self is dethroned, for our old man was crucified with Him. The Cross crosses us out. This is the meaning of Galatians 2:20, "I have been crucified with Christ, and it is no longer I that live but Christ liveth in me." Not "thine own pleasure" now; not "thine own ways," but a life in which Christ is enthroned. The Christian who apprehends this, enters into the spirit of that verse given in our lesson from Psalm 118, "This is the day which the Lord hath made. We will rejoice and be glad in it." It is a new creation, a new experience, a new day. This attitude will best govern and regulate our conduct in the wise use of the Lord's Day. The day will indeed be "a delight," a day of worship, fellowship and service. "Then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord," rejoicing in His salvation, glorying in His triumph over sin and death. The renewal of these truths on the Lord's Day leads to a renewal of all our energies, for "the joy of the Lord is our strength"; and thus renewed we enter into the duties and labors of the week, strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. Maintain this attitude of mind and heart and there will be no difficulty in using the Lord's Day wisely.

How Can We Become Truly Educated?

Proverbs 4:1-9

The answer to the question in the topic is found in the seventh verse of our Scripture lesson—"Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding." There can be no true education apart from this.

It is possible to get a lot of knowledge, knowledge of history, literature, philosophy, and ethics, and yet to be uneducated or unwise. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Apart from that reverence and regard for God expressed in the word "fear" one cannot get wisdom and understanding, no more than one could have a wheel without a hub. The wisdom that comes from the knowledge of God is the unifying principle in true education. It is indeed "an ornament of grace and a crown of glory." Those who by divine grace have become recipients of the knowledge of God in Christ, realize how utterly vain all else is. When Christ who is the wisdom of God is discovered or revealed to the soul, then the student has a proper center, a satisfying Saviour, a unifying principle. Therefore "with all thy getting get understanding." Without this there will be failure; not failure in making a living perhaps, but failure in building a life.

The principle underlying the education given in our institutions of learning may be seen in the following incident. An honor man in one of our great institutions put the thing in this way, "I passed through four years of hard drudgery. The professors poured in and poured in knowledge on the whole range of subjects in the curriculum; and when I came to the end of the course they asked me to pour it out and I poured it all out and it stayed out." How different it might have been in his experience had there been a proper connecting link, a proper unifying principle.

The school of Christ is a great school. The education of faith is a marvelous experience. The Spirit of God is a wonderful teacher. All the lessons He teaches find their unifying principle in Christ. Concerning life He teaches us that it is indeed a race, strenuous and exacting, but it can be run with patience as we look away unto Jesus who for the joy set before Him, endured the cross, despised the shame and is set down at the right hand of God. See Hebrews 12:1, 2.

Train for Leadership

Exodus 3:7-12; 4:10-12

Humanly speaking the greatest need of the church and of the world is leaders; men equipped and competent for leadership.

Moses stands out in history as one of the great leaders. In Acts 7:22 we read that he was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians and was mighty in word and deed. But the wisdom of Egypt never equips men for the service of God. At the end of his Egyptian training he was ready in his own estimation to adjust matters of difference between men and nations. In his first attempt at this adjustment he miserably failed and was forced to flee the country (Exod. 2:11-15). Forty years of desert training followed: years of contemplation, humiliation, preparation, and then, when the fulness of time was come, Moses was called of God, qualified and sent out to his great life work.

There is a very real difference between doing something for God in the energy of self-determination, and God doing something through a human vessel yielded to His will. The outstanding leaders in the history of the church of God have been men who have learned this lesson and have realized the truth of Philippians 2:13. Moses himself came into possession of this truth, and it become a vital part of his equipment for leadership.

The consciousness of limitations and the realized inability of self led to the excuses recorded in Exodus 3:11-4:17. There was no sense of inability at the close of his education in Pharaoh's court, but at the end of his training in the desert it is both present and conspicuous. This too may be regarded as a feature in the necessary qualifications for leadership. Over against this however, we must place another quality; namely, that of assurance. As a result of the divine training and command, Moses was sure of God. This is the greatest qualification for leadership. If one is sure of God he will gladly step out and others will as gladly follow.

What My Denomination Has Meant to the World
I Peter 2:9-12

There is no relation between the topic and the Scripture lesson. Therefore one must choose between the two, or force a relationship which is unnatural and unreal. The Scripture lesson is our present choice. What we are and what we do is the burden of the apostolic message in these Bible verses. Observe the words in verse 9: "Ye are * * * that ye should."

God's people, described in 1:23 as "being born again," are a chosen generation, or, as the Revised Version puts it, "an elect race." They belong to God's new humanity, that new creation referred to in 2 Corinthians 5:17, which began with the resurrection of Christ and to which all belong who have believed in Him unto salvation. These born-again ones form a royal priesthood, or a "kingdom of priests," as in the Revised Version. Compare Revelation 1:6; 5:10. A national priesthood was offered Israel on certain conditions that never were met. The priesthood then passed to the tribe of Levi and the family of Aaron. Now it belongs to all believers in Chirst.

The Old Testament priests were washed, sheltered by sacrificial blood, and anointed with holy oil. Believers in Christ enter into all that this implies. In 1 Corinthians 6:11 it is written, "Ye are washed, ye are sanctified, ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." These believers are constituted a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ (v. 5). These sacrifices are referred to again in Hebrews 13:15, 16. They include the praises which we offer to God for his great salvation in Christ Jesus. This is our true spiritual worship, and the kind that the Father seeks. Out from this there flows a life of good works and of communicating to others all that which God has entrusted to us, thereby showing forth "the excellencies of him who called us out of darkness into his marvelous light."

Lessons from the Psalms—The Prayer-Psalm
Psalm 86:1-17

The seventh verse of this Psalm sums up the philosophy of prayer. There is a sense of need, a resolution of will, and an assurance of obtaining necessary help. This assurance comes from the experience of the past and is seen in verse 13, "Thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell." This experience of God's delivering power is the foundation of all prayer.

Our Lord came to deliver us from sin, death, the world, condemnation of broken law, the power of the grave, the judgment of the great white throne, and the lake of fire (Eph. 1:7; Heb. 2:14; Gal. 1:4; John 5:24; 1 Thess. 1:10; Rev. 20:11-15). The realization of this deliverance through faith is accompanied by the spirit and ability to pray (Gal. 4:6).

The Psalmist's conception of God is another feature in this prayer-psalm. Notice the words in verses 5, 10, and 15, "Thou art good; thou art great; thou art full of compassion." What an incentive to pray! Can one refrain from praying to such a being as the God in this Psalm—our God, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the God of John 3:16 and of Romans 8:32? So many of God's people do not follow on to know Him, hence prayer is restrained, whereas a fuller knowledge of God would make it abundant and effective.

There is also in this Psalm a consciousness of real need of help from God together with a recognition of relationship to God. The latter expresses itself in the words of verse 2, "I am holy: save thy servant that trusteth in Thee." This means that the writer was separated to God and belonged to God; that he was trustful. This added to his confidence in prayer. The sense of helplessness is manifested in the words of the first verse and permeates the Psalm throughout.

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Grant Stroh

The right is reserved to reject controversial questions and others which may be deemed unprofitable to answer. All questions should be briefly, but clearly stated. Personal answers cannot be sent.—Editors.

DEATH AS A SLEEP

A. M. F., Lowell, Mass.

(1) Several passages refer to death as a sleep, such as John 11:11; 1 Thessalonians 4:14. This does not mean an unconscious state. (2) The spirits of believers depart to go immediately to heaven (Luke 23:43; Phil. 1:23). (3) It is not probable that departed spirits know what we are doing.

CONCERNING GOD

M. N., Freeman, S. Dak.

(1) Father, Son and Holy Ghost are three persons in one being or essence. They have different offices, but in work as well as in substance they are inseparably related. (2) God is the Creator of all things throughout the entire universe (Gen. 1:1; John 1:3). (3) In connection with Luke 14:26 read Matthew 10:37. Christ is simply emphasizing the necessity of supreme love for Himself.

THE GREAT TRIBULATION

R. B., Cleveland, O.

(1) Yes, the Great Tribulation is still future, and people will be saved during it. (2) All true Christians probably will be removed from the earth before the Great Tribulation. (3) The "elect" in Matthew 24:22 probably are Jews. (4) The Tribulation is described in the Revelation, chapters four to nineteen. It may cover only the last three and one half years of that period. (5) In some respects the world has grown better, and in other respects not. (6) The Tribulation may be preceded by great revivals.

SEPARATION OR COMPROMISE

E. N., Crystal Lake, Ill.

(1) With regard to sales to raise money for the church see answer to F. E. P., Chicago, Ill.

(2) Of course there should never be any compromising of right principles or teachings, but whether one should separate himself from others because of ill-treatment or persecution is quite a different matter. We must exercise loving forbearance with those who differ from us either in doctrine or in practice. They may need merely more light. False teaching and wrong practices are so common that you might not better yourself in some other church. We live in trying times.

BOOKS RECOMMENDED

H. A., Brinkley, Ark.

(1) The Pulpit Commentary is considered very good. It is also very voluminous. (2) We know of no place where a correspondence course in New Testament Greek may be had, unless it may be Harper's Course of which inquiry might be made of the University of Chicago. (3) Little choice between Strong's and Young's Concordance. Both good. (4) Systematic Theology, by Shedd, or by Strong. (5) As to something to do in the prayer-meeting, no improvement can be made upon prayer itself. Assign definite objects. Ask for definite requests. Make large use of the Bible by assigning chapters or books to be read by the people in advance of the meeting and to be a subject of consideration in the earlier part of the hour. The Word of God thus feeds prayer.

INCONSISTENT IDEA ABOUT GOD

J. R., Grinnell, Iowa.

The conception of God in the Old and New Testaments are not inconsistent when rightly understood. In the Old Testament illustration of God's severity —ordering the man who had gathered sticks upon the Sabbath to be stoned to death, we must remember that the law had been given only recently. The man was wholly without excuse, and it was needful that an example be made of him at once, else the sanctity of the Sabbath would not be appreciated by the people, and all the good it was intended to bring to them would soon be forfeited. Seeming harshness is not incompatible with love. Strict enforcement of law does not alter the loving character of God. The God of the Old Testament is the same as of the New. Even in the New Testament we are warned that "our God is a consuming fire."

SUBSTITUTIONARY ATONEMENT

A. A., Chicago, Ill.

You are right in surmising that the article you sent contains something radically wrong. The writer is over-zealous to explain away the substitutionary element in the atonement. Atonement is far more than simply "complete surrender to God of the victim," and its purpose is very different from simply "indicating the absolute duty of the offerer and his possessions to belong to God." The wages of sin is death, and sins are not atoned for except by death. Either the sinner or his accepted substitute must suffer the penalty. In Old Testament times animal substitutes were accepted, all sacrifices pointing forward to Christ, "the Lamb of God, which beareth away the sin of the world." Upon the great Day of Atonement one goat was sacrificed to make atonement "because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel, and because of their transgressions, even all of their sins." The death of the first goat was an absolute necessity. In the case of the second goat the iniquities and sins of the people were laid symbolically upon the animal, which then carried them away into the wilderness. Thus the two goats together typified the perfect atoning work of the sacrificial Lamb of God.

THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH

J. J. S., Grandview, Man.

(1) The mission of the church is to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. (2) During the present age the salvation of the world depends upon the world-wide proclamation of the gospel and its acceptance by those who hear. (3) The meaning of "power" in Acts 1:8, is that when the Holy Spirit descended upon them their witnessing for Christ would be made effective. The proof is in the second chapter. (4) This does not mean "power to subdue the world and restore it to God." Many who heard the Spirit-filled disciples upon the Day of Pentecost were not subdued thereby. Men are able to resist even the power of the Holy Spirit. The world is to be restored to God not alone by the preaching of the gospel, but also by the direct exercise of the power of Christ (Rev. 11:15; 19:14-16).

SCHEMES FOR RAISING MONEY

F. E. P., Chicago, Ill.

Auction sales, bazaars, suppers, and other schemes for raising money for the church are disapproved for the following reasons: (1) They deceive people into imagining they are giving to the Lord when in reality it is to themselves. (2) They lower the standards of Christ's church by commercializing it. (3) They are unnecessary, because Christ has promised to supply all our needs if only we shall serve Him in the appointed ways. More prayer, faithful witnessing for Christ, and fuller consecration of our property would take care of all church finances. (5) They sometimes become substitutes for out-and-out giving to the Lord, which is God's method of financing His work among men. (6) Sacrificial, cheerful giving is a means of grace, and to raise money for the work of the church in any other way is to deprive individuals and the church of great spiritual blessing.

HARD SCRIPTURES

J. T. L., Albert Lea, Minn.

(1) We see no direct connection between Luke 22:53 and the physical darkness from noon to 3 p. m. Satan's kingdom is darkness only in a spiritual sense. (2) The commission in Matthew 28:18-20 was given to all the disciples and not the 144,000 of Revelation 7. The gospel message includes the message concerning the kingdom. (3) The virgins in Matthew 25 represent the friends of the Bridegroom. (4) Some are of the opinion that Jesus prayed in the garden for the removal of the cup for fear lest He die before coming to the cross. (5) We know of no scriptural warrant for believing that miraculous gifts will be again exercised by the church immediately prior to the return of Christ. (6) The teaching of Matthew 11:24 seems to be that the question of privilege and opportunity in the present age helps to determine the degrees of reward or punishment in the coming age. (7) The judgment depicted in Malachi 4:1-3 has reference to those living upon the earth at that time. It is quite distinct from the judgment of the Great White Throne in Revelation 20.

Abraham the Hero of Faith

Genesis 12:1-5;Hebrews 11:8-10,17-19.

Golden Text:—Abraham believed God and it was counted unto him for righteousness.—Romans 4:3

1. His Call (Gen. 12:1-5). The human race, as such, had failed, and now we see God's purpose as to the redemption of the race taking shape. Therefore He singles out this lonely man to make him the head of a nation through whom redemption was to come.

1. His Separation (v. 1). He was called to go out of his own country; to separate from his kindred and go to an unknown land. These were all very dear to his heart, but they were to be given up that Abraham might have God and be the father of all the faithful. Abraham was living among idolaters, therefore, he must separate from them. Even his kindred must be left behind for they were idolaters. Following God costs much that is dear and precious to us today. Christians are called upon to separate themselves from the world.

2. God's Gracious Promise to Him (vv. 2, 3). (1) "I will make of thee a great nation." This was fulfilled in a natural way in a great posterity (Gen. 13:16), and in a spiritual seed. See John 8:39, Galatians 3:16, 17. (2) "I will bless thee." God has wonderfully blessed Abraham in a natural and spiritual way and still greater realization of this promise is to come to Abraham's seed. (3) "Make thy name great." Abraham was called the friend of God (James 2:23). Abraham is a universal name. (4) "Thou shalt be a blessing." Untold blessings have come to the world through Abraham and still a greater blessing will be realized when the fulness of God's purpose concerning that nation shall be realized. (5) "I will bless them that bless thee." (6) "I will curse him that curseth thee." Abraham's seed is God's very touchstone. Nations and individuals who have well used Abraham's descendants have been blessed, and those who have cursed them have in turn been cursed. (7) "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." This is the all-comprehensive promise of God because it shall come to the world through the Messiah (Gal. 3:16). While Abraham had to give up much he gained infinitely more than he lost.

3. His Obedience (vv. 4, 5). Without question or delay Abraham took his departure to the unknown land. Though he did not know whither he was going he knew that God had spoken. To have God's command and promise is enough for the child of faith.

II. Abraham's Faith (Heb. 11:8-10).

1. It's Source Was the Word of God. He had heard God's call. Because God had spoken to him he went forward. Faith takes God at His word.

2. It's Practice (vv. 9,10). He never settled down anywhere even in the land of promise. He was a true pilgrim. He was content to pass through the land because his eyes were fixed on a city which had foundations, whose builder and maker was God. The Christian does not settle down in this world as though he was going to make it his home. He lives in the world but is not of it. His citizenship is in heaven. Though we may live in houses of stone and steel they are only tents for our temporary use. They will soon be forgotten.

III. Abraham's Testing (11:17-19).

1. At the Command of God He Offered Up Isaac His Only Son. (v. 17). Going out into an unknown country was simple in comparison to laying his son on the altar of sacrifice. But he who had obeyed God in going out from his country and kindred was now to pass through the supreme test.

2. The Promise of Blessing Was Wrapped up in Isaac (v. 18). It was not a promise which might take any descendant of Abraham, but this particular child. The way seemed dark and the command conflicting with the promise, but faith does not consider difficulties.

3. The Supreme Venture (v. 19). Abraham so completely trusted God that he was willing to go all the way with Him, being assured that God would even raise Isaac from the dead, in order to make good His promise.

Joseph the Preserver of His People

Genesis 45:3-15

Golden Text:—Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee (Exod. 20:12).

While the climax of the story is reached in Joseph's revelation to his brethren, yet his life should be briefly sketched in order to get the full force of this climax.

I. Loved by His Father; Hated by His Brethren (Genesis 37). The betrayal of the father's partiality increased his brother's hatred for him. His dreams were prophecies of God's dealing with them. Their utterance intensified their hatred.

II. Sold into Slavery (Genesis 37). So intensely did they hate him that they proposed to kill him. This murderous purpose was turned aside by the proposition to sell him into slavery. By this means they would get rid of him and even enjoy some profit from the transaction. So they sold him to merchant men who were going down into Egypt, and in turn they sold him as a slave.

III. Cast into Prison (Genesis 39). While serving as a slave he was falsely accused and sent to prison. Joseph's character had so impressed Potiphar that he doubted his wife's charges against him. If he had believed her he would have put this Hebrew slave to death.

IV. Made Prime Minister (Genesis 41). Though falsely accused and imprisoned the hand of the Lord was so upon him that he was soon exalted to the throne of Pharaoh.

V. His Dealing with His Brethren. (Genesis 41-44). He dealt harshly with them in order to test their characters. He knew them and knew the hatred which they had toward him; therefore before revealing himself to them he desired to test them.

VI. Joseph Reveals Himself to His Brethren (Gen. 45:1-15).

1. Alone with His Brothers (vv. 1, 2). When his pent up emotions could no longer be restrained he ordered all the men to withdraw. Here alone with his brethren he made himself known to them. There are some emotions too sacred to disclose in the presence of unsympathetic men.

2. Conscience-Smitten Brothers (v.3). When Joseph disclosed his identity they stood condemned in his presence. They were smitten with a guilty conscience. A score of years before they had put him into a pit to die, but later lifted him out and sold him into slavery. Now they are before him with reversed positions. They are at his mercy. During all these years they had carried bitter remorse. Be not deceived; some day every man shall face his sins unless they be cancelled in the blood of Jesus.

3. Divine Providence Interpreted (vv. 4-8). (1) His gracious invitation (v 4). "Come near, I am your brother." How like the Saviour! He is saying unto sinners who have wronged him, "Come near, I am your brother." (2) "Be not grieved" (v. 5). He sought by these words to allay the distress in which his brothers were. Jesus is saying the same kind words to repentant sinners today. Joseph did not minimize their guilt. Their wrongs were still wrongs. (3) "God sent me to preserve life" (vv. 5-8). God turned the wicked thoughts of these brethren to good. God is today making the wrath of men to praise Him. All that Satan can do but furthers God's purposes. The very wicked thoughts of these brothers in attempting to destroy Joseph were turned to the preservation of their lives from the grievous famine.

4. Joseph's Message to His Father (vv. 9-13). (1) "God hath made me Lord of Egypt" (v.9). He bade them hasten to his father with the assurance that God had elevated him to a place of lordship in Egypt. At every turn he recognized God's hand in his life. This is a fine specimen of humility and trust. (2) Urgent invitation (vv. 9, 10). His father is invited to come, bringing his children, grand children and flocks. This must have been a great and joyful surprise to Jacob when famine and death were facing him. Joseph having plenty, wanted his family to share it. Jesus, our Joseph, has all things committed unto Him, and He is anxious to share all these good things with us. (3) Promise of nourishment during famine (v.11). Joseph did not allow his prosperity to make him selfish. His character stood the text of prosperity. (4) "Tell my father of all my glory in Egypt" (v.13). This was not boasting but an effort to convince his father of his ability to care for him.

5. Joseph's Forgiving Love (vv.14,15). Joseph weeping upon the neck of his brethren is a most touching scene. There was entire forgiveness; there was full reconciliation. May this scene wring every vestige of unforgiveness from our hearts. This transcendent scene causes Joseph's character to shine forth in its true glory.

Moses, Liberator and Law-Giver
Exodus 14:10, 13-22

Golden Text:—Fear ye not. Stand still and see the salvation of the Lord.—Exodus 14:13.

After Joseph's death Israel quickly grew into a nation. The amazing growth of this nation aroused the envy and fear on the part of a new king who arose in Egypt. Drastic measures were instituted to check Israel's growth. The very measures designed to destroy the Hebrew menace brought to Pharaoh's court and there educated the very man who later shattered the Egyptian power and set free the enslaved people.

1. The Birth, Preservation and Education of Moses (Exod. 8:1-8)

1. His Birth (vv. 1,2). His parents were of the tribe of Levi. His father had the good sense to take a wife from his own tribe. This would insure spiritual harmony. The future of children is largely determined by the religious attitude and harmonious spirit of their parents.

2. His Preservation (vv. 3-8). The faith of his parents caused them to ignore the command of the king and they hid him for three months (Heb. 11:23). His mother discerned in him a proper child, or a child fair to God (Acts 7:20), and believed Him to be the deliverer of his people. She no doubt instilled this truth into his mind from his childhood. Perhaps led by the story of Noah's ark, she made him an ark of bulrushes and placed Moses in it, and left it at the place where Pharaoh's daughter would be attracted when she came down to bathe. Miriam, his sister, was placed where she could watch the affair, and at the opportune moment she came with a suggestion of a nurse for the baby; securing her consent Miriam brought the child's mother. The mother is always the best nurse for the baby.

3. His Education (vv. 9, 10). He was educated first at his mother's knee, the place where his character was formed. It was here no doubt that the indomitable purpose was formed to suffer affliction with the people of God (Heb. 11:24-26). He was also educated at the Egyptian court where he became acquainted with the wisdom of Egypt (Acts 7:22). Education at his mother's knee gave him character and education at the Egyptian court qualified him to be the historian and law-giver of his people.

II. The Call of Moses (Exodus 3).

1. The Lord Speaks from the Bush (vv.1-6). It was while keeping the flocks of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared in the vision of the burning bush. This bush enveloped in flames yet unconsumed symbolized the people of God enswathed in the very fire of the Lord, of God's dwelling in the midst of his selected people. When Moses stepped aside to behold this strange thing, God taught him the lesson of proper approach unto Himself.

2. The Lord Commissions Moses (vv.7-10). God assured him of His active interest in His people having seen their affliction, heard their cry, and known their sorrows, and that He had come down to deliver them from the hand of the Egyptians through Moses as His agent. Moses keenly felt his handicaps. God patiently heard his objections and one by one removed them.

III. Moses' Contest with Pharaoh (Exod. 5:12).

The ten plagues reveal the contest carried on between Moses and Pharaoh before the people were set free. The tenth stroke from the strong hand of the Almighty made Pharaoh willing to let Israel go. The tenth turn of the screw of omnipotence brought him to time. Thus Israel went on her way toward the promised land with a high hand.

IV. Israel Crossing the Red Sea (Exod. 14:10, 13-22).

1. Israel's Straightened Circumstances (v. 10.). At the Lord's direction they changed from their first course and were apparently in great difficulty. The Red Sea was before them; the mountains on either side. Pharaoh who had repented of his action, with his chariots of war was closing in upon them. In their distress they cried to the Lord.

2. Israel's Miraculous Escape (vv.13-22). (1) Moses' words to the people, (vv.13, 14). (a) "Fear not." Since God was leading them by day and by night with the pillar of cloud and fire, they had no need of fear even if they were in straightened circumstances. (b) "Stand still." Standing still in such a trial is faith taking hold of God's promise. (c) "See the salvation of the Lord." "The Lord shall fight for you." When the Lord fights for us the enemy shall surely be destroyed. (2) God's words to Moses (vv. 15-18). (a) "Go forward." No use to pray longer when God says "move forward." (b) "Lift up thy rod." This served as something tangible upon which their faith could rest. They were to go through the sea on dry ground. But the symbol of God's presence now passed to the rear, to hold the enemy at bay. (3) The divided sea (vv. 21, 22). As they went forward the very thing which they feared became a wall of protection on either side.

3. Overthrow of the Egyptians (vv. 22-27). Having seen the Israelites go across dry shod the Egyptians immediately pursued them, insanely thinking that they could follow in the wake of God's children. That which was a protection to God's children became an instrument of destruction to the Egyptians. So complete was their overthrow that Pharaoh and his army were all destroyed.

5. Israel's Song of Triumph (15:1-21). They attributed their deliverance, the overwhelming defeat of their enemies, to God. They could well sing their song of triumph for they were on the other shore. This is the song of Moses. One day there will be a company which shall sing a song which will include this, being the song of Moses and the Lamb.

V. The Law Given (Exod. 20:1-17). God gave through Moses to the world a complete code of laws setting forth duties to God and man. The laws of all civilized nations are based upon these.

Ruth the Faithful Daughter
Book of Ruth

Golden Text:—Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.—Ruth 1:16.

I. Ruth's Connection with Naomi. (1:1-15). On account of famine in Bethlehem of Judah, Naomi with her husband and two sons sojourned in the land of Moab. After the death of her husband her two sons married Moabitish women. After a time her sons died also. This is a dreary picture indeed; three widows in the same family. After the death of her sons Naomi resolved to return to her homeland, having heard that the Lord had visited his people in giving them bread. They went to Moab to escape trouble but only got into more. This is always the case when God's people go into the world to escape difficulties, they are sure to suffer in consequence. It was not until Naomi was thus chastised that she resolved to return. One purpose of God's chastisement is to cause His children to return. Naomi had the good sense to recognize that the hand of the Lord was upon her for good. Happy is the one who profits by correction. When the time came for her to go Ruth and Orpah accompanied her for a distance. This she permitted but determined to place before them frankly the difficulties which would necessarily confront them. Having laid the matter squarely before them she urged them repeatedly to turn back.

II. Ruth's Noble Choice (1:16-18) Much as Naomi loved her daughters-in-law, she would not have them go into this matter blindly. She wished them to know the seriousness of their undertaking. She told them the worst that could come upon them. Then if hardships came they could only blame themselves. This principle ought to be carried out by us in all our relations in life. In business the spirit of frankness should be manifest. At home we should deal with each other in the most straightforward way. The same thing should characterize our behaviour in the church and in society. In this respect Jesus Christ is our supreme example. He held before the people the great fact of casting their lot with Him, but always frankly told them what it would cost.

1. No Chance to Marry Again. Naomi told her that she had no more sons for whom she could wait. In that day to be unmarried was the greatest disgrace. Society differed then from now. No avenues were left open by which a woman could earn her living and be independent. Futhermore it was against God's law for the Jews to marry outside of their own people.

2. She Must Renounce Her Gods. Her idolatrous worship could not be carried on in the land where God's people dwelt. This was delicately touched upon when Orpah went back (v.15). Orpah went back when it was plain there was no chance to get a husband. Now Naomi puts an additional test upon Ruth, that of giving up her religion. Ruth was equal to the occasion. Her mind was fully made up. She was willing to accept as her God the one who was able to produce in His subjects the nobility of character she had observed in Naomi. Naomi's very frankness in dealing with her caused Ruth to be more determined to cast her lot with her. Ruth's position was so definite and unfaltering that the very expressions have come down to us in words which "no poetry has outrivaled, and no pathos has exceeded, and which has gone through centuries with the music that will not let them be forgotten." She was determined to share Naomi's journey, her home, her lodge, her lot in life, and her grave in death, whatever that would be. To crown it all she would renounce her heathen gods and worship Jehovah.

III. Blessings Which Attended Ruth's Faithfulness. Ruth was never sorry for her choice, because:

1. She Found the True God (1:16). Instead of her heathen god who was unable to help her she now had a living God, the God of Israel.

2. She Found Human Friends (chap. 2). As she went to glean in the field she was led to the field of Boaz, a man of wealth and grace. The servants of Boaz treated her with consideration. Even Boaz gave instructions for special consideration to be given her.

3. A Good Husband and a Happy Home (chaps. 3, 4). She not only secured a husband, but a man of God who had an abundance of this world's goods.

4. An Honored Place in the Israelitish Nation. (4:13-17). Though she had to forsake her own people she became one of a nobler people.

5. She Became a Link in the Chain of Christ's Ancestry. (4:18-22). Compare Matthew 1:5. The one who fully decides for Christ and gives up all for Him shall get a hundred-fold in this life, and in the world to come eternal life.

This story is a fine example of dispensational truth.

1. The famine in the land indicates the testing of the Jews.

2. The coming into Moab indicates the sojourn of the Israelites among the nations.

3. The sickness and eadth in Moab indicate the chastisement of the Jews and their sorrows in the present age.

4. The return to the land indicates the gathering of Israel, to their own Land.

5. Ruth's decision indicates the Gathering of the Gentiles through the Influence of the Jews.

6. The marriage between Boaz and Ruth indicates the union of the Church with Christ.

Samuel: Judge and Prophet
I Samuel 12:1-25

Golden Text:—"Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart; for consider how great things he hath done for you."—I Samuel 12:24.

Samuel means "asked of God." God gave him in answer to his mother's prayer. She promised to give him back to God. In his early childhood, his mother cared for and taught him. There is no teacher or nurse like the mother of the child. At an early age, she handed him over to the care of Eli to minister unto the Lord in the Tabernacle. While ministering unto the Lord in the Tabernacle, God called him. He responded to this call and spent a long life in useful service to God and his nation as judge and prophet. Our lesson today is his farewell address.

After Saul was made king, he gracefully retired and turned over the authority to the newly chosen ruler.

I. Samuel's Challenge to the People (v. 1-5).

1. Reminder of the Way the King had been Given. (v. 1). He showed that they were directly responsible for the change in government. Though keenly feeling the reflection upon himself, and their ingratitude to God in their demand for a king, he had not resisted their wish. He reminded them that they now had what they wanted. "Behold, a king walketh before you."

2. Review of His Own Administration (vv. 2, 3). (1) Walk from childhood (v. 2). Samuel's was a remarkable life; from childhood to old age he had lived an upright and pure life. How satisfying it must be to come to the end of life and to look back even to childhood days without regrets. (2) Career as judge and ruler (v. 3). He boldly challenged them to show where and how he had even in the smallest matters defrauded or oppressed anyone. He courted the most searching investigation of his life, even calling upon the Lord Himself to bear witness.

3. The Vote of Confidence by the People (vv. 4, 5). It was Samuel's right as he laid down the reins of government to have his record vindicated and to have his integrity established beyond a doubt, so that no evil minded man could ever be able to cast reproach upon him. There are altogether too few public men who would dare issue such a challenge as to a clean record in public and private life.

II. Samuel Reviews God's Dealing from the Time of Moses (vv. 6-15).

He reasoned with them concerning the good hand of the Lord upon them from the time of Moses. Though they with ingratitude turned from the Lord and demanded a king like the other nations, He had acceded to their request and set a king over them.

1. National Prosperity Conditioned by Obedience (v. 14). Though they had displeased God in choosing a king, if they would fear the Lord and render obedience, national prosperity would still be given. The nation which will not walk in God's way cannot expect God's blessing. Would that the nations today could see that obedience to God is the only way to prosperity! Nations should find out God's will and then bring themselves into harmony therewith. God's laws must be obeyed by the rulers as well as the subjects.

2. Disobedience to God Meant the Nation's Ruin. (v. 15). It is folly to ask God's blessing upon a nation while it is living in rebellion against Him. True statesmanship is to find out God's will concerning the nation and so direct that in all its laws and customs there may be harmony with that will. The nations that have forgotten God have perished and are forgotten. May our own nation take this to heart!

III. Samuel's Own Vindication (vv. 16-19).

This was such a critical hour in the history of the nation that Samuel sought to indelibly impress its meaning on their hearts. This he did by means of the thunder and rain out of season. Harvest time was not the season for thunder and rain so when it came at the call of Samuel, the people were affrighted. They saw it as an example of God's mighty power

Robert H. Glover

"Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high"—Luke 24:49.

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature"—Mark 16:15.

"Tarry Ye," "Go Ye"—these are the two and only two post-resurrection commands of Christ. At first sight they appear to be mutually contradictory; in reality they are not, but are mutually complimentary. They stand, the one for Pentecost—the enduement of the Holy Spirit, the other, for missions—the evangelization of the world. Pentecost—missions, the two belong together, and in this order. Pentecost is the essential preparation for missions. To go without having tarried would make the going futile. But missions are also the inevitable result of Pentecost. To tarry and not to go would be to mark the tarrying as spurious. The Holy Spirit comes down; the missionaries go out. The disciples "were all filled with the Holy Ghost," and at once "began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance," addressing men "out of every nation under heaven;" and a little further on we read that they "went everywhere preaching the word."

The history of later missions has been in this respect identical with the history of apostolic missions. Whenever and wherever a fresh effusion of the Spirit has been experienced, there have followed, naturally and inevitably, fresh missionary zeal and endeavor. Wherever Christian life in the individual or the community has become cold and feeble, missionary interest and effort have died down.

The lesson for the church of today is quite evident. Would we see the missionary enterprise sustained? Then must we look to it that the spiritual life of the church is sustained. Would we have missionary operations on the field effective? Then must the spiritual tone of the workers be kept high. Would we launch farther out in missionary aim and effort? This can only be done by going deeper down in spiritual experience. As that saint and missionary, Andrew Murray, was wont to reiterate, at the bottom of the missionary problem is the need for spiritual revival.

"Oh for the showers on the thirsty land,
Oh for a gracious revival,
Oh for a sanctified, fearless band,
Ready to hail its arrival!"

A PASSION FOR CHRIST AND SOULS

The motto of Count Zinzendorf, the great founder of Moravian missions, was: "I have one passion; it is He and He alone." But this passion for Christ led on to a passion for souls, as expressed in his further words: "Henceforth that place is my home, where I can have the greatest opportunity of laboring for my Saviour."

NEW FIGURES FOR JEWISH POPULATIONS

The American Jewish Year Book for 1922-23 publishes new tables of population based upon fresh censuses. The total number of Jews in the world is put at 15,393,815; in the U. S. A., 3,300,000; in Poland, 3,716,000; in the Ukraine, 2,375,000; in Roumania, 950,000. These figures vary considerably from previously accepted estimates.

A new census of the Holy Land was taken last October. While the final tabulation has not yet been made public, a well based forecast puts the figures at 450,000 Moslems, 95,000 Jews and 80,000 Christians. This would give a total of only 625,000 as over against the much larger previous estimates. The Palestine Government last year placed the total population at 750,000. Particular interest attaches to the number of Jewish inhabitants. The Arabs have put the Jews down at 65,000, while the Zionists some weeks ago claimed 120,000. The new forecast of 95,000 comes midway between these two extremes, and makes the Jewish population about one-seventh of the whole, instead of one-tenth or less, as heretofore estimated. This suggests a shorter and easier task of securing a Jewish majority of inhabitants in Palestine.

WHEN MISSIONARY SUCCESS BECOMES A PERIL

The American Presbyterian mission, which is the sole missionary agency except for the American Bible Society among the 9,000,000 of Siam, has extended its work into the adjoining Chinese province of Yunnan, among the aboriginal Tai people who are akin to the people of eastern Siam and Laos. The first station opened was at Chiengrung. Now a second place, Yuankiang, fifteen days farther in, has been occupied.

A Sacred Tibetan Yak

These long-haired, shaggy animals are never killed, but allowed to roam about at will, and the owner of the property upon which a yak may stop must not drive him away but feed him as long as he chooses to stay.

Dr. Charles E. Park, the medical member of the staff, writing last autumn tells of the beginning already of a great revival. The converts then numbered 1,406, and whole villages were throwing away their "demons" and enrolling as Christian catechumens. The very success of the work was felt to be its peril, because of the utter inadequacy of the missionary staff and the impossibility of giving the enquirers and new converts the spiritual teaching and care they need.

A NEW ERA FOR CHINESE WOMEN WORKERS

The Bible Teachers' Training School for Women at Nanking, China, marks a new and important development in the ministry of Christian Chinese women. Chinese Bible-women have hitherto been confined to women of mature age, who had had little or no education in their childhood, and most of whom began to learn to read and write only at the age of thirty or forty. They could become helpers to the foreign lady missionaries, and many of them have been devoted and fruitful workers of their kind, breaking down prejudices, opening doors, and winning souls for Christ. But very few of them were fitted to become leaders. As the new China has evolved it has brought with it higher education and larger recognition for women, and a new and wonderful sphere of evangelistic ministry has opened up for consecrated young Christian women.

This training school is as yet the only one of its grade in China. Its object is to train educated young women, all of them of college or at least high school standing, to become women leaders in the Chinese church. The school is now ten years old, and the number of students has increased from two in the first year to seventy-eight in 1922. These came from fourteen provinces and represented twenty-two different missions. Already seventy-three have been graduated, and these have nearly all entered active service as evangelistic workers and teachers in Bible schools and girls' schools. There are far more immediate openings for such trained women than there are candidates to enter them. This school aims to bring its students to know and love and be able to teach the Word of God.

A DEMON CAST OUT

Rev. Henry J. Scudder, of the Arcot mission in South India, writes in the Bible Society Record of a young man who had bitterly opposed some of the outcaste villagers who had been baptized. One day he became, as the poeple say, possessed by a demon, the symptoms resembling closely the New Testament descriptions of demon possession. The native pastor whom he attacked sent for a Bible, and when it arrived, he ordered the young man to listen to the words recorded in the fifth chapter of Mark. As he read, he prayed earnestly that by the power of the Word the demon would be cast out of the young man before him. With solemnity he read the words of the Master, "Come forth, thou unclean spirit, out of the man." When he had finished reading the passage, he said, "Such is the power of my High Priest, Jesus Christ, the Son of God and the Saviour of the World. What have you to say now?" Upon this, to the astonishment of every one, the demon-possessed young man lifted his hands over his head, clapped them together three times, and fell down in a swoon, and the demon was gone! His relatives lifted him up to a sitting posture, and he opened his eyes; his tenseness was all gone, and he was his natural self.

EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN IN COLOMBIA

Very interesting reports have come to hand concerning the three months' special evangelistic campaign of Rev. Harry Strachan and party in Colombia, S. A., which closed recently. Local missionaries, believers, theater-owners and managers, and the public in general join with the evangelists themselves in one united testimony as to the mighty power of God manifested in the services. The gospel was preached on river steamers, in market places, in public plazas and in halls and theaters, besides regular churches and chapels. Attendance ran from scores to hundreds and in some places to thousands. Yet, despite the fact that Colombia is one of the most bigoted Roman Catholic countries and the priests bitterly opposed the campaign and tried in every way to make trouble, the meetings without exception were quiet and reverent, no disturbances occurred, and a profound impression was made upon the crowds everywhere. Mr. Strachan himself writes that never before in any campaign has he seen anything comparable to the mighty working of the Spirit of God in these meetings. A deep hush of silence was upon the people, and at times it seemed as if the Holy Spirit Himself was audibly speaking as He wrought deep conviction of sin, righteousness and judgment. The missionaries testify to the deepening of the spiritul life of the Christians and the awakening of new and widespread interest in the gospel through this campaign.

Mr. Strachan is now in the midst of a similar campaign in Venezuela, an equally destitute and difficult field.

BRIEF MISSIONARY ITEMS

Encouraging testimonies come from a number of missionaries in China as to the success of the new phonetic script as a means of enabling many illiterate adults, especially women, to learn in a short time to read the Word of God. The whole New Testament is now available in script.

It is deeply to be regretted that under the present disordered conditions in China the cultivation of native opium, which had been completely banished, is revived on a large scale. The fight against this evil must be fought over again.

Pyeng Yang, once known as "the worst city in Korea," where the early missionaries only thirty years ago met with bitter opposition, and the first converts were sorely persecuted, thrown into prison and tortured, has now fourteen churches attended by 10,000 Christians, and a score of modern institutions for the training of the spiritual leaders of the new day.

The statistics of the Presbyterian church in Korea for 1922 include the following deeply impressive items: Baptisms during year, 10,535; catechumens received, 15,640; children in Sunday schools, 67,955; teachers in Sunday-schools, 14,522; total Christian contributions, $532,619.

Bishop Azariah, who a few years ago was appointed the first native Indian Bishop, has now been given episcopal jurisdiction in four districts in which the two great Church of England missionary societies, the C. M. S. and S. P. G., are working. He has thus the direction of some sixty Telugu clergy laboring among 1,000,000 Christians.

Rev. O. R. Palmer, director of the American Christian Relief Mission in behalf of the distressed people of eastern Europe, calls attention to the alarming progress of Satan's program in Red Russia. They have openly declared war against heaven and burned an effigy of the Supreme Being. Mr. Palmer remarks on the significance of all this in line with the heading up for the Antichrist, and urges the importance of putting over God's program of getting His Word into that country and helping forward its evangelization.

SOME THINGS THAT WE CAN BE CERTAIN ABOUT

1 John 3:5

1. That He was manifested.
2. That He was manifested to take away our sins.
3. That in Him is no sin.

2 Timothy 1:12

1. I know whom I have believed.
2. I know that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him.
3. I know He is able to keep it against that day.

1 John 3:2

1. That He shall appear.
2. We shall be like Him.
3. We shall see Him as He is.

—C. E. Richter.

ON REDEMPTION

1. I Am Redeemed by—
   Blood (1 Pet. 1:19).
   Power (Neh. 1:10).
2. I Am Redeemed from—
   Bondage (Exod. 6:6).
   Enemy (Ps. 106:10).
   Iniquity (Titus 2:14).
   Curse of the Law (Gal. 3:13).
3. The Lord Has Redeemed—
   The Soul (Ps. 49:8).
   The Body (Rom. 8:23).
   The Life (Ps. 103:4).
4. The Beauty of the Redemption—
   Is Plenteous (Ps. 130:7).
   Is Precious (Ps. 49:8).
   Is Eternal (Heb. 9:12).

—Chas. Inglis.

THOUGHTS ABOUT CHRIST

1. He claimed equality with the Father, and said that He came from the Father, and would return to the Father. "Before Abraham was, I am."

2. He never made a confession of sin, or fault, or short-coming, or weakness. "Which of you convinceth me of sin?"

3. As to His mighty deeds, recall the words of Nicodemus, "No man could do these miracles which thou doest, except God be with him."

4. He never put Himself on the same class with His disciples. His words were: "I ascend to my Father, and to your Father; to my God, and to your God." He did not say "to our Father."

5. He was worshiped and adored by His apostles and disciples. Why did He not stop them? They were guilty of idolatry if He were not truly the Son of God. The martyrs prayed to Him—as Stephen: "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit."

6. Note the assertiveness of Jesus: "Come unto me," He said. Moreover, He claimed to be the Judge of all mankind.

Christ satisfies heart, conscience, intellect, will. Every burdened soul will find rest in Him. "I came to Jesus as I was." More than that—

I looked to Jesus, and I found
In Him my Star, my Sun,
And in the Light of Life I'll walk
Till traveling days be done.

—W. Phillips.

Why do those who deny a hell insist upon clinging to a belief in a heaven? They rest on a similar foundation found in the same Bible and are supported by a similar philosophy. They stand or fall together.

STEPS IN THE LIFE OF FAITH

Seen and Illustrated in Hebrews 11

1. Worshiping (example: Abel). "By faith Abel offered." Faith sees the Unseen (v. 27) and worships.
2. Walking (example: Enoch). "By faith Enoch walked." Faith holds communion with the Unseen.
3. Working (example: Noah). "By faith . . . Noah prepared an ark." Faith works in the strength of the Unseen.
4. Waiting (example: Abraham). "A place which he should afterwards receive." Faith awaits God's time.
5. Watching (example: Isaac). "Concerning things to come." Faith anticipates future glory.
6. Witnessing (example: Jacob). "When he was a dying, blessed . . . and worshiped . . ." Faith hands on the lighted torch.
7. Willing (example: Joseph). "Gave commandment concerning his bones." Faith sees the ultimate fulfilment of all God's promises. They "took the bones of Joseph" (Exod. 13:19).
8. Warring (example: Moses). A life of warfare. Faith wars against the enemies of faith.—S. B. Cambie, in The Christian.

YOU CAN NEVER TELL

You never can tell when you send a word—
Like an arrow shot from a bow
By an archer blind—be it cruel or kind,
Just where it will chance to go.
It may pierce the heart of your dearest friend,
Tipped with its poison or balm;
To a stranger's heart in life's great mart
It may carry its pain or its calm.

You never can tell when you do an act
Just what the result will be;
But with every deed you are sowing a seed,
Though its harvest you may not see.
Each kindly act is an acorn dropped
In God's productive soil;
Though you may not know, yet the tree shall grow,
And shelter the brows that toil.

—Selected.

Christ is in us in order that He may be seen through us, in all the activities of our lives and influence of our character. * * * If one is seeking, first and only His glory, then there is little doubt as to the clear shining of the light, and but little doubt also as to its influence. —J. Stuart Holden.

"WHERE ART THOU?"

GENESIS 3:9

This question has been often applied to the unconverted, hiding behind the trees of iniquity and self-confidence, but let us apply it to the believer in Christ. Many answers may be given to the question.

Where Art Thou Positionally? "In Christ" (Eph. 1:1).

Where Art Thou Practically? As to walk, we should be in the company of the Lord, like Enoch (Gen. 5:22); as to worship, we should be in the holy place of separation, like Moses (Exod. 33:11); as to work, we should be doing it faithfully, like Nehemiah, who worked on amid taunt and opposition (Neh. 6:3); as to witnessing, we should be like Paul and not shun to declare the whole counsel of God (Acts 20:27); as to prayer, we should be lifting up holy hands (1 Tim. 2:8), like Daniel, who was ever found at the throne of grace (Dan. 6:10, 11); as to consecration, we should be wholehearted, like Levi, who feared not to fear God, and therefore feared no one else (Mal. 2:3-6); and as to power, we should be in the current of the Spirit's might, like Stephen; then we shall have the shining face, the flashing testimony, and the fearless courage of inwrought conviction (Acts 6:15).

—F. E. Marsh.

WHAT IS SIN?

1. "Sin is transgression of the law"—lawlessness (1 John 3:4, cf. R. V.).
2. A grievous malady, contaminating the whole of man's being (Isa. 1:4, 5; Rom. 3:10-18).
3. An obscuring cloud, which hides the face of God's blessing (Isa. 59:2).
4. A binding cord, which holds man in its power (Prov. 5:22).
5. A tyrannical owner, who embitters the lives of his slaves (Neh. 9:37).
6. A disturber of rest, which causes disorder and anxiety (Ps. 38:3).
7. A robber of blessing, which strips and starves the soul (Jer. 5:25).
8. A terrible devastation, which brings untold desolation (Mic. 6:13).
9. A tripper-up, which continually overthrows the sinner to his hurt (Prov. 13:6).
10. A record writer, which leaves its indelible mark upon the committor (Jer. 17:1).
11. A betraying presence, which "will out" no matter what pains are taken to hide it (Ezek. 21:24).
12. A sure detective, which turns upon the sinner and finds him out (Num. 32:23).
13. An accusing witness, which points its condemning finger at the prisoner in the bondage of sin (Isa. 59:12).
14. A sum of addition which accumulates its weight to the condemnation of the sinner (Isa. 30:1).

—F. E. Men.

The hope that springs eternal in the human breast dies with the man if Christ be not raised.

THE GREATEST BOOK ON "DISPENSATIONAL TRUTH" IN THE WORLD

This book is bound in cloth, Atlas form, size 10½x11¼ inches, and is one inch thick. It contains 34 chapters, 300 columns of reading matter, equivalent to an ordinary book of 450 pages, and also 42 splendid Prophetical Charts, 9x20 inches, covering two pages, 48 one page charts, and numerous cuts. The Charts are simple, clear, uniform in style, and present every phase of "Dispensational Truth." It is the result of 35 years' study of the "Prophetic Word." The book is SANE, not a "TIME SETTER," contains no speculative matter, is not made up of quotations from other writers, but is based solely on the Scriptures from the "FUTURIST STANDPOINT." It is of permanent value, and a mine of information on "Prophetic Truth" for the busy Pastor, Evangelist, Bible Teacher, and all lovers of the Word. It is largely used in Bible Schools all over the world.

TESTIMONIALS

"Mr. Larkin is a 'Master Workman' in 'Rightly Dividing the Word'." (Rev. I. M. Haldeman, D. D.)

"It is the best collection of 'Dispensational Charts' ever published. I know of none to compare with it." (Rev. Frank S. Weston, Toronto Bible College).

"It is the most remarkable publication on 'Dispensational Truth' in existence. The Charts are masterly and cover the entire range of Bible History and Prophecy. With the Scofield Bible and this book before him the student will be well equipped to secure an all-around knowledge of the 'Plan of the Ages.'" (Rev. Charles C. Cook).

"Pastor Clarence Larkin has published what may be called the most elaborate and exhaustive specimen of Biblical and Dispensational Cartography that has ever been designed." (Rev. F. W. Farr, D. D.)

ABIGAIL

I Samuel 25

This narrative furnishes a beautiful illustration of a redeemed sinner.

1. Her Name. It meant "gift of the father;" or, "the father's joy." The prefix "Ab" or "Abba, father," is applied to the children of God in Romans 8:15. "Abba" was a title never to be used by slaves in addressing a master; but only by children. Nor could "Imma" be used in speaking to a mistress. (See Isa. 8:4): "Before the child shall have knowledge to cry Abi, Immi."

All is gift in the kingdom of grace. Jesus is the gift of God to the world (John 2:16). The Spirit is the gift of Christ to the Church (John 16:7). The Church is the gift of the Father to the Son (John 17:22, 24). Names also express character (Gen. 32:28; John 1:42; Eph. 2:12, 19). In Abigail's name we have the forecast of her disposition and destiny.

2. Her Beauty. She was comely both in person and character. When the righteousness of Christ adorns a saint, he is said to be, in God's estimation, "all fair" (Cant. 2:14; 4:7; Col. 1:21,22; Rev. 21:10,11).

3. Her Knowledge. She knew the high future destiny of David, while her husband only saw him as a runaway servant, the son of a herdsman. So in spiritual matters, "the natural man discerneth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him." But "the secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will show them his covenant" (Ps. 25:14; Amos 3:7). God and His purposes must be discerned by faith (1 Cor. 1:21). There is a gift of knowledge, and an unction of knowledge (1 John 2:20, 27). "If any man do God's will, he shall know of the doctrine."

4. Her Loneliness. Nabal, her husband, gave her no sympathy. His name meant "folly." As his name, so his character. He saw nothing lovely in the rejected, homeless, throneless David. To many now, Jesus, the true David, is as "a root out of dry ground" (Isa. 53:2, 3). The world is at enmity with the friends of Christ (John 25:19,20; 26:2).

5. Her Faith. It reached beyond the present circumstances. David was then in poverty and persecution. His life was "hunted like a partridge upon the mountains." Abigail discerned his future exaltation, and treated him as if he were even then king over Israel (Matt. 16:15-17). So we have Paul anticipating, and suffering for the prospective glory of David's antitype, Jesus (2 Cor. 4:8, 9; Phil. 2:9-11).

6. Her Service. It was twofold. God has both priests and Levites. The one class ministered before the altar. The other served in things pertaining to the worship, and bore the furniture of the Tabernacle when moved. In the New Testament church there are pastors and deacons. Each Christian may sometimes blend the twofold service in themselves. Abigail ministered to David (1 Pet. 4:10, 11). She also interceded for Nabal (Mark 7:25-29). In serving David she also remembered his young men. What we do for His disciples is done unto Jesus Himself (Matt. 25:40). Prayer is a great lever in a believers' hands. Consider Moses' power, when God said, "Let me alone, that I may curse Israel" (Deut. 9:14; Acts 12:5).

7. Her Request. She begged David to remember her when established in his kingdom. So the thief prayed, "Lord, remember me" (Luke 23:41). David's answer was, "Peace, I have accepted thy person." Jesus desires to have His own with Him in His glory (John 17:24).

8. Her Husband's Protection. David's men defended the possessions of Nabal (vv. 15, 16). He owed a debt of gratitude to David. The civil peace of the world is due largely to the Bible, and to the Christians in it. The Church is designated as "salt," to show its use in the world in staying back the corruption of sin.

9. Her Husband's Loss. He should have been aware of David's kingly character and coming power; but fleshly lust made him insensible. He was in a drunken sleep. Sinners are asleep now. Some will awake too late. (Matt. 25:11,12). Saints are asleep also (Jonah 1:6; Eph. 5:14)

10. Her Own Reward. She followed David in his rejection (Matt. 19:27-29). When Nabal died, she married him (Eph. 5:27). The law is cruel as Nabal. It no longer has dominion over us, for it is dead to us, and we are joined to Christ (Rom. 7:4).

11. Her Grand Deliverance. 1 Samuel 30:18. When he was exalted she shared his glory (1 John 3:2; Rom. 8:17; 2 Tim. 2:12; Rev. 19:7, 8).

A similar destiny awaits the followers of Christ. When He bears the government of the universe, His Abigail shall rule with Him in power and great glory.

—George C. Needham.

TRIPLE REDEMPTION

"He entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us."—Heb. 9:12.

He is appearing now in the presence of God to break the constraining power and the compelling power of sin; so that, for those who trust in Him and walk with Him, "sin shall not have dominion over you." And He is coming again to break and to destroy the continuing power of sin. When He comes again it shall be "without sin." Every question of sin, its very presence, shall be gone from those who are His people.—Hubert Brooke.

DR. W. W. HAMILTON'S TRIBUTE TO D. L. MOODY

Just a boy shoe clerk, accepting his opportunity when Christ was presented as his Saviour and faithful to the opening opportunities and privileges of his unfolding life, made his name a blessing around the world and one that will continue throughout the ages.

The Bible Rescue Mission

626 WEST MADISON STREET CHICAGO

The many friends of the Bible Rescue Mission, we believe, will rejoice with us to know that the Lord has wonderfully blessed the work of the Mission during the past year. While the financial receipts have not been large, they have been sufficient to meet all our needs, i. e. (we have not only been able to pay for the salaries, rent, and for supplies, but in a limited way we have also been able to give help to many who needed it in a substantial way.)

We are favorably situated because of being in the very heart of the lodging house district and within a few blocks of both the Union and Northwestern Depots, where thousands of strangers are coming in every day. When there is no other place for the strangers to turn, the policemen often direct them to the Mission, knowing that there will be a warm place for them, something to eat and either the Superintendent or the Secretary of the Mission on duty to help such people in finding friends, locating work, etc.

The responsibilities are increasing. We ought to have larger quarters and if possible, another assistant for the Superintendent, but we are only doing as much work as we have funds to provide for.

If any of the Lord's people would like to help in this work, we would be glad to get in communication with them. If you will send us your name, we will be glad to send you our monthly reports and a copy of "Our Messenger," our quarterly magazine.

Truth Illuminated

By Shafts from Various Quarters

WRONG INTERPRETATION

A mother desiring to teach her son orderliness sent him at school the framed motto: "A place for everything and everything in its place." Sometime later, she discovered the motto, hanging on the wall behind a curtain. Behind the curtain on the floor there was a heap of clothing, shoes and books. There is a sinful method of interpreting truth.

OUR BUSINESS TO SOW THE SEED

"You have preached twenty years, and have only made one convert," was the taunt with which a man assailed a servant of the Lord. "Have I converted one?" asked the minister. "Yes, there is such a one, who is really converted under your ministry." "Then here is twenty years more for another," replied the man of God, and all eternity would endorse the wisdom of his utterance.

HAVE YOU EVER SAID "THANK YOU?"

A woman was visiting a hospital. She went up to a bed on which lay a wounded soldier, and said gently, "Thank you for being wounded for me." The man's face brightened. That was a new thought to him; it made the pain more bearable to look upon it in that light. Do you realize that, long ago, Some One was wounded for you? And that "Some One" was no less than the Son of God Himself?

THE PRACTICING COUNTS

A man was once asked under whose preaching he had been converted to God. With a smile he replied, "Not under the preaching of any one; it was under my aunt's practicing." The quiet godly ways and conversation of his relative had more effect upon him than all the sermons he had ever heard. She was an epistle written in his heart. She was known by her fruit, for she followed in the path of Him who was meek and lowly in heart, and who has left us an example that we should follow His steps.

A GOOD ANSWER

To demand evidence of moral truths, which is inconsistent with the nature of such truth, is uncandid and absurd. The method of the Quaker in dealing with the atheist is a good one. Said the latter: "Did you ever see God?" "No." "Did you ever feel God?" "No." "Did you ever smell God?" "No." "Do you believe there is any God?"

The Quaker then asked the infidel: "Friend, did thee ever see thy brains?" "No." "Did thee ever feel thy brains?" "No." "Did thee ever smell thy brains?" "No." "Dost thee think thee has any brains?"

The Evangelistic Field

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.
Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

Dr. Hofmeister held an evangelistic campaign at the First Baptist Church, Bellevue, O., Feb. 25-Mar. 11.

Rev. F. McP. Bayles, reports a series of revival meetings held at Shawmut, Mont., with the pastor, Rev. Mr. Laster. This is the first evangelistic effort ever held there.

A. A. Holmes with headquarters at Sioux Falls, S. Dak., is state evangelist for the Baptists of South Dakota, where he has been continuously engaged until April 1.

H. M. Guynn, writing from Lawrenceburg, Tenn., says: "Will finish up my work as teacher in the Bible school here the last of March, and be ready for revival work the first of April."

P. H. McCarthy, Superintendent of the Morning Star Mission, Joliet, Ill., reports the results of the last quarter's work at the Mission, showing 128 converts.

Robert McMurdo of Goodyear, Ariz., writes: "I am devoting a good part of my time to the distribution of Spanish tracts. Arizona has 100,000 resident Mexicans."

H. August Hunderup writes from St. Johns, Ore.: "I am in the first days of my meeting at St. Johns. A wonderful interest is manifest and we anticipate a glorious meeting. I next go to Eugene, Ore., and then to Fairview."

A report from Rev. and Mrs. Ellery G. Aldridge tells that they have closed a meeting in the Tabernacle Baptist Church, of Syracuse, N. Y., with 48 professed conversions. From there they went to Stamford, N. Y., for a three weeks' series of meetings.

Evangelist S. E. Lewis with singer, Amos Phipps, closed, Sunday, February 18, a splendid campaign at Evergreen Christian Church, New Albany, Pa., with over 60 decisions for the Christian life. The closing Sunday afternoon the evangelist baptized for the pastor 17 candidates, and in the evening 18 united with the church. The majority were men.

Frank E. Lindgren writes from Miles City, Mont.: "Mrs. Lindgren and I are just starting an evangelistic campaign here following successful work at Billings and Helena, Mont. After our meetings here we expect to go to Bozeman and Lewistown, Mont."

The Prestons write from Cambridge, O.: "We began here, Sunday, January 28, at the M. E. church, for a three weeks meeting with Dr. Luce. One hundred in the choir. Attendance of 1,100 at present. Outlook good for a great meeting."

The Vinaroffs, gospel musicians, helped the pastor of the Trinity U. B. Church at Cleveland, O., for three weeks in February. The church was revived and souls were led to Christ. After closing there on February 18 they went to Bedford, Ind., for two weeks with the First M. E. Church.

C. B. Brooks writes: "We were with Victor Lightbourne, evangelist, at Norfolk, Va., in December, after which we assisted Rev. I. M. Page, at Empire, O., in a series of meetings. From here we go to Colonial Avenue M. E. Church, Norfolk, in March, again assisting Mr. Lightbourne with whom we expect to continue until the summer months."

Edward L. Jeambey writes: "We closed a successful meeting at Bostwick, Neb., January 21. Forty-one were added to the church and more to follow. The town in general was cleaned up and a building program for the church launched." Mr. Jeambey next went to Mt. Clare, Neb., where they were looking for victory.

John W. Erskine and Ross E. Bowman write: "We wish to report an evangelistic campaign at Galien, Mich., where we were told it would be useless to attempt any effort along evangelistic lines. However, many high school students found the Saviour precious, and demonstrated their stand by coming forward when the altar call was given. We closed a three weeks series February 4; thence we went to Union City, Mich."

S. D. Goodale, writing from Marquette, Neb., reports: "We closed a meeting at Ord, Neb., last Sunday night, January 28. We had a real spiritual awakening among the church people, and 138 professions. We started with about 125 people present at the first service on Sunday morning, and had about 700 at the last service. The place was stirred religiously as never before, so the older people say. We began here in Marquette last night. The outlook is good. I have open dates after this meeting."

Miss C. B. Grunert, a former Institute student is spending several months in British Columbia. Miss Grunert is associated with Rev. F. A. Robinson, M.A., who for thirteen years has been secretary of evangelism for the Presbyterian church in Canada. Of their mission in Kamloops reports tell of widespread interest and of the daily prayer meeting, outgrowing the capacity of the meeting room. Mr. Robinson spent a summer at Mount Hermon in his early student days.

Robert L. Selle of Winfield, Kan., spent the month of February in a soul-winning campaign in the Methodist church of Billings, Okla., after which his engagements included Manchester, Okla., for March. Mrs. Selle was with him in Billings and did effective work among the women and children. Dr. Selle was pastor and district superintendent for twenty-five years before entering the evangelistic field, and has been known as an evangelistic pastor as well as an evangelistic district superintendent.

E. DeWitt Johnston, writes from Abingdon, Ill., under date of February 26: "The Johnston-Swartzbaugh party are in the midst of a great union tabernacle meeting here, the tabernacle erected by volunteer labor. Never in the history of the city has there been such an awakening. Hundreds are being saved. There has been no great awakening in the city since the Hicks-Galloway campaign sixteen years ago. There is a spirit of prayer. Even the young people of the schools are holding prayer meetings in the class rooms. Thus far there have been nearly 500 conversions recorded. Our next campaign begins in Detroit, March 4."

Albert Allen Ketchum writes from Mahanoy City, Pa.: "We wish to report a splendid meeting in the Trinity Evangelical Church, Canton, O., which closed January 28. Rev. L. C. Cooper is the pastor. We had a total of 194 decisions. The crowds and the spirit of the meeting were splendid. The last Sunday morning the Canton Daily News broadcasted from their station WWB, our entire service. I am now in a meeting in the Primitive Methodist Church, with Rev. H. O. Fichter, pastor. God is richly blessing us. I have with me Mr. James Harrison, Bible teacher, children's worker and pianist. From here we go to Fairview Avenue Evangelical Church, Niles, O."

Dr. John H. Elliott writes: "Not for many years have I known a more wonderful work of grace than the union evangelistic campaign in Twin Falls, Idaho. For nearly three weeks the interest and attendance steadily increased, and when I left the last Sunday in January, I think the revival spirit was much more manifest than at the beginning. The Baptist, Christian, Methodist and Presbyterian churches worked as one. All evening services were held in the Methodist church, which was very spacious. The second Sunday evening an overflow meeting was arranged for in the Christian church one block away. On the last Sunday night two services were arranged for; one in the Presbyterian church at 7:00, and the other in the Methodist church at 8:00. The impression of real conviction was so marked that the pastors felt and spoke of it. The response was ready and without hesitation; quiet and deep without anything spectacular. It will be a long time before Twin Falls will lose the effect and benefit of this union revival campaign. Of the definite results God alone has the record. At this writing we are just beginning a work at Potlatch, Idaho, in a large union church seating 900."

Singing evangelist, William S. Dixon, recently engaged in a campaign in Oakland City, Ind., after which he assisted Rev. Will R. Johnson, First Presbyterian Church, Galveston, Tex.; he then assisted Rev. William Wandager, First Baptist Church, Valparaiso, Ind. There were 75 who accepted Christ, 96 consecrations, and 12 young people pledged for the ministry and mission fields. The Holy Spirit was very consciously present in all the services. Later at Carthage, Mo., Mr. Dixon assisted Rev. O. J. Cardes, pastor, First M. E. Church, where 100 accepted Christ, and there were 130 consecrations. A number of young people from the latter are planning to enter Moody Bible Institute.

Harry Vom Bruch reports one of the greatest revivals in the religious history of Buchanan, Mich., closing early in February. The people from miles around attended and many decisions for Christ were recorded. A feature of the meeting was the attractive song service under the able leadership of Fred A. Mills, of San Diego, Calif. Mr. Vom Bruch is now on the Pacific Coast where he expects to work part of the coming season.

A new organization has been formed in Albany, N. Y., known as the Evangelistic Committee of Albany and the Capitol District. The committee at present is composed mostly of laymen of different churches feeling the great need of evangelistic endeavor in this district. The by-laws of the organization state that the object of the committee is to promote aggressive evangelistic work, Bible conferences, etc., in the Capitol District during all seasons of the year. The committee invites correspondence with similar evangelistic organizations particularly in New York State, and would like to get in touch with readers of the MOODY MONTHLY located in this field who are interested in this work. The present chairman of the committee is Rev. F. L. Squires.

Charles O. Miller reports having closed the first campaign of the year with the Rose Avenue Baptist Church, Dallas, Tex. There was not as great an ingathering as was hoped for, but it was a good meeting. In fact, the members of the church were greatly revived and re-dedicated their lives to the Lord's work. Since the meeting with their new pastor, Samuel D. Taylor leading, no one is taken into the membership of the church who does not agree to refrain from all Sunday amusements. The meeting was conducted by evangelist B. B. Crim. The party next went to Austin, Tex., February 25, where they had a big tent seating six thousand. On March 18 Mr. Miller was to go to the First Baptist Church of Augusta, Ga., where Rev. Henry Porter of the Second Baptist Church was to do the preaching. Mr. Miller has an open date the last of April and can be addressed at Blackville, S. C.

A clipping from The Daily Record and Mail, of February 10, tells of remarkable scenes witnessed in Lossiemouth, Scotland. "The campaign opened with a series of prayer meetings held in a small hall, but later in the largest church in the town, which was crowded until nearly midnight every evening. At the close the revivalists formed into processional order and marched through the streets singing hymns until well into the morning. From fishing towns and villages along the coast many people walked several miles nightly, in order to be present. Testimonies are a feature of the proceedings and it is claimed that up to the present, close to 400 persons have made public confession. The central figures in the movement are Rev. Donald Fletcher, the local Baptist minister, and Mr. John Garden, a native of Lossiemouth, who is at home on a holiday from Australia. It is expected that Jack Troup, last year's revival leader in Aberdeenshire, will pay a visit."

Milford H. Lyon conducted a union evangelistic campaign at New Bedford, Mass., during January and February. The party experienced the stormiest weather in that region known for years, yet the interest and attendance continually increased. Dr. J. C. Massey of Tremont Temple, Boston, took charge of the dedication address. A feature of the meetings was the broadcasting reports of the meetings by the Slocum and Kilbourn Radio Broadcasting Station. Among those who assisted Dr. Lyon were Horace F. Erwin; Miss Virginia C. Williams of the Extension Staff of the Moody Bible Institute; and Miss Esther Piper, a former student of the Institute. Rev. Nathan Bailey, one of the co-operating pastors, says of the meetings, "To one who has been a careful observer in the work of the tabernacle meetings, there can be no uncertainty as to the thoroughness with which men and women were dealt with as they came out on the Lord's side." There were 1,755 recorded decisions.

Dr. H. P. Dunlop and wife report a meeting at Los Angeles, Calif., where 166 went forward to the altar. Among the converts were a number of difficult cases, and even a pastor, who said, "I have been converted." One man had not been to church for thirty-five years. Dr. and Mrs. Dunlop will motor north as far as Seattle this spring and may be addressed at Room 401, 313 W. 3rd Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

Rev. J. R. Humphries, pastor of the Claim Street Baptist Church, Aurora, Ill., writes: "We are in the midst of an evangelistic campaign under the leadership of Miss Sara C. Palmer. Splendid audiences in attendance; souls are being saved; God's people revived, and the community quickened to an intense interest. Miss Palmer speaks at some of the leading factories during the noon hour under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A."

Rev. P. E. Mundy writes from Tiskilwa, Ill.: "Sunday night we closed the greatest series of meetings ever held here, in the Baptist church. Rev. H. Lee McLendon, formerly pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church of Cleveland, O., was our evangelist, and Mr. Walter Main, of the Moody Bible Institute was our singer. Many Christians were awakened and there will be about one dozen additions to the church. A wonderful foundation has been laid for a great work."

Norman R. Curtis reports having held meetings in January at Maricopa, and Casa Grand, Ariz., and opened February 4 in the Missionary church in Phoenix, Ariz., with Rev. John E. Lauby, pastor. The interest was excellent and good results were expected at the time of writing. Mr. Curtis said, "Mr. A. B. Powers, the well known Bible teacher of Denver, Colo., is associated with me since the new year opened. He is a Bible teacher of wide experience and unusual ability."

A recent visitor to the offices of the MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY was Rev. Robert A. Haddon, D.D., who has been conducting important Bible conferences throughout the West. Among those recently held were at Kansas City and Winfield, Kan., and Guthrie and Oklahoma City, Okla. He reports about 100 converts at Winfield, and especially good teaching of the Word of God. Also that this Bible conference work has been productive of more converts than in his previous evangelistic work.

Mr. Charles Langsman, superintendent of the Bible Rescue Mission of Chicago, located at 626 W. Madison Street, reports unusually good results the past season. There has been an unusually keen interest in the work, and all needs met promptly, but the mission is restricted in its service for lack of funds. The report of the mission for the month of February shows 368 men forward to the alar; bed and lodging provided for about 1,000 men; clothing given to 229, beside the usual mission work in the hospitals, jails, etc. The mission's work is not confined to the lodging house district alone, as one instance recorded in February reveals that the superintendent was called to a home where a former Canadian soldier, who had lost the use of one leg, was in dire circumstances, the wife and children being without food or fuel in the home, both of which were provided. One of the women workers at the mission learning of the birthday of one of the children prepared a birthday cake and brought gladness into the home.

Via Sacra, by T. H. Darlow, M. A.

This is a series of twenty-three expositions on vital sacred topics.

268 pages. 7½x5 inches. Hodder and Stoughton, London (George H. Doran Company, New York, agents in U. S. A.). P. B. F.

The Place of Books in the Life We Live, by Rev. William L. Stidger.

This is a fascinating book and with most of its thought we are in accord. All the books suggested we do not endorse, and it is a pity that the author did not delete the words of profanity used by the book man in conversation with the parson.

197 pages. 7½x5 inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. $1.25, net. P. B. F.

When God and Man Meet, by Rev. William J. Young, D. D.

These are the MacDonell lectures before the Scarritt Bible Training School, 1921. This book cannot be recommended at all because of the error it contains. One quotation taken from page nineteen will be sufficient to show its danger. He says: "In some sense not merely figurative but genuinely real, we are in our spiritual natures which are our real selves of the same nature, of the same stuff, if you will, as God."

George H. Doran Company, New York. P. B. F.

Sermons for Days We Observe, by Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, D. D.

This book contains eleven sermons on anniversary and memorial occasions. Included among them are addresses on Grant, Washington, and Lincoln. These sermons are very interesting, for the preacher is brilliant, but unfortunately he here and there betrays a leaning toward the evolutionary philosophy of the day, and also uses too much liberty in interpreting Scripture.

To the Hebrews, by Lesser.

This book contains notes, verse by verse, on the Epistle to the Hebrews which were prepared by the author for personal use. They have been taken from many sources and will be found to contain much rich and suggestive material for the better understanding and teaching of this great book. In addition to these comments, three appendices appear setting forth vital matters of spiritual interest, especially the extracts from David Baron on the Angel of Jehovah, and The Divine Unity of the Scriptures, by Adolph Saphir.

247 pages. 9x6 inches. Pickering & Inglis, Glasgow, Scotland. 4s, 6d. P. B. F.

Life's Greatest Forces, by William Kirk Bryce.

This is a series of sermons and devotional addresses among which are the following topics: Life's Greatest Forces; What Is True Christianity; Jesus the Great Teacher; A Literal Resurrection; Family Life; Future Destiny of the Wicked. Those who heard this gifted preacher at Northfield and Winona will be glad to get these messages in print. They are evangelical and evangelistic.

148 pages. 7½x5 inches. Morgan and Scott, 17 Paternoster Building, London. 3s, 6d. P. B. F.

Gleanings in Genesis, by Arthur W. Pink.

Every careful student of the Bible, who sees Mr. Pink's Gleanings in Genesis, will desire to have it. This author has diligently used the writings of other men, but his primary devotion and thought are directed towards the Holy Scriptures themselves, which gives freshness and power to his books. He is especially strong on the spiritual, dispensational and typical sides of the Bible, and the two volumes under review will most helpfully supplement critical works on Genesis.

412 pages. 9x5¾ inches. Publication Office, Our Hope, 456 4th Avenue, New York. Two volumes, $1.50 each. L. W. G.

Bible Types of Modern Women, by W. Mackintosh Mackay, B. D.

This book contains lectures on twenty-two types of modern women, among which may be mentioned: The Woman Who Is Always Wanted; The Woman of the Home; The Woman of Self-Importance; The Woman of Decision; The Ideal Minister's Wife. The author's aim has been to paint the faces of women of other days in the light of today. The pictures are interesting and for the most part practical. But we think that some of his portraits have a "twist in the neck." We recommend the book but do not endorse everything that is said.

328 pages. 7½x5 inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. $1.50, net. P. B. F.

The Story of the Life of Mackay of Uganda, by his sister.

Mackay of Uganda, the earlier and larger life-story of the noble young engineer-missionary hero of Uganda, is one of the recognized classics of missionary literature. This little volume tells again, more particularly for boys, the thrilling story of his adventures, perils, toils and difficulties in paving the way for the marvelous results which have changed Uganda from one of the blackest to one of the brightest spots in Africa. The whole of the matter in this book is fresh and not found in the larger volume.

323 pages. 7¼x4¾ inches. Hodder & Stoughton, London (George H. Doran Company, 284 Madison Ave., New York, agents in U. S. A.). $1.50. R. H. G.

Matter and Spirit, by Professor James Bissett Pratt.

The material of this book is the Nathaniel Taylor lectures delivered by the author at the Yale Divinity School, April, 1922. The author deals with a most fundamental problem of human thought—the relation of mind and matter. With keen analytic skill he takes the reader through the maze of contradictions of modern thought, pointing out the errors and ever holding to the positive canons which underlie all rational thinking. He is positively a dualist and proves with unanswerable arguments the relation between matter and spirit. These lectures show the fundamental truths which should constitute the foundation for the study of philosophy and psychology.

232 pages. 7½x5 inches. Macmillan Company, Chicago and New York. $1.50. P. B. F.

The Red War on the Family, by Samuel Saloman.

This is a volume on Socialism, and an awful exhibition of what it is in the family relation when fully flowered out. It brings the horrors of the French revolution to our doors, and it shows us that the humanity of today is of a piece with that of Rome in its decadence, and with the vileness of Egyptian and Asiatic paganism. Indeed, there are facts in this book that would place socialism and savagery on the same plane. It is unfit for every body to read, but leaders of public opinion should read it—preachers, jurists, physicians, editors, legislators, school teachers, men and women of education and of mature years, who love their country and love their fellowmen, and who still believe in God and in the Bible, and have the moulding of the coming generation in their hands.

We are accustomed to think of the evil of Socialism as chiefly economic, but as Engels, "one of the anointed ones of Socialism," says, "with the transformation of the means of production into collective property, the monogamous family ceases to be the unit of society. The private household changes to a social industry. The care and education of children becomes a public matter. Society cares equally well for all children, legal or illegal. This removes the care about the 'consequences' which now forms the essential social factor, moral and economic."

Russia today, as the book shows, is acting on this principle, with effects too harrowing and revolting to contemplate. God save the United States from Socialism!

The Triumph of the Gospel in the New Hebrides, by Frank L. Paton.

This is a sequel to The Story of John G. Paton, giving an account of the ultimate transformation of the semi-brutalized cannibals of Tanna, the island of the New Hebrides group upon which that noble pioneer so often all but fell a victim to the death-dealing club or spear or musket of the infuriated savage. His third son was one of the missionaries who later labored on that island, and this volume from his pen graphically describes the toils and opposition through which he and his colleagues passed, and then the wonderful work of grace wrought first in a few individual savages and later through their example and ministry in tribe after tribe throughout the island. The book is a fine spiritual tonic, and the facts it contains are a convincing proof that the gospel has power to turn the most degraded and brutal savage into a saint and a hero.

The Story of John G. Paton, by Rev. James Paton, D. D.

This is a Young Folks' Edition of that immortal autobiography of the greatest missionary hero of the new Hebrides, the publication of which in 1889 stirred the whole Christian world as few missionary volumes have stirred it. The author, a distinguished brother of the missionary, has recast the material of the earlier book and added a few fresh incidents, as well as introduced illustrations attractive to the young. Many missionary biographies have followed through the years, but this one will always remain unique for its multiplied incidents of hairbreadth escapes from murderous savages and other dangers through the direct intervention of God, and also for its story of the marvelous transformation of blood-thirsty cannibals into devout saints and servants of God, and even willing martyrs for Christ and souls.

Reminiscences of Joseph Bryant Rotherham, compiled and with notes by his son, J. George Rotherham (Illustrated).

Happy the Christian father with a son who so understands and appreciates him as to be able to edit his reminiscences if he leaves any when he goes hence. Mr. Rotherham's two great works, The Emphasized Bible, and Studies in the Psalms, but especially the former, place him in the front rank of those who have most highly contributed to the biblical literature of the last century. And it is remarkable that this man, whom scholars praise, never sat as a student in a college or seminary classroom so far as the Reminiscences reveal. His father was a Wesleyan local preacher, and while still in his teens he followed in his footsteps. Later he joined the Baptists, and finally, chiefly through the influence of the writings of Alexander Campbell, he threw in his lot with the Church of the Disciples, with whom he remained until the end of his life, although his labors as a "whole time" evangelist concluded in 1868, when he was forty years of age.

At this date Mr. Rotherham entered the employ of a large printing establishment in London as publishers' editor and press corrector, in which calling he continued for over thirty years, preaching the Word however, as he found opportunity.

The chief accomplishment of his long experience in the printing office was The Emphasized Bible, the fruit of his leisure hours. It will be recalled by those familiar with this work that it translates "John the Baptist" by "John the Immerser," under the impression that as a Greek word that was what it originally meant, an exhibition of zeal which has limited the sale of the book. But that is not so serious as the author's sympathy with the teaching of conditional immortality, not indeed, that it is obtruded in the work, but as he himself said to his inner circle of friends, they "would find what they looked for," if only in a passing sentence.

There are several quaint incidents and experiences in the Reminiscences, and an interesting side-light or two is thrown upon the personalities of great scholars like Doctors Ginsburg, Westcott, and Hort. We enjoyed and found profit in the reading of the book.

NEW TRUSTEES

Mr. H. S. Dulaney

At a recent meeting of the corporation of The Moody Bible Institute, the following were elected members of the corporation, and also members of the Board of Trustees:

Mr. Henry S. Dulaney, president of the Resinol Chemical Company, Baltimore, Md., and Mr. William Arthur Holt, president of the Holt Lumber Company, Oconto, Wis. These elections fill the vacancies made by the death of Mr. Edward K. Warren, late president of the Warren Featherbone Company, Three Oaks, Mich., and Mr. Frederick A. Wells, of the Wells Brothers Construction Company, Chicago.

Mr. Dulaney is a leading layman of the Methodist Episcopal church, and Mr. Holt of the Presbyterian church. Both are deeply interested in the work of the Institute and thoroughly in accord both with its doctrinal position and its standard of Christian life and conduct.

The friends of the Institute all over the world are asked to return thanks to God for the strengthening of the life and work of the Institute by the addition of these gentlemen to the Board of Trustees, and also to supplicate His blessing upon them as they come into their position of authority and responsibility.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

The daily press of Dubois, Pa., where Dr. J. E. Conant conducted a union evangelistic meeting in February, gave liberal space to reporting his sermons. From there he went to the Liberty Heights Baptist Church, Baltimore, for a campaign March 11-25.

Rev. George E. Guille's teaching of the Bible in Winnipeg was so greatly appreciated that we have learned of a desire for a return engagement for longer than a two weeks' period. Although his chief ministry was to Elim Chapel, on the opening Sunday of his visit he preached in both the First Baptist and Grace M. E. Churches. Following the close of his service in Canada, March 4, in association with Dr. Henry Ostrom he taught the Bible in a conference held in the First Presbyterian Church, Meridian, Miss.

Miss Elinor Stafford Millar was called to assist the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Weston, W. Va., in evangelistic meetings, Feb. 18-Mar. 4. Her work among the young people received the very favorable comment of the local press.

Dr. Henry Ostrom, besides participating in the conference at Meridian, Miss., somewhat earlier addressed similar meetings in association with Rev. J. H. Sutherland, in the First Baptist Church Gainsville, Fla., and the First Presbyterian Church, Tampa. Concerning their work the Gainesville News said:

"Certainly no two workers in the whole country would have given more satisfaction than Dr. Henry Ostrom and Rev. J. H. Sutherland. The former has been in the harness for many years and is well and enthusiastically known by all the Bible workers in whatever field all over the country.

"While Rev. Mr. Sutherland is a newer man, yet he rings true at every discourse. He knows God in His fulness, is a very earnest and attractive speaker, and was listened to with marked interest at all his services."

Rev. Gordon B. Watt, M. A., of Aberdeen University, Scotland, in February helpfully ministered to a circuit of union Bible classes in central Pennsylvania, and during the last three weeks of March filled engagements at the Tabernacle and South United Presbyterian Churches, Youngstown, O. April 3-5 he addresses the Friends' yearly meeting at Mooresville, Ind.; April 15-22 he will be with the First Presbyterian Church, Kansas City, Mo.; and April 24-29 with Gospel Center, Evansville, Ind. His open time is, therefore, limited to the month of May. The Extension Department is his booking agency during this visit to America.

Recently Miss Virginia C. Williams assisted Dr. Milford H. Lyon in an evangelistic engagement at New Bedford, Mass., where she won all hearts.

In February, besides assisting Dr. Lyon, she filled a teaching engagement at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, St. Louis, Mo. In March went to Austin, Tex., Y. W. C. A. (where for a number of years, she was the general secretary), for a series of Bible studies, going from there for similar work to Navasota, Tex.

BIBLE CONFERENCES AT EAGLES MERE, PA., AND OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Eagles Mere, Pa.

The Institute's Bible Conference at this point will be held this year, July 6-15. Some of the speakers will be Rev. J. Ritchie Smith, D. D., Professor of Homiletics, Princeton Theological Seminary; Rev. Herbert W. Bieber, D. D., pastor Church of the Covenant, Bala-Cynwyd, Pa.; Rev. George E. Guille of the Extension Department; and Rev. A. L. Lathem, D. D., originator of the successful "Chester Plan" of Summer Bible Schools.

Eagles Mere, a half mile above sea-level, provides atmosphere which is naturally clear and cool. It is readily accessible, and yet far enough from commercial interests to be restful and invigorating. Forty miles from Williamsport, 220 miles from Philadelphia, 242 miles from Washington, it is but a day's or night's journey to this bit of wonderland from the most distant points of Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, or New York. The Lake of the Eagles, a spring-fed crystal-clear body of water, is the center about which swings all the life of the place. At the north end of the lake is a sloping white-sand beach where children wade in safety or where the most expert swimmer finds full enjoyment. Boats and canoes are available for those who prefer the surface of the water. Hotel facilities are ample, insuring comfort at reasonable cost.

Ocean City, N. J.

The conference at this point was so well received last year that the Institute is glad to accept the invitation of the Ocean Tabernacle Association to hold another conference on their grounds this summer, August 9-19.

Among the speakers will be Dr. C. C. Ellis, vice-president and director of education, Juniata College, and contributor of "This Week's Teaching Principle," in the Sunday School Times; Rev. S. B. Rohold, just returned from the Holy Land and conversant with Israel's position and need, will discuss that important question from the Jewish point of view; Dr. A. L. Latham, of Chester, Pa.; Mr. H. L. Dulaney, a well known Methodist layman of Baltimore; Rev. P. W. Philpott, pastor, Moody Church, Chicago; Rev. John C. Page, teacher of Bible Doctrine in the Institute; and Dr. Robert H. Glover, F. R. G. S., director of the Institute's Missionary Course.

Ocean City is located on a small island close to the mainland and a few miles from Atlantic City. It is generously supplied with pure artesian water, its bathing beaches are extensive, its hotels and boarding houses are numerous enough to meet different standards of service, and there is a fine Christian atmosphere.

Requests for further information concerning both conferences should be addressed to Mr. John R. Riebe, 153 Institute Place, Chicago, Ills.

BIBLE CONFERENCE IN ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Extension Department will conduct a Union Bible Conference in Rochester, N. Y., May 20-27. The speakers will be Dr. James M. Gray, Dr. J. Gresham Machen, assistant professor of New Testament literature and exegesis in Princeton Theological Seminary; Dr.

Leander S. Keyser, A. M., professor of systematic theology in Hamma Divinity School (Lutheran), Wittenberg College, Springfield, O.; Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor, Calvary Baptist Church, New York City, and Dr. A. L. Lathem, pastor, Third Presbyterian Church, Chester, Pa.

Either the Secretary of the Extension Department, 153-163 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill., or the chairman of the local committee, Mr. A. G. Slaght, 140 Court St., Rochester, N. Y., will be glad to give further information.

AN ECHO FROM FOUNDER'S WEEK CONFERENCE

"The time at Chicago was a period of blessed fellowship and passed all too quickly. The apologetic lectures by the two professors (Dr. Machen and Dr. Keyser), greatly attracted me, and I confess I had heard nothing so keen and incisive in logic and so beautiful in diction since I sat as a student at the feet of my old professor, Dr. James Denney. Dr. Gray struck me as a master of assemblies, and seemed to be able to do as he likes with audiences.

"In the New Hebrides I am constantly being reminded by the presence of converted cannibals of the wonder of God's grace, but at Chicago I had what is wanting in the isolation of the New Hebrides—the fellowship of kindred souls. The foreign missionary is apt to imagine that he is a lonely unit battling against the forces of heathen, but my time at Chicago made me realize the oneness of the work in the home and foreign fields. I felt that many of the friends at the Bible Institute had become real partners in the work abroad, and I am obliged to recognize that in the success which has attended the labors of foreign missionaries God is honoring the prayers of Christians at home, as well as the efforts of the missionaries on the field."—From letter written to Dr. Glover by Dr. Maurice Frater, Feb. 21, 1923.

GENERAL CHORUS

In a letter to Mr. Bittikoffer, Twila B. Chrysler, '22, tells of the unexpected use she has found for the training she received at the Institute in the general chorus class. "Oftentimes," she writes, "I wondered how I would ever use that which I was being taught." But now she teaches gospel choruses and hymns to about one hundred and twenty-five children of her church and mission in Marion, O. She conducts a monthly "children's sing" night. Her work is producing results among the children and their parents.

A SOUTH AFRICA BIBLE INSTITUTE

Rev. F. W. Stern, '18, is secretary of the Council of the Bible Institute, Capetown, Africa, which has recently been organized and is expected to open in April. The need for a Bible training center in South Africa has long been felt, that prospective missionaries and Christian workers might receive training without having to proceed overseas. A year ago a group of Capetown young people, desirous of preparing in some measure for Christian work, organized a class and requested Mr. Stern to become their teacher. This class formed the nucleus for the Institute, which will offer a full course of study.

GLAD HE FINISHED INSTITUTE COURSE

Writing to Dr. Gray, February 15 from Billings, Mont., Rev. P. L. Ayre, a 1915 Institute graduate, said:

"You doubtless remember a consultation I had with you in 1913 while I was attending Moody Bible Institute. It was in regard to my problem whether to go back to Washington State where my mind constantly was, or to stay at M. B. I. and finish the Bible course which I was taking. After having stated my case to you, you assured me that I could do more good with the training at M. B. I. in two or three years than I could in ten years without the course.

"Since finishing the course I have thought of that remark hundreds of times. Under God I believe I am indebted to you for the knowledge I have of God's Word so that I am able to withstand the false teachers and teachings I find here in Montana.

"Again and again I thank God for dear M. B. I. and her faithful teachers, and I pray you may be spared many more years to continue your wonderful work, and prepare men and women to 'stand by the Bible' when they get out into the world among 'every wind of doctrine.'"

Study Bible Now!
Better Than College Course

Former President Roosevelt

William Lyon Phelps, A.M., Ph.D., professor of English language and literature, Yale University, writing of the Bible merely as literature said:

"I thoroughly believe in a university education for both men and women, but I believe a knowledge of the Bible without a college course is more valuable than a college course without the Bible.

"Every one who has a thorough knowledge of the Bible may truly be called educated and no other learning or culture, no matter how extensive or elegant, can form a proper substitute."

And former President Roosevelt said:

"To every man who faces life with real desire to do his part in everything, I appeal for a study of the Bible. No man can afford to be ignorant of the Bible."

The Correspondence method of Bible study is the best method for securing a thorough knowledge of the Bible —better than any oral teaching can possibly be. More than 7,300 persons of 40 different occupations are now enrolled in one or more of the studying the inspired Revelation under the direction of eminent, Spirit-filled, Bible scholars.

Moody Bible Institute's Correspondence Courses

A noted authority says: "There is nothing that so stimulates the mental faculties as diligent study of the Bible. There the soul of man touches the mind of God. The greatest thoughts in the world enrich the mind and enlarge the soul."

Letters of warmest appreciation are constantly received from students and graduates. Fo example:

"It has never been my privilege to be fascinated with Bible study as I am with this course."

"I have come to know the Bible in an entirely new light. The Old Testament is now intensely interesting."

"The benefits I have received from the Synthetic Course are beyond estimate and above price."

"I finished the Scofield Bible Course about three years ago. It has been of greater value to me than any other training I have ever had, though I spent four years in college."

A Clergyman says: "I often mention in my sermons that a Correspondence Course from the Moody Bible Institute has been of far greater value to me than all of my Bible and theological work in college."

No matter what your occupation you can study the Bible by correspondence. These courses open a new world to you—broaden your vision, develop your understanding, answer your questions, help solve your perplexities, give comfort and encouragement.

THE EMPLOYES' ANNUAL RECEPTION AND SUPPER

Blessings on the head of whoever had the happy thought of instituting this festive occasion as an annual event in the life of the Institute! One wonders why so many years went by without it, unless it is that everybody was too busy working to give time to it.

That the Institute is distinguished as a place where everybody really works, was emphasized by Rev. John C. Page, who was introduced by Dr. Gray as toast master.

The reception in the Emma Dryer Room had come to a flying finish, numerous contestants striving for the prize to be awarded to the one who should secure the largest number of autograph signatures of those present; all were seated at the tables in Keith Hall, and had done full justice to the delicious roast chicken and accompanying viands supplied by Mr. Stauffer and "Mother" Russell; Mr. Page had the floor, and spoke thus:

There is something apt and appropriate in the Moody Bible Institute being located in Chicago. In Washington they ask you, What is your position? In Philadelphia, What is your pedigree? In New York, How much are you worth? In Boston, What do you know? But in Chicago it is, What can you do?

"Getting things done and keeping always at it is characteristic of Chicago, and I am glad the Moody Bible Institute is located here and that everyone about this place is a worker. It has been said that if a young man comes to Chicago and aspires, if he does not perspire, it will soon transpire that he will expire."

Hon. McKenzie Cleland, vice-president of the Institute, first on the program, is a past master in the art of after-dinner speaking. Story after story convulsed the listeners and doubtless all accepted virtually at face value his at least semi-serious statement, "Every day in everyway this Institute is getting better and better."

"I cannot keep pace with the development of this vast organization," he declared.

Rev. George E. Guille of the Extension Department, said in part:

"Everywhere I go in the South I find the Lord's people eager for the Word when they get a taste of it. The Moody Bible Institute is the one institution to carry the Word to them, for it is well thought of by all classes, even those who do not accept the doctrine of the premillennial coming of our Lord. They are starving everywhere for the Word and I have had the joy in my work of seeing many transformed lives.

"Down in Georgia not long ago a cultured woman, a society leader, told me that she was the happiest woman on earth. She had been a nominal Christian but in the meetings in which I taught the Bible, she caught a vision of Christ and her life had been transformed.

"It has been a great joy to me to see ministers who didn't know their Bible, completely changed when they had secured a real insight into Bible study.

"The South is the best place for Institute workers to preach. Moody is a name to conjure with there. All believe in the Moody Bible Institute, and they stand on the Word.

"I want the Institute to take up the challenge of the great opportunity in the South, more and more, to teach the Bible there.

"I always have joy in telling my audiences about the Institute. I speak of it with an overflowing heart and the people are blessed in just knowing that there is such a place. The two dearest places on earth to me are my home in Athens, Tenn., and the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago."

There is space to say of the other members on the program only that every one of them merited warm commendation and gave great pleasure to the hearers: the readings by Miss Edna Johnson, the duet by Misses Jennie Anderson and Addie Gordon, "Mother" Russell's story of "The Institute Family," and the solos by Mr. Bittikofer.

Dr. Gray was down for the benediction, but everybody wanted a talk from him. To illustrate the desirability of brevity in a closing address, he related the story of a young Church of England clergyman, who through the influence of Premier Disraeli received an appointment as curate at Windsor. He was one of a number of clergymen to officiate in the royal chapel, and when one day, others being unavailable, he was called on to prepare to preach the following Sunday, he was much agitated and went to his sponsor, Disraeli, for advice.

"The great statesman said to him, 'If you preach half an hour, Her Majesty will be bored; if you preach only fifteen minutes, she will be pleased; but if you make it only ten minutes, she will be delighted.'

" 'But what can I say in only ten minutes?' asked the young man.

" 'Oh,' said his counselor, 'that will be a matter of entire indifference to Her Majesty.' "

"We are not very sentimental in the Institute," Dr. Gray continued, "not much given to expressing our emotions. Nevertheless, I yearn over every one of you."

Concluding, he said, "Out of a long experience I say to you that it pays to know God and to serve Him through and through. It pays to obey Him, not simply in the larger things, but in the little details of life; the path of obedience is the path of blessing whether in large or small things."

PERSONALIA

Edmund I. Hall, '15, is pastor of a Baptist church in Courtright, Ont.

Ora E. Haft, '20, is doing mission work in Alaska.

R. I. Humberd, '20, pastor of the First Brethren Church, Roann, Ind., attended the Founder's Week Conference.

Charles E. Neighbour, '14, recently conducted an evangelistic campaign in Davenport, Iowa.

Angus Matheson, '04, is now pastor of Emmanuel Presbyterian Church, Spokane, Wash. He asks aid in prayer for a revival in his parish.

Evangelist Frank M. Dunk, '10, conducted revival services in February at the Chatham church, Chatham, Ill., where T. C. Hopkins, '18, is pastor.

Alice Ringland, '97, expects to sail from London for Africa on the Castle Liner Grantully, March 29, arriving at Cape Town, April 20.

After five and a half years as pastor of the Emmanuel Baptist Church, Indianapolis, Ind., Wesley P. Pearce, '14, has become pastor of the First Baptist Church, Kokomo, Ind.

After a year in England, W. H. Sargent, '93, has been supplying in his former pastorate, the Congregational church, Owen, Wis., and is now again called to be its pastor.

E. M. Moser, '17, has just closed a three weeks evangelistic campaign in the Fleming Memorial Church, Fairmont, W. Va., of which he is pastor. There were sixty professed conversions.

L. James Kindig, '21, and Mrs. Kindig, conducted the singing and the children's work in a January evangelistic campaign held in the Methodist church, Murdock, Ill. Eighty-seven professed acceptance of Christ.

Edward Hilliar, '14, and Mrs. Hilliar have established the Scruggs-Hilliar Memorial Mission Church, on one of the darkest sections of St. Louis, Mo. Their work will be non-sectarian. They covet prayer for wisdom and patience in their undertaking.

Miss Hazel M. Ross, '21, is now permanently located at Mission Evangelica, Poste Restante, Concordia, Entre Rios, Argentina, where with another young woman, she is working in an established mission under the Inland South American Board.

Herbert M., '20, and Mrs. Griffin, with small son, Mark, arrived in China to prepare for work under the China Inland Mission November 3. In May Mr. Griffin was graduated from the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary, and later was ordained by the Fourth Baptist Church, Minneapolis, Minn.

A letter from Rev. Frank S. Delo, pastor of the Lutheran church, Darrtown, O., tells of meetings conducted in union with the Methodist church there by Evangelist J. C. Watt, '14. He says: "It was a real revival, reaching into the church as strongly as to the unconverted. Nearly forty Christians reconsecrated themselves to the service of the Lord." From another source it has been learned that there were seven conversions of men from forty to sixty years of age.

W. H. Crapper, '11, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Masontown, Pa., at a recent communion, received twenty-seven new members, twenty-four of them on confession of faith.

On the evening of December 3, the K. K. K.'s paid a visit to the church and presented Mr. Crapper with an envelope containing $25, congratulating him on the work he was doing in Masontown, and pledging him the support of the Masontown Klan No. 1, as he had been waging war on the local brewery and bootleggers.

Clara E. Hazen, '16, and Bess Freeman, '16, are the head workers in the Marina Neighborhood House, Mayaguez, Porto Rico. Miss Freeman says: "It is the nucleus for a real training school which we feel is one of the biggest necessities here. One of the hardest problems is the young people. There is absolutely nothing in most of their homes or surroundings to keep them—everything to drag them down. Latin America needs M. B. I. folks."

BORN

To Carey R., '16, and Mrs. Moser, a daughter, Marilyn Ruth, Jan. 8, Joliet, Ill.

To Lawrence O., '19, and Mrs. Lineberger, a son, Edwin Otto, Jan. 15, Roxbury, O.

To Palmer L., '08, and Mrs. Heller, a daughter, Jean Doris, Feb. 1, Wapwallopen, Pa.

To Thomas C., '18, and Mrs. Hopkins, (Effie Carncross, '16) a son, Clifford Lewellyn, Feb. 16, Chatham, Ill.

MISCHIEF-MAKING TONGUES

"It is as easy as lying," said Hamlet to his false-hearted companions. Who does not know how hard it is to tell the precise truth, without swerving the breadth of a hair to the right or to the left? It is no easy matter to tell the truth about ourselves, to set forth correctly our feelings and our opinions; but when it comes to telling the truth about others, reproducing accurately their words, doing justice to their sentiments and motives, the difficulties of the task are multiplied indefinitely. And yet there rests upon us no greater obligation than that of correctly representing our fellowmen. We are bound, if we say anything about them, to say that which is true. Above all, if we undertake to report their words or to state their opinions, we are bound to take the utmost care that we do them no injustice. To misquote or misrepresent another even unintentionally is almost unpardonable. It does no. help matters to say that we did not intend to injure the person of whom we spoke. The rule should be, quote a man's words correctly, or not at all; speak the exact truth of him or speak nothing.

Some people, it would seem, have great difficulty in this matter of truth-telling. They do not mean to lie, but they are prejudiced. They do not mean to lie, but they are careless—careless in hearing, careless in understanding, careless in repeating what is said to them. These well meaning but reckless people do more mischief than those who intentionally foment strife by actual falsehood. There is no firebrand like your well-meaning busybody who by sheer habit misquotes everybody's words and misinterprets everybody's actions. Concerning a certain minister a man said to us recently, "He simply cannot tell the truth." We resented the statement, and our friend explained his meaning in these words: "I mean he cannot see more than one side of any question, and so cannot tell the whole truth about a matter even when he tries his utmost."

In such a day as this it is of the first importance that we shall do injustice to no man. We must not jump at conclusions, we must not judge upon insufficient evidence, we must not be misled by blind prejudice. In the midst of controversy, where grave issues are at stake, it is especially important that we shall weigh every word that we utter. No good cause has even been really advanced by loose, distorted and exaggerated statements. The man who lies to help forward a good cause is really injuring that cause. We need not speak of the reaction on a man's own life. The careless or thoughtless exaggerator will soon be obliged to cover up his exaggerated statements, and then he will become a hypocrite, and from all such "helpers of good causes," may the Lord deliver us.

We plead for truth, for truth spoken in love, for truth spoken in the fear of God. The task that we set ourselves and others is not an easy task to perform but it is well worth while. Let us be done with innuendo, with exaggeration, with misrepresentation, with misinterpretation of the words and actions of others. May men and angels and demons know that when we speak we speak the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

THE CONVERSION OF A FAMOUS COMEDIAN

Rev. Cecil Leslie Gilford, of Butte, Mont., wired to New York that Fred Stone, a favorite of attendants on theaters, and earning as much as $125,000 a year in his profession, and the owner of very large properties in New York and vicinity, has professed conversion. Mr. Stone says that he is determined to lead a Christian life. He was snow-bound in South Dakota for several days, and it was during that period that he seriously considered his course, and when he reached Butte he went to the Methodist pastor, and afterward made open confession of his faith. He is reported to have said: "I simply felt an urge to confess myself as a follower of Jesus Christ. I went to talk over my spiritual welfare. I was tired, very tired, of the old life. My parents were devout members of the Methodist church, and it was largely that which prompted me to join that denomination."

MURDERS FEW IN ENGLAND

In the whole year (1922) England and Wales, with a population of about 40,000,000, had only eighty-five murders and self-murders, apart from cases of infanticide and illegal operations. Of the total, twenty-two cases were suicides and in fifty-six of the cases of murder, fifty-nine persons were arrested, leaving only seven cases where no arrests were made. Of the fifty-nine arrested, thirteen were hanged, eight found guilty but insane at the time of trial, fourteen were accused of manslaughter, one of malicious wounding, fourteen were acquitted and seven were found insane while awaiting trial.

In three years there have been 292 murders and in only fifteen cases, the perpetrators escaped justice in some form.

IV. Samuel's Gracious Response (vv. 20-25).

1. "Fear not—serve the Lord with all your heart" (vv. 20-22). Samuel did not minimize their sin but assured them that if they would serve the Lord wholeheartedly He would not forsake them. The ground of their hope was in the faithfulness of God in keeping His covenant. "For his name's sake" shows that God's honor is at stake.

2. "God Forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you" (v. 23). Though the people had rejected Samuel, yet he had such magnanimity of soul that he has not allowed their ingratitude to cause him to not intercede for them. Such failure he regarded as sin for himself. He assured them that in spite of their sin their one concern should be to fear the Lord and serve Him wholeheartedly.

A CHURCH SAFEGUARDS ITS SUNDAY-SCHOOL

The First Presbyterian Church of Duluth, Minn., Rev. George Wells Arms, D.D., pastor, has put itself on record in desiring to guard the children of the church against any but scriptural teaching in the Sabbath-school.

"Feeling it to be only just and fair to the parents of the young people who are intrusted to the care of our Bible-school, that they be put under the instruction of those who are convinced of the authority and integrity of the Book for which our school stands and of the truth of the fundamental doctrines of the church under whose auspices they are instructed, the session of our church at its regular meeting, on October 1, 1922, passed a resolution requiring that all teachers in our Bible-school subscribe to the following five tenets of a delivery of our General Assembly of 1910, again affirmed by the General Assembly in 1916, namely:

"1. It is an essential doctrine of the Word of God and our Standards that the Holy Spirit did so inspire, guide and move the writers of Holy Scripture as to keep them from error.

"2. It is an essential doctrine of the Word of God and our Standards that our Lord Jesus Christ was born of the Virgin Mary.

"3. It is an essential doctrine of the Word of God and our Standards that Christ offered up Himself a sacrifice to satisfy divine justice and to reconcile us to God.

"4. It is an essential doctrine of the Word of God and our Standards concerning our Lord Jesus Christ, that on the third day He rose again from the dead with the same body with which He suffered, with which also He ascended into heaven, and there sitteth at the right hand of His Father, making intercession.

"5. It is an essential doctrine of the Word of God as the supreme standard of our faith that our Lord Jesus showed His power and love by working mighty miracles. This working was not contrary to nature, but superior to it."

—The Presbyterian.

BISHOP CANDLER ON EDUCATION

Bishop Candler, the chancellor of Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., as reported by the Western Reporter, has said among other good things:

"The world never has been saved, and never can be redeemed, by mentality alone, morality is far more vital to the progress of civilization. Jesus taught us, what we should never forget for a moment, namely, that a clear intellect will not give a man a clean heart, but that a pure heart will clarify the mind.

"In the light of all these unquestionable facts and indisputable principles, it is manifest that our country needs something more and better than mere education. Morality and religion are indispensable.

"We may easily have too much education, unless that education is purified by religious faith and pervaded by moral principle. Otherwise we may bring to pass a high-powered world, and the power of its own mighty momentum will rush it to self-destruction."

FACT VERSUS FICTION

By Rev. Charles Scanlon, S. S. D.
General Secretary of the Board of Temperance and Welfare of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, Pittsburgh, Pa.

FICTION—Prohibition was hastily enacted.

FACT—For more than 100 years prohibition was intensively and extensively studied and discussed. No question ever decided by the American people was better understood.

FICTION—Prohibition was the will and act of the minority.

FACT—Before national prohibition went into effect thirty-four states, acting separately for themselves, had adopted prohibition. More than three-fifths of the people and four-fifths of the territory of the country were under prohibition. The Eighteenth Amendment was submitted by a vote of more than two-thirds of both houses of the United States Congress and has been ratified by forty-six of the forty-eight states. The only two states which have failed to ratify to date, Connecticut and Rhode Island, have less than one thirty-fifth of the population and a trifle more than one five-hundredths of the continental area, and if the water which is included in these states is not counted the area is further reduced by more than 300 square miles.

FICTION—Prohibition was "put over" while America's soldiers were away.

FACT—The Congress which submitted prohibition to the states was elected (November, 1916) five months before war was declared on Germany (April, 1917). American soldiers are not drunkards. They helped Kentucky to enact prohibition after their return in 1919, raised the prohibition majority in Ohio from 28,000 to nearly 42,000, and in Michigan from 68,000 to 207,000.

FICTION—Prohibition is unconstitutional.

FACT—By a unanimous opinion of the United States Supreme Court, 1920, both the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Enforcement Code were declared to be constitutional.

FICTION—More liquor is consumed than before prohibition.

FACT—In 1917, the last year before prohibition went into effect, 600 distilleries in the United States produced 168,000,000 gallons of spirituous liquor. In the same year 1,300 breweries produced 1,885,000,000 gallons of beer. The first year under constitutional prohibition three distilleries were in operation and 28,000,000 gallons of spirits were consumed, while beer practically disappeared. The liquor imported was less than one half of one per cent of the consumption of pre-prohibition days.

FICTION—Prohibition interferes with personal liberty.

FACT—So do the Ten Commandments, according to the testimony of every liar, thief, libertine and blasphemer.

FICTION—Prohibition makes hypocrites.

FACT—The treason and anarchy preached and practiced by the liquor people will of course make patriots and Christians.

FICTION—Prohibition cannot be enforced.

FACT—Prohibition, and every other law for the good of the people, can be enforced by placing men in authority who have the inclination, courage and ability to do what they are paid and sworn to do.

THE FIRE OF HELL DECRIED

Rev. Ernest F. Tittle, D. D., pastor of the First M. E. Church, of Evanston, Ill., recently said in Cleveland, O., at a meeting of prominent Methodist ministers, as reported in the Chicago Tribune of February 21:

"The church must discover a moral substitute for the old fear of hell and the hope of heaven. I do not mean a moral equivalent, for neither the old fear nor the old hope was morally adequate. Both appealed to selfishness, and selfishness, even when it appeared in the garb of religion, is inadequate.

"What is needed is a moral substitute that will furnish to this generation an even greater and far more noble form of restraint. Such a substitute the church has ready to hand in its recovered vision of the kingdom of God."

The Gospel in Print

William Norton

NONE LIKE IT!

"Where shall we find a literature like that of the Bible? Indeed, all that is best in literature, medieval and modern, has been derived directly, or indirectly, from the Scriptures; while a comparison of the masterpieces of ancient Greece and Rome will show how (the light of revelation being wanting) even genius itself has been left to grope amid the follies of a heathen mythology or the vain and foolish theories of a philosphy which has no settled foundation.

Biography

"There is no biography so concise, so pathetic, so intensely human, and of such consuming interest, as the narratives which we find in the book of Genesis and other portions of the Old Testament; while the one great biography of the four Gospels stands alone in its solitary grandeur, even as it sets forth Him who is like none other.

Poetry

"What poetry can compare, either in scope or sentiment, with that of the Bible? The great epic of Job, with its wondrous but consistent theme, its magnificant imagery, and its satisfying conclusion, is unspeakably more elevating than that which tells of Achilles' wrath or the wanderings of Ulysses and Aeneas.

"Milton's great epics are largely but adaptations of Scripture, and owe their sublimity to the faithfulness with which he has adhered to the inspired page. What elegies can be compared with the pathos of David's lament over Jonathan and his bitter enemy Saul? What odes can rival the majesty of the nineteenth and one hundred and fourth Psalms?

"It is particularly necessary in this day, that the people of God should be supplied with what most of the educational institutions are giving in a wrong way—a knowledge of the relation between God's two great volumes, His written word and His created word. It will be found that both alike point unmistakably to Him who is called pre-eminently 'The Word,' who was in the beginning with God, by whom and for whom all things were created.

Tract Distribution

"Every Christian can engage in this most necessary service. Suppose that the tens of thousands of God's people through the country were distributing daily a few messages of salvation, it would keep before the minds of the world that which they long to forget, the claims of God upon them and the call of His mercy. . . Helpful literature can be put into the hands of those who desire hints and encouragements in various lines of service."—S. Ridout, in The Bible the True University.

J. LEWIS SMITH, D. D., Editor
Sacramento, Calif.

SAYS:

"Last summer when we were in Greenfield, Ohio, where we were pastor for nine years, we met the present pastor of the old church, Dr. Theodore M. Hofmeister and spent a most pleasant evening with him.

Dr. H. now writes us that he has resigned the pastorate of the Greenfield Baptist Church and will return to the evangelistic field. He has conducted many successful revivals and is considered one of the leading evangelists of the day. Some very splendid union campaigns have been under his leadership. He is one of our strong Baptist preachers. * * * After March 1st, Dr. Hofmeister's services will be available. His new address will be South Solon, Madison County, Ohio."

"A Sower Went Forth to Sow"

In the parable Jesus told how some of the seed fell by the wayside and some in stony places, but he emphasized that the seed which fell in the good ground brought forth fruit manyfold.

A stained glass window in one of the Institute Buildings.

It is not a parable, but a fact, that The Moody Bible Institute is sending out hundreds of sowers each year. The seed which they are taught to sow is the Word of God which He has promised will not return unto Him void.

As we look out upon Russia starving and suffering, seething with political unrest and upon Africa, India, China and many other nations bound by chains of superstition we join with Isaiah in saying "How beautiful, upon the mountains, are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace." Yet, "how shall they hear without a preacher and how shall they preach except they be sent?"

It is not a lack of volunteers that is keeping those who are lost from hearing the glad tidings but it is a lack of faithful stewards who will meet the cost of training them.

Moody Bible Institute has the equipment, the teaching staff and the volunteers in training ready to go forth to sow. We invite your cooperation either through an outright gift or an investment in a Life Annuity Contract. Address:

EDITORIAL NOTES

Church Collects

Ascension Day (May 10)

Grant, we beseech Thee, Almighty God, that like as we do believe Thy only-begotten Son our Lord Jesus Christ to have ascended into the heavens; so we may also in heart and mind thither ascend, and with Him continually dwell, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee and the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Sunday After Ascension Day

O God, the King of glory, Who hast exalted Thine only Son Jesus Christ with great triumph unto Thy kingdom in heaven; We beseech Thee leave us not comfortless; but send to us Thine Holy Ghost to comfort us, and exalt us unto the same place whither our Saviour Christ is gone before, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee and the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

Whit-Sunday (May 20)

O God, Who as at this time didst teach the hearts of Thy faithful people, by sending to them the light of Thy Holy Spirit; Grant us by the same Spirit to have a right judgment in all things, and evermore to rejoice in His holy comfort; through the merits of Christ Jesus our Saviour, Who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the same Spirit, one God, world without end. Amen.

This Issue

Ascension Day and Whit-Sunday both coming in this month according to the ecclesiastical calendar, offers a special occasion to pastors to indoctrinate their people in the great and vital truths associated with those events in the church's history which these two days commemorate. We trust that the pages of this issue, both the larger contributions, and the briefer ones in the Sermon and Scrap-book Department, may furnish aid and suggestion in that direction. Remember that the great need of this day in our church life is a teaching ministry.

Next to these doctrinal contributions, one to which we would call special attention, is that entitled: "South Dakota on Material versus Spiritual Values." Taken in connection with what we have said editorially under the title, "Will Christian Tax Payers Stand For This?" it ought to awaken the deepest interest of our readers along the line of Christian citizenship. We do not remember a piece of proposed legislation in any state which equals the "Concurrent Resolution" therein referred to in its view of moral and spiritual conditions affecting the home, the school and society. We beg our ministerial readers to give attention to it and to speak of it to their people. The enemy is certainly coming in upon us as a flood, and we are gone "if the Spirit of the Lord shall not lift up a standard against him" (Isa. 59:19).

For Mother's Day

It is truly wonderful the hold a mother has upon the faith of her children. God has so ordained it, and happy the mother who knows what the true faith is, and who is faithful in transmitting it to her offspring.

We are minded to say this just now because of our recent reading of My Memories of Eighty Years, by Chauncey M. Depew.

This eminent man, although still living in his eighty-seventh or eighty-eighth year, may not be very well known to some of our younger readers. He is a New York lawyer, who for the larger part of his life was adviser to the Vanderbilts, beginning with the old Commodore himself. He was also a great political campaigner, an orator of international reputation, one of the most famous after dinner speakers, and a statesman too, for he represented his state in the United States senate for two terms, and was once offered the portfolio of Secretary of State by a Republican president.

His book is filled with interesting and amusing anecdotes about the speeches he made and those to which he listened, the great dinners at which he was a guest, and the distinguished people he met at home and abroad. But running throughout the whole like a silken thread in the pattern of his life, is the memory and influence of his mother's faith, who seems to have been a Calvinistic Presbyterian of the old school.

A single illustration follows. Recalling the meeting of a society which prided itself upon its absence of narrowness and its freedom of thought and discussion, he says:

"The speakers were most critical of all that is generally accepted and believed. Professor John Fiske, the historian, was the most famous man present, and very critical of the Bible. My good mother had brought me up on the Bible and instilled in me the deepest reverence for the good book. The criticism of the professor stirred me to a rejoinder. I, of course, was in no way equal to meeting him, with his vast erudition and scholarly accomplishments. I could only give what the Bible critic would regard as valueless, a sledge-hammer expression of faith. Somebody took the speech down. Doctor John Hall, the famous preacher and for many years pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, told me that the Bible and the church societies in England had put the speech into a leaflet and were distributing many millions of them in the British Isles."

Mr. Depew closes his volume of over four hundred pages with this reminiscence:

"Life has had for me immeasurable charms. I recognize at all times that there has been granted to me the loving care and guidance of God. My sorrows have been alleviated and lost their acuteness from a firm belief in closer reunion in eternity. My misfortunes, disappointments, and losses have been met and overcome by abundant proof of my mother's faith and teaching that they were the discipline of Providence for my own good, and if met in that spirit and with redoubled effort to redeem the apparent tragedy, they would prove to be blessings. Such has been the case."

Mothers to Blame

Mrs. Forbes Robertson Hale has said the truest thing on the "flapper" which we have heard. In a recent address in Chicago she declared that the flapper was a victim of "dope," administered by parents, by current authors, by motion picture actresses, by window-trimmers and all the rest. Wherever the young girl goes today she is urged to turn into a flapper. Every magazine cover portrays a girl dressed in the prevailing mode and "made up within an inch of her ears." When she opens it to the advertisements she is urged to have the bloom of youth at so much a box. In the shopping district she is urged to throw away the shoes that fit her feet and buy strange looking things with high heels.

The antidote to all this, Mrs. Hale believes, is grandmothers, and baby brothers and sisters to read aloud to, healthful exercise, and a holding back rather than a pushing forward socially. Where are grandmothers these days, and where are baby brothers and sisters?

However, the mother is chiefly to blame, this practical woman thinks. Let her boycott from her parties the girls who rouge, who paint, who wear the wrong sort of clothes, and it would not be long till "everybody" would cease to do these things and mothers once more would have control of their offspring. To all of which we say, "Amen."

With sincere sorrow and disappointment we have read Dr. Thomas' contribution on another page relating to Dr. Jowett. And we believe the same feelings were experienced by him as he wrote it.

Dr. Jowett's Defection

And yet we were not suddenly surprised for when Dr. Jowett occupied the pulpit of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York, he never was entirely to be relied upon as an expounder of the truth.

Like Dr. Thomas, we were often impressed and helped by his felicitous presentation of certain passages of Scripture, some of his sermons have appeared in our pages, but he preserved an ominous silence, we sometimes thought, on the topics which would bring him into conflict with the critical school. We have known him to approach such topics, but only to leave a question mark in our minds.

We now have light upon a manifesto to Dr. Jowett which appeared in the British Weekly last autumn, and which, somehow we could not understand at the time.

He was urging a reformation of the world to be brought about by a confederation of all the churches, the non-conformists, as they are called in England, the Anglican, and the Roman Catholic. "The Pope is a man of liberal instincts, let an appeal be made to him," he entreated. "Let them rise in their sanctuaries," said he, "and in some simple form of words assert their witness to the ethical ideals of their faith, and their determination to have peace on earth and good will among men"!

Poor man! We sympathize with his distress at world conditions, but is he so childish as to think that they can be changed by words like these? What does the world care for such a "witness to ethical ideals"?

And the perversion he made of the angels' song! Man's "determination to have peace and good-will," forsooth! If the dynamic of the cross which Dr. Jowett once preached will not bring that, shall it be brought to pass by our rising in our sanctuaries?

Nay, Dr. Jowett, the next act on the world's stage is God's rising from His throne. Turn your attention, we beg of you, to the regeneration of individuals through faith in the sacrifice of Christ. God will take care of the world.

It is not generally known that there is an astronomical significance to those "overworked" numbers, 2300 and 1260 in the book of Daniel. Both constitute an almost perfect astronomical cycle—that is a period in which movements of the moon and sun coincide. Thus:

Daniel's Perfect Cycle

28447 lunar months is 840,056 days
1260 solar years is 460,205 days
15584 lunar months is 460,204 days

The ancients, as the Mohammedans today, reckoned time largely by the moon and it was not until Meton in 433 B. C. discovered the Metonic cycle of nineteen years that there was any consistency in the calculation of time. But even the Metonic cycle fails to coincide by some two hours (a matter of ten days in 2300 years) and it was only for a modern astronomer to discover that 1260 and 2300 were far more perfect cycles.

Now it is hardly likely that to the Babylonians, who reckoned their calendar by lunar months, there should be a revelation of any greater interest than such a mathematical triumph as would bring the sun and moon together with such precision. It is evident that none of their scientists were wise enough to reveal this cycle, and the Greeks as late as 443 A. D. could not work out anything better than a nineteen year cycle.

Where then, did Daniel obtain this important mathematical knowledge which only modern astronomers have discovered? It is not surprising that Professor Maunder of Greenwich observatory says: "We do not know how much astronomy the Hebrews taught to contemporary nations, but it is evident that they could not have learned anything even from the most advanced scientists of their day."

"Can't you say something in the MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY about the Fred Stone case? Some people say he cannot be a Christian and be an actor. We are not saved by works, or by what we do, but by grace. Actors have been known to give up their profession when converted. A man may have a natural gift for acting on the stage, in one department or another of the business, but is that any reason for his following the profession of an actor? A man might have the natural ability to be a prize fighter, but ought he to follow that business on the ground that God made him thus?"

Fred Stone the Actor

The words above quoted came to us in the mail and we presume they refer to the well-known actor whose conversion to Christ has recently been reported in the daily press. It would seem from the above that he proposes to remain in the theatrical profession, which our correspondent regards as an inconsistency, and we agree with him. No doubt, however, the actor will soon discover this himself, if he be truly converted, and the public will hear from him again.

Meanwhile may we say that the appeal of our correspondent for us to say something about it is a type of almost countless letters of the kind which we receive continually. It increases our gratitude to realize that we are in such a place of service, but it adds to the seriousness of the responsibility we carry. How much we need both humility and wisdom, and we wonder if our readers are as faithful on our behalf before the throne of grace as we think they ought to be? The words of James come into mind, "My brethren be not many teachers knowing that we shall receive the heavier judgment" (3:1, R. V.). Editors are teachers and in many things "we all stumble." Sometimes we do harm where we only would do good. Pray for us that the "word of the Lord may run and be glorified" (2 Thess. 3:1), and the word of the Lord only.

Also be considerate towards us when we do not respond to your requests to say something on this or that particular topic or event. We may not have space in which to print it, we may not have time to think it through, and we may not have the mind of the Spirit of God to deal with it at all at a given time or place.

The tenth Annual Convention of Gospel Missions is being held in Minneapolis this month and we wish it every success and blessing.

Gospel Missions

We learn through its literature that it enrolls approximately 110 missions and that from a recent survey it has discovered 310 missions receiving the approval of the evangelical churches of the country. These missions work on an interdenominational basis and in fields where there is little hope of ever developing a self-supporting church.

The present convention is being looked forward to as an opportunity to strengthen weak places in mission work of this kind and to widen its territories. Especially is it hoped to distinguish the safe and sane mission from that which is fanatical and irresponsible. Such missions are life preservers to our nation.

We have a letter from Dr. Macfarland, General Secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, saying that American tourists, including Protestant church members, when they go to Europe never make any contacts with the Protestant forces and indeed usually attend the Roman Catholic cathedrals on Sunday. On the other hand, largely through the Knights of Columbus, the Roman Catholic tourists in Europe have been used to create an impression that Roman Catholic forces were strong in America. Therefore, it is now proposed that a tour be carried out this summer which will make an impression of American Protestantism especially in France, Italy and Belgium where it is thought such an impression might very wisely be made. If any of our readers are interested in such a tour information about business details may be obtained from Dr. H. W. Dunning, 188 Rawson Road, Brookline, Mass.

Our correspondent in Palestine writes that just now large companies of tourists are passing rapidly through that land, but are not able to judge intelligently of the real situation, politically or religiously, under such conditions. He assures us that there are elements of disorder and discontent not very far below the surface; but, in his judgment the yellow press is doing more for agitation in a bad way than any internal social or commercial trouble could possibly do. Let us be careful not to believe all that we read in the press.

Will Christian Taxpayers Stand for This?

Editorial

ONE day last February, the Rev. J. Frank Norris, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist Church, Fort Worth, Tex., delivered a stirring and masterly address before the legislature of that state, in support of a law prohibiting the teaching of evolution in tax-supported schools. The length of the address precludes its publication in our pages, but we hope it may be printed in pamphlet form and sent broadcast over the country, for, in our judgment, it surpasses in some respects even that of William Jennings Bryan delivered the year previously on the same subject and under somewhat similar circumstances.

Dr. Norris was careful to say that the bill he was supporting was not to prevent the teaching of evolution, or to interfere with anyone who believed in it, but simply to prevent its teaching in schools supported by public taxes.

He was equally careful to say that the bill did not oppose science; science means the things you know, not the things at which you guess, and evolution is merely a guess and a poor one at that.

The Bible is not opposed to science, and Dr. Norris showed that an impressive proof of its divine inspiration is found in the scientific facts it states which were hundreds, and in some cases thousands of years in advance of their discovery by man.

He was careful to say further, that the evolution he was opposing was not identical with development in which everybody believes, but that it was something which denies God as Creator and practically eliminates Him from the universe. Luther Burbank can develop one plant from another plant, but it is still a plant, and he can make nothing else out of it, but that is not the evolution which these university professors are talking about. They are talking about something which traces man himself back from an animal to a vegetable and from a vegetable to a mineral, and from a mineral to a primordial cell. The origin of the cell is a mystery.

They demand academic freedom, these professors do, i. e., the liberty to teach anything they please; but Dr. Norris pointed out to the legislators that such freedom was in the end more dangerous than the freedom to sell whiskey or to carry concealed arms. They might have that freedom, if they desired it, but they must not ask us to pay their bills while they are using it to destroy the faith which underlies our free institutions. It was not denominational schools that Dr. Norris was talking about of course, but schools supported by public taxes, state schools and universities.

It was contrary to law to permit any religious creed or dogma to be taught in our public schools or colleges, and evolution was just that, a religious creed or dogma. It has its own view of God and creation, and is teaching it, contrary to the Christendom, whether Protestant or Catholic, of all the centuries. Neither Protestants nor Catholics, Jews nor Gentiles are insisting upon teaching their dogmas in our public schools, nor would they be permitted to do so. If they did, why then, should these evolutionists force their views upon us, and at our expense?

Would we permit Buddhism to be taught in our public schools, or Mohammedanism, or Bolshevism?

As a matter of fact, evolution is Bolshevism in the long run. That is to say, like sin, when it is full-grown, it brings forth death. It eliminates the idea of a personal God, and with that goes all authority and government, all law and order.

And if some one should say, what if evolution is yet proven to be true, what if science shall ultimately establish it? The answer is, that when it does, that will settle it, but it has not done so yet. Evolution is in the region of probabilities all the time, "it would seem," "perhaps," "it may have been," "as yet we do not know," "so far as we can guess." These are the terms of evolution on which it is proposed to overturn the verities of the Bible and the verities of sound government in the nation and in the home.

Speaking of proof, Dr. Norris reminded the Texas legislators that in 1913, the evolutionists heralded to the world that they had at last discovered the missing link, the "Piltdown Man" as he was called, because a few pieces of bone and a tooth had been found on Piltdown Common, Essex, England. They brought these to a museum in New York, and after "scientists" had reconstructed the man out of them, thousands of school children were led to the museum to behold him—half man and half ape. They were told this was the missing link.

But by and by, another scientist, himself an evolutionist, but a little sceptical, discovered that the foot was that of a chimpanzee and the tooth that of a gorilla, and that he could produce thousands of others just like them. The jawbone came from a still different animal.

Of course we cannot go through the whole of Dr. Norris's great address as we should like to do, but he concluded with words of awful warning that ought to stir the legislators of Texas and of every other state. The reign of lawlessness threatening the existence of society itself, is arresting the attention of our thoughtful citizens everywhere. Illinois seems to be putting its stamp of approval upon the crime of murder in the town of Herrin. Our jails and penitentiaries are crowded, and not by adults but by youths of tender years. The more divorces a woman has the brighter star she becomes in the moving picture show. God is being ruled out of the life of men and of the nation. Let atheistic evolution have its way. and how long will it be until the recent incident in Russia is repeated in the United States, where professors met in the streets of Moscow and burned God in effigy!

The whole world is trembling in the balance, and instead of permitting the faith of our young men and women in God and in the Bible to be destroyed, the legislatures of this country should, by solemn resolution, call upon the people of every name and creed to fall upon their faces as did those people of Nineveh and cry unto God for mercy.

"Gentlemen of the Legislature," said Dr. Norris, "there are three institutions that we love—the home, the church, the school. The home, where children worship father and mother as uncrowned monarchs, let none invade its sacred precincts. The church, let no atheistic university professor supported by the people, take the boy fresh from the side of his simple home and blight his virgin faith and send him back to his little country church with the croaking voice of modern infidelity. The school, let war come, let the whole world be a sea of flame and blood, but give me America with homes of unsoiled virtue, churches with unshaken faith, schools with Christian men at the head of them, and I will give you a nation that all the arms and nations of the world shall be unable to destroy."

THE CHICAGO NIGHT CHURCH

This institution, under the direction of Rev. Ernest A. Bell, D. D., continues its great work begun eighteen years ago. For the year closing, the church has held 180 hours of most popular ministrations at State and Quincy Streets, where 50,000 persons have attentively listened to the messages given, and probably more than that number have gotten some of the messages as they passed by. Scriptures were distributed in forty-one languages; the cost of this work was $5,116.78, $436.10 more than the receipts. The request for a budget of $7,500 would seem to be very fair and reasonable.

A WORD OF INTRODUCTION

It is a pleasure for the undersigned to speak a word by way of introducing to the pastors and the churches of the country, Mr. N. D. Nielsen of Elyria, O., who, for many years has figured prominently as one of our exceptionally successful business men, but who is now under the leading of God, to devote his time exclusively to evangelistic work.

Mr. Nielsen is a man of splendid personality, of wide experience, full of zeal for Christ, original in the style and content of his message, an earnest and attractive speaker, and a man whose ministry we believe God will be especially pleased to own. Mr. Nielsen's address is 1114 Middle Ave., Elyria, O.

The Life of Our Ascended Lord

Abridgment of a Sermon by Rev. James M. Gray, D. D.

TEXT: "So then after the Lord had spoken unto them he was received up into heaven and sat on the right hand of God." —Mark 16:19.

The proximity of Ascension Day as the church calls it, gives occasion to contemplate that transcendent event in the earthly history of our blessed Lord, an event not dwelt upon as it ought to be, considering its importance in the scheme of redemption. All Christian theologians have pointed out that the incarnation, the death, and the resurrection of Christ are vitally incomplete without the ascension, just as that event may be said to be incomplete without His return in glory to this earth.

But peculiar interest is given to the ascension of Christ because of its bearing on our spiritual life today. Our redemption, based on His death and resurrection, is a thing of the past, our resurrection and glorification at His second coming is future; but our establishment in the faith, our growth in grace, our equipment for service are of the present and are the result and consequence of our Lord's ascension and intercession for us at the right hand of God.

The late A. J. Gordon once preached a sermon, or wrote an article, on what he called, "The Life of Our Ascended Lord." Nothing of it remains with me but the title, but that has meant much to me in all these years. The life of our ascended Lord! A life lived for us! If He were on earth how favored we would be as His contemporaries; but how much more favored are we that He is living for us above!

I

Where is the glorified body of Jesus?

Remember that the disciples saw Him as he went up, and they looked steadfastly. Remember that Stephen, a man filled with the Holy Ghost, saw Him after He had gone up. At the moment of his martyrdom Stephen was permitted to penetrate the heavens with his physical eye and to behold the glory of God and Jesus standing at the right hand of God. Remember that the angels testified that He would come again in like manner as He was seen to go, therefore if He ascended in a body, and shall come again in the same, the inference is reasonable that He abides in that body now.

Surely these facts are valuable as a testimony to the whereabouts of the corporal presence of our Lord. And for that matter, the question we ask about His body might be raised about the body of Enoch or the body of Elijah, neither of whom saw death, and all of which goes to establish conviction as to the localizing of heaven as well as the wider scope of the atonement.

Some say that heaven is only a state or condition, not a place. It is something, they say, that you carry with you, but it is not somewhere that you are. To which we answer that if the glorified human body of Christ is existing, and if it shall continue to exist, then heaven must be some place that you are as well as something that you carry with you. It may be synonymous with holiness, but it must be also synonymous with home.

A glorified man in heaven, how few of us ever think of our Lord in that light! We think of Him with His disciples in Galilee and Judea; we think of Him on the cross, in the tomb, arising again, ascending in the clouds, but we do not think of Him in the same way after He has ascended. Somehow, to many of us, He has lost His humanity now and is in the incomprehensible form of God again. How much we deny ourselves of comfort and joy by this mistake, and it is one reason, too, why so many Christians spiritualize the fact of our Lord's second coming. If He is without any visible corporeity now, it is easy to think of His second coming as only a spiritual experience and not at all a personal and physical event.

II

What is the character of Christ's glorified body?

Is it the same as that in which His soul was encased while on earth? In one sense, yes, and in another it must be markedly distinguished from it. We should ever keep in mind that it is His resurrection body that is glorified, a body which possessed peculiarities it did not have before. His resurrection body could be touched and could take nourishment, and yet it was supersensuous, not bound down to space and could assume different shapes, passing through closed doors, and concealing its identity from those around it. Of course we cannot understand how His original body was transmuted into His resurrection body, any more than we can understand countless physical mysteries that we look upon every day. But we know it was the same body, with the marks of the wounds upon it, although in another form, and existing under other laws. It was this body in which our Lord went in and out among His disciples for forty days on the boundary line between earth and heaven, and it was this body in which He ascended and is now seated in the glory of God, its glorious transformation being completed in that act.

How the knowledge of such a fac-dignifies redeemed human nature, and how it broadens the scope of the atonet ment in our eyes! We are told that Christ will fashion anew the body of our humiliation that it may be conformed to the body of His glory, and now we are able to realize that fact as by faith we see Him," made for a little while lower than the angels," thus "crowned with glory and honor."

Yes, the presence of the body of our Lord in heaven removes from our minds any vagueness as to our bodies being there also, if we have become united to Him by faith. Because He lives we shall live. As in His case, so in ours, the change when our body shall be glorified will not consist in the adding of something essentially new to it, but in an unfolding and perfecting of that which is already there. The change is not so much in the outward form as in the inward potency which pervades it with a new life.

To quote another, it is like the change which takes place in a globe of porcelain when the light springs up within it, the grayish shade gives place to white. We shall be the same person in every case, each familiar feature will be there, but the Spirit of God dwelling within and filling us with Himself shall transfigure us as was Christ on the holy mount.

III

What was the significance of the ascension to our Lord Himself?

It was the reward of His obedience to the Father, the reward of His suffering and death on behalf of a lost world, the joy set before Him for which He was willing to endure the cross, despising the shame. And yet that is only part of His joy, for in the regeneration He shall sit upon the throne of His glory in the sight of all the intelligences of the universe, when "every knee shall bow to him and every tongue confess that he is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

Of course, when one speaks of reward or merited glory in the case of Christ he is alluding only to His human nature, to the God-man considered as the mediatorial King. Christ is Himself God, in which sense His glory cannot be enhanced and the thought of reward is entirely excluded.

And yet while this is true, theologians have argued that His ascension had a bearing on His divine nature nevertheless. They recall His prayer in the seventeenth of John where He supplicated the Father that He might be glorified with the glory that He had with Him before the world was. Of course this was His essential glory as a member of the God-head. But this glory had not been manifested. The creature had not yet been taught that he was to honor the Son even as he honored the Father. Now, however, that the Son had finished the work that was given him to do, and was ascending on high after His sacrifice, His essential glory as God was now to be displayed openly before all.

In other words the plan of redemption was constructed not only for the purpose of delivering humanity from sin, but also for the purpose of revealing to the world the adorable trinity in the God-head.

The Old Testament contains many indications of the trinity, but the New Testament has made it plain. Therein both the Son and the Holy Spirit have come forth from the obscurity in which they had been veiled before.

IV

What is the significance of the ascension to believers on the Lord Jesus Christ?

Suppose for example, that Christ had not been exalted to the right hand of God, how would the saints have been affected by that omission in His history?

The answer to this question is bound up in the thought so clearly revealed in the New Testament, that Christ is our representative and that we are identified with Him. Hence the reward that has come to Him is come representatively, and is made over also unto them that are in Him.

As Paul teaches the Colossians, we have been crucified with Christ, buried with Him, risen with Him, shall the identification cease at the resurrection? If it should, then we had not reached the reinstatement of our nature in all its lost honors in reconciliation with God. That this may come to pass must not each nature be received into heaven with Christ and glorified with Him? Had He remained on the earth after His resurrection it might have assured us of deliverance from the grave and a protracted residence here, but what we need and long for is re-union with God and the communion of His presence in the fullest possible sense. But this, until Christ's ascension could not have been secured.

In the beautiful language of one of the old Puritan divines it was then only "that the flaming sword was sheathed, and the redeemed permitted to re-enter the garden of the Lord and walk with Him in the cool of the day."

And yet this is not all of the significance of Christ's ascension to the believer, for it affects his personal holiness and usefulness upon this earth every day. For example, the descent of the Holy Spirit as a Guide and Comforter of the church could not have taken place while Christ remained upon the earth, as He Himself tells us in the sixteenth chapter of John.

Of what avail either, that the Son had died if the Holy Spirit had not come to make that death effectual in our regeneration and renewal in His image?

Without the presence of the Holy Spirit in the church how could the latter have gained a foothold in the earth?

What Christ did for us is of unutterable value, but that which the Holy Spirit is doing in us and through us makes that value real.

As Dr. Archer Butler puts it, "The divine artists could not fitly descend to make the copy before the entire original had been completed. But the complete Christ was not ready to be communicated to His church until His death and resurrection had been supplemented by his ascension into glory."

We thus see, my brethren, how much the ascension of Christ means in the redemptive plan. How it localizes heaven, how it exalts our conception of the destiny of our mortal bodies, how it assures us of our perfect reconciliation with God the Father, how it comforts us in the thought that the glorified Man at His right hand is our Elder Brother, how it increases our appreciation of the Holy Spirit, how it stimulates us to be in fact what we already are in position, namely, seated with Christ in heavenly places, how it intensifies our longings for the day when He that shall come will come and will not tarry, and when we shall see Him as He is, because we shall be like Him!

There are many of whom these great and transcendent truths have as yet no meaning, and by whom they are deemed as foolishness. Alas, what are they losing and what shall they forever lose if these things be true! Would to God that they might arouse themselves and, like John Keble, conscious of their grovelling thoughts roaming lawlessly around his earthly waste, exclaim:

"Chains of my heart, avaunt, I say!
I will arise, and in the strength of love
Pursue the bright track ere it fade away,
My Saviour's pathway to His home above."

The Holy Spirit and Us

A Sermon by Rev. O. L. Markman, D.D., Benton, Ill.

IT SEEMED good to the Holy Spirit and us"—Acts 15:28.

These words are from a letter sent by the first Christian council.

At the beginning the church was composed almost exclusively of converts from Judaism, but after a fuller spread of the gospel, and especially after St. Paul had entered upon his missionary activities, the church became more cosmopolitan. Not only were there those representing the various sects of Judaism, but also Gentiles of various nationalities and almost every station in human society.

That an organization having within it representatives of such diverse elements should be more or less divided with regard to certain opinions and customs, is self-evident. Even the grace of God does not cause folks to see alike in every particular. But instead of magnifying their differences, the apostles called an assembly and after consideration and waiting upon God, they came to an agreement, and issued a letter to the churches, giving a decision as it seemed good to the Holy Spirit and to them.

We might well study this incident with a view to finding the Christian plan for the settlement of differences; namely, to pray about them. But we wish to consider more particularly the divine-human relationship suggested by the text: "It seemed good to the Holy Spirit and to us."

First, we have implied here, the Holy Spirit's co-operation—"and us."

The apostles recognized this. They put the Holy Spirit first. He led and they followed; they went as He directed, they said what He said. Whatever seemed good to the Holy Spirit seemed good to them also. Their message and method were the same as those of the Holy Spirit.

Much present-day teaching on the Holy Spirit, while good in a measure, is rather one-sided. "Step aside and let the Holy Spirit work," is popular teaching in many so-called spiritual centers.

Nothing is more misleading. In the material realm we recognize the necessity of working in partnership with God; the farmer does not expect a harvest unless he puts his efforts in line with God's great laws. But in the spiritual we too often forget that we have a part.

The divine plan is "the Holy Spirit and us." From the first enunciation of the redemptive scheme to the close of revelation, God has made clear His purpose to join the divine with the human. He works through human instrumentalities and it is folly to expect results unless we perform our full share of the task.

Secondly, we come to consider more fully the work of the Holy Spirit in this divine-human co-partnership. He performs by far the greater part of the task.

The Work of the Holy Spirit

(1) It is His business to convict men of sin (John 16:8).

The word "convict" is one of the strongest in the English language. It is different from "convince." It is no great task to convince men that sin is hurtful and wrong, but the Holy Spirit does a work which men cannot do, He applies the truth to the heart. As the judge or jury convicts the criminal after his guilt has been established, so the Holy Spirit brings the evil doer face to face with his sin and impresses him with his guilt so that he cannot escape.

We talk about the coming revival. What we want is to get in harmony with the Holy Spirit and work according to His plans and the revival is here. In order to have it we need more conviction of sin. One reason why there are not more conversions is that folks are not brought to see the heinousness of sin. And this is a task that we cannot do alone. It requires the Holy Spirit and us.

(2) Moreover, it is the work of the Holy Spirit to take convicted hearts and regenerate them.

This is set forth clearly even in the Old Testament. Speaking through Ezekiel, God said: "A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart, and I will give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes" (Ezek. 36:27).

This is one of the cardinal doctrines of the New Testament. St. Paul declares that we are saved "not by words of righteousness which we have done," but "by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Spirit" (Titus 3:5).

Regeneration means vastly more than making a new resolution or turning over a new leaf, or changing one's mind. It implies all this, but the man who goes no further is likely soon to be back in the old life. "Ye must be born again—born from above" (John 3:3).

Natural Law in the Spiritual World

Henry Drummond shows how in nature a lower kingdom cannot cross the boundary which divides it from a higher until the higher has come down to it. The mineral cannot imbue itself with the life of the vegetable, but the vegetable can reach down into the mineral world and absorb into itself the substance of the soil in which it is planted, and thus bridge the gulf and lift the dead mineral into a kingdom of life.

Likewise the vegetable cannot bridge the chasm which separates it from the animal kingdom. It is only as the higher form of life reaches down to the lower that the vegetable is transformed into bone and sinew and muscle.

Even so man, dead in trespasses and sins, cannot elevate himself into the divine kingdom. It is only as the Holy Spirit comes into the heart bringing life from above, that man is enabled to rise above the temptations and sins of the world and walk in newness of life in Christ Jesus.

Regeneration, then, means life from above; and it brings about a change in the inner heart life so that man thinks differently, loves differently, and acts differently.

Let us guard against making the work of the Holy Spirit conditioned upon certain human customs.

This was a source of trouble in the early church. Some observed this or that Jewish custom, and held that such observances were necessary for all. Even some of the apostles were influenced for a time by prejudices as a result of their former training.

We are not free from such preconceptions. Those who were led to Christ during a revival are sometimes prone to think that it is the only time to get right with God. Some who were converted at an altar of prayer are inclined to look with suspicion upon any who profess to have entered the kingdom in any other manner. The fact is we may be saved anywhere. That is the work of the Holy Spirit, and wherever a soul surrenders utterly there He is present to do His office work.

(3) Yet again, the Holy Spirit empowers for service.

Our Lord's parting message to His followers was: "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Spirit is come upon you" (Acts 1:8). They tarried in the upper room for the fulfilment of that promise, and after ten days of waiting and prayer they received the divine enduement.

You cannot explain the transformation in the apostles and the victories of the early church if you leave out Pentecost. You cannot account for Wesley and his little band of lay-preachers without taking into account the enduing power of the Holy Spirit. The same is true of Charles G. Finney, Dwight L. Moody, Evan Roberts and numberless others who wrought valiantly for Christ.

A. J. Gordon in Boston

When Dr. A. J. Gordon, of blessed memory, went to the pastorate of Clarendon Street Church, Boston, he started in by forming all sorts of organizations, and it required nearly all of his time to keep them in order, and even then he failed. He was well nigh heart-broken over the situation.

Finally, he determined to dedicate himself anew to the task of preaching Christ and Him crucified, and the fact that the Holy Spirit was the administrator of the church.

His people responded to his leadership. They thronged the mid-week services and made them seasons of refreshing, and the Sunday services became permeated with a spirit of evangelism. The church was transformed and so filled with power that it became known throughout the world for its spiritual fervor and its achievements in soul-winning.

The presence and power of the Holy Spirit will transform any church. This equipment is the heritage of every believer (Luke 11:13). Without the enduement from on high we shall utterly fail. It must be the Holy Spirit and us.

Thirdly, it remains for us to reflect on our responsibility in this matter.

The text implies that the Holy Spirit is dependent upon us in no small measure for the carrying on of His work. It is not His will that any should perish; but if souls are to be saved, some one must offer the prayer, or sing the song, or preach the sermon, or extend the invitation, or give the word of direction by which the Spirit may arouse that soul to a sense of its need and lead it into the kingdom.

If folks are to be saved it must be through the Holy Spirit and us. There is a sense in which He succeeds or fails according to our faithfulness or unfaithfulness. What a responsibility this places upon us!

Wayland Hoyt's Experience

Dr. Wayland Hoyt relates an experience that illustrates this.

While a pastor in Brooklyn, he was engaged in special meetings, and among those who evinced interest was a gentleman for whom Dr. Hoyt had often prayed. He noticed his attendance one night, and felt he ought to speak to him about his soul, but, through fear of offending him, he refrained. After he had gone home, finding himself too nervous to sleep, he was reading in his study, and something seemed to whisper,

"Go and see that man tonight."

"Why, it is twelve o'clock and he is asleep. It is foolish to think of going to see him now!"

He read on, but the impression remained.

"I am tired, and it is snowing, I don't want to go."

He invented other pleas, but no peace came, and at last he went.

As he touched the doorbell he thought,

"What a fool I am for pulling a man's doorbell at one o'clock in the morning. He will think I am insane!"

But the door opened, and the man stood there, and seeing who it was he said,

"Pastor, come in, and God bless you. You are the man I have been wishing for all night. Wife and children are all in bed, but I could not sleep. I felt that I must find Christ tonight."

Dr. Hoyt testified, "It was no trouble to show him the way, for the Spirit who had guided me had gone before and prepared him also."

It is ever thus. When God leads us to speak to some soul He goes before and prepares that soul for the message we are to bring. Who knows how many hungry hearts are waiting for us to lead them to Christ?

Let us come to God anew for the anointing of the Holy Spirit. Let us enter into partnership with Him, to work with Him and under His direction for the salvation of souls.

And, my unsaved friend, is the Holy Spirit speaking to you? Has he awakened you to a realization of your need of pardoning grace? Heed His promptings. You cannot save yourself, and the Holy Spirit alone will not save you. It must be the Holy Spirit and us.

S. D. GORDON AND D. L. MOODY

The visit of Mr. Gordon to Chicago was in a sense a "homecoming," because from here he received the impulse for his world-wide religious work. It was at a revival in Philadelphia in 1875-76, held by Dwight L. Moody of Chicago, that Mr. Gordon was converted and set out on the path of religious activity.

MRS. MARTIN'S HOME BIBLE CLASSES

Mrs. Elma Dale Martin, 3125 College Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., has established home classes in many large cities of the country. She says: "A serious situation in the church of today is that there are people who are slowly starving to death, relying on their pastors for the study of the Bible. The world has that subtle ability to fill our lives so full that we have no time for Bible study, therefore we must have heart determination if we are to find time to read and study the Bible."

Mrs. Martin is a Correspondence student of the Moody Bible Institute.

CHRISTIAN FUNDAMENTALS CONVENTION

The fifth annual convention of the Christian Fundamentals Association will be held in Ft. Worth, Tex., April 29-May 6, in the First Baptist Church, Rev. J. Frank Norris, pastor.

The subjects of the program will be: Our Fellowship, Our Confession, Our Commission, Our Education, Our Bible Schools, Our Evangelism, Our Objectives.

The speakers will be: William Jennings Bryan, Paul Rader, L. W. Munhall, John Thomas (England), T. C. Horton, Albert Sidney Johnson, R. M. Stevenson, W. E. Hawkins, Jr., T. T. Shields, Mark A. Matthews, W. L. Pettingill, William B. Riley, J. Frank Norris, C. G. Trumbull.

Persons desiring accommodations will please address the Christian Fundamentals Association Secretary, c/o First Baptist Church, Ft. Worth, Texas.

The Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus

An Address at Founder's Week Conference by Rev. Donald McTavish, D.Sc., Toronto, Ont., stenographically reported

TEXT: "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus made me free from the law of sin and death" (Rom. 8:2).

I wish to speak to you on the life of freedom and power.

This life of freedom and power is a life of deliverance from the bondage of sin; a life of union with Christ, and a life of dependence upon Christ.

But, in order to enter that life we must know the meaning of that strange conflict recorded in the verses we have read in the seventh of Romans. Some say that chapter is the experience of the apostle Paul himself at some period in his life. It may have been so, but I believe not. In any case it has been universalized, and he has made it a part of his teaching, and I do not stop to consider whether it was his own experience or not.

But we want to ask what the experience in the seventh of Romans is not. I believe it is not the experience of an unsaved man, even an unsaved man under conviction of sin, for two or three reasons; and the first is that the unsaved man does not delight in the law of God, as recorded in the twenty-second verse, the law of God that is piercing him like a sharp two edged sword. And secondly, you notice that "the inward man," in verse 22 is man's renewed nature, his new nature.

Now we have a thought in this teaching here in its relationship to the whole of the apostle's teaching. In the third chapter he shows us how we are saved from the guilt of sin, not by law keeping, for "by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." In the seventh chapter he is showing us, I believe, that we cannot be delivered from the bondage of sin by the works of the law, because it is the Christian life, as we shall see, he is dealing with there. In other words, we are justified and we are sanctified through faith in Christ.

What the Conflict Means

Well then, if it is not a conflict in the life of the unsaved, and if it is a conflict in the life of a believer, what does it mean?

Is it a conflict between the soul and conscience because of duties left undone? No, it is not quite that. It is a conflict as statedin the fifteenth verse, between what I hate and what I do.

Furthermore, is it a struggle with inward evil, the inevitable order? Is it the best we can expect? Many so conclude and are living according to that theory. The theory that the teaching here is a normal condition of the true believer. But it is an abnormal condition, a wrong condition, a condition that should exist in no believer at any time in his life.

Now, if it is a conflict in the Christian life that may issue in deliverance from sin's bondage, we have a thought of what the nature of this conflict is. You will observe that the apostle in this epistle is speaking of right in terms of law. That seems a very appropriate thing, for if there was anything that existed in the Roman empire, it was law. All our modern jurisprudence is based upon Roman law. That was Rome's great contribution to the progress of the world. It contributed law and the idea of law and jurisprudence; and the apostle has taken up that idea and made use of it in the teaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ to these Roman Christians.

Now when we look into this experience, we find two laws or two pairs of laws referred to by the apostle; two states or principles that are operative in the Christian life. In verses 18, 21, 25, you have the law of the flesh and the law of sin.

What is sin? An alien thing that has come into the life of man, and being admitted has changed his attitude toward God, and has appropriated his whole nature. It finds its residence in what the apostle calls here the flesh.

That is the one law or pair of laws. The apostle writes, it may be reckoned dead in Christ's death and finally it will be cast out, for when Christ, who is our life shall appear we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is. Then this cursed thing will be gone forever, but that is not so now.

If there was only this law in our nature there would be no conflict at all, and as a matter of fact those who have sold themselves to do evil, have little or no conflict even here in this life of sin.

But there is another pair of laws here referred to—the law of God and the law of the mind, or of the inward nature. That is the new nature implanted by God through the Holy Spirit, responding to the divine revelation. "I delight in the law of God," the revelation of His will in my inward man; in the new nature implanted in me through the Holy Spirit. This is another law that is operative in the Christian life.

Now if there were only these two laws —the law of God, and the law of our renewed nature—there would be no conflict, and as I said a moment ago, there will be no conflict in glory when we come into the presence of our Lord. But in the believer's life now, both these laws are in existence and both are operative.

When the Pen Crosses the Pencil

This is the Christian's condition, and the reason there is conflict in the Christian life is that one law runs right across the other.

I want to make this plain to you. Suppose that pen represents the law of sin and the law of the flesh. There is harmony there. But suppose this pencil represents the law of God, and the law of the renewed nature of the inward man. If these two were in that condition there would be no conflict, but they are not in that condition. This is the condition in which they are (across), and this is the point of conflict where the sin law is continually crossing the other law. That is where the conflict is in the Christian life.

Now I want to say that there is no power in our renewed nature to give us deliverance from that conflict. The Cross of Christ has removed the guilt of sin and there is now no condemnation in them that are in Christ Jesus, but the law of the flesh is not removed. There are people who teach and believe that kind of thing, and think they have experienced it, but in my judgment they are mistaken.

No, the law of the flesh is still there in our nature. It may be rendered inoperative but it is present. I find no Scripture to teach the annihilation of the law of sin or the law of the flesh, and there is no deliverance from its presence. The Scriptures give us abundant ground for deliverance from its bondage: "Let not sin continue to reign in your mortal bodies, that ye should obey the lusts thereof."

Why then this failure? Well, I believe it is just because while we are saved from the guilt of sin by trusting in Christ and His atoning death, we are trying to break the power of sin by relying upon our own renewed energies, and once we are in that condition, God help us. Melancthon made the discovery that the old Adam was still stronger than the young Melancthon, and that is perfectly true in every life, and it is what has taken place in thousands of Christians who have abandoned the whole effort and sunk down into a discouraged, disappointed, fruitless Christian life. There are thousands in our churches in that condition today, because they think there is nothing better. They have tried and failed, and tried and failed. They go to a convention somewhere and get a kind of life for a while and then go home just as bad as ever.

Now that is not the way! What is the secret of true deliverance? The secret is in another law, in the eighth chapter and the second verse, "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made me free from the law of sin and death."

What have you in that verse? You have three things. First, it is a law or principle of life that is embodied in Christ Jesus, the living Christ. Second, it is operative in the believer through the Spirit of that living and glorified Christ. Third, it sets the trusting believer free from and renders inoperative the law of sin and death.

Learn to Use the Elevator

You will say, Is it possible for one law to render another law inoperative? You have a striking illustration of that in the book of Esther. The edict sent out, and the law of the Medes and Persians could not be revoked, that the Jews were to be slain. But another law was sent forth instructing the Jews to put themselves on their defense and defying any one who would touch them. The first law though never revoked was rendered inoperative by another law.

May I give one or two humble illustrations of that I mean? Suppose a stranger came into Chicago who had never seen such strange institutions before, and he went into one of your tall buildings and wanted to get to the upper story. And suppose for the sake of the illustration, there was no stairway, and the only way of getting up was by leaping from one story up to the next and so on. He makes an effort to get up that way, but there is a law called the law of gravitation that pulls him down every time, and after he has made several efforts he concludes, "Well, there's no use, I'll have to give the thing up and just stay down here."

That is exactly what a great many Christians have done, that is exactly where they are. Just staying down here, in a life of defeat and disappointment, down here under the domination of the law of sin and death.

But while he is making the effort and cannot jump to the next story a friend calls to him, and says, "If you will step in this elevator it will take you where you want to go." With a little hesitation he steps into the elevator and in a moment or two he finds himself where he wanted to go.

How did he get there? Because as soon as he stepped into that elevator, the law of gravitation said, "Now I will have to give you up. I can have no more control over you." No, that law pulled as hard when he was in the elevator as when he was out.

Well, how did he get there? He got there because he put himself in the control of a law of mechanics that was stronger than gravitation and overcame it.

Now, if you take that law of gravitation to represent the law of sin and death, and the law of mechanics as represented by the elevator, to be the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus, you will understand what I am driving at. He has not destroyed the law of gravitation, but he overcame it. He has gotten the victory over it. He is delivered from its power because he put himself under a stronger law. As soon as he stepped on the elevator he was all right.

And there is another thing I want to tell you. He could stand with one foot on the floor and the other in the elevator, and would have gotten into trouble. A lot of people are doing that. They start in half-heartedly with the question of committing themselves to the control of Christ. They are only going a little bit of the way. They have one foot in, but not quite altogether.

Is there some one here who has been kind of holding back? Let's pray before this conference ends we may have a great yielding time and a great committing time.

Death in the Hand

And then there is another illustration. I think it was used by Hudson Taylor. If you look at my hand, you say, "That's a living hand," but if I tell you there is death in that hand, you say, "Oh no, there is no death in that hand. Don't you see it is living, performing all the functions of life?"

But if I take a cord and twist it around my wrist very tightly and keep it there for two or three days, what happens? You will find the hand all turned black, and if I show it to a doctor he will tell you mortification has set in.

What is mortification? It is a roundabout name for death. But where did death come from? Did it come from outside or was it in there? No, death was in there all the time, but as long as the life current was constantly flowing from the heart and overcoming the power of death it could not manifest itself. So long as there was a relation between the heart and the hand death could not manifest itself but it was there all the time.

Now what is the condition or what are the conditions? I referred to that yesterday, I think. What is the condition of this overcoming power? It is found in committing yourself to the control of the Lord Jesus Christ, and letting His Spirit operate unreservedly and uninterruptedly in your life. That is the only secret there is about it that I know of.

Long ago in Switzerland there was a little chapel at Nanaclory, and in it one of those rude crucifixes you often see in such chapels. Underneath were two German words, one was "I' and the other "He," and through the first of these was drawn a deep cancelling mark. Not I but He.

That is the secret of it. You have the idea clearly when I state that our justification is through faith. Do you know that your sanctification is through that fact also? He is made unto us, from God, righteousness and sanctification. We are dependent upon Him just as much for sanctification, for deliverance from sins bondage, as we are for deliverance from sin's guilt. There is no difference.

I shall never forget the time when that devoted teacher, George H. McGregor, and Dr. Torrey, came to Toronto and spoke in my church and showed from Romans 5:10 the truth I am expressing just now.

"If when we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, shall we be saved by his life." Saved from the guilt of sin by the dying one, saved from the bondage of sin by the living one. Not I.

But had you noticed that in the seventh chapter of Romans the personal pronoun "I" is used twenty-seven times, and the Holy Spirit never mentioned? "I," "I," "I," "I," all the time, but in the eighth chapter of Romans it is the very opposite.

In the old feudal days in Britain, when a retainer pledged himself to his liege lord he placed his two hands between the hands of his lord and pledged absolute devotion to him even to the death. That was the committing of himself.

May I take the liberty of changing a verse in a well known hymn that we can adapt to it?

"Lord, I will place my hands in thine,
Nor ever murmur or repine,
Content whatever lot I see,
Since thou through life still leadeth me."

Oh, are we content really to put our hands into the hands, the nail pierced hands, of our crucified Lord and devote ourselves anew absolutely to him? That is the life of deliverance from the bondage of sin.

Gerhardt Kroll and the Gospel Tract

Rev. C. A. Montanus

A NUMBER of high school students, who are studying the English Bible in Berlin, Germany, under the direction of the Correspondence Department of the Moody Bible Institute, have for some time been carrying on a correspondence with several students at the Institute in Chicago, for the purpose of perfecting themselves in the English language.

Mr. Briggs Dingman, a student at the Institute, some weeks ago, sent to one of these young men a pocket Testament, which contained a small tract on "How to become a Christian." The recipient of this Testament, Gerhardt Kroll, was so impressed with the contents of the tract, that he persuaded the leader of their class, Mr. Paul Umlauf, to translate the same into German.

The matter was then presented to Pastor William Fetler, of the Friend of Russia Mission, who has been holding meetings among the thousands of Russian refugees in Germany, who in turn agreed to raise the funds, for the printing and distribution of this tract, amounting to more than one million marks. In speaking of this the young man writes, "My dear Briggs: You are surely very much surprised to see what effects, perhaps even results, your birthday present has had! One hundred thousand tracts are in printing, or have left the printing office to be distributed. The tract was also printed in the Sunday number of the Berliner Morgen Post, which is issued in four hundred thousand copies. On Thursday night an evangelization meeting took place in our Y. M. C. A. conducted by Pastor Fetler, during which the pastor asked the people whether they should not do something for the French, in pouring glowing coals on their heads, by having this tract printed in Paris newspapers; and begged all who were willing to help in this work, to make an offering. I was astonished about the joyfulness of the people in giving.

In our Correspondence class meeting last evening, we had a fine prayer meeting for these tracts, and the newspaper notices, that God may bless this work, to the many who read them."

So zealous for the things of God, is this seventeen year old German high school boy, and such an earnest soul-winner, that he is contemplating translating this same tract into the Swedish language. Gerhardt and his fellow students in the Correspondence course esteem it a great privilege to study the Word of God under the direction of the Moody Bible Institute; and as evidenced by the above they are making good use of the knowledge thus gained.

That more such earnest, consecrated workers might be raised up in Germany, in these days of adversity, to promote a real revival of the old time Religion in the German Empire, should be the prayer of God's people everywhere.

The Holy Spirit in the Welsh Revival

By Rev. John Weaver Weddell, D. D., Morgan Park, Ill.

MY TOUCH with the Welsh revival and my taste of its power and blessedness were rather an aftermath and echo of the thing itself, but so much I am glad to tell, to the glory of God.

We are looking for the Welsh revival, or its receding waves in the North of Wales. We stop at Raubon—not here. A little farther on to Wrexham—no, it has just passed. But, they tell us, that up in the hill country you can still find it. We are off for "Ross," as they call it for short.

Here we leave the train and at once dip into the revival atmosphere. People are thronging the streets, going to the various churches; sober faces everywhere but eyes bright and hopeful.

Every one is ready to tell you where to go, with a rare cordiality.

We step inside the nearby Methodist church. They are talking and expounding in Welsh. You do not understand a word, but presently you are in the midst of it. In the glow of fervor—is it the unity of the Spirit?—you seem to understand. Is not that the fifty-third of Isaiah? Yes. You know it by the tender brooding accent; then the swelling song.

It goes with you out upon the street. I tarried for a week at the firesides of these people, and I heard it there. It was genuine. All the religion you have, indeed, is what you have in the daily test of the home.

And what was the Welsh revival? In a word, the Liberty of the Spirit

Everybody witnessing and telling the story.

"Since the revival began," said the pastor at Johnstown nearby, "we preachers are much put to, to get in a word ourselves. We used to have our orderly program: invocation, choir, prayer, Scripture, sermon, benediction. Not so now. At nine o'clock the people begin to gather. Singing and testifying as they come, telling of new conquests, praising God for His converting grace. Presently I find my way to the pulpit, and if I get my own message in, it is because I seize the opportunity in a momentary lull in the tide of witnessing."

A minister came from London to study this phenomenon. He found the church full and climbed through the window, close up at the front. Apparently no preacher, people speaking everywhere. After a while, looking at his watch, he said to a man, sitting in one of the front seats:

"Where is Evan Roberts? I've been waiting an hour and a half to hear him."

The answer startled him,

"I'm Evan Roberts; you see they can get along without me."

But not without the Holy Ghost!

Liberty of Song

Oh, the freedom and volume of it! I was walking with two other preachers along the street. Ahead of us a group of jolly looking young men, about to break up. How would they greet us, with lightness or ribaldry, as often at home? Lo, as they separated they went, each company breaking out into gospel song.

It sounded good. Well, we know the signs of awakening. Song. Song. In church, in home, in the shop, on the street. O thou God of revivals, may we hear it again! As Gypsy Smith loves to sing it—

"The Spirit answers to the blood,
And tells me I am born of God."

Some of it is in the tuneful minor. "O the Lamb, the gentle Lamb!" What more touching and sweet? Or, "Jesus, lover of my soul" to the tune of our mothers, "Aberystyth," none more tender and devotional.

Most of it is in the sonorous and ringing major, "Diadem," for example, or, "O, listen to our wondrous story," or the strong choral response, of the "Diolch Iddo."

The Welsh can sing and they do it. When we all get home to glory, whatever your place or mine, may it be near the Welsh choir—a great company of them went out with the Lusitania. We will hear them on the other side.

Liberty of Prayer

We may not be able, all of us, to preach and sing, but one thing we can do, and that is, pray. And prayer is first.

"Right here," said Mrs. Humphrey, the pastor's wife in the Baptist chapel, "the revival began in North Wales. Rev. R. B. Jones was leading the meeting. One day he left the platform saying, 'I am not leading this meeting, the Holy Ghost is in charge.' Instantly a man in the audience began to pray. We had never heard him before; but the unction of God was upon him. Almost immediately as by a heavenly suction the people began to come in off the streets, and the revival was on."

Rev. W. R. Jones (there are many Joneses in Wales) said to the writer as we stood together in the chapel at Pen-e-cai, "Here the awakening started with us. I closed my sermon and was moved to throw the service on the people. To my surprise a timid woman who had never given voice before broke out in prayer; so forceful and melting, it brought us all to our knees. And somehow it filled the house; it has not been empty in service time since."

"Well, this way is open, always.

At Keswick, Rev. Owen Owen said, "Many of you came to our beloved land to try to carry the revival home; it does not come from Wales; it comes from heaven." Amen!

Week at Keswick

This week, following the Welsh revival, was saturated with the Spirit, and one could not help but feel it ever and anon in the midst of the earnest discourses in the tents. The men of Wales who were present would throw in their stirring Diolch Iddo—

"Songs of praises, songs of praises,
I will ever give to Thee,"

and it helped to lift the tide of devotion.

I shall not forget the great Saturday meeting of 1905, led by Dr. A. T. Pierson.

He was about to depart for our own country and had come prepared with a goodbye message. But that message was never given; it was taken out of his mouth.

"I have just returned from the Welsh revival," he said, "and I recognize the compelling lead of the Spirit. Is there any one who has a special word from the Lord that he must speak right now?"

Instantly, a woman was on her feet to tell of spiritual victory. Confession, renewal and praise followed in swift flashes of high emotion, that seemed like the primitive tongues of fire at Pentecost.

I listened, as all did, deeply moved, for an hour, and then slipped away to the other tent where Rev. F. B. Meyer was giving a devotional exposition.

When I returned there stood the tall, straight figure of Dr. Pierson, his body tense, his eye alert, and the testimonies were still finding utterance.

At last as the whelming flood was coming to its crest and close, I heard that mighty exegete of the Word, lifting his hand, say, "I want to utter one word before we are forced to close this meeting. I thank God tonight for taking away from me the greatest sermon I have ever prepared and giving it to the people." Then he sat down.

And then again the chorus, swelling high,

"Songs of praises, songs of praises,
I will ever give to Thee."

The Book of Job, or, Why the Godly Suffer

By Rev. C. B. Currie, Augusta, Ga.

VICTOR HUGO has called the book of Job, "perhaps the greatest masterpiece of the human mind."

About it, various questions have been asked—the writer, the date, the scene, the literary character, the theme.

The writer is unknown. He is thought to have been Job himself, Moses, Solomon, Isaiah, Hezekiah, or Baruch.

The date, too, is unknown. It is supposed to have been in the age of Moses, Solomon, the Exile, Ezra, or the Maccabees. An early date, I think, is the more probable.

The scene is the land of Uz, east or southeast of Palestine, near the Arabian desert.

With respect to literary character the book of Job is a dramatic poem, introduced and followed with historical prose, 32:1-6, also being prose. The poetry, itself, is not history but has an historical basis.

Seven actors and one actress take part: Job, God, Satan, the three friends, Elihu, and Job's wife.

The theme is in the form of a problem: "The Mystery of the Sufferings of the Godly," and the key passage is 10:2, "Show me wherefore thou contendest with me?"

Why the godly are afflicted is a problem that puzzles many.

> "This is the cry that echoes through the wilderness of earth; through song and sorrow, day of death and birth. Why?"

Only a partial solution of the problem appears in

ACT I

THE BASIS OF THE PROBLEM, CHAPTERS 1, 2

The earth. Job, an upright man, rich in oxen, asses, sheep, camels, and sons and daughters—"the greatest of all the children of the east."

Heaven. The angels present themselves before God. Among them, also comes Satan. God asks Satan whether he has considered His servant Job, and noted his uprightness. Satan replies, "Doth Job fear God for naught?" Has he not been blessed, abundantly, by God, and is he not upright from selfish motives? Take away his prosperity, and he will renounce thee to thy face.

God therefore gives Satan permission to test Job.

The earth. Calamities rush upon Job. The Sabeans rob him of his oxen and asses, and slay his servants. Lightning kills others of his servants, and his sheep. The Chaldeans fall upon his camels, take them away, and put to death the attending servants. Swooping out of the wilderness, a tornado strikes Job's eldest son's house, and leaves all Job's children dead. Still, Job is patient.

Heaven. Satan again appears before God, and God inquires of him whence he comes, and whether he has considered His servant Job, who though afflicted has held fast his integrity.

Satan replies that Job will renounce God to His face, if God will subject him to bodily suffering.

"Behold," says God, "he is in thy hand; only spare his life."

Then Satan afflicts Job from head to foot with boils, and Job takes a piece of broken pottery to scrape himself, and sits among the ashes.

Job's wife hisses, "Renounce God, and die."

Here, in the first act of the drama is seen a partial, but only a partial, solution of the problem. By affliction, God is testing Job.

We, too, are tested. We are not tested, however, to show God what we are (for He already knows), but to reveal us to others and to ourselves. Our afflictions show our neighbors and ourselves whether we are patient, honest, or true; whether we complain under sickness, earnestly strive to pay our debts, or tell the truth when it hurts.

Job's three friends, having heard of his calamities, arrive to comfort him.

ACT II

THE DISCUSSION OF THE PROBLEM, 3:1-42:6

Opening Complaint of Job, Chapter 3

Job complains that he was ever born, that he did not die at birth, and that he is not permitted to die now.

First Series of Debates, Chapters 4-14

To comfort Job, his three friends assume that affliction proves personal wickedness. In other words, they assume that God is chastising Job for his sins.

Job replies that their principle is true only in general; it has many exceptions, one of which is his own case. He is conscious of no such great sins as they say are the cause of his sufferings, and he would explain his afflictions in some other way.

The partial explanation of the three friends as to suffering is given still.

Jesus, passing by, saw a man blind from his birth. "Who did sin, this man or his parents, that he was born blind?" the disciples asked.

Jesus answered, "Neither did this man nor his parents sin, that he was born blind." He merely asserted that no special sin or sins of the man or his parents caused the blindness.

It is true that sin on the part of God's children, or the unregenerate, is never over-looked by God. In the case of the regenerate, it is often (not always), visited with chastisement, that is, punishment for reformation. Frequently, it is forgiven, upon repentance, without chastisement. In the case of the unregenerate, sin, not repented of, and therefore not forgiven, is always punished as satisfaction for the broken law. But, neither in the case of the regenerate nor the unregenerate can an affliction be known by man as chastisement or satisfaction for sin. The bullet that despatches a soldier sentenced to be shot by a squad can be traced to no special rifle.

Do not under-rate, however, the scriptural truth that the children of God often are chastised for their sins. Hezekiah, having been "sick unto death" —recovered. Well once more, "he rendered not again according to the benefit done unto him . . . therefore there was wrath upon him and upon Judah and Jerusalem." Manasseh, the seducer of his nation, bows at Babylon in chastening fetters. And what truer chastisement for sin than blindness of mind, hardness of heart, remorse of conscience, or vileness of affections, all of which even the regenerate, if they fall into sin, may have?

Second Series of Debates, Chapters 15-21

The friends rebuke Job's presumptuousness and impiety, and depict the certain and speedy end of the wicked, chapters 15, 18, 20.

In reply, Job reproaches his friends for their lack of sympathy, complains of God's treatment of him, hopes for vindication after death, and shows that suffering does not necessarily prove ungodliness; if it did, all the wicked would be afflicted, but as a matter of fact some of them are allowed prosperity. Also, he reproves the friends for presuming to know how God governs the world, chapters 16, 17, 19, 21.

Third Series of Debates, Chapters 22-31

Eliphaz insists that Job is suffering for his sins and specifies oppression and injustice. He warns Job that he cannot hide his sins from God; sinners in the days of the Flood tried that but failed. And he exhorts Job to return to God, assuring him of restoration and prosperity (chap. 22.)

Bildad makes his last speech, which is short, probably because he is worsted in the argument. He declares God's perfections and man's inferiority to him (chap. 25).

Zophar is silent in this series of debates; he appears to be vanquished.

Job replies to Eliphaz, and Bildad (chaps. 23, 24, and 26-31).

Speaking to Eliphaz (chap. 23), Job longs that he may find God and, set his case before Him, confident that God will acquit him. But his bright vision fades, and on every side he gropes for his God.

Again he protests his uprightness, yet is afraid that after all he may be guilty in God's sight, otherwise he would not be so greatly afflicted.

Job is perplexed at why God allows wicked men to prosper (chap. 24). The wicked steal, they oppress, they extort, they murder, they commit adultery, yet "God regardeth not their folly." Prosper though they do, he admits in "a little while they are gone," they are brought low."

Replying to Bildad (chap. 26) Job speaks ironically in verses 1 to 4:

How your speech has helped me!

It has given me strength, wisdom, and knowledge!

But, Job acknowledges God's power, as seen in the spirit world, on earth, and in the heavens, and exclaims, "The thunder of His power, who can understand?"

Again Job protests his innocence, and asserts the fate of the wicked (chap. 27). Though the godless may get temporal gain, they lose spiritual things, including their own souls.

Therefore, argues Job, "the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom" (chap. 28). Man discovers metals and precious stones in mines, but where shall he find wisdom, a richer treasure? God "knoweth the place thereof."

Then Job looks back over his life (chap. 29).

He exclaims, "O that I were in the months of old," when he was prosperous, respected, useful, and happy.

With this, Job bitterly contrasts his present misery (chap. 30). He is derided by worthless outcasts, tormented by the rabble, and tortured in mind and body, for which he blames God; and he mourns, "Thou wilt bring me to death."

Yet, he will cry for help, for has not he himself shown compassion for the suffering?

Job now makes his last protest of his uprightness (chap. 31). He has not been guilty of adultery, lying, fraud, oppression, stinginess, greed for gold, idolatry, vindictiveness, or inhospitality. And he challenges the Almighty to answer him.

Elihu Offers His Solution, Chapters 32-37

Elihu is bursting to speak (chap. 32). He is angry with Job because Job has "justified himself, rather than God"; and with the three friends, because they have condemned Job, yet have been unable to answer him.

Apologizing for interference in the debates, Elihu admits that he is young and the other men old, but claims that he is no fool—"It is not the aged that understand justice. Hearken unto me; I also will show my opinion."

And Elihu's opinion is that none of the friends has convinced Job; God may vanquish him, but not man.

Yet, Elihu's breast, "like new wine skins, is ready to burst" with speech. He "will speak, that he may be refreshed," and he "will not respect any man's person," neither will he "give flattering titles to any man."

Addressing Job (chaps. 33-37) Elihu holds that affliction is a means of training or discipline and he therefore reproves Job's self-justification, vindicates God's justice, and exhorts Job to submit to Him who is unsearchable greatness.

Yes, affliction is often a means of training or discipline. In Babylon Judah was kept captive for seventy years that it might be turned to Jehovah. Jonah in the fish's belly came to himself, and prayed unto God. Jehovah warns Israel and Judah through Hosea that He will be unto them "as a lion," and declares that in their affliction they will seek Him earnestly. Affliction is our school-master; it measures our progress in the education of the heart. It develops and displays Christian graces. Job, had he not sat on a heap of ashes might never have been placed upon the pedestal of patience.

God Speaks, Chapters 38-41

But not in training, not in testing, not in chastisement, is the full mystery of the suffering of God's children seen. Only Omniscience knows it, and out of the whirlwind He speaks. Silence, Elihu! Silence, Job! Silence, false friends! while Jehovah shows that His children, like the rest of creation, are under the control of an infinitely wise, loving, and powerful God, who cannot be understood perfectly, but who is worthy of implicit trust. When Job can understand God in nature, then, and not till then, can he understand the mysteries of God in the moral realm.

But Job cannot understand the mysteries of God in inanimate nature (38:1-38). Earth's glad creation, the deep, the dawn, and the underworld; light and darkness; the snow and the hail, the rain and the frost, the constellations and the lightning—these are mysteries Job cannot know.

Mysterious, too, are the ways of God in animate nature (chaps. 38-41). The lion and the raven, the wild goat, the wild ass and the wild ox, the ostrich, the war horse, the hawk and the eagle, the hippopotamus and the crocodile—the mysteries about these Job cannot understand. How, then, can he understand the mysteries in the moral realm?

Job Confesses, 42:1-6

Job confesses his ignorance of the Almighty's ways and his consequent harsh judgment of Him. He had heard of God—His power and His wisdom—but now he has a clearer revelation of God. He sees Him whom Isaiah "undone," also saw, "the king, Jehovah of hosts." This is enough for Job. The full mystery of his sufferings still is unsolved, but he will leave it with Him who had said that it was He who "laid the foundations of the earth . . . when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy"; and who "hath cleft a channel for the waterflood" and "a way for the lightning of the thunder."

ACT III

THE ENDING OF THE PROBLEM (42:7-17)

After the confession of Job, God condemns the three friends for their wrong assertions about Himself, and tells them to go and offer up for themselves a burnt offering, assuring them that Job will pray for them, and be answered because he is acceptable with God.

The ground of God's condemnation of the three friends is that they have not spoken of God "the thing that is right." They have defended Him falsely, dogmatically asserting He is chastising Job for his sins, whereas they do not know why God allows Job to suffer.

Has not Job also, spoken of God in a sense, "the thing that is not right?" Undoubtedly he has. From 3:1 to 32:1, he repeatedly shows impatience, complaining at his lot and remonstrating with God. So true is this that God takes about four chapters, 38 to 41, in which to rebuke and humble Job. Still, "Jehovah accepted Job" and says to the friends, "Ye have not spoken the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath." How explain?

With respect to Job's speaking the right thing about God, this is his confession of the wrong things he has spoken about God and his acknowledgement of God's greatness and his own littleness, 40:3-5 and 42:1-6.

Respecting God's acceptance of Job; God accepts Job after he has confessed and repented of his wrong utterances about Him, just as God accepts all his children after they confess and repent of their sins.

But, you may argue, the fact remains that Job, at times, is impatient. How, then, can James truly call him patient? James means that Job was patient, or steadfast on the whole. Deprived of his property, bereft of his children, tortured in body, taunted by his wife—still Job (2:11) "did not sin with his lips." It is later that he sins with them, after his so-called friends arrive to comfort him. He is irritated, it seems, at the very presence of these men as, at first, they sit in silence near him; and after he is falsely accused by them he loses self-control, and gives them and God a piece of his mind. But, shall we not judge Job by the general course of his life, which, beyond the shadow of a doubt is upright? He is a hickory, sometimes swaying under suffering, but deep-rooted in God. Straightening again, he stands an example to future ages of steadfastness.

Truly, therefore, does James call Job patient or steadfast. And, James is but citing inspired history when he says that Job's steadfastness issued in God's pity and mercy, for God gives Job twice as much as he had before—sheep, camels, oxen, she asses, sons, and daughters. "And in all the land were found no women so fair as the daughters of Job . . . And after this, Job lived a hundred and forty years, and saw his sons and his sons' sons, even four generations. So Job died, being old and full of days."

READING FROM THE BIBLE EVERY DAY

Enthusiastic welcome has been given to the Churchman's Kalendar of Daily Bible Readings.

The readings are arranged in three courses, one on the Christian year, one on the life of our Lord, and one for children. "It is hoped," says the foreword, "that in no way will these courses be looked upon as a substitute for the calendar in the Prayer Book, or for the Lectionary, but rather as the first step in daily reading of Holy Scripture leading up to the Prayer Book standard."

The Daily Bible Readings, the three courses under one cover, are twenty cents a copy, or $15 a hundred. Copies of any single course are five cents each, or $3 a hundred. Orders should be sent to the Book Store, 281 Fourth Avenue, New York.

Suggestions for Gospel Song Writers

The criticism of gospel songs we hear so frequently is not lodged against the music more than the words. Perhaps the song writers whom we are happy to have among our readers will appreciate such words for songs as we may be able to set before them in our pages from time to time. The words are not copyrighted in any case so far as we know, but no experienced song writer would assume to use them, we feel sure, without permission of the author in each case.—Editors.

WHEN WE LAY DOWN THE BURDENS

By Rev. W. Lomax Childress, Cumberland, Md.

When we lay down the burdens,
That the years of time may send,
They will be nothing, brother,
To the glory at the end.

The hours of toil that tried us,
And the stones along the way,
Will all have been forgotten,
At the breaking of the day.

The pain that thrilled the body,
And the dimming of the sight,
As vanished mist will leave us,
At the coming of the light.

The seed we sowed with patience,
In the stormy days and fair,
Shall blossom into beauty,
In the golden harvest there.

The faith we had in Jesus
And that nothing could destroy,
Will lead us past the portals,
To the never ending joy.

And all that we have sought for
Who have rested on His word,
Will be freely given to us,
In the glory of the Lord.

WHEN YOU SEE JESUS

By Mrs. H. S. Lehman, Chicago, Ill.

When life's skies are dark and drear above you,
And your heart is sad and lonely too,
It will always help you to remember
That there's some one going through with you.

Chorus—
When you see Jesus in the burden,
How much lighter is the load,
When you see Him in the journey,
How much smoother is the road;
How it helps in ev'ry conflict,
How it cheers in ev'ry care,
In the trial, how you can glory,
If you see the Saviour there!

He has promised we shall not be tempted
Above that which we have strength to bear,
We can trust Him when the way is hardest,
We can know that He is always there.

In our ev'ry trial He's afflicted,
When we suffer, 'tis that we may be
Only fitted to receive the blessing,
And the glory of His wisdom see.

MORNING BY MORNING

By Mrs. Helen S. Thomson, Chicago, Ill.

Morning by morning we go forth to meet
All that a day brings, both bitter and sweet;
Jesus invites us His true love to prove,
Morning by morning seek help from above.

Ref.
Morning by morning I sit at His feet,
Morning by morning my Saviour I meet,
Searching the Scriptures to know His own Word,
Morning by morning I find Him—my Lord.

Morning by morning if we will but pause,
Seeking to learn of His love and His laws,
Little by little, His precepts unfold,
Morning by morning He gives wealth untold.

Morning by morning more clearly we see
God's plan unfolding, His Word is the key;
When we hold fast to Him, trusting His way,
Morning by morning, He blesses our day.

Morning by morning we learn to adore,
Fearing no longer the echoless shore;
Earth's ways grow bright when we walk in His love,
Morning by morning we're looking above.

ONE DAY LESS FOR JESUS

By J. Paul Bennett, Chicago, Ill.

One day less to shine for Jesus,
Who the light me gave;
Have I seen the souls around me,
Souls whom I might save,
Struggling through the world's great darkness
Toward eternity?
Have I tried to show them Jesus
So that they might see?

One day less to love for Jesus,
Him who loved me so;
Have I spent each precious moment
His great love to show?
Am I closer now than ever
To His heart of love?
Has my love to men around me
Shown them His above?

One day less to serve the Saviour,
Christ who died for me;
Have I lived as He would have me,
He who set me free?
Am I willing all to offer,
All to give to Him?
Is my life upon God's altar,
Offered up for Him?

One day less to live for Jesus,
Who me life did give;
May I see, dear Lord, the value
Of each day I live;
May I know that by the actions
Of a single day
I may settle some one's future
E'en eternally.

Dr. Jowett and Criticism

By Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D. D., Germantown, Pa.

AT A meeting of the English Congregational Union last September, Dr. Selbie, principal of Mansfield College, Oxford, read a paper on "Evangelical Faith and the Bible," which was based throughout on a definitely critical view of the Bible. He enumerated several points as among those on which scholars are "absolutely agreed" and on this account "would never go back on them."

The curious thing is that none of the things he mentioned can be fairly said to have had the endorsement of all scholars, unless we are to assume that only those are scholars who accept the critical position.

Even apart from those who are associated with the conservative position, like Orr, Green, Robert Dick Wilson and others, I should have thought that Naville, Sayce, Berdmans and Dahse could be regarded as worthy of the name of scholars, whatever be their views.

But Dr. Selbie, like others of his school, ignores every one who does not hold the critical view, though this does not impress one with its truth or fairness. True scholarship always "keeps its mind open at both ends."

The unsatisfactory and, indeed, impossible character of the paper can be easily inferred from this extract

> "The intelligent young man of today, he was thankful to say, would have nothing to do with the view that the Bible was a fixed and unalterable quantity. Christianity was to him a road at the end of which was truth, and the search for truth was permitted to him, and so long as he kept the truth before his mind no man in any Christian church should say him nay."

Does this mean that Christianity has no truth to start with, only at the end of the road? That it should be said by the head of a theological seminary connected with an evangelical church, is, to put it mildly, not encouraging for the quality of the ministry there prepared.

Jowett Comments on Selbie

But my present object is not to discuss Dr. Selbie's paper, but to call attention to something far more important—certain comments on this paper by Dr. Jowett.

The delay in noticing this is due to the fact that on the appearance of Dr. Jowett's words, I wrote to one of the English papers where his comments appeared, and then waited weeks in the hope that some notice would be taken of what seemed to me an important matter.

But as my letter was either lost in transit or else was not allowed to appear, I am desirous, even at this late date, of directing attention to the question because of the far-reaching effects of Dr. Jowett's opinion.

In the course of some notes contributed to the London Daily Telegraph, Dr. Jowett wrote as follows:

> "Another prominent characteristic of the meetings in Hull was the evident determination of the assembly to follow the path of absolute sincerity in the treatment of its own creeds and confessions, and more especially in the handling of the Scriptures, and in the rational interpretation of their progressive teachings. The church's attitude to the Bible was discussed in the assembly by Dr. Selbie, whose sane and healthy leadership is greatly valued in all denominations. Dr. Selbie pleaded that there should be no juggling with the truth, but that the accepted findings of biblical scholarship should be wisely and fearlessly taught in all our churches and schools. I profoundly agree with him. There is now widespread unrest and confusion. Our young people do not know where they are. They are in the bonds of antiquated method and conception. Much of their bondage would be released by a more candid and fearless dealing with their difficulties, and more particularly by teaching methods of approach to the Bible in which many of the difficulties would solve themselves. There is a spiritual reasonableness in these things which is speedily justified by its fruitage."

It will be noticed that Dr. Jowett expresses his "profound agreement" with Dr. Selbie, but as the comments are couched in general terms, I wish Dr. Jowett would go farther and state definitely his meaning of the following points:

1. What are the "accepted findings of biblical scholarship" which "should be wisely and fearlessly taught in all our churches and schools"?

2. What, in detail, are the features of the "widespread unrest and confusion" which he regards as now existing?

3. In what particular respects do our young people "not know where they are"?

4. What is meant exactly by "bonds of antiquated method and conception"? Both ideas, "method" and "conception" need elucidation.

5. What, precisely, is the "more candid and fearless dealing with their difficulties which would release them from much of their bondage"?

6. What are the "teaching methods of approach to the Bible" which would solve many of these difficulties?

7. Could we not have an example of illustration of that "spiritual reasonableness" which is said to justify itself by its results?

It will be seen that Dr. Jowett makes a virtual charge against those who do not agree with Dr. Selbie and himself of a lack of candor and of moral courage. This should be justified or else withdrawn, and it is with the hope that Dr. Jowett will see his duty to men who are presumably as candid and as fearless as himself, that I call attention to these words. I believe that those to whom he presumably refers are as strongly in favor of "absolute sincerity" and "spiritual reasonableness" as he is, and on this account I feel he ought to give a definite and detailed explanation of the points he raises and the charges he makes.

Ignorance on Inspiration

There is one point in Dr. Selbie's paper to which I will refer because of the bearing on it of Dr. Jowett's own work. Dr. Selbie directed his attack against "verbal inspiration" as that which, he said, was doing "infinite harm to young minds" and was "hindering young men from entering the ministry."

But like many more, Dr. Selbie has misunderstood and therefore misstated the position of those who take this view. They do not believe that inspiration involves dictation, still less that everything in the Bible is on the same level of divine authority and obligation. What they mean by verbal inspiration is that inspiration guarantees the record because the inspiration extends as far as words, since it is only by means of words that we can obtain a thorough understanding of the thought. And so, whether the record refers only to historical information, as for example, in the story of David's sin, or whether it conveys doctrinal teaching about God and Christ, we can be sure of the trustworthiness of the record as it has come down to us in the words of the Bible.

Now what I particularly wish to point out is that I know no one in the present day who is doing more than Dr. Jowett to call attention to the words of Scripture as the medium of the truth of God for human life. In the various volumes of sermons published by him can be found abundant proofs that a careful consideration of the words of the Bible is the best way of arriving at the truth of the divine revelation. I for one have often been greatly impressed and helped by his felicitous presentations of Scripture teaching based on the words of the Bible, and I cannot believe, or think he believes, that these aspects and applications of truth are merely the result of human effort; on the contrary, I regard them as among the best and most convincing proofs of a divine superintendence which we call inspiration.

This is what those who hold verbal inspiration mean, namely, the reliability of the words of Scripture as the medium and guarantee of the underlying thought of God for human life, where that teaching is forthcoming, and an equally reliable record of historical facts in cases where the passages do not involve a direct divine message.

Let Dr. Jowett Explain

I cannot forbear expressing my great regret that Dr. Jowett has so definitely expressed his belief in and sympathy with the critical school.

Hitherto he has preserved a silence on the topics and has contented himself with a positive presentation of the evangelical message. And while some of us have often wished he could have seen his way to break silence and to use his great influence in guiding thought in those right channels which his preaching clearly involves, yet we have been deeply thankful for his emphasis on the great fundamental realities of grace.

But now, in taking sides so definitely with Dr. Selbie, he has made it necessary for others to speak as plainly as he has done.

There is one outstanding reason why he should go into detail and explain the force of the general charges he has brought against many of his brethren in the ministry. It is this: in all the sermons of his which I have read, including those he has preached to his own congregations, I cannot recall that he has ever set forth those "accepted findings of biblical scholarship" which he says should be fearlessly taught in our churches, or given any guidance along the lines indicated in the comments.

We may assume that even in his congregations there have been some who were "in the bondage of antiquated method and conception," and I should be glad to be directed to any sermon in which Dr. Jowett has endeavored to release them by a "candid and fearless dealing with their difficulties."

That I am not alone in this impression of Dr. Jowett's silence on critical topics in the course of his ordinary ministry, I quote from a recent book, The Best I Remember, by Mr. Arthur Porritt, editor of The London Christian World:

> "I have never been able, from hearing him preach, to feel quite certain where he stands in relation to modern theological issues. His ministry is essentially evangelical in spirit but not evangelical in the letter. I have never heard him preach on a miracle when he has emphasized the miraculous; invariably he has drawn from the miracle-story its spiritual significances and present-day applicability. Nor have I ever heard him indicate his personal attitude toward higher criticism, beyond conceding once that there were two Isaiahs. His preaching is the preaching of affirmations to the total exclusion of negations. While he never wounds the susceptibilities of the conservative school, he never challenges the liberals in theology. 'New' and 'old' alike thus find common ground in a scriptural ministry luminous with spiritual truth, yet free from the jangling of school men."

Defending the Ku Klux Klan—A Reply to Mr. Funderburk

By Rev. John Bradbury, Lancaster, Pa.

I HAVE just finished the article in the March issue on the Ku Klux Klan by Rev. A. R. Funderburk, Palestine, Tex.

My immediate reaction is to regard it as a transgression of the laws of righteous publicity. The article is wrong so far as the K. K. K. is concerned. The author is not charged with falsification, but rebuked for assertions he had no right to make unless the proof is absolute and complete.

I am not a member of the Klan, but as a Christian minister I have undertaken to investigate the Klan and its activities, that I might be informed concerning this important public question. The assertions I may make in answer to Mr. Funderburk are not based upon the statements of irresponsible persons, but taken from the official data of the Klan itself. Mr. Funderburk seems to have built his tirade on street gossip, whereas such charges as he makes should have been based only on official investigation.

To everything he says in relation to the Bible, I say "Amen," but concerning his statements regarding the Klan I know him to be wrong, and in fairness to your readers, and out of respect to Klansmen generally, who for the most part consist of earnest, kind-hearted, patriotic Christians, I think you should publish this correction.

1. The first impression I wish to correct is the statement, "It has no interest in the welfare of others than Americans." That is not true. Everything I have before me indicates that the organization stands for things contrary to that. "The glory of a Klansman is to serve." So states its ritual. All kinds of human beings have a right to this service, and you will find from the activities of the Klan that they are sedulously serving.

2. The next impression I wish to correct is that the attitude of the Klan toward the Jew is, "Boycott them and force them to leave." Can any one prove that any Jew has been persecuted by a Klansman? The Jew is excluded from the Klan not because he is a Jew, but no man can become a Klansman who is not willing to bow the knee to Jesus Christ. Says Col. Simmons, the Imperial wizard of the K. K. K.:

"Even though many Jews could and would qualify for membership, it would have been unjust to allow the Jew to enter into fellowship with the organization by appealing to his patriotism, and then have him cease to attend because every meeting would be out of harmony with his religious convictions."

3. The next impression I desire to correct is in regard to Roman Catholics. The Klan is made to say:

"We're not going to stop until we drive every one of them out of the country."

Mr. Funderburk adds, "We are comparing Bible teaching with Klan teaching. The Bible says 'Do good to them and pray for them.' The Klan says, 'Drive them out.' "

That comparison is not true. The verses taken from Romans 12 are part of the heart of Klanism. That chapter is the central code of the organization. It is not uncommon for Klansmen to hold meetings at which prayers are offered for all people, especially for their enemies. Hear what Col. Simmons has to say about this subject:

"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, regardless of statements made to the contrary either through ignorance or with deliberate intent to misrepresent it, has not made, is not now making, and does not intend to make any fight on the Roman Catholic church as a religious institution, but it will unalterably and unequivocally oppose any move of the Catholic church or of any other church, individual or organization, which attempts to bring about a combination of church and state in the United States."

4. The next impression I wish to correct is, that "Klansmen who profess to stand for law and order are often guilty of violation of this law."

This is a harsh charge to make unless one has facts to lay on the table. The Klan has been assailed a multitude of times but no court as yet has found it guilty. Its officials have been arrested on various charges but no grand jury indicts.

A nation wide propaganda has been instituted against the Klan. Fair play made me ask why, and started me on a hunt for the truth. December 3, 1922, Dr. Newel Dwight Hillis, of Brooklyn, exhibited 250 telegrams that were replies to inquiries sent by him at various times to mayors, sheriffs, and other officials of towns and cities where supposed Ku Klux Klan outrages had been reported, and he said that every reply contained specific denial that the outrages were in any way traceable to the Knights of the Klan.

Col. Simmons answers: "Because certain individuals at certain times have committed acts of violence under cover of darkness and shielded by masks and robes somewhat resembling the official regalia of the Ku Klux Klan, they have been classed as members of that organization. The Ku Klux Klan is a strictly law abiding organization and every member is sworn to uphold the law at all times . . . and any member violating this oath would be banished forever from the organization."

5. The final impression I wish to correct is that the Klan is anti-Christian.

I have not found the Klan to be anti-anything. Above all it is not anti-Christ. Mr. Funderburk says that Jesus would be excluded on the grounds of His being a Jew. What a misstatement! The highest official of Klandom reports, "At every lodge meeting Jesus Christ is lauded, and His teachings expounded and the constitution and regulations of the order set forth that the living Christ is the Klansman's criterion of character."

Any converted Jew could become a Klansman. I know of at least one converted Jew who is one.

Reasons for the Clan

May I be permitted to give to this response a conclusion?

I would not sit upon the judgment throne to denounce men of the type required to be a Klansman. Still, I would not approve all that there is to Ku Kluxism. I am not a member of a single fraternal organization, for good reasons. But one also is aware that this country has arrived at the watershed of destiny. For years a silent penetration of our national institutions has been going on. Subtle mischief is at work. Nefarious combinations have grown so powerful as to present a national menace. Ku Kluxism is only a phase of our national alarm. The Klan is here to stay. It is growing at a phenomenal rate. In spite of a nationwide opposition and vilification native Americans are sweeping into its ranks by the hundred thousand. What is arousing the manhood of this country? Perils such as these:

In the vicinity of Boston there are twenty-seven newspapers and magazines published for the purpose of overturning this republic and substituting Communistic government.

If a relative of yours in Philadelphia became a drug addict, and died of it, supposing in righteous indignation you should make war on drug peddlars, and discover that your relative had been poisoned by a man who came over to this country to be a parasite on our body politic; and supposing you found more foreigners all engaged in the same business, would you feel like sounding a call to every true American to drive these monsters from our midst, or would you not?

And then supposing you had gathered evidence that ought to convince any court, only to discover that a corrupt political organization lends its protecting wing to these human pests, and by delays, appeals, and arguments about legalities you were cheated out of justice, would you not begin to shout that something ought to be done? Brethren, let us be fair! The Ku Klux Klan is a sign of the times. A few men thought that something "ought to be done." They organized, but nobody seemed to like them. And yet, in spite of all the spleen vented against them their ranks are swelling faster than any other body of volunteers in the history of the country.

To be a Klansman is not popular, in some places it is dangerous, and yet they are taking the oath of their obligation to Christ and citizenship in numbers that astound.

Investigate the Klan. So far I have found that the churches never had a more active ally, the state a more determined champion; our homes a more resolute defender, and lawlessness and vice a more powerful foe than the Ku Klux Klan.

South Dakota on Material versus Spiritual Values

A Concurrent Resolution

Introduced by the Committee on Education

WHEREAS, The unprecedented wave of crime sweeping over America, crowding our jails and penitentiaries, and increasing the prison population of South Dakota almost 100 per cent, is, in the opinion of the most expert sociologists of the age, due to the emphasis which has in recent years been placed upon material values and the small concern paid to spiritual values, in home, school and society; and,

Whereas, This alarming condition shows no indication of subsidence, but on the contrary is increasing, and must produce a situation that should arouse every thoughtful person to consider efficient methods of combating the crime wave and to impress the great necessity for reform in modern home life, school economy and social practices; and,

Whereas, The multiplicity of bills offer diverse methods of accomplishing this purpose which have flooded this legislature is proof of the concern felt, as well as the difficulty of enacting into law effective provisions for producing the end sought, as well as the greater difficulty of bringing citizens of opposing views and different religious convictions to a uniform understanding and method; and,

Whereas, Washington said in his farewell address: "No nation can exist without religion." Experience, the history of humanity, has demonstrated that a republic like ours is strong and a blessing to its people and the world according to the development of its people, according to the moral character and intelligent religion of its people; and

Whereas, The strength and efficiency of any republic, a government by the people depends upon the best development of those people, which experience has demonstrated, and history shows, cannot be without religion. The strength of a republic is in the character of its citizens, their intelligence and their morals, inseparable from their religion and

Whereas, It is uniformly conceded that the remedy must be effected through the inculcation of morality, spirituality and conscience in the young, in church, school and home; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Senate of the State of South Dakota, the House of Representatives concurring

That the people of South Dakota be enjoined to at once address themselves to renewed effort to restore the balance between the spiritual and the material, that our children be reared up in the precepts of fundamental righteousness.

That the churches and Sabbath schools be constrained to intensify their work and to extend it to every child within their respective spheres of influence.

That parents be adjured to exert every effort to restore the old time influence of the home in moulding the lives of their children, for the development of conscience and morality; that the family altar be restored and that in self-sacrificing love the little ones be trained in the simple virtues, of truthfulness, honesty and respect for the rights of others.

That the schools promptly reform their methods so that the rudimentary studies, as well as the sciences be taught only as subordinate to righteousness. That the emphasis be placed upon morality, good conscience, respect for parents, reverence for age and experience, and that all learning is but the handmaiden of eternal goodness.

That it is the judgment of the legislature of South Dakota that only upon the lines herein suggested can the true balance be restored and the crime wave checked, and civilization preserved.

The Morals of the Movies

By Mrs. Clara Winterton

"THE most insidious suggestions of evil in the land today."—A Pinkerton detective.

"In every performance some ignoble suggestion."—Dr. Winfield Hall, a leading authority on social ethics.

"The worst said has not been strong enough."—Judge Landis of the United States District Court.

Censorship Has Failed

The thinking people of the world, though they may not be Christians even, are much concerned over this great evil. Clean-minded women and clean-minded men are forming themselves into censorship organizations to pass upon all amusements and to prevent young minds from being poisoned by such film or footlight productions as are merely banal and meretricious. But no amount of legislation can overcome an evil so deeply rooted in the affections and habits of the people. What is needed is a heart work for each one affected.

The churches should awake and, holding up a higher standard of spirituality, go out to stem the tide of moral loose-ness, ere every vestige of righteousness is swept away.

Should Christians Attend Movies?

The question naturally arises, can a Christian attend a moving picture show?

The invention by which the moving picture is produced is one of the most remarkable of the age, and if properly used could be the means of accomplishing much good. It could be used to teach geography, customs of foreign people, scientific facts, and some of the great truths of the Bible. But until it is put to commendable use, the Christian could not indorse with his presence an insitution that leads to evil and away from God. Neither should he contribute to the support of such an institution when the cause of God in the earth is languishing, and thousands of fellow-beings are starving. The conscientious Christian could not contribute the price of one admittance, in harmony with his profession.

The Christian will ever be mindful of his example. He might attend some particular show that would do him no harm, but others seeing him there would naturally reason that his example was safe to follow, and they would continue to patronize an institution that would lead them far astray.

Which Comes First, Pleasure or God?

The true followers of Christ will shun places of worldly amusement because they can neither take Jesus with them, nor find Him there. Worldly amusements have no influence to lead one nearer heaven, but rather have a tendency to destroy love for God and His worship. The professed Christian does not live up to his privilege as such, else the pleasures of sin would hold no charm for him. The only hope of salvation for himself and others is to live in conformity to the precepts of God's Word. The lowered standard of the nominal churches is as much a sign of the last days as is the exceeding sinfulness of the godless.

Paul in the first part of the third chapter of his second letter to Timothy affirms that the last days will be made perilous because men will be "lovers of their own selves." He further affirms that these same last days will be made perilous because men are "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." When we take together the sayings of Paul and of Jesus and of all the prophets concerning the conditions that will exist in the world just before the second coming of Christ, and when we see how literally all these things are being fulfilled, we ought to have no doubt in regard to the time in which we are living We should individually leave nothing undone in preparing for that supreme event.

The Handwriting on the Wall

The God who is the same yesterday, today, and forever, has promised to deal with the sin of this time. He will visit with judgments, that He may arouse, if possible, all people from their carnal revelry. But if they fail to heed His warnings, they may rest assured that He will not permit these things to go on forever. A note of warning must be sounded throughout the world that sin, when it becomes so confirmed as to be incorrigible, must surely stand before the righteous Judge to receive its merited doom. It is therefore about time that the exploiters and confirmed lovers of viciousness in the drama and in moving pictures should read the handwriting on the wall. Their Babylonian feast is drawing to an end.

"Some Hypothetical Questions"

We publish this communication not because we agree with its author, but because we respect him. We trust that the debate will end at this point, however, as most of our readers interested in the subject know Mr. Mauro's views, which have been replied to at different times in our pages.—Editors.

THE Editor of THE MOODY MONTHLY,

Dear Sir:

I have read with much interest the remarks by our esteemed brother, Mr. C. C. Cook, published in your March issue under the above title; and inasmuch as the matter he discusses is of great importance, as well as of current interest to many, I trust you may be willing to give space to a brief presentation of another view thereof.

1. Our brother undertakes to deal with a question which is often asked, namely, How could the Lord Jesus have offered to the Jews of His day a kingdom which it was not in the plan of God to establish at that time, and which would have falsified the prophecies concerning the sufferings, death and resurrection of Christ, those concerning His session at the right hand of God, and those concerning the coming and ministry of the Holy Spirit on earth? And our brother thinks that "an easy reply may be given," and one that will "turn the tables on the questioners" by simply asking another question, viz., "What if Israel had accepted Him as their Messiah? in which capacity," Mr. Cook says, "He did admittedly present Himself."

But, with all possible respect, I submit that this is no "reply" at all, and that, in presenting it as such, our brother has overlooked a vast and radical difference between the question he undertakes to answer and those he himself asks—such as, "What if Judas had not betrayed his Lord?" "What if Peter had committed suicide in remorse for his denial of Christ?" etc.

Let me, in the first place, declare my hearty agreement with Mr. Cook when he characterizes such questions as being "futile and unprofitable," and as yielding but "barren results." Indeed, I should express myself regarding them in much stronger terms. But the question Mr. Cook essays to answer is in a different category entirely, as can be easily and clearly shown.

Our Lord came to the people of Israel with the "offer" of the forgiveness of their sins (Matt. 9:5, 6; Luke 3:3, 6; Acts 10:36, "peace through Jesus Christ," etc.); He came with the offer of the new birth to all the "whosoevers" who should believe in Him (John 3); He came with the offer of eternal life (John 5:40; 6: 35, 47) and of "rest" (Matt. 11:28) to all who should "come to" Him; He came with the offer of deliverance to the captives of sin, of healing for the broken hearted, of salvation for the poor, of sight for the spiritually blind, and, in a word, for the purpose of proclaiming "the acceptable year of the Lord," as to all which blessings, promised aforetime, He could say, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears, etc." (Luke 4:18-21). In each and every instance, He offered and proclaimed that which He was free to offer, and which every individual who heard Him was free to accept, upon the simple condition of repentance and faith. As it is now, even so it was then.

When therefore, we are asked, "What would have happened if the Jews had accepted Him as their Messiah?" our reply is, "It would have been with everyone of them as it was with those Samaritans who, before ever our Lord began His public ministry of preaching, accepted Him as 'the Messiah, the Saviour of the world' (John 4:42); for it was the case then, as it is to this present day, that 'as many as received Him, to them gave he power to become the children of God' (John 1:12). It matters not at all how many soever they might have been."

But there is the greatest possible difference between this question and the one Mr. Cook essays to deal with. The latter arises upon consideration of the recently evolved idea that our Lord offered to Israel a kingdom which it was not in the plan of God's dealings with the world, or in accordance with the prophecies of Scripture, to set up at that time, a kingdom which He was not free to offer or they to accept without falsifying the Word of God, a kingdom whereof our Lord declared that the time had not been revealed to the angels of God, nor to the Son Himself (Matt. 24:36; Acts 1:6, 7). In considering a doctrine so radical and so novel as this, it is manifestly legitimate and proper to raise the question, "How could our Lord conceivably have offered a thing His hearers were not free to accept, and which it was not in the purpose of God to establish until the millennial age (the time whereof He has kept in His own power)?" That question is not only pertinent, but it has great argumentative force; insomuch that, unless it can be clearly answered

(and no answer has yet been given that I have seen), it effectually disposes of the idea referred to.

The "Elijah Which Was for to Come"

2. Mr. Cook by way of a further reply, says that "our Lord Himself once made a hypothetical statement, and left it without explanation." In support of this assertion he refers to our Lord's words concerning John the Baptist, "And if ye will receive it, this is Elijah which was for to come" (Matt. 11:14). But our brother is greatly mistaken in regarding this as a "hypothetical statement"; for it is nothing of the sort. Our Lord here asserts positively concerning John, "This is Elijah which was for to come"; and His words in Matthew 17:12, 13, "But I say unto you, that Elijah is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed"—made that fact so plain that "then the disciples understood that He spoke to them of John the Baptist." Moreover, it is evident upon a moment's reflection, that John either was, or was not, "the Elijah which was for to come," and that whether or not the Jews "received" it could not change the fact. Just as Jesus of Nazareth was the promised Messiah, whether or not the Jews "received it," even so John the Baptist was the promised Elijah, whether or not the Jews "received it." And that is precisely the significance and force of the Lord's words in Matthew 11:14; for the "if" does not imply a doubt as to John's being the promised Elijah, but a doubt as to whether they would receive him as such. For the sense of the conditional clause is as if it read: "whether ye will receive it or not, this is the Elijah which was for to come"; just as one might have said concerning Jesus of Nazareth, "If ye will receive it, well for you, for this is the Messiah which was for to come." In view of what we have said above, and especially in view of the Lord's clear statement in Matthew 17:12, it is impossible to put any other construction upon the statement of Matthew 11:14.

DOMINATION BY UNION COAL MINERS

The Manufacturers Record

For some years the non-union coal mines of West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky and Alabama have saved this nation from a complete domination by union coal mining interests. Practically the entire fight of the union coal people has been centered upon breaking down the independent miners of these states in order to secure domination of the entire coal trade of the country, to the damnation of the nation.

The independent coal miners in Alabama, West Virginia, Virginia and Kentucky have been life-savers to this country. They made it possible for many manufacturing plants and railroads to operate when they would have been shut down if union mining had had complete control over the situation. It is of supreme importance to the country that the fight which has been made by the union miners against the independent or non-union mining operations should not succeed. Every man, woman and child in the country is vitally interested in this, for if the unions should gain control of all the coal mines they could, whenever it suited their convenience, stop every wheel that turns on railroads or in factories, and shut off the supply of coal, and freeze and starve the nation into submission. That is a power so vast, so terrific in its opportunities for evil, that it behooves the country to watch with extreme care every move made in this campaign against non-union mining operations.

The recently appointed Coal Commission in its first report, as lately shown in the Manufacturers Record, displayed its utter, hopeless incapacity to deal with facts regarding the coal trade, for, as we pointed out, practically every new statement made by it was incorrect and other statements were not new. No man can tell what such a commission might do, but the country should take warning in advance and see that it does not encourage any radicalism in the coal trade or make any move which would inure to the benefit of the union miners as against the non-union miners.

Every bit of help given to the union mining interests places a club in their hands which might, literally, beat the very brains and life out of the country. It is, therefore, essential that the work of the commission and the work of the union miners, as the latter carry on their propaganda in every direction, should be watched with extreme care and no effort on the part of the people at large should be spared in the fight to keep union mining interests from destroying the non-union interests.

In the protection of the non-union mines there is safety for the life of the nation, while the success of the union mining interests would be certain death to the nation's welfare and to its freedom from complete and absolute domination by one of the most desperate labor organizations which this or any other country has ever known.

Judging by their past record union miners would not for a moment hesitate to shut down every coal mine, every railroad and every factory in the country, in order to accomplish their purpose of the domination of the entire coal trade. The great bulk of these union miners are of the lower class of foreigners, who have more money and more comforts than they ever had in their own countries. To these rank socialistic elements many of the weak-minded parlor Bolshevists would give free license to freeze the people of the country to death.

In this case as in others, eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, and without eternal vigilance there can be no safety for the liberty of the people of this country in the matter of a fuel supply upon which the nation's business life depends.

MAN KILLERS

The Chicago Tribune

More than 150 persons have been killed by automobile drivers in Chicago thus far this year. Before this can be printed there will be more killed if the next few hours follow the regular course. Some of the persons killed were in the cars. Most of them were not, and many of them were children. In seventeen of the killings the killer escaped and has not been identified.

Seventeen killers are free in this community now. They know that their cars hit human beings. They have read in the newspapers that the persons hit were dead when picked up, or died on the way to a hospital. They were not touched by the impulse of humanity when they ran away and may not be touched by remorse how.

The blame is not always on the driver. Frequently it is on the pedestrian. But it is pretty safe to say that when a driver hits and runs he is guilty. The laws governing driving must be tightened up, and we are about ready to maintain that a person who kills another and attempts to escape shall be regarded as guilty of murder in the first degree and executed. It might do good to eliminate a few inhuman cowards.

HUNGRY SHEEP NOT FED

The Minneapolis Tribune

In such a time as this, the church as an institution is solemnly called to consider its adaptability as well as its efficiency in the changed and changing order of things. For the past twenty-five or thirty years, this venerable institution has been passing through various transitions, and in certain places it has seemed to lose its grip upon popular favor. Its place as an opinion-making and habit-forming institution has seemed to be imperiled. To meet this condition, all sorts of new enterprises and new and so-called popular methods have been resorted to.

The most cursory study of these later efforts makes clear and evident their conspicuous failure. When the church, to save its popularity, undertook to meet the insistent demand for entertainment in one form or another, it came into competition with secular agencies far better equipped and organized than it can ever hope to be. It has become tragically evident that the church as a place of amusement has not only lost the confidence of the people generally, but it has signally failed to hold popular favor. The church as a concert hall, or as the purveyor of any form of secular entertainment, has ceased to hold either the attention or the respect of the people. The secularization of religious enterprise, whatever form it has taken, was a cheap effort to regain a lost popularity. It is a striking fact that along with these eccentricities of administration, pulpit power has steadily declined.

Not long since a high-minded critic of the church declared that the modern pulpit is an anachronism; that as an opinion-making power it had ceased to function. This is true only where the prophet has abdicated his office.

Over and against this statement, let us note that where preaching has been maintained at a high level, and where the prophet has taken himself and his message seriously, there has been no diminution of interest, but, on the contrary, the widest degree of popularity and favor.

It is safe to say that in no sphere of human service today is there a greater demand than in that of the prophetic ministry. One clergyman we know, gifted with this power, has been called within a comparatively few years to over a score of pulpits. As a matter of fact, the demand is greater than the supply. Notwithstanding all that is said to the contrary, it is a demonstrable fact that preaching of the right kind, preaching that is both informational and inspirational, is demanded today as never before. A preacher like Dr. Jowett or Campbell Morgan is listened to with unabated interest, and in fair weather and foul, holds multitudes at his feet.

Men and women are as hungry today for the bread of life as dispensed by Jesus Christ as they have ever been. But where the "hungry sheep look up and are not fed," a situation is presented that is tragic in the extreme. The world is literally yearning for a church "for religion only." It will not accept a substitute; it will not submit to a lowering of standards. It asks for bread, and will not accept a stone. It asks for inspiration and refreshment, and it will not accept any diluted expression of deep religious conviction.

The preachers who are holding the masses today are the men who definitely believe something, and who, in the face of all modern conceits of learning, persist in holding Him up as the Way, the Truth and Life.

James E. Freeman.

A THREATENING QUARTET

The Eastern Methodist

A president of a great state university said some time since: "It seems to me that in looking at the religious condition of the country, we are confronted by four marked changes which have grown into prominence in the last few years. These changes stated briefly are:

1. A decay in the belief of the supernatural.
2. Disintegration of the Bible.
3. New views respecting inspiration.
4. Loss of the sense of accountability.

These things have also arrived:

Of our age theologically and religiously it may be said as was once said of France and its infidelity: "It rejected the light and it was blasted with the lightning."

So powerful is the revolt against orthodoxy and so prevalent is heterodoxy, and so popular has error and false doctrine become that some one has suggested (it was old Dr. Peabody, of Harvard, I believe), that "if Thomas Paine, author of the Age of Reason, had lived in our age he might have put his books and tracts out under the title of Rev. Thomas Paine and occupied a professedly Christian pulpit." Today the situation is indeed pitiably disastrous. We have few infidel clubs now, but we meet with unbelief and heterodoxy in preachers in the pulpit, and scholars in the schools, colleges and theological seminaries, editors of great church papers and Sunday-school periodicals and teachers in the Sunday-schools. They have taken up the miserable business of dealing out under the guise of religion, unbelief of the most insidious, dangerous and poisonous kind.

Indeed, in this our day unbelief and heterodoxy is baptized and is ordained and too often occupies pulpits, holds chairs in schools of learning, and cries, "Lord, Lord!"

THE OLDER AND THE NEWER ORTHODOXY

The Christian Century

School and church are joined in the attacks made on these two fundamental institutions of society in a recent issue of the Hibbert Journal. This widely read quarterly prints an article from the pen of Charles W. Stanley which repeats many of the old charges against the church, and brings some new ones. The Christian congregations are chiefly interested in securing choice sites, erecting buildings and promoting prohibitory legislation. The churches have grown aristocratic, moving into the choice residential sections and sending missionaries back into the city slums, with which the respectable church members set up only a kind of pharisaical relation. The ministry is so much underpaid that it seeks doles from secular business enterprises.

Such strictures, while they make lively reading, do not touch the heart of the problem of the church. Only the man who truly loves the church as spiritual mother and desires her spiritual health can find the things that are most wrong in her life. Fundamentally the church wavers today between two different religious systems. The older orthodoxy, in most communions a modified Calvinism, is to be contrasted with the new-old religion of Jesus which combines the mystical and social attitudes of the spirit in a great synthesis. The church will limp just so long as it is uncertain which of these types of religion it is its business to give to the world. The religion of orthodox opinion, legalistic rules and sacramentarian ritual is one thing. The religion of a vital faith in God and a conviction that in the mind of Jesus there is a solution of all the basic issues of our social relations is another. Under one system the church is a hospital for sick souls. Under the other, it is a conquering host, organized against all evil and in behalf of all good. Under the old orthodoxy the saints sit in comfortable pews and wait to be ministered unto. Under the new orthodoxy they will organize together in a variety of ways to bring the will of Jesus to pass in every human relationship.

Why Do We Believe That Jesus Christ Is the Son of God?
John 20:24-31

This name, the Son of God, is given to Christ at least forty times in the New Testament. In addition to this, such expressions as "His Son" and "My Son" are of frequent occurrence. This name and title is one to which there can be no finite comparison or analogy. The oneness with God which it designates is not such as man or angel may attain. It implies that Christ is not merely God-like but God.

The statement is frequently made by modern critics that Jesus Christ is the Son of God only in the same sense that all men are sons of God. It is asserted that the only difference is one of degree and not of kind. Such a statement is utterly false and anti-scriptural as may be seen in Mark 12:6; John 1:14, 18, and John 3:16, 18.

In proof of the fact that Jesus Christ is the Son of God in a special and peculiar way, it is only necessary to remember that divine attributes are ascribed to Him and that divine names are given to Him. He is shown to be Lord of all things, disease, demons, death and all the powers of nature being subject to His will. His power operated to such an extent that all the disorders resulting from sin were immediately overcome by His presence and His word. Everything indicating omnipotence is to be found in the Gospel narratives concerning Him. It is also asserted in John 2:24, 25, that He knew all men and knew what was in man. He knew men's lives, even the secrets of their hearts; their present thoughts and their future choices were also known to Him.

Such names as "Lord of Glory," "The Holy One," "First and Last," "Emmanual—God with us," are used concerning Christ in the Bible. Furthermore, worship is given to Him as unto God. This is all the more striking from the fact that He Himself said, "Thou shalt worship the Lord, thy God." If after saying this, He Himself accepted worship as in Matthew 14:23; 28:9, the only inference is that He Himself is Lord and God. Moreover, it is to be remembered that both angels and good men refused worship when it was offered to them as may be plainly seen in the case of Peter in Acts 10:25, 26, and in the case of an angel as recorded in Revelation 22:8,9.

Something in the Bible that Has Helped Me
Psalm 19:7-14

This topic suggests an experience meeting in which personal testimony should be given from witnesses concerning spiritual things of which they have definite knowledge. Facts in the spiritual realm are not less true than those in the physical realm. As surely as he who feels the pleasant warmth of the sun knows that the sun exists, so he that has experienced the transforming power of the Word of God knows that this Word has in it the power of God. To deny this would be to slander the noblest faculties of our nature. It would be to say that one-half of our nature tells the truth and the other half does not. There are spiritual experiences which produce sincere and unchangeable convictions even though the one who has the experience may not be able to put it into logical statements.

The nineteenth Psalm is a psalm of nature and the written Word. In the realm of nature, the heavens preach a never ceasing sermon on God. "Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge." There is no tongue in which the works of God do not speak.

In that part of the Psalm dealing with the revelation of God in His Word, there are five synonyms, namely, "the law," "testimony," "statutes," "commandment," and the "judgments," all of which are used of the Word of God. Many qualities are ascribed to this Word. It is perfect, sure, right, pure, cleansing, true; it converts the soul; it makes wise the simple, it enlightens the eyes of the understanding; it cleanses from error; it is more precious than gold, sweeter than honey and brings to those who obey it, a great reward.

The various aspects of this subject and its discussion may be made to revolve around Jeremiah 15:16. The experience of the prophet ought to be the experience of every Christian believer. Nothing can better express a true believer's attitude towards the Bible and the spiritual satisfaction found in it than the prophet's own utterance,—"Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart, for I am called by thy name, O Lord God of Hosts."

Medical Missions at Home and Abroad
Matthew 4:23, 25; 10:5, 8

Dr. Arthur J. Brown in his book entitled, The Foreign Missionary, presents the following plea for medical missions:

"Christ Himself set the example by ministering to the sick. Of His thirty-six recorded miracles, twenty-four were of physical healing and there must have been many others, for we read that all them that had any sick brought them unto Him and He laid His hands on every one of them and healed them. Medical work is not to be regarded as a mere humanitarian addition but an essential part of our Christian service in heathen lands.

"Every non-Christian land is a land of pain. All the diseases and injuries common in America, and others far more dreadful, are intensified by ignorance, by filth and by superstition. In most heathen lands illness is believed to be caused by a demon that has gotten into the body and the treatment is an effort to expel it. Sometimes hot fires are built to scorch the demon out. 'What are those scars that so thickly dot the body?' someone asked of Dr. Neal in China as he examined a pitiful little girl that had been brought in. 'Places where hot needles have been thrust in to kill the evil spirits,' was the startling reply.

"The horrors of superstition and maltreatment of the sick and injured are relieved greatly by medical missions who go through those regions of pain in the name and spirit of Christ, healing fevered bodies, giving light to darkened eyes and straightening deformed limbs."

In the book referred to, Dr. Brown tells us that 1,162 hospitals and dispensaries are maintained on the foreign field by the Protestant Boards and that the year before the publication of his book 2,347,780 patients were treated. No other phase of mission work has done more to soften hearts and to open doors and no other has been more fruitful in spiritual results.

Commenting on this work, Dr. Brown says, "Every missionary, whatever his special department, should make a direct, earnest, and prayerful effort to lead souls to Christ. Every teacher should seek the conversion of their scholars; every physician the cure of souls, and every wife the salvation of heathen mothers and children. In the home, in the school, in the hospital, by the wayside, in the market-place, anywhere and everywhere that opportunities are offered or can be made, the gospel should be set forth."

Lessons From the Psalms—The Shepherd Psalm
Psalm 23:1-6

The Twenty-third Psalm is the most familiar and the most precious of all the psalms. It is preceded by the psalm of the Cross and followed by the psalm of the glory. Much spiritual benefit may be derived from the reading of these three psalms together, for the shepherd care of our Lord is the result of His work for us in death and resurrection and also the guaranty of our future glory.

Christ is the good Shepherd who gave His life for the sheep (John 10:11, 14). He is the great Shepherd raised from the dead by the glory of the Father (Heb. 13:20), and He is the chief Shepherd who shall yet appear in glory (1 Pet. 5:4). In view of this, happy are they who can use the personal, possessive pronoun, as in the first verse of this psalm, and say, "The Lord is my Shepherd." This is the gateway into all the treasures that follow; such an one shall not want. He shall not want spiritual food or rest (v. 2); he shall not want restoration of soul or guidance in righteousness (v. 3); he shall not want companionship, even in death, or deliverance from fear (v. 4); he shall not want the provisions of grace (v. 5); he shall not want assurance of heart (v. 6). All of this and more belongs to the one who can say, "The Lord is my Shepherd."

Practical and Perplexing Questions

The right is reserved to reject controversial questions and others which may be deemed unprofitable to answer. All questions should be briefly, but clearly stated. Personal answers cannot be sent.—Editors.

JESUS AND THE KINGDOM

C. B. C., West Orange, N. J.

(1) Jesus is King, but not yet reigning in His kingdom; for that is earthly and still future. (2) The saying that "the kingdom of heaven is within you" is based upon a misconception. The passage should read, "the kingdom of heaven is in your midst"; for in a very real sense the kingdom is where the King is.

THE LAND OF NOD

** *** **

(1) No race of people dwelt in the land of Nod before Cain went there; for the name, meaning wandering, evidently grew out of that circumstance. (2) The Bible does not say that Cain got his wife there. (3) Malachi 4:5,6 teaches that the prophet Elijah is to come before the Day of the Lord and help prepare the Israelites for that "great and terrible day." The latter part of the sixth verse probably means the restoration of the Jews to the faith of their fathers. Without this restoration the coming of the Lord would be a curse to them.

FAITH NEEDED IN HEAVEN

K. B., Bluefields, Nic., C. A.

(1) There will never be a place in God's universe where faith will not be needed. It is the basis of all harmonious, loving, abiding relationships between moral beings. Heaven will be the supreme sphere for the exercise of faith. There will be no doubters or unbelievers in heaven.

(2) Hebrews 12:1 refers only to this life and affords no proof that our loved ones in heaven are praying for us.

(3) Infant baptism is only for the children of believers. Church members who are living in known sin are in no state to assume the vows required of them when presenting their children for baptism.

THE VESTED CHOIR

R. O. H., Wyoming, N. Y.

A vested choir is not necessarily unspiritual or worldly, and has the advantage of uniformity of appearance. There is less opportunity for "showing off" than when the custom is to wear varigated costumes and often brilliant and monstrous headgear. When the singing is in the power of the Holy Spirit the particular garb worn is a secondary matter.

This would seem to us a proper question for the officials of the church to decide, and not the choir or even the pastor. The choir should abide by that decision. We should think that the sentiment of the church and community ought also be taken into the consideration.

INTRODUCTION OF BIBLE REFERENCES

B. L. K., Harrisonburg, Va.

(1) The practice of using marginal references seems to have been introduced by William Tyndale in his translation of the New Testament in 1525.

(2) While there is a similarity of language between Isaiah 3:16-26, 1 Timothy 2:9, 10, and 1 Peter 3:2, 3, the New Testament passages have no direct connection with Isaiah. The predictions in Isaiah 3:16-26 were fulfilled when Jerusalem was destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar.

(3) Only the original manuscripts of the Bible were inspired. None of the translations are perfect. The American Standard is as good as any.

THE APOCRYPHAL BOOKS

W. C. S., Dixon, Ill.

In Dr. Gray's book, Primers of the Faith, page ninety-four, the following is given as to why the apocryphal books are not included in the canon.

"1. They do not claim divine authority as almost all the accepted books do.

"2. In some cases they altogether disclaim such authority. (See the Introduction to Ecclesiasticus, and also 2 Maccabees 11:23; 15:38).

"3. They contain statements here and there at variance with the Scriptures. (Compare Baruch 1:2 with Jeremiah 43:6, 7. See also 2 Maccabees 12:43 and the following verses.)

"4. They are not found in any catalogue or list of the sacred Scriptures for the first four centuries of the Christian era.

"5. The Jews never received them as canonical.

"6. Christ and His apostles never quoted them.

"It is true that the Roman Catholic church accepts these books as canonical, but even she has only done so since the Council of Trent, 1545."

GENEALOGY OF JESUS

B. W. M., Parkersburg, Iowa.

The fact that Jesus was the legal son of Joseph would have made him the son of David. But Luke 1:32, and 2:4 also, when properly understood, shows him to be the son of David through Mary, even if there were no further evidence. But further evidence is furnished in the circumstance that the genealogical record in Luke is almost unquestionably that of Mary from David through Nathan, as the record in Matthew is that of Joseph from David through Solomon. The fact that Matthew makes Jacob the father of Joseph, and Luke makes Heli to be his father may be explained by the not unusual circumstance that the same person had two names, like

The New Geology

George McCready Price

Author of "Fundamentals of Geology," "Back to the Bible," etc.

For a number of years, the advocates of the evolutionary theory of creation have made repeated and strong attacks on articles by Professor Price which have appeared in the leading newspapers and journals of this country. While Professor Price has given this subject much attention for over twenty-five years and is a master of the same, two years ago he gave up his college work and has since given all his time to further study and research work. As a result, the book entitled "The New Geology" has been produced.

Ready June 1, 1923

In this new book, which will be ready June 1, 1923, is centered the crowning effort of a man who knows. His arguments though simple are scholarly and surely unanswerable.

The First Edition Subsidized

"The New Geology" will contain about 700 pages, size of page 6x9. It will also contain over 600 illustrations. Ordinarily a book of this size and character would sell for $7.00. As the first edition has been subsidized, the publishers have set a price of $3.50, postpaid.

Matthew himself, who was also called Levi. Or it may be explained by saying that Joseph was the son-in-law of Heli, who was the father of Mary. (See Ruth 1:11, 12). Joseph's name may have been introduced in Luke's table in conformity with the Jewish custom in such cases. The bitterest enemies of Christianity in the earlier times never questioned Jesus' descent from David.

BRIEF MENTION

G. D., Wanatah, Ind.

Our limited space and time forbids our answering so many questions for one correspondent.

J. G. K., Warsaw, Ill.

We have no authority for the statement that Jesus broke down under the weight of the cross. This is an inference from Mark 15:21

X. Y. Z., New London, O.

To say that the scourge of small cords used by Jesus in cleansing the Temple (John 2:15) "became a flame of fire in his hands," is simply a use of florid language.

J. A. F., Kanawha City, W. Va.

The book to which you refer is probably a Seventh Day Adventist production. Not having read the book we cannot express an opinion about it.

(1) The only "righteous" ones who (think they) need no repentance are the self-righteous (Luke 15:7).

(2) Paul's language in 1 Corinthians 16:22 was not un-Christlike (John 3:36).

E. M. S., Chicago, Ill.

Matthew 19:27, 28 speaks of the judgeship of the apostles in the time of "the restoration." Judas will indeed be excluded. Christ was speaking to the twelve as a body.

E. E. P., Denver, Colo.

Mr. Robert Govett is the author of The Apocalypse Expounded by the Holy Scripture which is highly recommended. Further information might be obtained from the Loizeaux Brothers, Fourth Avenue, New York.

H. J. A., Chicago Ill.

The apparent contradiction between Acts 9:7 and Acts 22:9 is explained in that they heard the voice, but not in a way to understand it, not the articulated words which were addressed to Paul.

H. M., Grand Rapids, Mich.

The statement by Mr. C. C. Cook was that Jesus offered Himself as Israel's Messiah. The very proclamation of the kingdom included the offer of Himself as King.

G. H. B., Rochester, Minn.

The Bible Students Monthly is an organ of the Russellites, whose teachings are a mingling of much error with truth. For a brief statement of their doctrines see pamphlet entitled, The Errors of Millennial Dawnism, by Rev. James M. Gray, D. D.

Concerning secret orders, we would refer you to a pamphlet by Adam Murrman, A Three-Fold Inditement of Secret Orders, which may be obtained from the National Christian Association, 850 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

H. S. M., Miami, Fla.

We know of no authority for changing the punctuation of Luke 23:43, placing the comma after "today." Such a change would seem to destroy the full force of the promise, and the word "today" would be redundant.

J. R. B. N., Princeton, Ill.

The unpardonable sin of Matthew 12:31, 32 is attributing to Satan the work of the Holy Spirit. In general we may say that it is the refusal to accept Christ after the full illumination the Holy Spirit has given of Him.

L. R. C., Lancaster, Pa.

(1) Since the Israelitish nation practically began with the Passover (Exod. 13:4) it is not possible that they had any month prior to that time to mark the beginning of their year.

(2) The division of the year into civil and ecclesiastical apparently came after the Babylonian captivity.

As to the prophecies concerning the abasement of Egypt (Ezek. 29 and 30) as being in conflict with her present independence, we would say that this independence is only seeming. While England has given Egypt nominal independence the power of England is still dominating that land.

H. L. C., Armiston, Ala.

The apostolic requisite that one should have been an eye-witness of the Lord after His resurrection, probably applied only to the twelve (Acts 1:22). It is not impossible, however, that Barnabas, who is also called an apostle (Acts 14:14), may have seen the risen Lord, for at one time He was manifested to five hundred brethren.

BEAUTIFUL GIRLHOOD

By* MABEL HALE

Now in It's Fourth Edition

We are receiving numerous comments of appreciation for this book. Below is one which gives an idea of how the book is being received.

I have read the book "Beautiful Girlhood," by Mabel Hale. . . . It is one of the most beautiful books for young girls I have ever read.

Every mother owes it to her daughter to obtain for her this wonderful book. The sacrifice it may cost her is far too small in comparison to the help her daughter will get from the book.

Every Sunday-school teacher ought to own one, so as to let her class of girls read it. It ought to be in the hands of every pastor so as to advocate it. The book is so attractively written that it is fascinating to every girl, even though she may in general not be fond of reading. . . . It is full of life and real spirit; simple and right to the point.

It can not be too highly recommended. Those who have not yet gotten it are missing much; by placing it in the hands of young girls they will be doing God's work, which will reap a blessing.

David, the Poet and King
1 Samuel 16:1-13

Golden Text:—"Surely, goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."—Psalm 23:6.

I. Samuel Mourns for Saul (v. 1).

1. Why He Mourned. The death of Saul was no doubt a personal loss to Samuel, for Saul was a commanding and lovable personality. Then, too, the ruin of so promising a career would deeply effect Samuel. Finally the humiliation to God and God's people grieved his heart.

2. Excessive Mourning Rebuked. The fact that God had rejected Saul should have lifted Samuel out of his grief. Excessive grief over that which God does is a reflection upon Him and should be rebuked. In all God's acts we should submit although it may change our plans. When sorrow becomes a hindrance to the discharge of duty, it merits rebuke.

II. Samuel Sent to Anoint David (vv. 1-3).

1. Samuel's Fear (v. 2). Perhaps by this time, Saul was becoming a desperate character. Samuel still knew that if Saul should hear that he was taking steps to anoint a successor to his throne, his own life would be in danger. Samuel was wise in submitting this hard situation to the Lord. God's servants are to be brave. However, even when going on errands for God we should not court danger. We should exercise the greatest caution so that unnecessary dangers be avoided.

2. The Lord's Direction (vv. 2, 3). The Lord smoothed the way for Samuel. He showed him how to perform his duty and escape the danger. Samuel was to take a heifer and announce that he was going to offer a sacrifice unto the Lord and to call Jesse to the sacrifice. The prophet was not told all that would happen. He was not to worry about how matters would turn out. This is usually God's way with us. He gives us our work piece by piece, and guides us step by step. Samuel's purpose was known only to himself. It was to be kept a secret so that the news would not reach Saul. This was a shrewd device but entirely legitimate. There is no necessity to reveal all our purposes. We may conceal that which others have no right to know, especially when such a disclosure would be prejudicial to the success of our mission. What Samuel said was true. Lying is not justifiable under any circumstances, but we are not obliged to reveal all our purposes.

III. Samuel's Obedience (vv. 4-13).

1. The Trembling Elders of Bethlehem (vv. 4, 5). It seems that the whole nation was shocked through with fear because of Saul's sin. Their unusual movement was an occasion for alarm. To the elder's alarming inquiry Samuel responded with the assurance of peace, inviting them to join him in worshiping the Lord.

2. Examination of Jesse's Sons (vv. 6-12). The Lord had revealed to Samuel that one of Jesse's sons was to be the new king, but not the particular one. The selection of the right one was a most important matter as destinies hung upon it. (1) Eliab rejected (vv. 6, 7). Eliab was the eldest son and therefore he was the first presented as having first right to the place of honor. Further, he was a splendid specimen of manhood, tall and majestic in appearance, so that even Samuel was captivated by him as he had been by Saul (10:24). Outward appearance is favorable, but the realities seen by God were against him. God knows whom He can trust with great responsibilities. We frequently estimate men by their dress, cultural appearances, wealth and position. These are only surface manifestations and frequently lead us astray, but God looks into the heart. Some one has said that in every man there are three men,—the man he thinks himself to be, the man others think him to be, and the man God knows him to be. The third man is the real man. (2) David chosen (vv. 8-12). All but one of Jesse's sons had been looked upon, but still the Lord's choice had not appeared. Jesse's reply to Samuel's question as to whether all his children had appeared seems to imply that David was not of much importance. At any rate he was only a boy while his brothers were already young men. He was considered good enough to watch the sheep, but not to be called to the feast. This is ever the way of man. He overlooks the very ones whom the Lord has chosen for places of honor and influence. Because David was faithful as a shepherd boy, he was in line for promotion when God's given time arrived.

3. David Anointed (v. 13). When the shepherd lad appeared, the Lord directed Samuel to anoint him. When the oil was applied the Spirit of the Lord came upon him. David was a gifted and attractive lad, but his gifts were of no avail without the Spirit of God. Only as we are anointed by the Holy Ghost can we truly do the Lord's will and work.

into submission. The Devil goes about like a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour (1 Pet. 5:8).

2. Elijah's Answer (v. 18). He denied the charge and boldly declared that the calamity which had befallen the nation was caused by idolatry of Ahab and his family. Many are the calamities which befall men and nations because they have forsaken God's command and are worshiping other gods.

II. Elijah's Challenge (vv. 19-24).

1. The People Assembled (vv. 19, 20). The king convened the people at the urgent request of Elijah. It is strange that he should do this at Elijah's command. Evidently God overruled.

2. Elijah's Ringing Call to Decision (vv. 21-24). (1) The question asked "Who is your God, Baal or the Lord?" (v. 21). Many of the people had not wholly forsaken God. They attempted to worship both God and Baal. Many today are halting between two opinions. They are halting between self and God, sin and holiness, mammon and God. But the question must be settled sooner or later. In fact, the decision is being made every day. Are you worshiping ambition, wealth, pleasure, sensuality, fashion? Would that some Elijah would appear to summon you to your Carmel that you might see how miserably your gods will fail you in the awful hour of need! (2) The silence of the people (v. 21). This may have been because of fear of the king, or ignorance, for many were of the opinion that to be religious was the only thing necessary, irrespective of the being worshiped. This is common today. There is all the difference between merely worshiping and really worshiping God that there is between hell and heaven. (3) The method of decision (vv. 22-24). Two sacrifices were to be provided, one to be offered to Baal, the other to God. The god who answered by fire was to be the God. The people consented that this was a fair test. Accepted sacrifice is the grand and supreme test by which God is calling upon men everywhere to make the decision between Christ and the heathen gods. The proof that the atonement of Christ was accepted by God and is sufficient to cover all sin, is that God raised him from the dead (Rom. 4:25).

III. The Test Applied (vv. 25-39).

1. The Offering by the Prophets of Baal (vv. 25-29). Elijah gave the prophets of Baal the first opportunity to prove to the people whether Baal was a real God. To deal unfairly in any test betrays weakness in the part and the positions taken. These prophets had the advantage of all-day, united and earnest prayer, as evidenced by their persistence and even cutting themselves. The real difference in the issue of prayer is the person to whom prayer is made, not merely the earnestness with which it is made. Elijah taunted them. They more earnestly cried to Baal, but no answer came.

2. The Offering by Elijah (vv. 30-39). (1) The people invited near (v. 30). His object was for them to see the entire proceedings in order to fully grasp the genuineness of the test. There are no secrets in God's worship. (2) The altar repaired (vv. 30-32). Before there can be the power of God manifested, the altar must be repaired. Elijah took twelve stones representing the united nation. There is a unity of all God's people. (3) The offering on the altar (vv. 33-35). After the bullock was in place he had four barrels of water three times emptied upon the sacrifice and the wood so as to fill the trench about the altar. So sure was Elijah that God's power was sufficient that he heaped difficulty upon difficulty. (4) Elijah's prayer (vv. 36, 37). No finer model of prayer is to be found. (a) It was based upon covenants (v. 36). The foundation upon which all real prayer rests is covenant relationship. (b) Its object was God's exaltation (v. 36); Elijah was jealous for God's glory. His supreme desire was to honor and magnify the Lord. The only thing that he asked for himself was to be known as God's servant. (c) It was for the salvation of the people (v. 37). His heart yearned after Israel. He was most desirous that they should come to know God. (5) The result (vv. 38, 39). (a) The fire of the Lord fell and consumed not only the sacrifice but the wood, stones and dust, even licking up the water in the trench. (b) The people fell on their faces and confessed that the Lord was God.

IV. The Execution of Baal's Prophets (v. 40.)

The reason for this drastic action was that Israel's government was a theocracy. God was their king. Idolatry was treason against the king. These false prophets were traitors to God and therefore should die.

V. God's Prophet Vindicated (vv. 41-46).

The proof that Elijah was God's prophet was incomplete till rain came. Israel under his ministry had now turned back to God, and God made known unto them His graciousness.

Isaiah, the Statesman and Prophet

Isaiah 6:1-13

Golden Text:—"Here am I, send me." —Isaiah 6:8.

As to whether this is Isaiah's first call and the record is out of its logical or chronological place, or whether it is a call to special service, need not particularly concern us. It is frequently true that God gives His servants new visions of himself from which their ministry gains new meaning and variety.

I. Isaiah's Vision of the Lord (vv. 1-4).

No one's ministry will ever be fruitful until he has had a vision of Jehovah. The scope of his tasks and the power to perform services will be lacking until he sees God.

(v. 1). The prophet's gaze penetrated to the very throne of the eternal. We need not so much know things concerning God as to have a vision of Him, even to see Him on His throne. Surely, now as perhaps never before, as the awful darkness is settling down upon the world and the foundations of culture and civilization, institutions and governments are tottering, we need a vision of the enthroned Lord. We need to know that He is above all, to realize that we can find out God by our reasoning, to know that it is utter vanity to say what God can do, and what God cannot do.

2. He Saw the Seraphims Above (vv. 2, 3). Whatever form or rank these beings have, they clearly are ministers of the Most High. Their standing indicates that they were in readiness to do His bidding. Their equipment with six wings shows the celerity with which they executed His will. In the divine presence they find different uses for wings. One pair was needed to veil the seraph's head from the "intolerable effulgence" of the glory. One pair veiled the feet which had been soiled in the execution of the commission, while the third pair was suspended in mid-air while they waited to depart on any errand which the Lord might will. While waiting they kept crying, "Holy, holy, holy." The supreme attribute of Jehovah is holiness. It is for this that His creatures worship and adore Him. The treble repetition doubtless refers to the triune God. Holy is the One who created us, holy is the One who redeemed us, and holy is the One who sanctifies and keeps us. From the position of God's throne, they see the whole earth filled with His glory. Men and demons in the whole earth whether they will or not, are following the plans and purposes of God.

3. He Saw Manifestations of Majesty (v. 4). As the holy ones cried the very door posts moved and the Temple was filled with smoke. Smoke indicates the divine presence in anger (Exod. 19:8; 29:18). This indicated that the selfishness, idolatry and ingratitude of Israel provoked God's anger.

II. Isaiah's Conviction of Sin (v. 6).

When the prophet got a vision of the holy God, he was smitten with a sense of sin. This is always true. The reason that men think well of themselves is that they have never seen God. Face to face with the Lord Isaiah saw himself as wholly vile. He realized that he had sinned in speech and if in speech, then in heart, therefore the cry of despair. He was not only himself guilty, but was living in the midst of an unclean people.

III. Isaiah Cleansed from Sin (vv. 6, 7).

Having been convicted of and confessed his sin, a burning coal was sent from the altar which purged away his sin. His penitential guilt was forgiven and removed. Those unclean lips were made clean and with pure speech he expressed the holy thoughts of God. Only fire from God's altar can purge us from our sins.

IV. Isaiah's Call.

God did not call the prophet until after he was cleansed. The purged soul is the soul ready for the Lord's service. Indeed the unconvicted, unforgiven and uncleansed soul cannot even hear the divine call for service.

V. Isaiah's Dedication (v. 8).

Following the cleansing from sin there was the quick response for service. The one purged and sanctified and made meet for the Master's use readily responds to the call of God. They did not inquire as to the issue, did not desire to see the end from the beginning, but with freedom came forward to serve.

VI. Isaiah's Commission (vv. 9-13).

The previous outlook was not promising. He shrank from the responsibility and instantly cried, "How long, Lord?" The people were steeped in selfishness and the Lord assured him that their blindness and sin would not continue forever, though long. The people would go on in sin to be taken captive and the land be made desolate. As the oak sheds its leaves and is after a time apparently lifeless, yet it retains its substance and so can manifest life, so notwithstanding the deadness of the nations, a remnant shall be saved. The holy seed or stock of the kingdom shall come to fruitage in the last days. That remnant has been preserved and shall come forth from the Great Tribulation as a nucleus for the kingdom of the Messiah.

Jeremiah, the Prophet of Courage
Jeremiah 35:1-18

Golden Text:—"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."—1 Corinthians 16:13.

Jeremiah was one of the last prophets of Judah. He saw the nation go into the Babylonian captivity and Jerusalem destroyed, after which he went into Egypt. He was a lonely, misunderstood and unpopular prophet. He was most bitterly hated and persecuted. His own countrymen turned against him. He was placed in stocks, and then thrown into a horrible dungeon from which he narrowly escaped with his life. The teacher should give a little sketch of his life. The following is suggested:

1. His call (1:2-10)
2. His commission (1:11-19)
3. His sympathetic heart (4:19)
4. His great sorrows (10:15-21)
5. The divine power which urged him forward and sustained him (20:7-9)

Because he was called upon to prophesy against his own nation, and at the command of God urged them to surrender to the Babylonians, he was regarded as guilty of treason.

The lesson today is really an episode in the history of Jeremiah. It centers in the history of a certain family of Jews who were loyal to the traditions of their fathers, turning away from the luxury and degeneracy of Judah maintaining their simple life. This the prophet shows as an object lesson.

I. The Rechabites' Test (vv. 1-5).

In the days of Jehoiakim, the Lord charged Jeremiah to bring the Rechabites into the house of the Lord and test them regarding the drinking of wine. This he did in a place where the people might behold them, the aim being to teach Judah by example. The father of the Rechabites had given command that they should not drink wine. Their filial obedience put to shame the children of Judah for their lack of obedience. Jonadab, the father of the Rechabites, was only a man, but the one whose commands Judah disregarded was the Almighty God, their Creator and Saviour. It is God's plan that every man be tested. Being a free agent, he can only have character through testing. It was for this reason that God placed Adam and Eve in Eden and permitted the Devil to test them. While we should be concerned with the removal of temptation, from men, we should be more concerned with teaching them their responsibility and showing them how to overcome it.

II. The Filial Loyalty of the Rechabites (vv. 6-11).

Though they were out of their own country in the midst of a foreign people they refused to drink wine, declaring that they had been true to the instructions of Jonadab all their lives. Obedience to his instruction had been practiced by all men, women and children. It is a fine thing when children keep in mind their fathers and render obedience to their commands.

III. The Loyalty of the Rechabites in Contrast with the Disloyalty of Judah (vv. 12-16).

1. The Appeal (vv. 13, 14). He made the appeal on the basis of the filial loyalty of the Rechabites. He reminded them that the Rechabites were obedient. Their father was dead long ago. He also reminded them that he had spoken to them in person, rising up early to do so.

2. The Ministry of the Prophets (vv. 15, 16). When the people failed to render obedience to God, He sent to them the prophets who pled with them to amend their ways by turning away from their idols. Matthew Henry indicates the points of contrast somewhat as follows: (1) The Rechabites were obedient to one who was but a man; the Jews disobeyed the infinite and eternal God. (2) Jonadab was dead long since and could not know of their disloyalty or correct them concerning it. God is all-wise and lives forever and will punish for disobedience. (3) The Rechabites were never put in mind of their obligations, but God sent his prophets who rose up early to remind them. (4) Jonadab left the charge but no estate to bear the charge, but God gave the people a goodly land and blessed them in it. (5) God never tied up His people to any hard task like Jonadab did, but God's people disobeyed Him and the Rechabites obeyed their father.

IV. Judgment upon the Jews for Disobedience(v. 17).

God declared that He would bring judgment upon them according to what He had said. Judgment is determined upon those who disobey and rebel against God.

V. Reward of the Rechabites for Their Loyalty (vv. 18, 19).

Because they had been true to the commands of Jonadab, they should have continued representation before God. God has such a regard for filial obedience that He lets no act go unrewarded.

"When he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them."—Matthew 9:36.

Again and again do we read of Christ being thus moved with compassion—on the crowd of 5,000 hungry people, again on the crowd of 4,000, on a leper outcast, on two blind beggars by the wayside, on a demon-possessed man, on the boy afflicted with a dumb spirit, and (in the text above) on the multitudes in their un-met spiritual needs. In such parables, too, as the Good Samaritan and the Prodigal Son, He employs the same expression.

It is a great word, this word compassion. It expresses a yearning of the heart so intense that it becomes actually painful.

We more commonly use the word "pity" today, but it is a weak word compared with "compassion," and it suggests how far human pity falls short of divine compassion.

Folks hear about the heathen in their misery and dire need, and regard them much as they do the characters staged in a theater play. They give them a passing thought, indulge an aesthetic shudder, say, "Poor things, how dreadful!" and then pass out to have their sentimental feelings quickly drowned in the whirl of pleasure, or the rush of business. These folks are merely "touched with pity": Jesus was "moved with compassion." His compassion stirred Him to action, so that He healed the leper, gave sight to the blind, fed the hungry multitude and preached salvation to the sinful.

Let us measure our missionary concern by His, and discover whether we have been really moved with compassion, or only lightly touched with a pity which has never crystallized into action. "Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his heart of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?"

A PLEA FOR COMPASSION

"The sob of a thousand million of poor heathen sounds in my ear, and moves my heart; and I try to measure, as God helps me, something of their darkness, something of their blank misery, something of their despair. Oh, think of these needs! I say again, they are ocean-depths; and, beloved, in my Master's name, I want you to measure them, I want you to think earnestly about them, I want you to look at them, until they appall you, until you cannot sleep, until you cannot criticize."

—Rev. Charles Inwood.

KANAMORI'S CAMPAIGN AT DOSHISHA UNIVERSITY

Paul Kanamori, the well-known Japanese evangelist, author of the Three Hour Sermon, recently conducted a week's evangelistic campaign at the great Doshisha University in Kyoto, Japan, as a memorial to its famous founder, Joseph Hardy Neesima. It was in 1875 that Neesima opened his school, with eight pupils, in a small room in that ancient capital, which was a hotbed of idolatry with 3,500 temples and 8,000 Buddhist priests. When, in 1890, death overtook this great man of God, the Doshisha had grown into a well equipped institution of nearly 700 students. Today its student body numbers over 3,000. While it has thus advanced in size and numbers, it has sadly lapsed from its sound doctrinal position and high spiritual tone under Neesima, and has become a recognized stronghold of "Modernism" in Japan. What a victory, then, that as a result of Kanamori's plain and fearless gospel preaching, 327 students accepted Christ during one week! Of these, 227 were baptized by the evangelist on February 4, and each received from him a copy of the New Testament with the words "The Bible is the Word of God. Read it upon your knees," written upon the fly-leaf.

The accompanying photo shows these 227 baptized converts in front of the college chapel, and, seated in the center of the front row (from left to right), Mr. Bartlett, Paul Kanamori, President Ebina of the Doshisha, and Dr. Neesima's widow.

THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE IN THE MISSION FIELD

The following facts and figures speak for themselves concerning the contribution of the M. B. I. to the work of foreign missions along the three trunk lines of going, praying and giving. (The figures are up to Dec. 31, 1922).

Students who have become foreign missionaries, 1143.

Students at present on the field, 818.

Students who have sailed during last 16 months, 51.

Students under appointment Dec. 31, 1922, and about to sail, 32.

Students whose applications were before Mission Boards on Dec. 31, 1922, 36.

M. B. I. missionaries are working under 55 societies and in almost every country in the world. There are 227 in China, including every province and also Mongolia; 194 in Africa; 138 in India; 87 in Latin America; 55 in Japan; 31 in Korea; 27 in 5 countries of the Near East; 25 in the Island World, including the Philippine, Hawaiian, Fiji, Friendly and Ladrone group, and Madagascar; 20 in 8 countries of continental Europe; 9 in Alaska, and 5 in south-eastern Asia (Siam, Indo-China and Malay Peninsula).

M. B. I. missionaries are in some of the most distant and neglected fields such as Arabia, Persia, the borders of Cambodia in French Indo-China, and the savage Indian districts of Brazil and other South American countries.

The number of enrolled Student Volunteers in the Institute varies from term to term, but stands usually at about 200. But there are many other students not thus enrolled whose faces are also toward the foreign field.

The 13 prayer bands of the Missionary Union, meeting weekly for systematic missionary intercession, had, during 1922, a total attendance of 13,379.

During 1922, $6,950 was contributed by the students, through the Missionary Union, for evangelistic work under 41 selected Mission Boards.

WHERE YOUR MISSIONARY DOLLAR GOES

Under this heading the Treasurer of the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions for the Presbyterian Church (South), answers the question so frequently asked, as to what portion of the money given for foreign missions actually goes into the work, and what part is consumed in expenses. He makes a full, clear statement of the case for his own denomination, showing that the total expense of administration, including alaries of secretaries, clerical help and all other necessary outlay at headquarters, amounts to 5½ per cent of the contributions. He goes on to give a detailed analysis of the distribution of the funds among missionary salaries, travel expenses, buildings, equipment, and the various lines of work on the field, to which objects the great bulk of the money goes. Finally, 6 6-10 per cent is used for such purposes as missionary deputational work, conferences, literature, and other miscellaneous expenses involved in educating and stimulating the home churches in missions.

A comparative study of the cost of administration in the various missionary societies would be interesting. In making comparisons care needs to be taken to make sure that statements of cost really cover the same ground, for sometimes general statements of low cost of administration, without full details supplied as in the above instance, are quite misleading.

No intelligent and reasonable person will question the wisdom of thorough missionary administration, or the legitimacy of its expenses being defrayed from missionary funds. Assuming that such administration is strictly conscientious and economical, it will be found to bear most favorably upon both the efficiency and the low cost of missionary field operations, as well as upon the highest welfare of the missionaries.

The cure for extravagant administration, where such exists, is not no administration, but economical administration. In the longest and clearest view of the whole matter it will be found that missionary work conducted on well organized lines, under experienced direction and employing thorough business methods, brings decidedly larger, better and more abiding results than work undertaken by individuals laboring as independent units. There is no inconsistency between organization and administration and the fullest control of the Holy Spirit. On the contrary, such missionary work affords much ampler opportunity for the exercise of the varied gifts and operations of the Spirit, to the mutual edification of the members co-operating and the fullest benefit to those labored for, than does the work of so-called "independent" individuals.

BIBLE CIRCULATION IN CHINA

During 1922 the three great Bible Societies—British and Foreign, American and Scotch—those invaluable auxiliaries of missionary work, circulated in China alone 50,078 Bibles, 107,081 Testaments, and 6,232,818 Scripture portions, a grand total of 6,389,977 books.

This brings to mind how a little over a hundred years ago Voltaire prophesied that the Bible would be extinct within a century. Instead of this, the Bible is being circulated today throughout the world in over 500 languages, and each year more than 120 times as many copies go forth as in Voltaire's day.

7. To fight against lust (Gal. 5:17).
8. To intercede for us (Rom. 8:26).
9. To unite us with Christ (Eph. 4:3, 4).
10. To seal us (2 Cor. 1:22).
11. To dwell in us (1 John 4:13).

—Thos. C. Lord.

THE WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT IN THE MINISTRY

1. He CALLS Men Into It.

He so impresses them with the realities of eternity and the great purposes of God in the ages, that they cannot rest content in the ordinary occupations of life (Luke 2:49; John 9:4; 1 Kings 19:20, 21).

2. The Spirit QUALIFIES the Preacher for His Work.

The Spirit gives him such a vivid apprehension of the gospel message as can be gotten no other way, making him not only to understand the truth theoretically, but also to feel its power practically, and so to speak it with boldness (Luke 4:18,19).

3. The Holy Spirit Gives the Preacher His MESSAGE.

To be sure this is contained in the written Word, but it is only when brought home to the heart, by the Spirit, that we realize its full import. The message of the preacher may be considered in two aspects: first, that of the general truths of revelation; and second, that of the particular part which it may be of the preacher's duty to emphasize on any given field or occasion; to show this is the work of the Spirit. (See as to the first, John 14:26; 16:13; as to the second, Mark 13:11; Acts 8:29,31. See also 1 John 2:20, 27.)

4. The Spirit Gives the Preacher His FIELD.

The field is the world, but God knows what particular part He would have you work in. For instance of special guidance, see Acts 8:4,5, 26, 29, 39, also the 10th chapter, in which we see the field as well as the preacher, prepared; also the 16th chapter, in which we have guidance by hindrances, teaching us that we should never be disappointed, but always praise the Lord for His care over His heralds.

5. The Holy Spirit Accompanies the Message with POWER.

The Holy Spirit accompanies the message with power, not only when He seems to do so, but always, either with converting and upbuilding, or with condemning and destroying power. (See Isa. 55:11, with context, also 2 Cor. 2:14-17; Matt. 24:14). The preaching of the herald divides the hearers (Matt. 3:12) and we should rejoice that notwithstanding the blinding power of the god of this world (2 Cor. 4:3, 4), the Holy Spirit is so often sent down with enlightening and saving power (1 Pet. 1:12; Acts 2:4; 10:44) bringing men "from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God." We cannot expect the Spirit necessarily to follow human reasoning, but He certainly will honor His own inspirations.

ROUSING REMARKS

A certain Scotch minister, a newcomer in the parish, finding it impossible to arrest the attention of his congregation, became desperate. No sooner did he appear in the pulpit than they promptly composed themselves to sleep.

One evening after taking up his position, he rapped sharply on the ledge in front of him, and addressed his somnolent flock in tones of severe remonstrance.

"Now, brethren," he said, "it's not fair to go to sleep as ye always ha' done directly I begin my sermon. Ye might wait a wee till I get alang, and then if I'm no worth hearing, sleep awa' wi' ye, and I'll no care; but dinna go before I have commenced. Gie me this one chance."

Finding they were all fairly awake by this time, he went on:

"I shall take for my text the two words, 'Know thyself,' but I will say before I begin the discourse that I would no advise this congregation to make such profitless acquaintances."

There was not a snore nor a nod in the kirk that evening.—Selected.

THOUGHTS FOR MOTHER'S DAY

Wendell Phillips loved his mother passionately. Her one counsel for him was to be good and do good, and he never forgot to keep his trust where his mother first taught him to place it.

* * *

Senator Thomas H. Benton, in making a speech in New York turned to the ladies present, and said: "My mother asked me never to use tobacco and I have never touched it from that day to this. She asked me never to gamble and I never have. When I was seven years of age she asked me never to drink. I never have. Now, whatever service I have been able to render my country, or whatever honor I may have gained, I owe it all to my mother."

* * *

The distinguished Garibaldi, speaking of his mother, said, "Often amidst the most ardent scenes of my tumultuous life I have in my fancy seen her on her knees before the Most High; my dear mother imploring for the life of her son, and I believe in the efficacy of her prayers."

* * *

Almost the last words of Henry Clay, as he lay dying, were, "Mother! Mother! Mother!" He must have beheld her face among those waiting angelic hosts.

MY MOTHER'S BOOK

Far, far across the deep blue sea,
Where pine and heather grow,
There first I saw my mother's Book:
The best of books I know,
Because it tells of God who loves,
And of a Saviour sent;
It tells of sin and of its cure,
And how we may repent.

I've seen her read that sacred Book,
When I was young in years,
To sooth her sorrow, cheer her heart,
And drive away her tears.
That Book was thick and leather-bound,
Its type was clear and bold,
And every time she read that Book,
Good news to her it told.

I left the land that gave me birth,
And came across the sea;
I knew not where that Book had gone,
That Book so dear to me.
Full thirty years had passed away,
And I was growing old;
Who had that Book or where it was,
To me none ever told.

Some years ago a brother dear,
One day I went to see;
That night before we went to rest—
That Book he showed it me;
"You know this Book," he said to me,
"The Book our mother read;
I'm glad I have it in my hand
Long after she is dead."

A lump came up into my throat,
A tear stood in my eye,
And could you blame me there and then,
Had I begun to cry?
I'll ne'er forget that sacred Book,
That Holy Book divine;
'Twill be my light and guide through life,
My mother's Book and mine.

Oh, Book of books, most precious Book!
The Book that God has given,
To guide our footsteps here below,
And land us safe in heaven.

BACK TO BETHEL

A Message to Backsliders

Genesis 35:1-15

Introduction:

Jacob's dream at Bethel, and his promise (28:1-22);
God calls him back to Bethel (31:11-13);
Settles at Shechem (33:18-20);
His wasted years (Gal. 6:7, 8);
God calls again for him to keep his promise and proceed to Bethel (35:1).

I. Jacob Prepares to Go to Bethel.

1. Puts away the strange gods.
2. Cleanses himself and family.
3. Changes garments.

II. Jacob at Bethel.

1. The old protection (v. 5); (Prov. 16:7).
2. The old prayer-life (v. 7 .).
3. The old princeliness (v. 10).
4. The old promises (vv. 11,12).
5. The old power—"I am God Almighty," i. e., El Shaddai (v. 11).

—Wilbur M. Smith.

JOHN 3:16

John 3:16 is concentrated theology. Harry Morehouse preached seven sermons from it on seven consecutive evenings. Luther called it the "little Bible." It is the "proposition" of the whole inspired treatise, and has more of God in it than the whole universe beside. The man who has comprehended it is a D.D., and has inscribed on his heart the diploma of the school of Christ. We found in it, in a recent meditation, an arsenal for the defense and confirmation of the faith.

First, it strikes a blow at each of the following false views of God:

At Atheism, or the doctrine that there is no God, by the affirmation, "God."

At Agnosticism, or the doctrine that "you can't know God," by the statement, "God so loved."

At Deism, or the doctrine of a "don't care" God, by the declaration that "God gave."

At Pantheism, or the doctrine that the world is God, by proclaiming that "God loved the world."

At "Eddyism," or the doctrine of an impersonal God, by the personal pronoun, "God gave his Son."

At Unitarianism, or the doctrine of a solitary God, by announcing, "His only-begotten Son."

Second, it deals as summarily with the prevalent false views of salvation:

At Naturalism, or salvation without life, by conditioning "eternal life." ("Ye must be born again," "there is a new creation.")

At Legalism, or salvation without faith, by specifying "he that believeth." ("Him that worketh not.")

At Sentimentalism, or salvation without blood, by showing that "God gave ('delivered up') His Son."

At Ecclesiasticism, or salvation by the church, by limiting the condition to believing "on him" ("There is ONE Mediator.")

At Judiasm, or salvation by caste, by embracing "Whosoever." (Judaism is not confined to Jewry.)

At Universalism, or salvation without exception, by limiting it to "Whosoever believeth." ("He that believeth not shall be damned.")

We know this Scripture does not discourse of systematic theology, but of a personal theologos; that its burden is not logic, but love. That it is quivering with life. But the above is justifiable vivisection.

—J. H. S., in Eastern Methodist.

A GREAT SALVATION

John 3:16

It is great because of its—

1. Source—"For God so loved."
2. Subject—"the world."
3. Sacrifice—"that he gave his only begotten Son."
4. Scope—"that whosoever."
5. Simplicity—"believeth on him."
6. Sufficiency—"should not perish."
7. Sublimity—"but have everlasting life."

THE LORD'S SUPPER

"As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come."—1 Cor. 11:26.

The Lord's table is like a great bridge, spanning the entire interval of the church's history on earth. One end of it rests on the shame of the cross, the other is planted in the glory of the kingdom.

This feast sustains a threefold relationship to the Christian:

1. It is a reminder of our past justification.

2. It is a source of our present sustenance in the new life.

3. It is the pledge of our future blessedness and glory.

I. It is a Table of Remembrance. "This do in remembrance of me." To those who had known the Lord Jesus personally, it was meant to recall Himself in all His ways of grace and words of truth. To all others who became subsequent followers, it stands for a remembrancer of Him in whom we believe. How many Christians pervert this object of the table, and make it a remembrancer of self, instead of Him! Thoughts of sin, consciousness of shortcoming and the oppression of unworthiness so becloud the vision that many a believer goes to, and departs from, the table of communion with only a sense of sorrow, and never the joyful vision of the Lord Himself. "Remember Me," are His significant directions as to our thoughts around His table.

II. It is a Table of Obedience. "Take, eat." "Drink ye all of it." These are commands which no child of God can reasonably avoid. The plea of unworthiness cannot for a moment be admitted as excuse for neglect of this ordinance. The command is of universal application. Every believer on Jesus is bound by it.

III. It is a Table of Self-Examination. The bread and wine symbolize Christ, and our partnership in Him. There can be no partnership without a common interest; so there can be no communion with a holy God while sin remains upon the conscience. Therefore the Lord's table is a place of self-judgment. Sins must be confessed and brought under the power of the cleansing blood. Thus the soul is restored and put upon the basis of sweet fellowship. Hence the command, "Let a man examine himself."

IV. It is a Table of Communion. "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" Therein all believers express their joint participation in one common salvation. It is the one ordinance which pre-eminently sets forth the unity of the body of Christ, bone of his bones, and flesh of his flesh.

V. It is a Table of Thanksgiving. Jesus gave thanks, and sang a hymn. We do likewise. The table is to be approached with joy. It is the Father's feast-board, wherefrom we partake of the tokens of divine satisfaction for sin. (Phil. 4:4; Col. 3:16).

VI. It is a Table of Confession. "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." In other words, you who do silently gather at the Lord's Supper do thereby, in that act, profess to one another and to the world that you acknowledge Jesus Christ to be the Son of God.

VII. It is a Table of Expectation. The table has its goal, and will have its consummation. The feast was to be observed "till he come." Take away the hope, and the ordinance becomes meaningless. Blot out the coming, and the feast has no element of joy in it. He whom the ceremony commemorates is now away. Were He present there would be no need of such a remembrancer of Him. It gives pledge of the time of His return, when He shall gather all who thus have remembered Him on earth into the Father's marriage feast above. Thus the glory of the table is not the cross, but the throne; for the cross is only the stepping-stone by which we mount to the throne.

Truth Illuminated

By Shafts from Various Quarters

YES, "DONE," THANK GOD!

"There is a great difference between your religion and mine," said one friend to another.

"Indeed!" was the reply. "What is that?"

"This: yours has only two letters in it, while mine has four."

"What do you mean?" said he.

"This; yours has two, D-o do. Mine has four, D-o-n-e done."

DISCOURAGED

Sometimes people grow discouraged because their work does not seem to count for much. A taper lay in a drawer, whence its owner took it out and carried it away. "Where are you taking me?" asked the taper. "To show big ships their way across the sea," was the reply. "But no ship could see by means of my tiny light." "Leave that to me," said the owner as he lighted the big lantern and blew the taper out.—Watchword and Truth.

DEAD, OR GROWING?

Dr. A. C. Dixon once wrote the following sermonette: "Every church is divided into two classes that may be called trees and posts. Plant a tree and it begins to grow. Stick out a post and it begins to rot. The difference between the trees and the post is simply a matter of life. The tree is alive while the post is dead. The pastor enjoys the living trees of his church, watching them grow and bear fruit, while he is often perplexed to know what to do with posts that show no signs of life. It takes much of his time and strength to paint and prop up and finally have carried off the posts when they have fallen down." Which are you, tree or post?

FOR FREEDOM DID CHRIST SET US FREE

A man who was seeking to become a Christian bemoaned the lot that would come to him if he gave himself to Christ.

"I shall have to give up so much," he said. "There are many things I can do now that I can't do then." "But," said a Christian brother, "there are many things that you can't do now. You cannot eat mud or drink it." "No," replied the man, "but I don't want to do a thing like that." "That's just it," was the reply. "And when you become a thorough-going Christian, all sin will become distasteful to you. You will not want to commit it." In accepting Christ we do not surrender our liberty, but our slavery when we become free to do what we please, because we shall please to do God's will.

The Evangelistic Field

S. A. Woodruff

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

P. S. Rowland writes: "A great meeting closed at Crawford Ave. Baptist Church, Augusta, Ga., in which there were 40 additions."

Dr. T. M. Hofmeister closed a series of meetings at Bellevue, O., and will begin a campaign at New Philadelphia, O.

Evangelist A. T. Swanson just closed a 17 day meeting at Dickens, Iowa. There were 31 conversions and 25 reconsecrations.

A. Hilmer Norum writes: "I am in my ninth year at the same church, Pacific Congregational Church, St. Paul, Minn. I am very happy in the work of our Lord."

Rev. E. G. Lane, of Longmont, Colo. departed from this life March 11. For a number of months he was a singer in D. L. Moody's evangelistic choir, and went to Europe with him. He was a noble man of God.

The Prestons report: "We have just finished two weeks meetings at Poplar Grove, Ill., 27 uniting with the church. We go to the M. E. church, Cowden, Ill., April 15-May 6. This is our second visit in two years. We have open dates after this meeting."

The Vinaroffs, gospel musicians, helped Rev. J. N. Greene of the First M. E. Church of Bedford, Ind. The largest attendance they have seen this year in any of their meetings was in Bedford. There were 90 conversions and reconsecrations. The next meeting was at a Union meeting at Nova, O.

Evangelist Willett S. Colegrove writes: "We are glad to report that we had a fine meeting at Belleville, Mich., and we are now in the midst of another revival that is gripping the town; our crowds are very large and there is every indication that conviction is very pungent."

C. S. Thompson and wife write: "We have a good union work of three churches in Redmond, Ore. It is a small town but there is good interest and a revival is surely the greatest need of this community. There were 10 forward at the first invitation. We had a great victory at Bend, Ore."

Mr. and Mrs. Harry P. Wootan report a real "Old Time" revival at the First Baptist Church, Williamsburg, Ky., March 5-16. Dr. Finley Gibson, of Louisville, Ky., did the preaching and Mr. Wootan had charge of the music. There were 129 confessions, 81 reconsecrations, and 23 accessions by letter.

Rev. E. G. Sawyer writes: "Just closed a fine meeting of the M. E. church in Donora, Pa. We had 300 conversions, 210 were received into the church Sunday morning; quite a number of the prominent business men were saved. Will give the summer months in closing our eleventh year at Tyrone, Pa."

"I have closed a series of evangelistic meetings," writes Rev. Harry C. Grimes, "in the Foxboro and Dedham Presbyterian churches, which were the most gracious series of meetings I have held this season. Many souls were saved and in several cases whole families. Rev. Harold Grouseth a former M. B. I. student is the pastor of these churches."

"I am glad to report victory in my home church, writes Evangelist L. J. Derk of Shamokin, Pa.: "This is my ninth year here. Thus far we have had 41 decisions for Christ. Among these converts are seven heads of families, and some of our leading citizens. We are entering upon the sixth week of the campaign. There is deep conviction and also great joy in this village."

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald E. Bonney report the following campaigns since the first of the year: January 1-21, with Evangelist S. B. Goff, in a union effort of the churches of Phillisburg, N. J.; January 22-February 18, in a union meeting of four churches of Carrollton, O., with the pastors doing the preaching; February 19-March 11, with the First Methodist Church of Cadiz, O.; and March 18-April 1, with the First Presbyterian Church of Rushville, Ind.

Evangelist G. A. DeFlon sends in the following: "I have closed my work at Red Cloud, Neb., and also a meeting at Marne, Iowa. Sickness hindered us a great deal, but much good was accomplished in spite of that fact. I have open dates now, if any pastor needs help for spring or summer work, my address will be 4300 Washington St., Gary, Ind."

The Ham-Ramsey evangelistic party writes: "We have just closed a very successful campaign in Henryetta, Okla., and opened very auspiciously here in a union campaign in a tabernacle seating 4,000. It was insufficient to hold the crowds Sunday night and hundreds were forced to stand while others tore off sides of the tabernacle and peered in at the improvised opening."

Mrs. J. A. Gore of Philadelphia, Pa., better known as Mother Gore, writes: "At a recent campaign in the M. E. Church, Willow Grove, Pa., there were 31 conversions. At the Baptist church in West Conshohocken, Pa., a number went forward. At the Tremont charge of the M. E. Conference, 27 conversions. There are good reports from Newark, N. J., Lansdale, Pa., and Williamsport Pa."

The Loes report: "We are in Lancaster, O. assisting the pastor of the First M. E. Church, which has a membership of 2,000. We have a wonderful choir of 100 voices. There are indications of a much needed spiritual awakening. Our last meeting was at Dunkirk, Ind., where some notable conversions were witnessed. The work among the young people was singularly blessed."

John W. Erskine writes: "Have held meetings since October 1922, in Quincy, Leonidas, Muskegon, Swartz Creek, Galien, Union City and at Colon, Mich., where I expect to close March 18. In every one of these towns the churches were strengthened and many were added to the membership. We expect a real victory and will ask the readers of your valuable MONTHLY to continue to remember us at the throne of grace."

PAUL J. KENAGY

Evangelist

416 East Eleventh St., Hutchinson, Kan.

Evangelist D. T. McClintock and Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Weaver have had some fine meetings in Spencerville, Hamilton, Chippewa and are now in Mandaumin, Ont.

Singing evangelists, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Long write: "We closed a good meeting in Bakersfield, Calif., First Baptist Church. There were around 50 new additions to the church. From there we9went to Taft, Calif., where we had ¡7 conversions. We now are in a glor ous meeting with Dr. Hanley of the First Baptist Church of Berkeley, Calif. We close here Easter Sunday and go to Tucson, Ariz., for three weeks meeting."

Rev. James Karr of the M. E. Church, Manchester, Okla., makes the following report of a series of meetings held in his church by Rev. Robert L. Selle of Winfield, Kan.: "The evangelist came to us highly recommended, but as a preacher and tactful worker he proved to be far superior to the good reports received. There were more than 50 conversions and about 40 accessions to the church. Every department of our church activities has taken on new life as a result of the revival."

The Vom Bruch Evangelistic Party of Chicago begin their next campaign in the First Evangelical Church at Canton, O. Evangelist Vom Bruch has just returned from the Hawaiian Islands. While in Honolulu he spoke at several native churches and Christian schools, and reports over 100 definite decisions for Christ as the result of but three invitations. He writes, "Pray for these Islands. They need the gospel." This party will conduct meetings in Chicago during May.

The Tenth Annual Convention of the International Union of Gospel Missions meets in Minneapolis, May 20-24. This is an anniversary convention. All the members of the Boards of Directors of the gospel and rescue missions of America have been invited. The program will consider the problems arising in mission work and the future of rescue missions. There will be present, mission converts who have made good in the business and professional world—some of them are men of nation-wide reputation.

Evangelist John S. Hamilton of Cleveland, O. and his party, Ray G. Upson, musical director, and Roy Gourley, pianist and young people's worker, are in a stirring union meeting in a section of Cincinnati, O. The crowds have been great and on some occasions many have been turned away. The old-fashioned revival spirit prevails in this section. People are drinking in the gospel in song and in sermon, and many are being brought to a saving knowledge ef Jesus Christ.

Fred T. Mills, of Portland, Ore., writes: "We have just closed our winter's series of meetings among the churches

GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY

244 Madison Ave. New York

here, covering seven weeks. We have been ably assisted by Mr. Charles H. Hart, gospel singer and Mr. Alfred E. Koch, converted Jew. We have had excellent audiences who have given rapt attention.

A meeting began at Flatriver, Mo., March 19 to extend to April 1. Rev. William Stewart, pastor of the First Methodist Church did the preaching, assisted by J. K. Maxwell as soloist and chorus director, and Evangelist John Manard who helped the last week. There were 40 conversions and 57 additions to the church.

On the evening of March 24, George W. Trotter, Superintendent of the City Rescue Mission, Pittsburgh, Pa., celebrated the Twenty-third Anniversary of his conversion. This was of special importance because during the year the management of the mission has been changed. It is no longer under the direction of the Presbytery of Pittsburgh, but has its own board of directors which is responsible for its support and management. What began as an unpromising year has, by God's manifested blessing, become one of the most successful years in mission work in the city. The Board feels that it can invite all the friends of the mission to rejoice and give thanks with them.

Evangelist Raymond T. Richey recently closed a five weeks revival at Oklahoma City, Okla., with a record untouched by any local minister; 5000 converts in five weeks.

Although the largest place available was used for the Old-Time revival, where two meetings were held daily, the auditorium was crowded to its capacity at every meeting and many were turned away, unable to get in. The Spirit of God worked in a marvelous way, at the altar all kinds and all classes of people knelt together. The president of the Ministerial Alliance, Rev. Dean C. Dutton, and numerous ministers from the different churches were regular in attendance, and assisted greatly in making the revival the greatest in the history of Oklahoma.

The Harrington Evangelistic Party, with headquarters in Weston, W. Va., consists of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Harrington and Rev. Rufus ("Sam") Raborn of Texas, as chorus director and soloist. They write: "We had the second campaign in Weston, W. Va., within the year. There were nearly 100 conversions. In February we were in the Baptist church in Emporium, Pa., for twelve days and the Lord graciously gave 100 decisions. We are now in the First Baptist Church in Clarksburg, W. Va. Crowds are packing the large church each night and in less than two weeks there have been 170 decisions with the meeting only about half over. The feature of the work is the many men and their wives who have decided for Christ."

Evangelist W. E. Biederwolf and Homer Rodeheaver will, immediately after the great Bible Conference at Winona Lake, with a small company of helpers, start for the Orient in answer to an invitation from many of the larger cities and towns to hold evangelistic meetings. Mr. Charles Gabriel, the noted hymn-writer, Miss Grace Saxe, who for many years has had charge of the Bible work in the meetings conducted by Billy Sunday, and Mr. Joe Rodeheaver who will take the management of the entire tour, and a few friends will accompany the party. The first stop will be at Honolulu and from there the trip will continue to Japan, Korea, China, Burma, Siam, India and Australia. The music is being put into such shape that Mr. Rodeheaver can sing the songs in the language of the natives in each country. Mr. Biederwolf will, of course, speak through an interpreter.

One sometimes hears the questions asked whether the plain unadorned gospel story has lost its power. An answer to these questions might have been found in the West Ham Central Mission, Wales, when the new great church was packed to its utmost capacity of 2,000.

The attraction which brought these people together was a three-day lantern mission, conducted by Mr. J. Glenelg Grant, of Cardiff, assisted by Miss Gwladys Naish and her quartet party. The subjects for the three nights were "Jesus of Nazareth," "Calvary." and "Behold the Bridegroom Cometh." There was no excitement, but a quiet, orderly, reverent unfolding of the life of the Saviour. The pictures were mainly photographs of the greatest masterpieces that deal with the life of Christ; the lectures themselves were delivered in a reverential spirit that had its effect on the listeners. As a result it is believed that many were gathered to Christ and His cause.

Daily Readings for Family Worship

The References are selected by The International Sunday School Association. The Daily Comments are prepared by Rev. George Johnson, Ph.D., Lincoln University, Pa.

May 1 (Tuesday). 1 Samuel 2:1-10.

If we would have the maximum blessing from our daily readings, we must make an opportunity to get alone with God and our Bible. As we read we must ask Him to speak to us, and expect Him to do so. Then let us read and re-read the daily portion, and we shall find that some word or phrase or sentence or verse will glow like a star in the evening sky and will join itself to our present experience to comfort, to calm, to encourage, to inspire. Some doubt these statements, because, so they say, they have tried without ever experiencing such enlightenment. Nevertheless those who have experienced it do not doubt, for they have the witness in themselves. Should not our relation to God be a living relation?

May 2 (Wednesday). 1 Samuel 3:1-10.

When we read this story, we are at times, it may be, tempted to think how delightful if God would only call us audibly in the evening silence when the lamp is still burning and the noise of the day is hushed to rest. But not so fast. Samuel heard the voice, but did not recognize it. Would we be able to do better? How could we recognize the voice of God? I think that we would find ourselves in the same plight as did Samuel. But in the Scripture that lies open before us we have the universal calling of God. Unlike the call that Samuel heard, this is never silent. It is in all the Book. But is it calling for us? Who are we?

May 3 (Thursday). 1 Samuel 9:25-10:1.

As we read this portion let us not forget that the event here narrated happened by way of example, and that it was written for our admonition. Here is an example of the gifts and the calling of God to do a particular bit of work, and here is an admonition not to slight these gifts and to leave the work undone. Saul's later failure cannot dim the beauty and the sincerity of this charming incident. But why did he fail? Not because some mysterious hidden fate lured him on with fair promises only to mock him and thrust him down into the darkness, but because he refused to learn (and here is our warning).

"'Tis thou, God, that givest, 'tis I who receive:
In the first is the last, in thy will is my power to believe."

May 4 (Friday). 1 Samuel 16:6-13.

The Lord called Samuel's attention to a fact we are very apt to forget; the appearance may be very different from the reality. God pays regard to the latter; man is inclined to consider the former. To follow the Lord in this respect; to attempt vigorously to see as He sees; you will soon discover is no easy task. Nevertheless the effort is worth while and it will yield an increasing and ever-widening blessing. It will mean that we shall avoid cant and semblance and follow sincerity and humility. In our learning and teaching we shall turn from sophistry and show to reality and sound common sense. In our business life we shall abandon all lying and hypocrisy and turn to an all pervasive honesty and an unremitting service.

May 5 (Saturday). 1 Samuel 12:1-5.

At times so much stress is laid on character, the inward thing, that apparently there is danger of minimizing conduct, the outward thing; nevertheless, the two are inseparable and demand equality of consideration. Our portion for today calls our attention to conduct. Meditate on the self-testimony of this veteran prophet of Jehovah to the integrity of his character. Long years after there came another Servant of the Lord of whom His judge said,"I find in him no fault at all." The search lights of hate directed by the hand of malice could find no spot or blemish in His conduct public or private.

May 6 (Sunday). Psalm 26:1-7.

"Judge me, O Lord," said the Psalmist. How different his attitude from ours! For us the judge is synonymous with law-breaking and the punishment of evil doers. Like the physician the judge is never appealed to until something goes wrong and the remedy or the penalty must be used or inflicted. But the Psalmist appeals to the great Father-Judge every day because he wants to keep right with God. "Examine me," he cries, as the refiner assays his metal to test its fineness; "Prove me," by bringing me through experiences in which the reality of my faith may be demonstrated; "Try me," as the refiner smelts gold to get rid of the remaining dross.

May 7 (Monday). 1 Samuel 16:19-23.

What did David play? One of our greatest Christian poets tells us how David, gripped still in the tremendous experience of Jehovah's calling him to be Israel's future leader, came before the great king to rouse him from his deadly lethargy. Eager to soothe and cheer, David played first the melodies of nature: the tunes to which the animals respond, the sheep, the quail, the jumping mouse. Then he played the song of the reapers, the chant of burial, the marriage hymn, and the priests' chorus. But the King groaned in despair. Then the eager young harper sang of the joys of sheer living and of the responsibilities of the king, and Saul begins to attend. Then he sang of the great ideals, lofty deeds, and the possibility of leaving splendid memories to posterity. And Saul slowly regains his kingliness, but the final song, with the harp cast aside, is the culmination of David's service—the song of infinite power and of love divine.

May 8 (Tuesday). 1 Samuel 17:45-51.

Doubtless we remember with how eager attention we followed this story when Father told it to us children. But there is in it a lesson for age as well as for youth. Notice the contrast in David's words: "Thou . . . with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield . . . I in the name of the Lord. . . ." This contrast is more than that denoted by the words material and spiritual, worldly and moral, for the name of the Lord is God's manifestation of Himself, and David claims that he is on to battle surrounded by the aggressive power of the living God.

God's saints have always trusted in this Name and so may we. Our help, said the Psalmist, is in the name of the Lord who made heaven and earth. Our weapons, said Paul, are mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds.

May 9 (Wednesday). 1 Samuel 20:35-42.

From the friendship of Jonathan and David we may learn many things concerning friendship in general. One of these is the hint that is given us of the place of religious faith as a condition of friendship. "Behold, the Lord be between me and thee for ever." How shall we take these words? As an invocation of God as penalty-inflicter in case the plighted word be broken, and an implication that in all other circumstances He had better remain outside? This would be to miss the larger meaning. Rather would we interpret them as expressing the great truth that this was a friendship that in every word and act was overshadowed by the divine.

May 10 (Thursday). Psalm 51:1-13.

Thomas Carlyle has a well-known comment that is worth repeating for its intrinsic truth. "Faults? The greatest of faults, I should say, is to be conscious of none. Readers of the Bible above all, one would think, might know better. Who is called there 'the man according to God's own heart'? David, the Hebrew King, had fallen into sins enough; blackest crimes; there was no want of sins. And thereupon the unbelievers sneer and ask, Is this your man according to God's heart? The sneer, I must say, seems to me but a shallow one. What are faults, what are the outward details of a life; if the inner secret of it, the remorse, temptations, true, often-baffled, never-ended struggle of it, be forgotten? 'It is not in man that walketh to direct his steps.' Of all acts, is not, for a man, repentance the most divine? The deadliest sin, I say, were that same supercilious consciousness of no sin; that is death, the heart so conscious is divorced from sincerity, humility and fact; is dead: it is 'pure' as dead dry sand is pure."

May 11 (Friday). Psalms 8 and 23.

We read the Eighth Psalm with a much profounder knowledge of the vastness of nature than had the men who lived when David wrote it. Beneath us the illimitably small stretches away into the hidden depths of the atom and the cell; above us is the equally illimitable spaces lighted by the "gleam of a million million suns." Awed by the vision we repeat David's question, "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?" That question is only answered adequately in Jesus Christ. Read now the Twenty-third Psalm and take this Saviour to be yours.

May 12 (Saturday). 2 Samuel 7:18-26.

There is a charming suggestion in. David's words when he says to Jehovah, "According to thine own heart, hast thou done all these great things." Many of us forget that God has a heart and think of Him as a being who lives far away from us and whose entire existence is spent in upholding a series of splendid and abstract principles. But our Father in heaven is—just our Father in heaven, and what He does for us each day is simply according to His own mighty heart of love. Shall we think that our heavenly Father when in this day's experience He brings to us His particular moment-by-moment loving care does less than an earthly father?

May 13 (Sunday). Psalm 1.

Every promise has a condition; fulfil the latter and you have the former. This is the secret of the blessed life with God that the Scripture holds out to us in such entrancing terms. Let us put the promise in the first person to make it all the more vivid: "I shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; my leaf also shall not wither. . ." Growth, fruitage, freshness, are all mine, if . . . Ah, here is the condition; if I keep in constant touch with God in His revelation of Himself. That life of undying fellowship may be yours and mine, because the condition is possible of fulfilment.

May 14 (Monday). 1 Kings 17:1-7.

"After a while the brook dried up . . ." So it happens to us. At one time in life our youthful strength and vigor seem inexhaustible—but after a while the brook dries up. At another time we find one on whom we rely for help, one so wise and courageous, so strong and tender. In blind confidence we think that he will always be with us, but perhaps he is taken away, and . . . the brook dries up. In passing through such experiences we may well wonder what next to do. But like Elijah we still have our heavenly Father. His compassions fail not, they are new every morning. Our souls may therefore say, thou art my portion, therefore will I hope in thee.

May 15 (Tuesday). 1 Kings 17:17-24.

The widow's son died and was brought back to life and restored to his mother. Does not this suggest that the calamity of today may become the blessing of tomorrow? The main difference between the story of the widow's son and the similar experiences of the people of God is in the time required. The widow's blessing followed almost at once upon the calamity; ours may be delayed. Chauncey M. Depew tells us that his good Christian mother used to exhort him to thank God for the hard things of life because these always work out

His blessed saving will for those who love Him.

May 16 (Wednesday). 1 Kings 18:30-39.

The age-long conflict between the powers of God and the powers of evil has its heroic moments and this was one of them. The God who answered by fire was the God for those Old Testament spectators. But today—how things have changed, we often think. Jehovah is challenged over the whole world, but He seems to have changed places with Baal and to be making no reply. God's silence may not be of death nor of indifference, but of love and mercy and forbearance. For as Peter reminds us, the long suffering of our Lord is salvation.

May 17 (Thursday). 1 Kings 19:1-8.

Youth is very apt to think that it is much better than its fathers, and some who are no longer youthful may still retain the opinion. The result is that those who are past and gone, or old and going, may doubtless be loved, but for the most part benevolently pitied by those who are young and still coming. But for most of us there happens a different experience. The years come and go and life changes from the heroic into the drab and prosaic; from the thrilling crises to the dogged and determined holding on in the resolve at least to hold what has been gained even if no more advance can be attained. Elijah's words may in such moments come to us with special appropriateness, I am not better than my fathers.

May 18 (Friday). 1 Kings 19:13-18.

The tempest, the earthquake, and the fire of the volcano are three of nature's most terrifying events, and in them many nations have heard and seen the manifestation of God. The Scripture writers tell us that God may speak to men through them. But when God visits the soul to comfort, to encourage, to uplift, to transform, He comes in "the still small voice." This is the property of Him whose symbol is the dove. It expresses the fact that there is a power with us visiting us in the loneliness of our thoughts and in the worship we render either when by ourselves we reflect on the Word of God or when with our friends we join in the public services of the house of God.

May 19 (Saturday). 2 Kings 2:1-11.

Elijah asks his disciple as they approach the scene of the translation if he has any request to make. Elisha asks a double portion of his master's spirit—not twice Elijah's inspiration, but, as you will find explained in Deuteronomy 21:17, the portion of an oldest son who received twice as much as the younger sons. Elijah replies that this is a hard request. Spiritual gifts are not easy to transmit as we all know. But, the aged prophet adds, "If you see me when I am taken away, you will have your desire. This means if you will continue with me to the end, you will have proved your fitness." So the master and the disciple continue into the dark mountains of Moab. Then came the dread end; the air is full of fire, and in the fire horses and chariots appear, and Elijah ascends in a whirlwind into heaven. But Elisha gazes and his prayer is granted. Does it not still hold true, that only those who can behold the better spiritual world without flinching receive the gifts of the Spirit?

May 20 (Sunday). Psalm 2.

Regarded simply as literature the Second Psalm has four stanzas of three verses each, every one with its several theme—challenge, warning, triumph, and counsel. But for us the psalm has a divine lesson of infinite meaning. It teaches us that all human revolt against the righteous government of God is fore-doomed to ultimate failure. God laughs as it were at all the puny rebels, and in spite of their opposition King Jesus will some day come into His own. If this is true, what should be our attitude? Merely to think with satisfaction on the certain overthrow of wicked men? Merely to wrap ourselves in the garment of our own security? Or, rather is it our duty to warn about the impending destruction and to call men to loyalty to Jesus?

May 21 (Monday). Isaiah 6:1-8.

"Mine eyes have seen the king," cried the prophet. What would be the effect of this we might well wonder. Joy? Exaltation? Bliss? Perhaps so, but the prophet does not say it, but "Woe is me, for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips. . ." Therefore it is most profoundly true that he who has the vision of God, knows at that very moment his own sin and unworthiness. But to know this is to take the first step towards improvement. The man who has had a vision of the heights has also a view of the depths and because of this is apt to strive upward. Hence it is all important for us to keep before our minds the vision of Jesus Christ, the King in His beauty.

May 22 (Tuesday). 2 Kings 19:32-37.

One man with God can preserve a kingdom. Our portion today exemplifies this striking fact. Sennacherib with an immense army came to subdue the rebellious provinces of the West. It was a great crisis in Judah's history; the courage of the majority failed, but one man stood firm. Read Isaiah 36 and 37 and you will find how Isaiah's heroism in prayer and prophecy were the means under God whereby new courage and hope came to the people. In this way Isaiah met the challenge of ancient idolatry. How are we meeting the challenge of its modern counterpart?

May 23 (Wednesday). 2 Kings 20:1-7.

Some one has said that the story of Hezekiah's recovery is a delightful study in the unexpected. Hezekiah expected to die, but he was allowed to live fifteen years longer. He asked that the shadow on the dial might move backward—a request that men could hardly expect, and yet that was what happened. These things made him believe in the divine compassion that has power to do the unexpected mercies.

God brings the unexpected into our lives. No experience we ever anticipated with dread came exactly as we expected. A man made a sun-dial once and upon its four sides he put appropriate mottoes. On the east side he wrote, "Man goeth forth to his labor." On the west face he put, "The night cometh." On the south side, "I am the light of the world." On the north, "Lighten our darkness, we beseech thee, O God."

May 24 (Thursday). 2 Kings 20:12-19.

"After me the deluge," said Louis XV, expressing thus his apprehension of coming disaster, and his indifference to the results of his reckless and extravagant policies.

"Good is the word of the Lord," said Hezekiah when Isaiah brought to him the fateful prophecy. Then, as if to disarm the surprise of the prophet, he added, "Is it not good if peace and truth be in my days?" But it was not good to allow the enemy to enter and to open up the way to captivity and ruin for posterity.

The man who tries to live in the light of the Scripture will not be indifferent to the welfare of the generations still unborn, but will try to avert future evil by maintaining present good. What misery and curse did the slave trade bring to America!

May 25 (Friday). Isaiah 11:1-9.

This chapter gives us a description of the world that is to be when man's salvation has been thoroughly worked out. The powers of evil will be driven away, and the powers of good will replace them. How is this change to be brought about? The prophet answers in the words, "A little child shall lead them." This we must interpret primarily of the Christ child, and then of all the other children who have been brought into contact with Jesus and who further His gospel. If we accept this meaning of the words, we shall see children with the same love and delight with which the Lord Christ regarded them. They are the hope of the changed world; through them the new day and the new kingdom will come. With many this passage is a description of millennial conditions.

May 26 (Saturday). Isaiah 63:1-9.

The portion for today is a brief dramatic poem hard to interpret. The watchers catch sight of a mighty heroic warrior-like form marching from Bozrah, and in their amazement they cry out, "Who is this that cometh from Edom?" And the Lord answers, "It is I, I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save." Then follows a vivid and heart-rending recital of the practices of ancient warfare. It is horrible, but the last great World War could match it in every detail. However, the prophet does not wish us to concentrate on this, and therefore, in the words "I have trodden the winepress alone," he makes us pass from Edom to Calvary—to Jesus Christ, forsaken by friends, jeered at by foes, the blood streaming from His head, His side, His hands and His feet, clad in the crimson robe of sacrificial love, breathing out His life for your salvation and mine; winning our victory for us; overcoming our foes.

May 27 (Sunday). Isaiah, chapter 12.

In verse 3 there is an arresting prophetic promise, "With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation." We call it prophetic because its fulfilment is not conditioned on anything that man can do, but on God. We may interpret it as follows: Just as Israel drank miraculous water in the wilderness, so will the God of salvation also open to you springs of salvation, from which you may draw to your heart's delight. This has been fulfilled so far as the providing of the well is concerned in the coming of the Saviour who gives to all who ask Him living water. But we must complete the fulfilment, because the drawing out must be our own act and the joy must be our personal experience.

May 28 (Monday). Jeremiah 1:5-10.

This week all our readings are to center round the prophet Jeremiah, the author of the book that bears his name. Jeremiah is a character that rouses our pity and admiration. He lived at a time when superficial reforms were unable to stem the settled tide of the judgment of God that Israel as a nation was no longer to exist. His message was naturally most unwelcome, and therefore his life was in danger from his own townsmen, from the Temple priests, from the arbitrary and revengeful king, and from the military party. He had an inward struggle, and the lesson of his life is the victory of God.

May 29 (Tuesday). Jeremiah 7:1-7.

Our reading today is a warning not to believe in delusions. The particular delusion under consideration was believing that Jerusalem could never be taken by the enemy because Jehovah's Temple was there, and He would defend it against all hostile attack. But those who said this were uttering lying words. Not only in religious matters, but in all departments of life, we are too apt to heed "lying words," to believe that this or that short and easy formula will bring a lasting salvation.

May 30 (Wednesday). Jeremiah 26:10-15.

This man is worthy to die, said the priests and the prophets, because he hath prophesed against this city. Wrathful words were these reminding us of what was shouted some centuries later against another champion of the cause of God. This fellow said, "I am able to destroy the temple of God." Both Jeremiah and Jesus were faithful in declaring the entire will of the Lord. The lesson is not so much the duty of proclaiming the unwelcome truth, but the duty of hearing it and acting on it. There are men who seem really to take pleasure in what they think is the "preaching of the law of wrath, retribution, condemnation, judgment." Neither Jeremiah nor Jesus shared this joy, and if a man finds joy in a ministry of denunciation, far better would it be for him to keep silence.

May 31 (Thursday). Jeremiah 35:5-14.

"Drink ye wine," said the prophet to the Rechabites. "We will drink no wine," said the Rechabites to the prophet, "because Jonadab, the son of Rechab our father, commanded us to drink no wine." What unreasonable traditionalist have we here, we might think. What sort of men are these to follow blindly an ancestral direction without asking whether it was grounded in reason or demanded by expediency. The point, however, that is made in this chapter is that if the Rechabites could obey their father without hesitation or question, why should not God's people obey their Father equally unhesitatingly or unquestioningly?

The World's Best Humorous Anecdotes, by J. Gilchrist Lawson.

This is a collection of about fifteen hundred humorous anecdotes, which have the advantage of being classified. This makes them readily available. They are of the clean sort and of high quality.

275 pages. 7½x5 inches. George H. Doran Company, New York, $2.

The Menace of Darwinism, by William Jennings Bryan.

This is a reissue of Chapter 4 from the author's volume In His Image, together with comments on the importance of its appeal, reasons for this separate publication, and abstracts of the remaining chapters.

63 pages. 7½x5 inches. Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago and New York.

The Servant of Jehovah, by David Baron.

The destructive critics have vainly attempted to apply all the prophecies of the sufferings of the Servant of Jehovah to the Jewish nation, while some plainly apply to Christ. Mr. Baron in a scholarly way exposes the unscientific and crude scholarship of the critics. The book is one needed for these times.

The Seven Deadly Sins, by Norman Macleod Caie, B. D.

In these days when sin is minimized and laughed at, when so many false and unscriptural conceptions are abroad, it is refreshing to find a book that is not afraid to deal with sin. The author keenly analyzes the seven specially deadly sins, shows their effects upon character, and points the way to get rid of them.

The New Heavens and the New Earth, by Pastor F. E. Marsh and Rev. William C. Procter; and Europe and Near East Conditions, by Rev. S. H. Wilkinson and Rev. E. Bendor Samuel.

This is a volume of papers and the discussions which followed. It is No. 24 in Aids to Prophetic Study and is issued under the auspices of The Prophecy Investigation Society. The papers in themselves are valuable, as coming from those who have specialized in the study of prophecy. This value is enhanced by diverse views expressed in the discussion that followed each subject, and the replies to the criticisms.

God's Highway, by Rev. W. Y. Fullerton.

This is a series of forty-one meditations upon the way of human life which are calculated to lift its readers to God's highway. The author calls to our attention the fact that life's dusty way is along the levels, while God's highway is among the hills and above the clouds, and points out that there is One always ready to guide to the uplands those who seek God's home.

The Old Testament Law for Bible Students, by Roger Sherman Galer, M. A.

This is a most disappointing book. It promises much and gives little. The classification and arrangement of the laws as they apply to the various relations in life is of no profit when the authority back of the law is destroyed. This the author does by building his scheme on the basis of the assumptions of the destructive criticism.

Classics of the Soul's Quest, by Rev. R. E. Welsh, M. A., D. D.

The title does not immediately suggest the contents of this unusual book which deals chiefly with the great classics, in which are recorded the experiences and thoughts of great souls in their quest for eternal truth. Written by a professor of church history, in an interesting style and often with unusual power of expression, this book is one of great merit to those who are interested in mystical writings and spiritual realities.

The Gospel in the Ten Commandments, by Rev. J. C. Massee, D.D.

Many sermons have been written and published upon the decalogue, but it has remained for the talented pastor of the Tremont Temple to adapt his message to the present widespread lawlessness. Whether the connection between this disregard of law and the new theology be apparent or not, there can be no doubt that there is a connection between the social gospel and this social chaos. The author's strong emphasis upon obedience to the law of God as the one hope for the safety of society is most timely. A strong evangelistic appeal which characterizes each one of the ten sermons will also make this book a blessing.

Self-Help in Teaching, by Huber William Hurt Ph. D., LL. D.

This is one of the shortest compendiums of pedagogy, and will be very useful for those who wish the fundamentals of teaching expressed in a brief form. It is intended for all who teach in home, chool, Sunday-school, Boy Scout, Camp Fire, Girl Scout and other recreational groups in business and industry. The author's outline plan of presentation supplemented by a complete index, will be appreciated by those who wish a hand book on pedagogy.

Oneness with Christ, by Bishop W. R. Nicholson, D. D., edited by Rev. James M. Gray, D. D.

This book has been before the public for a good many years with high appreciation, and a new edition is called for. As the editor says, it contains "deep insight into spiritual things, has vigor of appeal, has heavenly unction, grace of manner and beauty of diction, not commonly met with."

The studies are divided into thirty-two readable chapters with suggestive headings.

The Chronology of the Bible, by Philip Mauro.

To most people "chronology" is a dry subject. It suggests mere dates. Mr. Mauro has the faculty of making chronology interesting. In the main he follows Anstey in his Romance of Chronology. This volume has the advantage of conciseness. Another helpful feature is the placing in parallel columns the dates An. Dom. and the dates B. C. This saves the reader's time. There are several debatable dates in which all will not follow Mr. Mauro, particularly with regard to the seventy weeks of Daniel.

A Modern Cyclopedia of Illustrations, by Rev. G. B. F. Hallock, D. D.

Dr. Hallock is the author of a large number of books, tracts and pamphlets. Those who are familiar with the articles which appear in the religious and secular magazines will testify to his extraordinary gift of illustration. It is fortunate indeed that these illustrations have been gathered together in a reference work. These stories are not only based on facts in modern life but are very suitably gathered around the anniversary Sundays of the year. The book will be especially useful to ministers who are in the habit of preparing sermons appropriate to these special occasions.

The Children's Six Minutes, by Bruce S. Wright, D. D.

This is a series of fifty-two very brief and original sermonettes for boys and girls which will prove helpful and suggestive to pastors. Dr. Wright's ministry in the Orient has enabled him to make interesting contributions from this field. The memory verse and memory hymn, with which each sermon concludes, furnish appropriate material for work in the Junior department of the Sunday-school. The best appreciation of this volume is the joy with which the children welcome it.

Sermons on Biblical Characters, by Rev. Clovis G. Chappell, D.D.

Character sketches have always had a peculiar value in proclaiming biblical truth and Dr. Chappell's book is no exception. There is probably no more popular preacher in the southern Methodist church, and he is to be commended for using his vivid imagination and artistic expression in presenting the valuable lessons these biblical characters illustrate. Four of the sixteen sermons are devoted to the women of the Bible and touch upon some of the problems of women in our social life to-day.

The Adult Division in the Church School, by E. W. Halfpenny.

The growth and development of the adult department in the Sunday-school in recent years has made a book of this type of special value. The author deals with the organization, activity, and extension of the adult Bible class as well as the problems and co-operation of the parents in relation to the other divisions of the Sunday-school. A special effort to render the principles involved so clear as to make them practical in application will be appreciated by those who are associated with the small school.

The Easter People, by Winifred Kirkland.

Any one who is familiar with the beautiful customs of this musical and missionary people will appreciate this pen picture of the Moravian observance of the resurrection. This account in a form shortened for magazine requirements, appeared in the Ladies' Home Journal of April, 1922. It is a description of the Moravian settlement and Easter services at Salem, N. C., which resembles that held in the Central Church at Bethlehem and other Moravian communities.

Beautiful Girlhood, by Mabel Hale.

The aim of this little volume is clearly set forth by the author in her foreword: "This little book is born of a desire to help and encourage our girls who are struggling with the problems that come up in teens," and forms the best summary of the work. There are thirty-three brief chapters each dealing with some special phase of girlhood in such an intimate and personal manner that every girl will feel the message was written for herself. Unusual in books of even this type is the strong spiritual tone found on every page. The dainty blue binding will make it an attractive gift book.

A Grain of Wheat and Other Sermons, by Dr. Walter Benwell Hinson.

This is a series of thirteen sermons by Dr. Hinson, pastor of the East Side Baptist Church of Portland, Ore. The author utters a genuine message; out of the expressions of his own heart, he brings the gospel message in burning words made vital by the Holy Spirit. The book is well adapted for preachers in that they may be taught the vital way of sermonizing, and for Christians who need an awakening, and also for the unsaved because it is a book with a many-sided message. It deserves a wide circulation.

The Children's Division of the Little Sunday School, by Maud Junkin Baldwin.

The writer has anticipated the problem of adapting the modern graded Sunday-school methods to an organization limited to a single room. There are still hundreds of thousands of children receiving their religious education in a little one-room building and the parents and teachers of these schools will appreciate this book for its value in increasing the efficiency of such an organization. Aside from being peculiarly adapted to small schools in rural communities, there are many helpful suggestions for any teacher of the younger departments of the Sunday-school.

The Islanders of the Pacific, by Lieut.-Col. T. R. St. Johnston.

This is in no sense a missionary book. The author, one-time District Commissioner of the Lau Islands, Fiji, gives an elaborate description of the Pacific Islanders as to their early religious ideas and practices, particularly sun-worship and ancestor-worship, their various myths and superstitions relating to totems, "tabu," ghosts, burial customs, cannibal feasts and a variety of other topics. He builds on the evolutionary theory of religion. His tracing back of the various island peoples to their probable racial sources according to the most commonly accepted ethnological theories is of interest and value.

The book contains a good map of the Pacific Islands and thirty-two pages of illustrations.

Mary Slessor of Calabar, by W. P. Livingstone.

One of the very greatest missionary books of this generation, already so well known as scarcely to call for further mention. The life-story of Mary Slessor rivals in many particulars that of David Livingstone. She served in Africa from 1876 to 1915. From an unlettered factory girl in Scotland she advanced into the foremost ranks of missionary pathfinders. A pioneer among the most savage tribes of the Calabar hinterland, practically single-handed she tamed and transformed three pagan communities in succession. It is a question if the career of any other one missionary has been marked by so many strange adventures, daring feats, signal providences and wonderful achievements.

The book has eleven pages of illustrations.

A System of Christian Evidence, by Prof. Leander S. Keyser, D.D.

Those who have had the pleasure of hearing Dr. Keyser in public will appreciate his latest book. Evangelical and conservative in all his utterances, he has written out for us a scholarly system of Christian evidences arranged in a clear and concise manner. Admitting that modern apologetics cannot confine its attention to infidelity and deism, the author has provided for the needs of the day by meeting the rationalism and negative Bible criticism of the times. The concluding chapters on "The Doubter and His Difficulties," and "The Failure of Infidelity," are masterly arguments for the truth. The outline plan of the book and the select bibliography at the conclusion will commend it as a text book not only for seminary and college classes, but for individual study by pastors and Bible students.

New Tasks for Old Churches, by Roger W. Babson.

The church owes a great debt to Mr. Babson for the new interest that he has aroused in religion through his books. His influential position as the foremost statistician of the day has enabled him to attract the attention of a great many men who would not otherwise be interested in religion. The subject, however, of this particular book is somewhat misleading. The church should not have a new message to bring to the people of this day, but it undoubtedly requires new methods to present the old message. Mr. Babson's excellent survey of industrial conditions which have changed so much the character of the country, as well as the city, are most valuable in enabling the church to adapt its methods to the present conditions. While religion is the end of the author's writing, political economy occupies the larger part of the book, and its reading will promote better civil and social relationships, and make men better citizens, if not better Christians.

The Bible and Our National Life, by Rev. A. B. Ost.

This book is of particular value in comparing the place of the Bible in the education and literature of the early days of America and that which it occupies at the present time. The writer strongly contrasts the Bible influence and family worship, characteristics of the early American home, with the neglected place that it holds in our life to-day. A careful study has been made of statistics and all of the statements are made upon the basis of facts. There is no more striking statement than the verdict of the special envoys from Japan who were sent out by that government to investigate religion in the United States with the purpose of recommending it to their nation, if it had proved valuable to us. Those who have been in Japan will appreciate the deep significance of that verdict, "While education, commerce, and industry have been developed to a wonderful degree in the United States, there is little evidence that the Christian religion is regarded important by most of the people."

Analysis of the Interchurch World Movement Report on the Steel Strike, by Marshall Olds, with a Foreword by Jeremiah W. Jenks, Ph. D., Research Professor of Government and Public Administration, New York University; edited as to the law involved in labor controversies by Murray T. Quigg, B. A., LL. B., editor of Law and Labor; edited as to detailed accuracy of citations, quotations and statistics by Haskins and Sells, certified public accountants.

This is an important book for every clergyman to read, especially if he were one of those carried off their feet by the Interchurch World Movement. When we first took it up we supposed it to have been inspired by Judge Gary of the United States Steel Corporation, but the author disillusioned us of that idea. And now Judge Gary himself comes out in an address to the presidents of the subsidiary companies of that corporation, from which we quote:

"I think none of us was previously informed in regard to many of the salient facts disclosed in this book. Certainly they have been a revelation to me. They will in many respects probably be a surprise to the large majority of the clergymen of this country who read this book.

"From the facts as stated in this volume, and apparently abundantly verified, it appears that the whole movement against the steel industry of the United States, culminating in the Interchurch World Movement report, so called, instead of being impartial was prejudiced, grossly unfair, and venomous.

"It would seem that several well-intentioned men were used as 'cats' paws' to create an unjustified prejudice. It may be imagined that, because of their connection with the movement, these men will be deeply chagrined by exposure of these facts and circumstances."

The World's Greatest Need, by Rev. Thomas E. H. Jones, B. A.

The title of this book might indicate that some particular doctrine or some special evangelistic effort was in mind, but such is not the case—the great need is the old-fashioned gospel.

"This book is an attempt, not to present any learned disquisition on the scheme of salvation, but to meet in a measure the need that exists for something to bring home to the heart, the more important points that are vital in the Word of God."

There is an emphasis on the truths that in a former day turned the world upside down (Acts 17:6). The author takes knowledge of the clear differences between the old and new evangelism. There is an attempt more or less successful to strike a balance between the two, avoiding overdone emphasis on God's punitive justice, and on the other hand presenting God as holy and just, but fair in all His dealings with men. The author tries to harmonize the opinions of contemporary evangelical scholars with those of former days.

It is a question whether the subjects follow each other in any kind of logical order; it is not the purpose of the author to do so, it would seem. Such subjects as, "Defective Present Day Sense of Sin," "Is Future Punishment Right?" "Mistaken Impressions of God," "Recognizing the Divine Voice," "Defective Coming," "Why Sinners Are not Converted," would indicate that the author is gripped with the importance of fundamental thinking.

The style is absolutely unconventional and the writing is easy and delightful. The reader has the feeling that the author understood the common man's thinking and is trying to help him. A serious person will greatly appreciate the book, and its large circulation would be a blessing to the world. This book can be secured at the Moody Bible Institute Colportage Association, 826 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

THE SUPERINTENDENT OF BUILDINGS

Mr. J. Edward Stauffer has been elected by the Executive Committee of the Institute, to the position of Buyer and Superintendent of Buildings, in which office he has been acting since the resignation of Mr. Haavind.

Mr. James E. Herron, who graduates at the close of this term, has been selected to be Assistant Buyer and Superintendent of Buildings, beginning September 1.

ENLARGEMENT OF EXTENSION DEPARTMENT

Beginning with the new fiscal year, May 1, Mr. George V. Kirk will become the new Secretary of the Extension Department. This means that the Extension Department will take over all the office force, as well as the representatives in the field, now under Mr. Kirk's direction in the Administration Department. Mr. John R. Riebe will become the Assistant Secretary of the Extension Department and will care especially for that part of the work which has hitherto been in his hands. He will also retain his position as a member of the Business Staff, and Mr. Kirk will continue to act as Business Manager in the absence of Mr. Gaylord.

THE SPECIAL SUMMER COURSE

The March Bulletin has been devoted exclusively to the Special Summer Course that will be held at the Institute July 5-August 3. The success of the session last summer exceeded all expectations, and the many expressions of appreciation convinced those in charge that this latest undertaking had passed the experimental stage.

It was argued that to attempt such a course in the city while conducting Bible conferences in various summer resorts was hazardous. However, the experiment of last summer proved that this was not the case. Chicago, with its beautiful parks and boating facilities, is a desirable place to spend the month of July. Moreover, the Institute is one of the few educational establishments that offers such a summer course while all its regular classes are in session. This gives the added inspiration of the great student body and insures the presence of every member of the Faculty. It gives not only an excellent opportunity to see the various departments in full operation, but also to catch the spirit of the Institute and its remarkable life, which is such an important contribution to practical Bible study.

Again, it is improbable that more Bible conferences will be held this summer than are actually required. Upon the statement of reliable authority it is said that one-fourth of the 700,000 school teachers in the United States, compared with but five percent of the nation's ministers, attend some sort of summer school. There is a growing demand that religious leaders and teachers keep themselves as intellectually fit as educators for their work. The increasing number of Bible conferences and summer courses are the result of this demand.

Lakeside Drive, Chicago.

The program that has been arranged at The Moody Bible Institute will include eight distinguished special instructors in addition to the members of the Faculty, and sufficient practical work, under competent leaders, to enable the theoretical knowledge to be clinched by the experimental.

BIBLE CONFERENCES AT CEDAR LAKE, IND., AND MADISON, WIS.

As announced on the front cover, the Institute will conduct its first Summer Bible Conference at Cedar Lake, Ind., July 29-Aug. 12, in addition to those announced in earlier issues—Eagles Mere, Pa., July 6-15, and Ocean City, N. J., Aug. 9-19—held in the East.

Among the speakers will be Dr. James M. Gray, Dean of the Institute; Rev. George E. Guille, Dr. J. E. Conant and Rev. J. A. Sutherland of the Extension Department. Others have been invited to participate, including Rev. P. W. Philpott, pastor, Moody Church; Rev. S. B. Rohold, scholar, author and Jewish worker, who has recently returned after two years spent in Palestine, and who will tell of present conditions in the Holy Land; and Rev. George S. McCune, D. D., for many years a missionary in Korea, now acting president of Huron College, S. D. Dr. McCune will speak on that sorely tried church which seems to be chosen to evangelize the Orient. Charles Calvert Ellis, B. D., Ph. D., vice-president and professor of Education in Juniata College, Huntingdon, Pa., will give a special series of lectures of interest to Sunday-school workers.

Cedar Lake, on the Monon Railroad, is forty miles south of Chicago. It is a beautiful, spring-fed lake, stocked with fish and affords good boating and bathing. The conference grounds are located on a wooded bluff overlooking the lake. Torrey Hall will be converted into a commodious auditorium, and the hotel and cottages will be operated with the idea of ministering utmost comfort. A restaurant open throughout the day and evening will supplement the service of the hotel and dining room.

A summer conference will be held at Madison, Wis., Aug. 5-12. The teaching staff will include Dr. James M. Gray, Dean of the Institute, Rev. John C. Page, of the faculty, and Dr. Henry Ostrom of the Extension Department. Rev. S. B. Rohold, and Rev. George S. McCune, D. D., will also address the conference.

Madison is the seat of the State University and is famous throughout America for its unrivalled natural advantages. It is beautifully located upon a number of gradually sloping hills between Lakes Mendota, Monona and Wingra. Its macadamized drives lead through shaded dells and over beautiful wooded hills along the shores of the lakes. The lakes are admirably adapted to rowing, sailing, swimming and fishing, and they are equipped with passenger steamers, launches, canoes, and rowboats. The sessions of the conference will be held in the University buildings, and entertainment of good quality at reasonable cost will be available at the fraternity houses and the Y. M. C. A.

For further information address the Secretary of the Extension Department of the Moody Bible Institute, 153-163 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill.

BIBLE CONFERENCE IN COLUMBUS, O.

Through its Extension Department the Institute will conduct a Union Bible Conference in Columbus, O., April 29-May 4. The Secretary of the Extension Department, 153-163 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill., will be glad to give further information.

A similar conference will be held in Rochester, N. Y., May 20-27. The chairman of the local committee, Mr. A. G. Slaght, 140 Court St., Rochester, N. Y., is prepared to send literature concerning it to inquirers.

CHANGES IN OUR PERSONNEL

We regret to announce the departure from our ranks of two valued and loved workers, Mr. Meeker, Director of the Practical Work Course in the Educational Department, and Mr. Bowles, Managing Editor of the Publication Department.

Mr. Bowles' health was endangered by longer continuance in office work, and he has been released to accept the position of manager of the Cedar Lake Conference Association, on whose grounds the Institute is to hold a Bible conference this summer.

He came to us in the spring of 1918, and his five years of labor here have bound him up very closely to us all in the fellowship of Christ. The Publication Department had recently been inaugurated when he came to it, and he did a good piece of constructive work in placing it on its present foundation.

The occasion does not call for details, but the development of all our departments during these five years is due in a very practical measure to his wise and diligent promotive work. Before coming with us he had had a wide experience in newspaper work, which taken together with his knowledge of the truth and his devotion to the interests of the Institute, made him an invaluable servant of Christ in this place. Our best wishes go with him in his new work.

Meanwhile, the literary work which he had laid down here has been taken up temporarily by the Rev. Clarence H. Benson of our Educational Department, who, like Mr. Bowles, had once an experience in newspaper work. The business end of the office has been turned over temporarily to our Administration Department while a permanent successor to Mr. Bowles is being sought.

Mr. Meeker has accepted the office of Superintendent of the Chicago Hebrew Mission, a work in which he has always been deeply interested, and with which the Institute has been glad to co-operate since its inception. Mr. Meeker was a student here twenty-three years ago after his graduation from Bucknell University. While a student he supplied the pulpit of the Ewing Street Congregational church of this city, to which, later, he was called as pastor. In 1910 he came on our staff as an evangelist in our Extension Department. Later he served as Superintendent of Men, and for the last six years he has been the energetic, devoted, and very capable Director of our Practical Work Course. We shall miss him as a leader of our men and women students and as a counsellor in our Faculty, as well as one of our occasional evangelists in the field.

Our prayers will attend Mr. Meeker and his family wherever they go, and we are interested to learn that they are about to take up their residence in the neighborhood of the mission, which is not remote from that of his faithful work as a city missionary of Ewing Street Church.

James M. Gray.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT

Dr. J. E. Conant concluded an evangelistic campaign in the Liberty Heights Baptist Church, Baltimore, on Easter Sunday. April 4-15 he held meetings in the Baptist church, of Battle Creek, Neb., and from April 15 to the end of the month, in the Roseland Baptist Church of Chicago. The latter two churches have former students as pastors.

Rev. George E. Guille gave a series of Bible studies in the First Presbyterian Church, Cedartown, Ga., during the latter weeks of March, and then, together with Dr. Henry Ostrom, conducted a Bible conference at the First Baptist Church, Cleveland, Tenn.

Miss Elinor Stafford Millar was called into the service of the City Rescue Mission, Erie, Pa., March 25-April 1, to teach the Bible and give inspirational addresses. She gave the second week of April to the Y. W. C. A. of Springfield, Ill., and later in the month went to the Union Gospel Mission, St. Paul, Minn., of which Mr. Peter MacFarlane is the superintendent.

Dr. Henry Ostrom conducted an evangelistic campaign in the First Presbyterian Church of Rome, Ga., March 21-April 1.

Mr. C. E. Putman gave a series of Bible lectures at Winter Haven, Fla., March 5-15, under the auspices of the Ministerial Association. They were commended by The Florida Chief. This engagement was followed by others at the Lake Alfred and Auburndale Baptist churches.

Rev. J. A. Sutherland conducted a series of evangelistic meetings, closing March 28, at the Galilee Baptist Church of Denver.

Rev. Gordon Watt, M. A., of Aberdeen University, Scotland, is enjoying a helpful ministry in this country, which will close June 1. Not quite all of his time in May has been filled. The Extension Department is his booking agency.

Miss Virginia C. Williams filled engagements during the latter part of March at Bryan and Orange, Tex. In April she taught the Bible in Clarksdale, Miss., under the auspices of the City Missionary Federation of that city, and in the presbyteries at Sumner, Jackson, Columbia, Hattiesburg and Corinth, Miss., at the request of Mrs. D. G. McLaurin, the State Synodical President.

A MOODY STUDENT IN PERU

Miss Dunlap has received some very interesting letters from Arthur M. L. Moohan, '22. Mr. Moohan has recently arrived in Cajamarca, Peru, as a missionary. As he is an ex-monk, he expected considerable trouble with the authorities. En route he held gospel services. He writes concerning them: "Shortly after the second meeting I was arrested on the complaint of two monks, but as they were unable to substantiate their charges of sedition, etc., I was released. Later I came into forcible contact with a heavy cane having a Friar at the end of it. A nasty gash and a black-eye bear mute evidence to Rome's love for the gospel."

In a later letter: "Now the whole town knows that I am an ex-monk and naturally the Bishop is furious. The bull of excommunication has been read in the cathedral and the various churches, not only against the "crying Judas and apostate Devil," but against all who have any dealings with me. The monks are circulating a pamphlet against me via the confessional. The persecution of the clergy, who lead lives that would make Satan blush if he could, has but aroused the interest of the thinking people. When I go out in the dusk of the evening many come and ask for Gospels and Testaments. I praise God that my class of young men from the National College have not been daunted."

After the rainy season Mr. Moohan plans to make a trip to Celindeen and Moyobamba, a two weeks' journey by mule.

PERSONALIA

John M. Murchison, '10, has completed his eighth year as pastor of the Princetown Presbyterian Church, P. E. I.

Mrs. Hugh B. Warner, corresponding secretary of the class of December '19, has been ill with influenza for eight weeks. This has delayed the sending out of the class letter.

Anna Emelia Enderson, '20, is a member of the American Mission, Hamadan, Persia. She writes that because of the turbulent conditions in Persia, no definite, aggressive, missionary work can be carried on at present.

Luther W. Childs, '15, pastor of the Unionville Baptist Church, Iowa, reports that the church has erected a new house of worship representing a cost of ten thousand dollars.

Rev. Luther Childs

Daisy F. Eggleston, '18, writes: "Have just returned from a very precious meeting on the Connecticut Coast—Rowayton—a real spirit of revival, and about forty-five professed conversions."

Lurena Rezner, '94, teaches community Bible classes in Monmouth, Biggsville, and Raritan, Ill. The interest of the people has been aroused, and classes are well attended.

John Porter, '06, last summer became pastor of the Congregational church, Chebanse, Ill. His work among the young people and children of the church has been especially successful.

Rev. and Mrs. W. Teeuwissen write: "We accepted a call for the Belgium Mission with the Nortons. We expect to sail May 2 on the S. S. Lapland, from New York."

L. D. Cassel, August '13, has just completed three and a half years service in the Baptist church at Utica, Ill. On Easter Sunday he had 19 baptisms all coming from the Sunday-school.

Lena E. Gerber, '11, has charge of a recently opened Bible school for the training of Bible women in Tsaochoufu, Shantung, China. Twenty women are enrolled. During the past year 115 new members have joined the native church.

The Fundamentals Association held a week's Bible Conference in January in the Presbyterian church, Madison, Ill., of which Louis C. Stumph, '10, is pastor. The speakers were Dr. Riley of Minneapolis and Rev. Mr. Philpott of Chicago.

W. A. Rowland, '16, is pastor of the First Baptist Church, Smith Center, Kan., and editor of the church paper, The Baptist Headlight. As part of his evangelistic enterprise he writes and distributes gospel leaflets.

Henry Jacobs, '12, pastor of the Burlington Baptist Church, Salt Lake City, Utah, announces that the church will issue a Monthly News Letter conveying first hand knowledge of the problems which confront the Baptist home mission work in Utah.

Ruby Burgess, '17, is teaching at Vivian, W. Va. After leaving the Institute she spent two years at a girls' school in North Carolina, one year at a co-ed school in Kentucky, and three years in public school work in West Virginia.

Wilbur M. Smith, '14, pastor of the Lafayette Square Presbyterian Church, Baltimore, Md., gave a series of seven lectures on the topic, "Is My Bible True?" to a meeting of the Baltimore Christian Endeavor Union Institute, held in his church March 6-9.

F. T. Holland, '18, is pastor of the Fillmore Avenue Baptist Church, Buffalo, N. Y. Previously he was pastor of the Church of the Open Door, Greensburg, Pa. In Buffalo he has addressed different religious organizations, and conducted services in the city jail and county penitentiary.

John Mein, '09, under the Baptist Board in South America, writes that the missionary work in Caixa Postal, Macio-Alagoas, has so developed that a school will be opened next month. During the past year a new church has been organized, 114 have been baptized, and two pastors and two evangelists have been added to the group of workers.

William McQuere, '11, eleven years ago, became the superintendent of the Jerry McAuley Cremorne Mission, New York City. It was then in a small room, humorously referred to as "the hole in the wall." In 1914 it was moved to its present location in the heart of New York's "Tenderloin District." During the years its ministry has become wider. The promise is for extensive enlargement of the work in the near future.

A Recent Testimony As To How God Used D. L. Moody

"With Groanings Which Cannot Be Uttered"

"But the Spirit Himself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered" (Rom. 8:26, last clause).

The writer had been to Northfield, Mass., to the summer Bible Conference, and was led to see his great need—his lack of power with God and men.

At an early morning prayer service, he with several hundred others arose for prayer, while D. L. Moody led in prayer that was all pervading and all prevailing.

Coming back to my rural charge I determined to begin revival services as soon as possible; so on the first Sunday in October I announced that we would conduct an early morning prayer service in the church at six o'clock.

Some of my official members remonstrated with me stating that no one would come out to a country church at that time in the morning, and urging me to make the hour nine o'clock, instead of six. I assured them that God's Holy Spirit would be there, and the old colored janitor would be there, and the pastor would be there, and God's promise was that "where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst." I assured them also that they need not come to please me, and that if they did not feel constrained to come to remain at home.

After spending part of the night in prayer I arose about five and drove six miles to the little country church. As I entered I said to "Uncle Harrison" (the old negro janitor), "Has anyone been here?" "Yes, sir, two ladies, but they have gone across to Mr. G's." I said-"Let us pray." He kneeled down reverently, and poured out his heart to God, for me, for the church, and for the community.

In a few minutes thirty people came into the church and I said, "Folks, I am going to read the story of Jacob at Peniel, and lead in prayer, and if any one feels moved to pray, pray as God by His Holy Spirit directs."

While I was praying I broke down and wept, and our class leader began praying, and in a few minutes was sobbing, and then another; and another attempted to lead in prayer only to give expression to "groanings which could not be uttered" (articulated).

We were in the church something over an hour when I arose and quietly left the church, as I did not wish to speak to anyone. That Sunday evening as announced I was to begin the revival service, and when I approached the edifice, it was crowded with people; and as the Word of God was preached deep conviction rested upon the congregation. About one hundred persons were converted to God.

The revival flame spread over two countries, and three young men that were converted went into the ministry, two into the fellowship of the writer's own Conference. They are still living, and are successful pastors and soul-winners. Another went into the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, while another became a local preacher, and gave a good account of himself to the day of his decease a year ago.

All glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit forever. Amen

PRAY FOR REVIVAL

The Gospel in Print

William Norton

"PRINTERS' INK!"

Use it to spread the gospel not only in subsidizing columns of newspapers for reports of sermons and for advertisements, but in multiplying printed notices, cards of invitation, and other devices to attract the eye of the casual reader or passer-by. Men of the world find great advantage in even very costly advertising. They give wide publicity to their business enterprises, and multiply devices to attract attention and draw customers, though in many cases these expedients are snares. Why should not the children of light wisely use every legitimate means to call attention to the courts of God's house and the gospel feast there spread, and to set forth the fact that there is enough for all, and that it is free to all? God gave the Bible to the common people, and the mariner's compass, printing-press, and steam-engine, as means for bearing the missionary and spreading the gospel over the world.

A loyal soldier of England's Queen, when asked how long it would take the British army and navy to carry a proclamation from Her Majesty to the ends of the earth, replied, "About eighteen months." We have no conception of the rapidity with which the flag of the Cross could be borne to the limits of the globe, if the enterprise were really undertaken by the whole body of believers. In 1835, in Hamburg, seven men in a shoemaker's shop resolved to attempt in person to spread the good news. Within twenty years they had organized fifty churches, gathered ten thousand converts, scattered half a million Bibles and eight million pages of tracts, and preached the gospel to fifty millions of people. At that rate, two hundred and fifty disciples could reach the whole population of the globe in thirty years!—A. T. Pierson.

* * *

In quoting the above we draw particular attention here to the distribution of Bibles and tracts made by these seven men. Are the Christians of today as active in the circulation of the Scriptures and pointed messages in tract form?

NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITIES

Busy, but scorning daily opportunities to sow the gospel seed! Is this not true of most well-intending Christians, who allow "the cares of this world" to rob them of many "chances" to leave, perhaps silently, a gospel testimony?

"Ye are my witnesses" is still true and will be in force until Jesus comes for His own.

A few suggested ways for the use of the gospel in print—tracts and leaflets especially—are offered below:

Pass out on the street or roadway.

Offer on the street car, "L" train, or railroad coach.

Scatter from auto, as at filling station, garage, lunch stopping places, etc.

Present, individually, to those in parks, or other public places.

Leave on the counters of stores.

Place in ticket offices, waiting and reception rooms.

Drop into private letter-boxes.

Hand to the grocer boy, milkman, laundry driver, the vegetable peddler.

Wrap with soiled linen for the laundry.

Slip under the plate when leaving the restaurant or lunch room.

Use at church, Sunday-school, or mission.

Enclose with letters.

Prayer is earnestly requested for all colporteurs and "book missionaries" who are "holding forth the word of life." These faithful workers crave support through prayer.

* * *

Sometimes a colporteur inquires where he might be of special service—a field particularly needy. If any reader knows of such a field, or would welcome an "evangelist" of the gospel in print in his own locality, will he please communicate with the editor of the MOODY MONTHLY?

* * *

Churches in towns and cities where there are no religious bookstores handling evangelical literature will do well to establish and maintain a bookstand of their own, for the benefit of those comprising their congregations. This is a real Christian ministry and need not be overshadowed by any spirit or criticism of commercialism.

MOORE'S LIFE GRAIN

"The Greatest Health Food in The World"

CONQUERS

Constipation, Indigestion, Sugar and Starch Troubles

MOST ILLNESS

is the result of eating too much refined and processed food. Foods that are robbed of their essential Minerals, which are necessary for the upkeep of the ever wearing and wasting away of the inside structure of the human body.

GOOD HEALTH

may be procured by eating Moore's Life Grain, a starchless anti-acid food, made from certain parts of standard grains only, including all the Elements of Bran and Whole Wheat along with other parts of grain combined in their proper proportion, perfectly balanced to work in harmony with the Digestive Organs of the body.

Life Grain is ready to eat as a Breakfast Food, plain or mixed with other cereals. It may be used in all recipes calling for refined flour, or in equal measures with flour.

YOUR PHYSICIAN

when putting you on a diet knows that the material required for the building up of your worn out body is found nowhere but in FOOD. He prescribes foods rich in essential minerals, such Foods that contain Iron, the mineral which carries the oxygen from the lungs out into the body, gives existence to Hemoglobin, the red coloring matter of blood, without which there can be no animal life. Your Physician will never direct you to purchase IRON OXIDE at the drug store, because he knows that your blood does not exist in such form. Iron is obtained only by the eating of Foods rich in this mineral.

LIFE GRAIN is the FOOD RICH IN IRON, and contains all of the other elements, but is DISTINCTIVE for its natural composition of the richest known combination of:

PHOSPHORUS, the ultra stimulant and recreative tonic.

POTASSIUM, to which alone is due all flexibility and suppleness of muscle, joint and artery.

MAGNESIUM, a powerful aid in the elimination of waste.

IRON, the blood maker.

Life Grain is nourishing, satisfying and sustaining. It is especially helpful to DIABETICS.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"That the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed." Luke 2:35.

A Canadian correspondent writes:

"There is a thought that has come to me in connection with the virgin birth of Christ which I should like to pass on for what it is worth.

"It is in connection with those words of Simeon in Luke 2:35, where he speaks of a sword piercing Mary's soul, 'that thoughts out of many hearts may be revealed.'

Cut From the Loaf

"I never have been able to understand just what was meant by these 'thoughts,' but it has now been suggested that while it was true Mary had to face that awful rejection and crucifixion of her Messiah son with all the deep, untold sorrow that entailed for her—for she witnessed His crucifixion—yet that may not have been what Simeon meant, or what the Holy Spirit by Simeon meant, when he spoke those strange words. In what way would the rejection and cruel death be related to 'thoughts out of many hearts'?

"On the other hand, may it not be that the Holy Spirit, taking opportunity through Simeon, enabled him to fellowship with her by anticipation in the awful suffering he knew she faced when to her neighbors at Bethlehem, Nazareth and elsewhere it became known that she had given birth to a son whose conception must have been, and by Joseph's and probably her own admission, was before they came together in holy wedlock?

"Think of the implied stain on her character it involved, as well as on the person of the child! Think, too, of the 'thoughts in many hearts' that were never revealed by words, but were not the less real! Think, too, of the human ignominy that attached to both our Lord and His mother throughout their lives, finding expression probably more or less frequently as recorded in John 8:41, 'We are not born of fornication,' the implication clearly being 'everyone knows you were.'

"If this is the meaning of the passage, may we not also accept it as the Holy Spirit's protest in advance against the widespread present day denial of the virgin birth with all it involves—'thoughts out of many hearts'?

"May we not also suppose that, in the silence with which Mary received Gabriel's annunciation, her sensitive and well-instructed mind realized something at least of this that Heaven's high honor involved for her, when she submissively replied, 'Behold, the handmaid of the Lord; be it with me according to Thy word'?

"Oh! the awful sin of doubting the virgin birth! So much is wrapped up in it. God puts so much by it."

We trust none of our readers will omit "Cut From the Loaf" this month, as our Canadian friend, its author, has given us something to think about as affecting the mother of our Lord, and to deepen our adoration of her Son, our Lord and Saviour.

Our Present Issue

This is the first time we were privileged to set before our readers a sermon of the well-known London Wesleyan preacher, Dinsdale T. Young, whose Sunday evening congregation gathers before the church doors are open. It is his soul-winning fervor that explains this, as his sermon plainly shows, which also is an example of the value of sometimes repeating over and over again a single sentence of Scripture till its finds its aim in the human soul.

But if one really seeks an illustration of the soul-winning power of the gospel story, "the same yesterday, today, and forever," let him read what Mr. Frater says about his work among the cannibals of the New Hebrides. A more interesting tale has seldom been told in these pages.

We would have the reader jump from Mr. Frater's message thus reported, to the two brief contributions entitled, "Lost in the Mountains," and "In Out of the Way Places," which show the kind of soul-winning work in our own country in which Moody Bible Institute students delight. If one has money to invest for God in the salvation of men, where can it be set to work quicker and better than by sending it to the Institute for the training of such men and women?

It will strengthen one's purpose to do the above, and accelerate his action, as he reads Professor Coate's plea, "A New Scholarship Needed," and the indictment of Modernism by Dr. Sheldon. The latter employs strong language in characterizing the "Ecclesiastical Tragedy," of which he writes, stronger than we ourselves are accustomed to use, but that it is justified there is little doubt.

We are loath to conclude without particular mention of the interpretative contribution on "The Kingdom in Parable and Apocalypse," by Ernest Gordon. All may not entirely agree with every opinion he puts forth, but to have so fascinating a theme treated by so competent a scholar, and so sympathetic a friend of dispensational truth is an unusual treat.

The Martyrdom of Vicar General Butchkavitch

The confirmation of this martyrdom, for such it was, did not reach us in time for editorial notice in our last issue, but we have since read the statement of a special correspondent of the New York Herald that the Soviet government of Russia convicted him on documents "as innocuous as the minutes of an English vestry meeting." "Men will yet speak of the Bolshevist persecution," he said, "as they now speak of that of Diocletian."

To each clerical prisoner was read the law against all religious teaching of those under eighteen, and he was asked whether he had obeyed and would obey it? And each replied confidently and proudly that he had disobeyed and would continue to do so.

> "They bore themselves nobly," says the correspondent, "the bishop's speech was magnificent and his bearing superb. Splendid also were the last words of the youthful priest, Edward Yunevitch, just ordained. When these men spoke, the rushing of the mighty wind of the supernatural seemed to sweep the court. A hush of awe, almost of terror, settled down upon the 'Red' audience, the cigarettes dropped from the lips of the judges, who stared blankly at the orators."

As we read these words we forget that those men were not of our particular faith, that they represented the Roman Catholic rather than the Protestant church, and we think only of Him for whom they counted not their lives dear unto themselves.

Verily, the faith of our fathers is "living still in spite of dungeon, fire and sword." It is a vital thing for which others of us may yet be called upon to yield up our lives. In cold blood it may seem to us as though the courage would be lacking when the time came, but the grace of God would be sufficient.

Meanwhile we ask, "Shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them?"

Hearken to the answer: "I tell you that he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find the faith on the earth?" (Luke 18: 7, 8, R.V.).

As we have remarked before, let us thank God that we have as Secretary of State, a man who thinks clearly, speaks convincingly and is not afraid.

Russia Must Save Russia

Two or three months ago, a delegation of forty women from different states affiliated with the Women's International League for Peace, waited on Mr. Hughes to urge the United States to recognize the Soviet government, and were plainly told that it would not be recognized as long as it maintained its present policy of repudiation, confiscation and dissemination of revolutionary propaganda throughout the world. "Russia's hope," he said, "lies in Russia's action." Industry and trade cannot be created by political arrangement, and industry and trade are what Russia needs.

Following the first revolution in Russia we loaned that country nearly $200,000,000, and were the first to recognize the Kerensky government which was not a government of repudiation. But no sooner did the Soviet authorities come into power than they decreed that "unconditionally and without exception all foreign loans are annulled."

The United States is not seeking to press debtors, the Secretary said, but while indulgence is one thing, repudiation is another.

And even worse than repudiation is the efforts of the Soviet authorities to visit upon other peoples the disasters that have overwhelmed their own people. Only last November, Zinovier, a leader among them, said, "The eternal in the Russian revolution is the fact that it is the beginning of a world revolution."

"I desire to see evidences of the abandonment of that policy," said Mr. Hughes, and so do the rest of the sensible patriots of America.

We know nothing about Professor Einstein's theory of relativity except that which we read occasionally in the press, but we were unusually interested last month to read the statement of Captain See, U.S. Navy astronomer, denouncing Einstein as "an imitator and spreader of untenable theories." The occasion, as our readers may remember, was a report of Dr. Campbell, director of Lick observatory, that he had confirmed the Einstein theory so far as it concerned the bending of star rays. This bending of star rays it seems, was the theory of no less a scientist than Newton, and was confirmed by Von Soldner, a German physicist, one hundred and twenty-two years ago, whom Einstein does not mention.

"Relativity" and Evolution

However, laying aside the bending of the star rays, which is not disputed, Einstein's theory postulates that ether does not exist, and that gravity is not a force but a property of space, which Captain See characterizes as a "crazy vagary which scarcely requires mention, and the discussion of which is a disgrace to our age."

Our reason for speaking of it at all is merely to point out the parallel it furnishes to the "crazy vagaries" of some evolutionists so-called, the discussion of which is a similar "disgrace to our age."

We have in mind a recent editorial in a secular daily in which the writer boldly affirmed that "the theory of evolution is as generally accepted by men of science as the law of gravitation"! That editor would drive a car at forty miles an hour through a crowded thoroughfare; he has just about as much sense of responsibility for what he says. Had he never heard of Agassiz, or Dawson, or Huxley, or Tyndall, or Virchow, or Fleischman, or Bateson, or ever so many more real scientists, who, because of that fact, use restraint in their utterances? These men, most of them at least, may be classed as sympathetic towards evolution, perhaps hoping it may be true because it would rid the world of the disturbing doctrine of a personal God, but not one of them would say, or ever did say, that it was an accepted fact. Sir William Dawson declared it was "destitute of any shadow of proof"; Ernest Haeckel, until recently professor of zoology at Zenia, said, "It is an error and cannot be maintained"; and as late as 1914, Professor Bateson in his presidential address at the meeting of the British Association cautioned the scientific world that it was too early to form conclusions.

The editor we have in mind is particularly hard on Mr. Bryan for his opposition to this false theory. He thinks Mr. Bryan believes that the Bible should be used "as a text-book in geology, biology, astronomy, and ancient history, and that any facts conflicting with it should be suppressed by statutes.'

Is it not sad that the reading public should be treated to that kind of humbug in a city newspaper whose editor is supposed to be intelligent and sober?

The evangelical protest against the evolutionary hypothesis of the universe is bearing fruit, we are pleased to say, in an increasing number of the smaller denominational colleges. Not long ago attention was called in our pages to the prompt action of William Jewell College in dismissing a professor whose Bible teaching was warped by that delusion, and now we have information of another college of about the same size, or a little larger, which has taken similar action affecting more than one member of its faculty. In this instance no publicity was made of the matter because it was believed that the less discussion of it the better, but our authority for the statement is from headquarters. May the circulation of these facts have its effect in putting resolution and courage into the management of other educational institutions which ought to be ashamed for the lack of it.

Colleges Waking Up

A correspondent in British Columbia writes that the Anglo-Israel people are active in his locality, and asks us to say what is wrong in their system of teaching. In reply we would call his attention to a valuable work by the late John Wilkinson, of England, entitled Israel My Glory, one chapter of which is given up to the subject of the ten tribes, where they are and where they are not. He makes five points to show that the Anglo-Saxons are not the lost tribes:

Anglo-Israelism

"1. The people shall dwell alone and not be reckoned among the nations. This is true of the Jews, but not true of the Anglo-Saxons.

"2. Israel is to remain many days without king or prince, and without a true knowledge of God. The Anglo-Saxons are not in these circumstances.

"3. The twelve tribes, out of Palestine, are to be few in number, under national curse, and multiplied and no longer few when restored. But the Anglo-Saxons, though out of Palestine, are enjoying national blessing, and are not few in number.

"4. The penalty of uncircumcision is excision. The Anglo-Saxons are uncircumcised.

"5. The Anglo-Saxons are either saints or sinners; if saints, then detached (though Israelites) from the nation, and incorporated with the church; if sinners, then under the curse of the law. So that it will not do to urge the plea that because the Anglo-Saxons are nominally Christian, therefore they have escaped the curse of the law; for they can only escape that curse by true conversion, which detaches them from the nation and secures to them a heavenly calling and a heavenly inheritance.

"These five points, based on plain passages of Scripture, seem fairly and unanswerably to prove that if any people on the face of the earth are not Israelites, the Anglo-Saxons are not Israelites."

Recently we published an address by Rev. Dr. Conrad on "Modernism and the Minimum of Faith" in which he alluded to certain books he had found very helpful and which he earnestly recommended. So many inquiries have come to him for further information about the books that he asks us to say that they are: The Philosophical Basis of Theism, by Rev. Samuel Harris, D.D., published by Scribner; Growth of the Spirit of Christianity, by Rev. George Matheson, published by T. and T. Clark, Edinburgh, in two volumes; The Holy Spirit, the Dynamic of Christianity, by Rev. J. F. Edwards, D.D., of India, published by the Christian Publishing Company, of Bombay, but available at the Congregational Book Store, Boston.

Books Against Modernism

The last-named book is regarded by Dr. Conrad as one of the most important religious volumes published in the last decade.

To these books recommended by Dr. Conrad we would like to add Modern Religious Liberalism, by John Horsch, published by the Mennonite Publishing Company, Scottdale, Pa., and Christianity and Liberalism, by Professor J. Gresham Machen, published by The MacMillan Company. These and any of the above can be obtained through the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Letters have been received denouncing this organization and criticizing us for publishing Mr. Bradbury's article on the subject in our May issue.

Ku Klux Klan

The writers evidently think that we endorse everything our contributors say on the various subjects of which they treat, but that is a mistake. The contributions for which we assume that responsibility only are those over our own names, or which are found on our editorial pages. Our personal views on the Ku Klux Klan, for example, were expressed on page 240 of our February issue.

Moreover, the friends who are criticizing us seem to overlook that Mr. Bradbury is replying to an article denouncing the Klan, from the pen of Mr. Funderburk, which appeared in our March issue. We believe in giving our readers an opportunity to hear both sides of such a subject.

William Whiting Borden

The Faculty of the Moody Bible Institute recently took recognition of the tenth anniversary of the death of this noble and consecrated young man who in his life time had been a trustee of the Institute and was deeply interested in its work.

He had the advantages of large wealth and scholastic training, being a graduate of Yale and president of the Phi Beta Kappa society, and afterwards a graduate of Princeton Theological Seminary.

Choosing the gospel ministry as his life work, he was ordained in the Moody Church of this city, Rev. John Timothy Stone, D.D., and the editor-in-chief of this magazine participating in the service. After this, in December, 1912, he went to Egypt to prepare for work among the Moslems of China, and there while ministering to a brother missionary he was smitten by spinal meningitis, and died April 9, 1913, at the early age of twenty-eight.

The present writer knew him from his boyhood and also the rich heritage he possessed in a godly mother. He can testify to his clear conversion to Jesus Christ and to the love for souls which possessed him almost from the beginning of his new life, and which led him to turn his back on the more fashionable churches of Chicago to unite with the Moody Church, in whose atmosphere of evangelism his soul delighted. While at Yale he established and supported the Hope Mission in New Haven, and it was his expectation to continue that kind of work among the foreign peoples to whose salvation he had dedicated his life.

His early taking away from this earth is a mystery which only deepens as the years roll on, but it may be that the Lord would multiply his testimony and increase his fruitfulness by keeping fresh the remembrance of his name and his work in such ways as this throughout the length and breadth of Christendom.

We are grateful to learn that Mrs. Howard Taylor has a memoir of him in preparation.

Harry Moorehouse

In our January issue we mentioned that the daughter of this devoted servant of God was now living in London, poor, lonely, and crippled, seeking to earn a meager livelihood by her needle work, and we appealed for aid on her behalf.

It now gives us pleasure to say that we were recently able to send her a bank draft for 13£, 13s. Her representative writes us that there has been a very hearty response to the appeal from other quarters in this country, as well as her own land, proving that the ministry of her father is still remembered with appreciation.

All of Miss Moorehouse's liabilities have been discharged, and she is now in receipt of an allowance of 1£ per week, which in addition to the small income she earns will be a great help to her in the coming years. It is desired that her thanks and those of her friends on the other side be extended to our readers who were kind enough to contribute to the fund.

We Have Lost a Friend

Last April there died in West Terre Haute, Ind., a plain laboring man by the name of John Simpson, of whom his friends spoke as a true believer in the Lord Jesus Christ and one who was an enthusiastic friend of THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY. After reading the MONTHLY himself, he would pass it to a friend that he or she also might obtain the benefit of its contents. And frequently he started out as an unsolicited representative of the MONTHLY to secure subscribers among pastors and other Christian people of his town because he believed it would be such a blessing to them.

We are told that his life was a remarkable example of a man with very limited worldly resources raising a family of seven children in respectability and in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

We are glad thus to make mention of him.

"Shall Ministerial Standards Be Lowered?"

AN editorial in The Continent with the above title has been called to our attention with a suggestion for comment upon it to which we sympathetically respond.

The editor recognized that presbyteries welcome into the ministry men who receive training in other than theological seminaries, and he inquired what the latter ought to do. "Shall they accept men recommended by the presbyteries with inadequate preparation and do the best they can for them? Shall they find some way to prevent the lowering of their own standards of scholarship while giving these unprepared men their chance?"

The editor recognized also that sometimes men trained otherwise than in the seminaries are abler than such men, "make better records, and render equally good service," but he feared that "the mixing of college and non-college men in the same classrooms tends to lower the standard of instruction."

As to this last remark doubtless the editor knows whereof he speaks, but there is one training school of which we know, and we believe it is true of others, where the mixing of college and non-college men has proved of great blessing to the former as they gratefully testify. Nor has this mixing lowered their intellectual standards so far as we have been able to learn, while at the same time it has elevated their standards in other directions with positive value to their work as ministers of Christ. Moreover, we may be permitted to doubt whether all the presbyteries who now cordially accept men from such training schools would be equally cordial in accepting them from the seminaries even after the latter had done the best they could for them.

It implies no reflection upon seminaries to say that the training schools with which we are best acquainted give their students something which seminaries do not supply, and which for the most part they are unfitted to supply. It is hard to classify it, but seminary men who are also training school men understand it, and we think some presbyteries understand it and it explains why they welcome the training school men into the ministry as The Continent relates.

We thoroughly believe in the highest and best training for Christian ministers, promising only that if any part of such training is to suffer, it should not be the spiritual and the practical. The divine Founder of the church is our examplar here, who neglected the wisdom of the world in His own preparation for the ministry to which God called Him, and omitted it also from the curriculum of His twelve disciples. As Dr. Christopher Hazard, a Presbyterian clergyman, said recently in our pages, "It was evidently the divine purpose to depend entirely upon a spiritual rather than a literary fitness for teaching. The Saviour had in view an enduement of the Holy Spirit, the sure knowledge of spiritual experience, and the love of truth as He appointed the teachers of the great moral and spiritual simplicities."

We venture to offer a suggestion to The Continent. Let the seminaries continue as they are and the Bible training institutes also, for the church will continue to need the output of both. But there is one thing which the Bible institutes require if their graduates are to serve acceptably in Presbyterian pulpits or those of any other denomination, and that is a knowledge of the history and policy of the particular denomination which inspires loyalty to its standards, methods and aims. The Moody Bible Institute tries to supply this need through its Faculty which represents ten or a dozen different denominations, but it would be better pleased if the denominations sent their own accredited teachers in ecclesiology to its classrooms for the instruction of their own church groups. To some extent this has been done, but it might be done much more effectively, which leads us to conclude our editorial as that in The Continent concluded by saying: "There is obvious room here for more and clearer thinking than has yet been spent on the subject."

It Is the Blood That Maketh Atonement

A Sermon by Rev. Dinsdale T. Young, London, England, stenographically reported for the Moody Bible Institute Monthly

SOME people do not like to hear about blood. But let them resent it as they may, it must be continually brought before them. Some people do not like to hear about an atonement. There is a generation today in the churches that seem to think an atonement quite superficial. But we have not so learned the Bible or the gospel, and I bear you my personal witness tonight that the blood, the atonement, represents the center and secret and source of the Bible.

"It is the blood that maketh atonement" (Lev. 17:11).

I would allude, as I do on every text, to Bishop Wordsworth. He says: "This is the most important declaration." So it is. I cannot imagine a more important declaration. If it is true, it is transcendently important. If it is not true, it is the blackest lie that was ever palmed off on credulous people.

I

How does the blood make atonement? First, it maketh atonement symbolically. This was symbolical blood. It was the blood of the beast, but it was the type of other blood. "It is not possible for the blood of bulls and of goats to take away sin." They cannot of themselves make atonement. It was a symbolical atonement.

Have you read this book of Leviticus? I do not think it is quite superfluous to ask that of busy people. A gentleman told me he had never read the book of Leviticus. The so-called higher critics have no idea of its importance.

You say, Why do you emphasize that question? Because it is symbolical of many things, chiefly of the atonement. What does it mean? All the time the writer is thinking of other blood—shall I try to say it?—God's blood. I read in this wondrous book of the Old Testament time of another atonement, a greater atonement, one to which this is a feeble and sordid type, but an atonement which we must have. It is symbolical that the blood made atonement.

Suppose some one said, "If I take your advice and read this book of Leviticus, how shall I understand it?" Turn to the epistle to the Hebrews, and that is the explanation. There you will see that the blood of beasts that flowed red and was atonement was a symbol of the precious blood of Christ. And it is all gathered up into one pithy, God-breathed expression in that wonderful epistle: "It was not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sin," but Christ came with His own blood.

That is the higher reading of this text of mine. When the Israelite saw this blood in the same sense, repellent blood, he knew, if he was instructed, that that blood was the type of the blood that was destined to be blood divine, and that that atonement which he received symbolically through the blood of the animal, was the type of a glorious atonement, a glorious reconciliation between God and man. The blood of Christ. It is the blood that maketh the atonement symbolic.

It is a wonderful thing that God symbolizes Jesus before He sheds His blood as atonement. Read the sacrifices; if you do not read them as types you do not understand the real. They are pictures—living pictures if you like—a kind of kindergarten on the subject of redemption. The children of that age were the children of symbolism.

I want to say next, it is the blood that maketh atonement sufficiently.

You know as well as I that there are schools of theology that will not have an atonement. Some say, "Do you go to Wesleyan Central Hall? Oh, they are behind the times—they preach an atonement of blood. How can intelligent people believe it?"

It is God's Word. Do you believe this is God's Word? I do, or I would sooner earn my living in another way than preach it. I accept it as the message of the everlasting God to the poor, sinful work of His hand.

II

If some say, "Why should God demand an atonement for sin?" I will tell you what my answer is. To be perfectly frank, I haven't a right to know. What right have I to be in God's counsel?

There is much today of bringing God to our bar and wanting to know the rationale of all God does. The omnipotence, the sovereignty, of God has been replaced. People think God should not do anything without explaining to them. What a fatuous attitude! Is God to explain everything to them? God has not such an opinion of their vast intellect.

God is a sovereign, and He has been pleased to lay down this law and to enforce it as a sovereign decree. We may criticize, but if He does what He will in the armies of heaven and earth, if He doesn't give an account of His ways, we are bound to accept His sovereignty.

I am not going to reject the atonement by blood because I cannot understand it. I accept it because God has declared it. This word runs like a red thread all through the Bible, "It is the blood that maketh atonement."

Why blood at all? He doesn't explain. Why atonement at all? He doesn't satisfy our query, but He lays down this law. Somehow or other, humanity has got wrong, and it can only be put right by sacrifice that takes the form of blood. God says, "I will let nobody into heaven except on those terms. You must be partakers of faith in the atonement. You will have to bend your intellect and your pride. You cannot go to heaven as a philosopher, as a saint, but only as a sinner pardoned through the atonement."

That does not suit some grandees. They avoid it. But I stand where I have stood from my childhood, and I have been preaching for forty years.

A man sent me a paper the other day (and I get many different papers sent me). He said he was astonished to find that when I preach the gospel I am "so cock-sure about it"!

I am "cock-sure" about it. There are a hundred things I am not sure about, but there is one thing I am sure about, and that is that it is the blood that maketh atonement. And it is only as we trust the atonement that God saves us. I am sure of that. I preach that with an emphasis that makes no mitigation

I call you to admire what you cannot fully understand—that the sovereign love should have chosen such a way of winning souls. If He had made an intellectual condition, that would have shut out multitudes. If He had made a moral condition, that would have shut out multitudes. But now there is an objective atonement of the blood shed, and only as you accept that shall you be saved to all eternity—not reformation, not resolution, not confirmation, not orthodoxy. The blood, the precious blood, of which the blood that flowed from the Levitical altars of old was a type.

III

Then I go on to say it was the blood that made atonement for all sin. That is the gospel.

Some people say, "What a narrow view!" That is the plan. There is only one way. Any one suggesting there is another way is a murderer of the soul.

Without shedding of blood there is no remission. Can you alter that? No, blessed be God, there are many who would not like it to be altered—for a thousand worlds we would not.

When God calls us we shall be where our thoughts have been. At the moment of calling we shall trust the atoning blood scale the heights of glory, and be forever with the Lord.

Oh, dear people, isn't that beneficent! Think of the wonder of it, that the blood, and that alone, makes atonement!

What a mercy we have not to seek to make atonement for our sin. We do not have to do anything to make atonement.

Speaking to you as man to man, if I had to fashion atonement I should perish. But He has done it. What I could not dream of attempting He has instituted.

Think of it! Think of God's wrath, the curse of sin! I cannot imagine how some people can take the light view of sin they do. It is the tragedy of our modern theology, modern preaching, what some people are teaching on the subject, that sin is a defensible sort of thing.

What is sin? Rebellion against God's will. "Thou shalt not commit adultery." If one does, he goes right in the teeth of God's will. "Love thy neighbor as thyself." If a man does not, he goes right in the teeth of God's commandment. "Thou shalt not covet." If a man does, he deliberately refuses God's will. "Thou shalt not steal." Not in any shape or form, not even by the plausible method of betting and gambling. If you do, you resist God's will.

Now can that be a light thing? That is sin. What a terrible thing sin is! Sometimes when I go out of this hall I say, "Would God I could make those dear people understand and see what a terrible thing sin is!"

Spurgeon used to say he constantly went to the Tabernacle saying, "If these people are to see what a dreadful thing sin is I cannot do it, O Lord, only Thy Spirit can do it."

What a dreadful thing! Blood had to be shed. God's own blood, well nigh two thousand years ago. Who would have thought that the blood of the Creator would redeem the one He created. That precious blood shed was made to be the atonement, and God, who hates sin, accepts that atonement.

No wonder the people do not tire of hearing the old gospel. If I preached on politics, what a wearying subject that would be. Haven't you had enough during the last week? Won't you have enough next week?

If I preached on some of the subjects I see announced in some churches, which are not on the realities, small subjects!

But what a tremendous subject we have. Oh, what sins are mine! In my quiet moments I feel what a dreadful thing it is. When a man is brought face to face with death and eternity he knows that these things are true. He ventures all on the fact of these things.

Isn't it marvelous to have it to think of! I want no other task than to proclaim this—"It is the blood that maketh atonement."

Can all this load of sin be forgiven? Yes! Now I do not wonder that the old men I used to hear shouted so. They would be carried away. They tell me now the preachers are too quiet. You cannot preach quietly on these things. There is a shout and an ecstasy in it. Much as God hates sin, if you were the blackest sinner in London the blood makes atonement!

Think what a blessed thing that is from another point of view. Think of the hidden sin and of the punishment that God attaches to sin. There is an inner feeling that there must be a punishment for sin. Talk about being a philosopher, isn't it philosophy to say that sin, being a rebellion against sovereign will, must have a punishment?

Then when I open the Book, I find God's revelation. Oh, what a revelation there is in the Bible of the power of sin! A terrible revelation!

They say that people do not believe in hell now. You must if you believe this book. And you may gloss it over as you like, but it is a terrible thing to fall into the hands of the living God unless you have accepted the atonement. You are in prodigious danger if you are trusting for all the guilt that lies on you in anything but the blood that maketh atonement.

Just think what it means to be taken with such a burden of guilt. Try to think what it would mean to refuse the gospel. A man may talk as well as he likes, but I cannot believe it, though he tries to persuade me that it matters very little whether I accept the gospel or not. It must matter everything. If you are treating the gospel of atonement lightly and putting religion in a secondary place, you are making a terrible mistake. Life will be over before you are aware, and then nothing can deliver you.

I warn you by the blood that maketh atonement for your soul; I would urge you all by saying here is God's remedy for your soul. Tonight to the unbeliever I would say, "Here is good news for you—the blood makes atonement for everyone. If you accept, all the darkness may be taken away from you and you may have reconciliation to God.

Is not that a glorious gospel to preach? I simply revel in it. Notice, God makes the atonement the gateway of all blessing.

IV

What is the use of the atonement? How can you have any blessing with the atonement? I preach the atonement because it will transform your life. Once let a man get this truth into his soul, that it is the blood that maketh atonement, and how it will strengthen it, cleanse it, humble it, and drive the Devil out of a soul! The secret of abundant life is in the blood.

Hudson Taylor says, "the divine application of the doctrine of atonement changed the whole life for Hudson Taylor." And it has for many more—the definite reception of the atoning blood of Christ. Shall we accept it tonight?

One other word. It is the blood that maketh atonement immediately. My text is in the present tense. It is the blood that maketh atonement now.

You say, "If you believe that, I do not wonder you have peace and joy." You need not wonder. If you take the wonder of the atoning blood, you have justification and peace with God and joy in God.

"Can I have the blessing tonight?" You can have it now.

And you Christians who have been losing your evangelical tone and your thirst for holiness, come back to the atoning blood and you will get a new empowerment. I do not know how people can pray except through the medium of the atoning blood. You come apart to get power to serve.

What is the secret of your inspiration, you who are living for others? It is His blood which was shed for you, having nerved you for enduring service for your Master. That is the blessed truth we are dwelling upon tonight.

I will end by saying this—you have an immediate glorious hope for eternity. You do not wonder that some make much of the Lord's Supper and the hymns on atonement, and that some of the happiest people you have known have died pleading the atonement.

Have they gone through the mystic gates with any other plea? No! And you dare not. I challenge myself, and you, to dare to knock at heaven's door except because we know this, that it is the blood that maketh atonement.

MURDER STILL ON THE INCREASE

Dr. Hoffman, the statistician, has just published his annual report on homicides in American cities. It is a depressing chronicle.

"Despite deterrent influences, criminal homicide continues to increase in the United States. In twenty-eight cities the annual rate of murder rose from 8.5 for each 100,000 population in 1920 to 9.3 in the last year.

"Chicago has more murders every year than has all England. Indianapolis has more murders than has London. Many northern cities are retrogressing morally or administratively, for their murder rates are increasing.

"If alcohol and alien undesirables of criminal or semi-criminal habits accounted in other years for a very considerable proportion of the murders, as not a few persons formerly contended, the effects of prohibition and of the present restrictive immigration law should have been reflected in the latest homicide figures. No such effects are discernible. The war was supposed to have weakened certain moral inhibitions and to have popularized summary resort to violence; but the war ended four years ago and murder was steadily increasing in the years previous to 1914. Some constant cause is operating in America that has not been properly studied and successfully combated."—Chicago Daily News.

A GREAT CHURCH IN WASHINGTON CITY

In Washington City the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church and the Church of the Covenant are negotiating a union. The former is a historic organization in which many presidents have held membership. The latter is a younger organization which has had only two pastors. Should the two congregations unite, they would form not only the largest church in the capital, but one of the largest in the entire United States. The plan of union will have to be ratified by the two congregations, and then by the presbytery before it would become effective.

Nature Stirs the Poet's Heart

THE DAYS ARE BRIGHT WITH SUNSHINE

By Fred Scott Shepard, Toronto, Ont.

The days are bright with sunshine,
Life's blessings all are ours;
There's gladness in the springtime,
There's beauty in the flowers;
Why then have fear? God's love is here
And fills with grace the hours.

The fields yield bounteous harvests,
The earth abundant store;
The blessings of the Father
All nature doth outpour;
Why doubting be? Look up and see
God's mercies hovering o'er.

With thankful hearts adore Him,
The Giver of all good;
Yield homage to His greatness,
As doth the field and wood;
Your voices raise in grateful praise
For daily care and food.

THE FROZEN OAK

By Lida E. Voight, Urbana, Ill.

His form ensheathed in glittering ice,
The oak swayed to and fro,
The rhythm of his evening hymn
Labored and slow.
"My limbs are ice, my heart is cold,"
He cried, with sighing breath,
"And I, imprisoned and alone,
Await my death."

The morning came with kindly warmth,
The sun smiled on the tree,
The sheath of ice that chilled his soul
Melted and left him free.
His heart leapt with returning life,
He swayed with joyous grace;
The requiem hymn of yesterday.
Became a hymn of praise.

And so a soul, oppressed with grief,
With loneliness and pain,
By love's warm smile and healing touch,
May yet rejoice again.

A BIRD ON THE WING

By Louise Friend Stephens, Downer's Grove, Ill.

A bird on the wing, in its homeward flight
Was tossed by a fearsome gale,
It battled a time 'gainst storm and fright,
And strove with its wings so frail.

It made little progress, was backward blown,
I feared lest its fight be lost
So helpless it seemed, so all alone
As in wind and rain 'twas tossed.

But, wise little bird, it spread its wings
And up into heaven's blue
Past storm cloud and buffet of winds,
It sailed, unafraid, straight through.

So we, past the troubles and storm of life,
May rise on the wings of prayer,
And before God's throne, where is peace and light,
Find comfort and courage there.

A STORM AT SEA

By Lereine Ballantyne, Weston, Ont.

High rode the waves across
The wind-tossed sea:
A storm broke o'er the night
With breakers on the lea.
Battling o'er each white crest
Timid alone and small,
A poor soul struggled to Life's last great Port o' Call.

Spirits of darkness screeched
Over the battered bark;
The boom of wave and thunder
Broke deafening through the dark.
No oar was left or sail,
The rigging gone and all—
Naught, naught to guide it home
To life's last Port o' Call.

Naught save the hope of faith:
Faith, tense, firm and serene—
Night's spirits shrieked in vain
Upon the wave-slashed scene.
Faith—and the Pilot heard
O'er rock-bound breaker wall,
And brought the lone craft home
To life's last Port o' Call.

A MOUNTAIN TOP EXPERIENCE

By Claude E. Hawkey, Chicago, Ill.

I was standing on a mountain
In the State of Washington,
My head was bare, my feet upon a rock;
Before me all in solitude
Lay nature's broad expanse,
Extending like an arid region block.

From the top of this great mountain
In that rocky mountain state,
Are scenes that thrill the soul
And stir the human blood;
The Creator did great work there
In the ages that are past;
I wonder did it stand there
Since the flood?

See these mountains, and their timber,
The valley and the plain;
How majestic, mighty, wonderful
Man's words cannot explain.
A voice was speaking to me
From the realms of far away,
Speaking gently of a country
Where the saints in glory stay.

'Mid the quiet and the solitude
Of this great lonely hill,
God's voice was gently wooing me
Where everything was still;
Man cannot in scenes like this
Resist the call divine;
God is mighty, God is Spirit,
O, may I call Him mine?

With snow shoes on my feet
And rifle in my hand,
I walked slowly down the mountain
To a plainer looking land;
But my thoughts were far above
In the mountains all alone;
I was thinking—if such scenes
Are made of earth and stone,
Then what must be the glory
Near the everlasting throne!

The Gospel the Power of God Unto Salvation

A Missionary Address at Founder's Week Conference, in the Moody Bible Institute, by Rev. Maurice Frater, Missionary to the New Hebrides

THREE weeks ago I arrived in America from the South Sea Islands. On my way across the Atlantic a gentleman said to me, "Why do you go to the cannibal islands when there is so much to be done in America, for after all does the gospel make any great impression upon the people of the New Hebrides?"

Well, my dear friends, I am come from those far distant islands to tell you that the money you give and the prayers you offer for foreign missions are not in vain; that the gospel today in the New Hebrides is what it was in St. Paul's day, "The power of God unto salvation."

Three Men in a Boat

Some years ago, my neighbor in the islands, Mr. Bowen was out in a whale boat traveling from a bluff at one point to another further up the coast. At that time the island of Ambirr was a heathen island, and when he wishes to travel from place to place, he had to employ heathen men. When they were a considerable distance out from the beach a gust of wind from the hills capsized the boat and left Mr. Bowen and the three heathen boatmen struggling in the water. Two of the men could swim, but the third could not. Mr. Bowen himself was a strong swimmer. The moment the boat capsized the two men who could swim at once made for the beach without paying any attention to the friend who could not swim, or to Mr. Bowen. Mr. Bowen got hold of the man who could not swim and brought him to the beach. On arriving at the beach, Mr. Bowen was so overcome with exhaustion that he fell on the sand and lay there for a long time. The man whom he rescued—what do you think he did, or rather said? He looked at Mr. Bowen as he lay on the sand, and said, "Oh, in a short time you will be all right," and went away and left him!

That is typical of the heathen heart. No love, no pity, no compassion, but when the Lord Jesus Christ comes into the heathen heart He makes a great difference. He lifts these people from the ground and turns their faces heavenward.

Three Other Men in a Boat

Some years ago, before I got my motor boat, I was traveling in my whale boat from the island of Tongoa to one of the out stations to have the Lord's Supper with the converts on the island. It so happened that a strong wind was blowing and a heavy sea running. I had with me three Christian natives, and when a considerable distance out from land, a gust of wind capsized the boat and left me and them struggling in the water.

At the time the boat capsized my right arm was jammed and I was unable to use it. Now if these Christian natives had treated me in the same manner as the heathen natives treated Mr. Bowen I would have been in a nasty fix, but they stuck to me and proved what the gospel could do. They struggled on for some time to reach the beach by swimming, but the tide was too strong and was steadily taking us out to sea. When I saw we could make nothing of it by swimming I told the natives to abandon all effort and preserve our strength for floating, if necessary.

Fortunately, one man up in the hills saw the boat capsize. He ran down to the beach, rang the church bell and collected a crowd of natives, and they launched another boat and came out to pick us up.

We were in the water altogether about an hour, but what I want to emphasize is the great change the gospel makes in the people of the New Hebrides. When you hear some people say as they do, that it is no use sending missionaries to India, or Africa, or China, or to the South Sea Islands, tell them from one who has been there and who has seen the great change that the gospel makes, that the gospel is indeed the power of God unto salvation.

Facing an Unknown Venture

It was in October, 1900, that Mrs. Frater and I landed on the beach of Tongoa, one of the islands of the New Hebrides, not without a few misgivings, amongst a large crowd of people, some clothed, some naked, but all considerate and ready to help, as with many shoutings they carried our goods over the shingle and black sand.

On the following day the boats finished their work, and as the mission steamer left we were, like many before us, to face a new and unknown venture, and to try to aid in solving the problem which had already cost many a life and many a tear.

Himene Singers of the South Sea Isles. They sing and chant the legends of the Islands, telling of adventures at sea, and of the ways of the gods and demons. The man at the left is decorated with a costume of human hair—now very rare.

Tongoa, the island on which I have my out station, is one of the smallest and one of the loveliest of the New Hebrides group. The soil is deep and fertile, and from the tops of the mountains down to the water's edge, the ground is covered with luxuriant vegetation of the tropics.

The natives were very superstitious. They believed in the great Creator, who made all things, but they did not worship him, nor did they consider him worthy of praise and worship. He was too far away. He did not concern himself about them. They had images made out of wood, some like themselves, others like animals, and these were their gods. They trusted them to protect them from sickness, death, and disaster. They believed in witchcraft and to it attributed all evil and misfortune. If any one was sick they sent for the witch doctors who with many incantations drove out the evil spirit or pointed to some person, the witch, or the cause of the mischief.

One of the islands is very much larger, and on it there is an active volcano. The people believe an evil spirit dwells within this volcano, and every time an eruption takes place, imagine the evil spirit is angry with them, so they send a bag of cocoanuts to the rim of the crater, about 5,000 feet high, and put them in as a peace offering. This is about the only god of which the people of the New Hebrides take cognizance.

No one can come into contact with heathen lands or with primitive conditions in any part of the non-Christian world without being conscious of the over-shadowing power of the past. The tyranny and customs of the past still reign victorious in the heathen state. Under such conditions reformation is impossible unless a new and life-giving breath of high inspiration comes to quicken the dead.

Dear friends, the gospel of Christ Jesus brings new thoughts, new ideals, new hopes. The gospel of Christ can do what nothing else can accomplish. It can make alive; it can renew and transform a man no matter what may have been his nature, or however discouraging his surroundings.

Twenty-two years have passed since Mrs. Frater and I went out to those islands. They have been bright and happy years, and we have been privileged to behold great and striking changes amongst the people. We have seen how they have been enriched after leaving erroneous heathenism and coming under the influence of the gospel.

Now a great deal of the success which has accompanied our efforts is due to the native teachers, and more especially to one or two outstanding men, who have come out boldly on the side of Jesus Christ, and confronted all opposition.

The Wonderful Conversion of a Chief

There was Apa, one of the foremost fighting men. He bore a name that was known all over the island. He wandered about without a particle of clothing. He had no respect for life or property. All his time he spent in the perpetration of wicked acts. But one day Apa, came under the influence of the gospel of Christ, and the heathen chief who would yield to no power on his native island, yielded himself to Jesus Christ, and a new vision filled his heart, and we witnessed the greatest change that can take place in human life. The lion became the lamb.

After Apa's conversion he usually accompanied me on my tours amongst the heathen villages. One evening we arrived at the village of Lulu, when he came to me, and from the slow, hesitating way in which he began to speak, I knew something was in the way.

He confessed that he was afraid to accompany me the following day to Lu-Natano, one of the villages which he had raided in his heathen days. The people had threatened vengeance, and he was afraid that at last he would fall into their hands. His friends tried to persuade him not to accompany me; he had done so thus far, but now he was afraid.

This, however, made me more anxious to have him accompany me, and procure if possible, a reconciliation between the two tribes. So, before retiring for the night I made arrangements with the chief of Lulu to accompany us on the following day, by his presence securing for us a favorable reception.

As soon as we approached the confines of Lu-Natano I noticed that the methods of Apa became very strange. He watched every rock, every tree and shrub where an enemy might be concealed, dodging from tree to tree, and examining all around before he made the next. His movements reminded me of the time when he himself used to hunt his fellow islanders. Like the savage on the war path he had simply reasoned out that everybody was his deadly enemy lying in wait for him.

His quick eye detected the head of a foe appearing above the tall grass not fifty yards away as he was preparing to fire. He got under the shelter of a tree and shouted to his enemy that he had stopped fighting, and was going with the missionary now to tell about the true God.

So saying, he sprang aside from the shelter of the tree and told his enemy to fire if he wished to kill him.

But there is honor even in savages, and he refused to fire, and was preparing to retire in the thickness of the bush. The chief of Lulu called him to come forth, and there stood in front of us a wild, bright, savage cannibal with white feathers in his hair, beads jangling on his naked breast and arms, and an old blunderbus in the crook of his arm, looking the typical savage of the South Sea islander.

Apa sprang forward and shook hands. A reconciliation was made between the two chiefs and with thankful hearts we proceeded to the village of Lu-Natano.

There were only two men in evidence when we reached it. That is the manner in which natives usually express their dissatisfaction with unwelcome visitors.

However, news is circulated amongst them, and it is not long until they begin to put in an appearance. In the meantime, I unfolded a roll of pictures and began to talk to the people. One by one they came in from their hiding places and stood in amazement looking at the pictures.

I was given a great opportunity of telling them of the blood which cleanses from all sin and of the great God who made them, and how He sent His Son into this world to take away our evil hearts and give us new ones.

At the close of the informal service it was pathetical to see Apa shake hands all around with his former enemies, and from that day to this he is a constant visitor at that village, telling out the old, old story of a Saviour's love.

Mattai the Cannibal Terror

I wonder if any one present in this meeting finds it difficult to believe in the transforming power of the gospel? Let him visit a heathen village where the Word of God has not been proclaimed and compare it with one where the people have accepted Jesus, and he will be surprised at the difference between the two. Let him hear the drums going all night to drive away the evil spirits, and the wailing when death has occurred. Let him see the indecent dances, and realize the fear and superstition and the awful moral and spiritual darkness of the people. Let him see this, and compare it with a village where the people have accepted Jesus, and he will no longer doubt the power of the gospel to save and to redeem the basest of men.

Dear friends, the old gospel is as competent and as true to its transforming record in the New Hebrides today, as it was in the days of the apostle Paul. The wonderful story of Paul's conversion on the way to Damascus can be duplicated in the history of mission efforts today.

The native teacher was once proclaiming the immediate, perfect, eternal salvation, to a group of countrymen, and the terror of the neighborhood passed by, a bold, ribald, leader in all iniquity. He paused and listened to that wondrous message and it reached his heart. There and then he accepted Jesus as his Saviour and went home to close his saloon of crime, and abandoned forever his past life. Since then Mattai has been one of the most faithful converts in proclaiming the gospel.

But perhaps one of the most impressive evidences of the change which had come upon Mattai and his fellow villagers is the appearance of the public square where in heathen days they had their iniquitous feasts and reveled in their hateful dances. Now the ground is covered with a sward of green grass and in the center, where once stood the altar of stones for sacrifice, now stands a Christian church.

Mattai is indeed one of our most splendid examples of the transforming power of the gospel. His religion like his general character is simple and transparent.

In the New Hebrides, as everywhere else, the witness of character is proving an eloquent testimony to the power of the gospel. The cause is hidden but the effect is evident and the heathen feel that definite power behind it. A good life is an argument for Christianity that can never be misunderstood. There is no answer to a heathen mind like the life of Christ displayed by a living, loving Christian. Nothing puts evil and sin more to shame than a humble quiet, consistent life, definitely displayed before their own kindred. The foreign missionary worker can do much by his own influence and by the power of his own life and example; but when they behold in one of their own race a religion which transforms the outward conduct, which makes the actions considerate and deliberate, then they have a living argument for the truth of that Christianity which can neither be misunderstood nor misstated.

Alimalu's Dying Testimony

Many of our converts from whose lives you would find it difficult to construct an apology for Christianity, are just those whom we regard as the most striking witnesses of the gospel. Some time ago I was called to see an old man, lying in the extremity of weakness. I sat beside him and in the flickering light of the candle I beheld his face withered and indelibly stamped with the marks of cannibalism, and I listened to his expressions of faith in Christ as his Saviour, and I thought that in him God was reflected with more transcendent glory than in many others. As soon as I entered I saw he was dying, and I said to him,

"Alimalu, you are dying; in the presence of death what is your hope?"

And, he looking as if at some invisible presence answered,

"I am trusting Thee, Lord Jesus." It is the power of God unto salvation not only to you favored people, but to the cannibal of the New Hebrides.

Feasting on Their Guests

Years ago, before there was a mission work among the people on the island of Api, a party of some twenty natives set sail in two canoes from the south end of the island to visit friends in the north who lived on the little island of Mallicollo, where we now have a mission station. They received them with the greatest friendliness, and they were entertained with that open-handed generosity which is so characteristic a feature of tribal history.

A week was spent in feasting, and at the end the visitors departed with a varied assortment of island gifts. The two canoes left the beach with every indication of the greatest friendliness existing between the two.

A choppy sea was breaking on the coral reef which surrounds the islands, and in attempting to ride the breakers both were upset and the occupants thrown into the sea.

The natives were unable to right the canoes and the whole party started to swim ashore. Their helpless plight did not awaken any feeling of pity in their brothers on the shore. On the contrary, when they saw the helpless condition of the men they prepared to attack them.

It is an unwritten covenant among savage races that shipwrecked people are fair game for the tribes into whose hands they fall. In attacking their friends they thought they were simply playing the rules of the game.

Seized with a sudden frenzy they fled for their tomahawks, and clubbed the visitors as they attempted to swim ashore. Not a single one reached the beach in safety. Every man, woman, and child was killed, and the boats taken ashore to prolong through another week the cannibal feast.

Your feelings are shocked by the recital of such a tale, and you wonder if true believing Christians can be turned out of such raw material, but, dear friends, the gospel makes great changes. The preaching and teaching of the Word of God is speedily transforming the island and in place of the old savage with waving plume and painted bodied, we now have communities where the peace of God holds sway.

You cannot live in that little island amongst them without feeling what a vital thing religion is. The presence of Christ today is strong to change wild cannibal people into a God fearing community.

The contrast between the Tongoa island of past days and the Tongoa of today is the best witness to the presence of the Spirit. The heathen soul was imprisoned in a vast net work of superstition and ignorance. The gospel entered and this is what took place: slowly and gradually the soul shed its ignorance and superstition and advanced into the higher and better life. Instead of running away from God they sought Him and found Him. Conversion took place and they became Christians. They are not perfect by any means, but Christians with failings like ourselves.

The utter difference between the people of today and past days, and that which produced this amazing metamorphosis is the Word of God. There is no such thing as conversion apart from the Word of God. The good seed of the kingdom may remain a long time in the soil, but its life giving properties are at work. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation.

A Missionary's Funeral

With one other illustration I conclude. The same striking illustration of the transforming power of the gospel is seen in the opening and closing scenes of the missionary labors of my friend, the Rev. Mr. Mills, who died a few years ago on the island of Api.

At the time of his settlement on the island, Henry Drummond, of Scotland, who was making a tour for geological purposes was present, and made the following note: "An awful crowd of savages surrounded us. All were naked, and carried muskets cocked. Hundreds had been killed on these islands for cannibal feasts."

The closing scenes in Mr. Mills' life revealed a very different picture. He died suddenly and unexpectedly. Very few knew anything except that he was ill with malarial fever. But news is not long in traveling with us. From village to village the sad news was carried, and next morning all the people from the surrounding villages arrived, anxious to show their love and esteem for their teacher and friend.

They were allowed a last look at the missionary, and as they filed past the coffin, even the roughest and strongest amongst them gave vent to their grief in violent and heart-filling sobs.

The funeral was held on the following day, a solemn and impressive sight, but also triumphant. The coffin was piled high with flowers of the forest, and as the native teachers lowered the body into the grave, one could not but feel as he looked around on that sea of sad, sad, faces that Mr. Mills' work indeed had been crowned with rich and glorious blessing.

Multitudes of those who stood around the coffin only a few years before were naked savages, cannibals, but now they could look beyond the grave to a home prepared for all those who love the Saviour.

The Kingdom in Parable and Apocalypse

By Ernest Gordon, New Hampton, N. H.

VARIOUS early commentators in Holland and Germany, notably Vitringa, following the Fratricelli, or Spiritual Franciscans, of an earlier day, believed that in the parables of the thirteenth of Matthew and in the epistles to the seven churches were to be found intimations of the general movement of the history of the church between the first and second coming of Christ. These interpretations varied naturally, yet their trend was in much the same direction.

The prophecies of the Old Testament had usually a primary meaning having to do with contemporary happenings and a secondary one that was predictive. There is no reason why this should not be the case in New Testament literature as well; why there should not be a thread of prophecy running through the seven epistles along side of its purely ethical and spiritual teaching. Indeed, we seem to have warrant for believing this in the title with which the Apocalypse opens; the Revelation, or unveiling, of things shortly to come to pass.

The White Period of Christian History

It is to be noted that the parables as well as the epistles are seven in number—the number which in the Scriptures stands for completeness, as for example in the seven petitions of the Lord's prayer, in the seven characterizations of the Spirit of Jehovah in Isaiah 11 and in the seven graces of Roman 12. In other words we have here a view of the whole period of Christian history.

I

The present writer's tentative interpretation is along the following lines:

The sower of the first parable is clearly our Lord. He came to Israel, His fig tree, seeking fruit and found none. So He made a fresh beginning, scattering, with His chosen apostles, the seed broadcast throughout the earth.

The era of seed-sowing was followed by that of the tares, the two centuries of heresies in which every type and form of unbelief and misbelief which have troubled the church in susbequent centuries came to the surface and sprouted. They will mark the present evil age to the end (v. 40) and are certainly characteristic enough of our own time with its archaic "modernisms."

The epoch of the mustard tree follows, which was the least of herbs yet took on the abnormal form of a great tree. Our Lord apparently had the great tree of the Babylonian king in mind which reached to heaven "and the fowls of the air dwelt in the boughs thereof and all flesh was fed of it" (Dan. 4:12, cf Ezek. 31). We have in this parable the motif of Babylon coming suddenly into Christian history. Christianity is being transmuted by Constantine's patronage into a neo-paganism. The humble and useful garden vegetable (lachanon) has become a tree in which the birds lodge. These birds destroyed the good seed of the kingdom in the first parable. They were its avowed enemies. Now they are sheltered in the church itself.

What Leaven Stands For

When we come to the parable of the leaven we find the same allusion carried further. The ferment of paganism had penetrated the whole lump.*

This leaven is not the pure teaching of Christ—leaven never means anything of the sort. It is the leaven of the Pharisee, formalism; of the Sadducee, hard scepticism; of the Herodian, Erastianism, union of church and state, political religion; the leaven of malice and wickedness, kakeias kai ponerias (1 Cor. 5:8), so offensive in its moral uncleanness that it is characterized with the same words that are used of the botch which fell on the wretched worshipers of the beast, "noisome and grievous," kakon kai poneron, (Rev. 16:2). And this is that with which the church of Christ was saturated and supersaturated to the point of unrecognizability for a dozen medieval centuries.

What is the treasure hidden in the field? The genuine Christianity which persisted under the surface during all these centuries? Perhaps. Or, is reference made to the joyous recovery of the Scriptures at the close of the medieval night?

This and the subsequent parable of the Pearl of Great Price are both redolent of the Reformation morning—the scent of dawn.

The "one pearl of great price" I like to think of as justification by faith, the one and only way of salvation, bought with the priceless price of Christ's death.

Fishing With a Seine

And the Reformation debouches into the modern missionary movement. This is indeed like a net, sagene, the very word is our English "seine" the vast sweep of which passes through the ocean for miles gathering into itself from all corners of the sea.

What a picture of the great movement going out from the Reformation nations at the present time into China and India, Africa and South America and the archipelagoes! I will make you fishers of men. In the twentieth century the church is fishing with a seine and on a world scale.

The kingdom of heaven is like unto a net that was cast into the sea of nations, for the sea in Jewish symbology typifies the restless nations of the Gentiles. Then comes in verse 49 the end of the age with its judgments.

II

A similar historical sequence can be traced in the epistles to the seven churches.

The church of Ephesus is "the higher, holier, earlier, purer church," primitive Christianity with its "labor and patience and good works," a lovely lily rising out of the black swamp of paganism. It is the church which Uhlhorn describes with thrilling detail in his Conflict of Paganism with Christianity, the church whose motto might well have been the words of Paul to the Ephesian elders: "Remember the words of our Lord Jesus how He said it is more blessed to give than to receive." Yet the church whose first love is beginning to chill.* *

The church of Smyrna is unmistakably the church of the martyrs. Its angel or leader was, as a matter of fact, Polycarp himself who was burned in the Smyrna amphitheater, Jews vying with pagans in heaping wood on the pyre. "Ten days" is the time of tribulation, perhaps the ten persecutions of pagan Rome as many deem them to mean.

Pergamos the Half Way Station

The epistle to Pergamos corresponds to the Parable of the Mustard Tree in the Matthew cyclus. Pergamos was the throne (rather than seat) of Satan.

It is a curious fact that this city was the half-way station between Babylon and Rome. A contingent of the Chaldean priestly caste which left Babylon when it fell into Persian hands because of their antipathy to Persian monotheism, established itself in Pergamos. When Attalus III, of Pergamos, died he bequeathed his royal priesthood and vast wealth to Rome. Pergamos is, therefore, peculiarly fitted by its history to represent the paganizing of Christianity which marked the Constantinean era.

Thyatira was the church of Jezebel, and Jezebel was the persecutor of prophets, the licentious patroness of Baal worship, the fitting type consequently of the merciless medieval papacy, saturated with inherited paganism. Yet in its borders was still a little remnant, "the rest in Thyatira," which "have not known the depths of Satan."

This survived through the succeeding era of the church of Sardis and was the only redeeming element in that moribund church. Christianity had during the centuries immediately preceding the Reformation a name of living but it was thrice dead save for the few which had not defiled their garments. They were the hid treasure in God's field—the trickling stream of Christian life which came down through the medieval centuries, breaking out now and then in personalities like Arnold of Brescia, and Wyclif, and Hus and Savonarola.

These and other nameless ones were they to whom it is given to "walk with him in white." They were they who feared not to confess the name of Christ before those who kill the body, and who therefore are honored with the promise —an echo of Luke 12:8, "I will confess his name before my Father and before his angels."

The Prison Sprung Asunder

To Philadelphia is given the open door. The medieval prison-house is sprung asunder. Then follow Gutenberg, Columbus, Luther, the Reformation, the growth of Protestant nations in old and new worlds, the rise of Protestant missions, until every barrier is laid low to their entrance.

A great door and effectual has been opened in human history never to be shut. How many attempts were made in the dark ages to pry loose the dungeon locks, and how often sickening disappointment fell to those who made them— Paulician and Vaudois and Lollard. But He that hath the key of David openeth and no man shutteth.

The church of Laodicea had certainly various of the characteristics of present-day Christianity. One should remember that Paul's letter to the Colossians had the Laodicean church in mind as much as its near neighbor (Col. 4:16). One is quite ready therefore to "suspect" with Lightfoot, "that pride of intellectual wealth was a temptation at Laodicea hardly less strong than the pride of material resources." Paul writes of "a vain philosophy, a show of wisdom," contrasting it with "the treasures of wisdom and knowledge in Christ" None-so blind as the aufgeklaert Laodicean! Hence the need of eye-salve from the Great Physician that "thou mayest see."

The Plutocrats of Laodicea

Again, as the Parable of the Seine adumbrated one phase of our Christian life today, the nobler side, its great missionary activity, so the epistle to the Laodiceans exhibits an ignobler one, its worldliness and amassing of wealth.

James' phrase "Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days," with its comment on the injustice of the unjust rich, ends with, "Behold the judge standeth at the door." And our Lord closes his admonition to those who are plousios kai peploutika the plutocratic society of Laodicea with the warning "Behold I stand at the door."

In James' passage on "the last days" (chap. 5), we see the movement of the

*The ferment of half Jewish, half heathen ritualism permeated the Galatian church. "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump" (Gal. 5:9). There is a rabbinical saying, "Trust not a proselyte till twenty-four generations, for he holds his leaven," i. e., heathen corruption. In the face of such sayings could leaven be used without violence by our Lord as a figure for the successes of Christian missions, the spread of the undefiled gospel among the heathen? Lightfoot says that leaven is never once used in the Old or New Testaments in good sense save in this parable. This establishes an overwhelming presumption against its being so used here.

There is perhaps a certain correspondence between the three leavens and the three civilizations of the world in Christ's day. Phariseeism, religious formalism and self-righteousness, marked the Hebrew; Sadduceeism, vain philosophy and intellectual scepticism, the Greek; Herodianism, world-power and glory, the Latin. It was fitting therefore that the inscription over the cross, the aitia, should be in the languages of these three civilizations, each in its way so hostile to the mind of Christ.

* * This epistle is complementary, as most of the other epistles seem to be, to its corresponding parable in Matthew. The Parable of the Sower deals with one phase of early church history, the evangelism of the Roman world. In the church of Ephesus we see the good seed bearing the fruit of good works. We have a Christian social development following conversion.

thought solemn as that of a Greek tragedy, "Be patient unto the coming of the Lord; the coming of the Lord draweth nigh; behold the Judge standeth at the door." So in the epistles to the seven churches, He who was coming, was coming as a thief, was coming quickly, is now on the threshhold knocking.

So likewise when ye shall see all these things know that He (margin) is near, even at the doors.

III

Finally we would note a certain correspondence between the descript ons of our Lord in the opening of each of the seven epistles and his attitude towards his church in each of the epochs.

In the letter to Ephesus He is seen walking in the midst of the primitive churches caring for His lamps that they may be "light in the Lord," "reproving the unfruitful works of darkness" in the surrounding paganism (Eph. 5:8-10).

The martyrs of the Roman imperial period (Smyrna) He encourages by recalling that He too went down into the horror of a martyr's death and is now alive again.

When the church of the fourth century, Pergamos, reverts to semi-paganism He describes Himself as a sharp sword with two edges, the discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

To the apostates of the medieval church, Thyatira, His eyes are like a flame of fire for indignation.

To Sardis drooping and ready to die He would give the seven spirits, the reviving Spirit of God in His completeness. He would pour in the Samaritan wine of His passion and the oil of His Spirit.

To Philadelphia He quotes the words of Isaiah after the prediction of Jerusalem's overthrow and of a "mighty captivity" in Babylon (Isa. 22:17), "He shall (in the return) open and none shall shut," a possible parallel to the emancipation of Reformation days after "the Babylonian woe."

To the Laodicean age, our modern age of swarming scepticisms, He is the "Amen" or the truth, "the gospel for an age of doubt"; also the arche, "the beginning of the creation of God," a fact which the evolutionary speculation characteristic of our day certainly does not take into consideration.

Unity Through Separation

By Rev. J. G. W. Kirschner, Kansas City, Mo.

IN them and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me" (John 17:23).

To say that powerful influences are at work in the religious world to bring about a closer unity between denominations and sects, is only stating a well-known fact. Not only is unity being sought between denominations of the same name and aims, but recent developments have given us a Council which by its name, designates that all the churches of God in America may be represented. Also recent utterances by a great English preacher are to the effect, that if there is ever to be unity and mutual understanding between the nations, it must come through union of the religious forces of the nations. It was his opinion that this was the opportune time for the formation of a Council representing the religious forces of the world. He said that abiding world peace depended upon some such union.

It is not the province of this article to criticize any personality or organization connected with these movements for union, farther than to protest against insinuations that any one not enthusiastic about them is not a progressive, well-informed Christian. In our judgment, based upon the teaching of the Word of God, a striving for union on the part of the bodies of Christendom is fundamentally wrong.

What Stands in the Way of Forced Unity?

The dreams of those who are striving for the blessings which is hoped may come through the brotherhood of man and the federation of the world, might be realized were it not for one fundamental law of life, namely—"That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." To speak of the brotherhood of man in the Christian sense, limits its meaning to those who have been born again. If it can be said of the Scripture that it is clearer on one point than another, it is concerning those who are the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ. They compose the Church. And the Church is not an organization, but an organism—the body of Christ. "And hath put all things under his feet and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all" (Eph. 1:22, 23). "And he is the head of the body, the church; who is the beginning, the first born from the dead; that in all things he might have the pre-eminence" (Col. 1:18)

Israel an Example of Worldly Federation

Other Scriptures could be introduced to show that the true children of God are born into this family by the power and grace of God, exhibited, not in the realm of creation, but in the realm of salvation.

It is not difficult to trace the course of Israel through the history of nations. They stand out as a people, chosen by God for a particular purpose.

However, at times they tired of this distinction and wanted to be as other nations among whom they sojourned.

God often let them have their way, and if it had not been for His intervening in their behalf, their desire to mix with other peoples would have caused them to be destroyed. God had ordained that they should be His peculiar treasure, a separated people, and on the ground of this distinction, He was to reveal His glory. And He did, and continues so to do; and in the closing scenes of this age He will in a remarkable way reveal His love and grace through this people, who have been temporarily set aside, but who have never lost their identity, among the nations of the world.

This is of God, to bring about His gracious purposes for mankind, and the point is, that Israel's greatest opportunities, were, and are, and will be along the line of her separatedness.

Now as to the Church! The Church is not Israel. The God of Israel is the God of the Church. And it is significant to note what He says concerning separation in relation to the Church: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? Or what part hath he that believeth, with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? For ye are the temple of the living God: as God hath said I will dwell in them and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people" (2 Cor. 6:14-17).

No commandment ever submitted by God to Israel for a separated walk, can compare to this one given to the Church. Does God through such commandments wish to rob the world of blessing? To ask the question is to answer it. His purpose is that through obedience to this and other commandments, the world should be blessed, and made richer, and be saved.

But we are told that those who do not believe in the modern federated religious movements are narrow and lack vision. "They are blockades on the road to larger blessing." The ministers who are not for federation receive little newspaper notice, while the man who can mouth vociferously on the fatherhood of God and the meanderings of man from monkeydom to manhood, finds himself quoted as an authority. We have drifted on to a time when it is popular to discredit the Word of God and to humanize the Son of God, in the name of scholarship and scientific research.

Religion Is Not Christianity

There is a marked difference between religion and Christianity. To the true Church has been committed the world's evangelization, and this divine enterprise is benefited most, not by her becoming identified with the religious world as such, but by emphasizing the principles which make her different from it. To the extent that she loses her identity and peculiarity, she loses her power. When the church is ready to compromise her stand as to the deity of Christ, the plenary inspiration of the Bible and the lost condition of mankind, then the world stands ready to receive her with open arms. In removing the cause of the difference between them, the difference is removed. And that difference is Christ. People having the same ideas concerning him have no religious differences.

Jesus Christ was the means of bringing Pilate and Herod together, as recorded in Luke 23:6-12. There was a difference between them. How long the misunderstanding and separation had existed we do not know. We are only told how they became friends. Time-serving, cowardly Pilate had Jesus on his hands. Having a shallow excuse for doing so, he sent him to Herod, who was at this time in Jerusalem. Herod had his soldiers clothe Jesus in robes of royalty, mocking him, and then sent him back to Pilate. Then we read: "And the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends together: for before they were at enmity between themselves." Friends indeed! But upon what grounds? Surely not the acceptance of Jesus Christ or his claims, but upon his rejection! Even so, an apparent friendship between the world and the believer could be hastily consummated, if the same conclusion be reached concerning Christ. And until such conclusion is reached, either as to an outright acceptance of Him by the one, or an outright rejection of Him by the other, there can no union exist between them.

Shallow Reasoning of the Modernists

No true Christian can hesitate a moment to surrender personal notions and non-essentials for the sake of unity, but he knows that in surrendering essentials, he does not make a contribution to lasting unity, but is guilty of denying his Lord, and promoting that which will ultimately defeat the very aims for which he made the surrender.

Not long ago one of the Modernists in New York said:

"I do not believe Christ was born of a virgin. What has that to do with Christianity? What has the peculiarity of birth to do with the teachings of Christ in the Sermon on the Mount? I can still hold my attention upon the great lessons of that sermon and preach upon the spirituality of these lessons, yet retain my belief regarding the birth of Christ." The same day that Dr. Grant gave voice to these words, the pastor of a church in Kansas City said:

"Do unto others as ye would that others should do unto you. This is the solvent for the social perplexities of the United States. * * * Strangely enough it is the solution of an idealist and dreamer of 2,000 years ago, whose words are proving more and more practical and common-sensed everyday in all the relations of life. Common sense guided by the golden rule, is the only finger post we have to lead us."

These quotations are not given because of their rarity, for they are common, but they show the type of men who talk the strongest for unity. They have nothing to surrender for the sake of unity. Their gospel is the gospel of Babel: "Let us make us a name." About the only thing it excludes with persistent fidelity, is the blood of Christ. There is no belief or sect under heaven but what can find a basis of union here. And the church of Jesus Christ is asked to join this federation.

The Unity that Already Exists

The striving for unity and federation overlooks another important truth which our Lord in the seventeenth of John reveals. He says, "I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one" (John 17:21).

Instead of striving for unity, we should recognize and rejoice in the unity which already exists. Notice the principle of this unity—"in Him"! This unity is not found in, or through, an organization but in a person. In Him was life. It is natural for life to bear fruit after its kind. He said: "I am the vine, ye are the branches; as the branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me" (John 15:4). This teaches union of the most vital kind, but not a union made by man, but by God. The human body is also an apt illustration of the most wonderful unity. The Holy Spirit uses this as a figure to teach the truth concerning the unity already existing between Christ and the Church and between the individual members of the Church, one with another. "So we being many are one body in Christ and everyone members one of another" (Rom. 12:5).

The unity existing between Christ and the Father was a subject of communion between them. Here in the seventeenth of John there is no striving for union, but a happy recognition of the oneness existing. How significant are Jesus' words in this connection when he says, "As the Father hath sent me even so send I you" (John 20:21).

The burden of Jesus' prayer in John 17 is that through an increasing understanding of the oneness on the part of His disciples, the world might believe that He was the sent-one of the Father to be the Saviour of the world.

A deep and prayerful meditation upon and a fuller experience of the existing unity between Christ and the members of his body, will lead to what? A striving and clamoring for union with those who do not hesitate to connect Christ with the child born out of wedlock? A willingness to place the Bible upon the same plane as the Vedas of Brahmanism, the Koran of Islamism, the sacred books of Norse mythology, or the mouthings of modern science?

No! As we meditate upon the glorious unity existing between the believer and his Lord and the believer and his brother; a unity which God himself has made and glories in; it will lead us to see that true unity is stimulated not by federation, but by separation.

Faults in Pennsylvania Coal Mines—A Nut for Evolutionists to Crack

By D. R. Walkinshaw, Greensburg, Pa.

The author has had twenty-one years' experience as a civil engineer in Westmoreland County and is chief engineer of Sixteen Companies in the bituminous coal field—Editors

THIS is a bit of experimental knowledge acquired after twenty years of mining engineering in the bituminous coal regions of southwestern Pennsylvania.

I had been instructed concerning the geological strata of rocks and the "prehistoric" formation of the bituminous coal beds, commonly known throughout our section of the country as "Pittsburgh coal." The teaching, which was leading me to the adoption of the evolutionary theory runs about as follows:

The Geological Theory

Ages ago, before the advent of man upon the earth, there was a time when the world was covered with a dense vegetation which grew so rank and thick that it coalesced, the carbon in the vegetable kingdom leaving a residuum of carbon in the mineral kindgom, now recognized as our "Pittsburgh coal" seam. A subsequent age developed, known as the glacier period, in which huge icebergs furrowed and scarred the face of the earth in certain localities. Upheavals and volcanic action were attendant upon a cooling of the crust of terra firma. And so the geologists have led us in the development of their theories.

Veiled in antiquity, the distance seems to lend enchantment to the view, and these "blind leaders of the blind" would carry us into the ditch, were it not that inspiration has a voice in the matter; for we read in 2 Peter 3:5, "For this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water."

The writer's attention was attracted to the testimony of two consulting engineers given under oath, as they were separately called as expert witnesses in the civil court of Westmoreland County, Pa., in re. Gibson Distilling Co., vs. Henderson Coal Co.

The facts were these: the Henderson Coal Co., purchased the Pittsburgh seam of coal underlying the "Gibson farm" in said county and gave security for the price, which was to be made in instalments. Before the last payment became due the mining operators of the company had discovered what is known as a rock "fault." Faults are common in the Monongahela region and this one was so extensive as to occupy the equivalent of twenty acres of coal. It extended diagonally across the Gibson farm and was about uniform in width. At the trial the coal company wanted exemption in payment for that portion of coal area which was occupied by the rock. The distilling company contended that full payment should be made according to the contract.

How Account for the "Fault"?

The interesting portion of the case was the testimony of the engineers to account for the presence of the rock "fault." The engineer for the coal company testified that at a certain period of time the earth was covered with dense vegetation and, as time went on, and the cooling of the surface took place, this vegetable matter fell together, condensed and solidified, and the carbon in the vegetable material was transformed into coal. While this coal bed was plastic and in process of formation the ice age arrived. A glacier traveled across this Gibson farm and carried the plastic coal ahead of it down the Monongahela River, leaving in its path a train of silt, dirt and rock, which later on formed and hardened into this "fault." Thus he accounted for the absence of coal and the presence of rock.

The engineer for the distilling company rebutted this testimony by saying that the coal was formed in the same way and that the glacier happened at the identical time; but that the action of the glacier was different from what his opponent supposed. He testified that in passing across the farm, the glacier traveled in the manner of a wedge or snow plow, so that instead of forcing the coal ahead of it and carrying it away, the soft coal was forced and squeezed to each side. To prove his theory he had taken measurements on either side of and adjacent to the "fault" which showed that there was a thickening of the vein on both sides insomuch that the additional thickness made up in bushels for what was reckoned as loss in area.

Witnesses Disproved by Facts

Since these two engineers have predicated their theories upon unauthenticated information, I am led to put in writing some personal observations based upon discoverable facts, which will show that such hypotheses and such evolutionary theories are faulty.

A columnar section of borings into the earth in the vicinity of Pittsburgh, Pa., shows that instead of one seam of bituminous coal existing and being commercialized, there are eight; and if you follow as I bore a diamond drill hole from the circumference of the earth towards its center, we will discover the following geological formation, names being given alone to the coal seams:

Brookville seam of coal	2′-6″ thick
Total depth	1033′-9″ thick

The queries I raise are: If the Pittsburgh seam of coal was formed and deposited in the manner the geologists would have us believe, why it is not reasonable to guess that each and every one of the seven other seams were produced in like fashion?

How shall these alternate seams of rock be accounted for?

Thus we have the carboniferous material in the vertical position.

Horizontal as Well as Vertical

We will now look at these coal veins in the horizontal direction.

These coal measures lie in a northeasterly direction somewhat similar to a sawtooth roof, the high points being called the anticlinal and the low points the synclinal, with a remarkable regularity in grade in both directions. It is by reason of this fact that engineers are able to determine crop lines of the coal and the depth of the seam at random points. This horizontal position is also uniformly collateral; that is, the strata of rock maintains its thickness between the seams of coal.

I ask then, if these undulations in the Pittsburgh vein are accounted for by upheavals in the crust of the earth, why can the other seven veins have symmetrical positions?

Another interesting feature of this bituminous coal is what is known as "face." "Face" is the smooth side of the coal over which one's hand may pass and not be scratched. In the virgin state, this face of the coal lies in a magnetic direction "south 60° east." The writer has worked in all parts of Westmoreland County, Pa., with his surveying instruments, and in each of the first six veins as classified above; and he knows that this same magnetic direction prevails in each as well as at any place in the county.

If it is assumed that bituminous coal is the result of decomposed vegetation, as is claimed by explorers who pretend to have found fern leaves; bark, logs, and what not in our mines, I wonder how this extraordinary relativity of direction in the face of the coal came to exist?

A Faulty Hypothesis

We think that the geological hypothesis concerning the formation and evolution of this world of ours is faulty. Every fresh discovery in the mineral kingdom leads us to the conclusion that the Psalmist is correct when, in treating of the creation in the thirty-third Psalm, he writes: "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made. . . Let all the earth fear . . . . . .

for He spake, and it was done."

My evolutionistic brother, let me assure you that these facts serve to reaffirm the Mosaic account of creation in that it was a divine Architect who designed it, and that the account is inerrant when we read that God spake this coal into place, and that he did it for the use and convenience of mankind.

The Bible in Advance of Modern Science

By Rev. Clarence H. Benson, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

MANY well intending religious leaders of the day, recognizing the growing breach in the church between the liberal and conservative divisions, have made an effort to effect a compromise. One of these is William Hamilton Wood, Professor of Biblical History and Literature at Dartmouth College. His recent book entitled, The Religion of Science, is of special interest.

Few writers have made such a clear statement of the teachings of evolution and its ultimate end, and many will be in agreement with his conclusion that evolution is not fundamentally scientific, and that its universal adoption will lead the mass of men into pessimism and atheism.

However, Professor Wood makes the unfortunate mistake of endeavoring to compromise the Word of God with unbelieving scholarship. It is evident that he does not accept the plenary inspiration of the Bible and hopes by rejecting portions of Scriptures as seemingly unscientific to make the Bible acceptable to the most critical scholars. He adopts the well known literary and historical method of interpreting Scripture which rejects as authoritative such portions of the Word as conflict with the conceptions of modernists. But he does not seem to have entertained the possibilities of using this same scientific method to demonstrate that the Bible writers were so far in advance of the scientific conceptions of their day that our only possible refuge is to accept the Bible as a supernatural revelation.

An Astronomer's Witness to Genesis

For instance he says, "The facts relative to Genesis, chapters 1-3, include the knowledge of two different types of writers both of which are working over older Babylonian speculations." But it has been well brought out in some of the later comments of Assyriologists that so far from there being any resemblance in the Babylonian legend to the narrative in Genesis that the two accounts differ in toto. It is the astronomer Maunder who after a careful consideration of these chapters and other portions of the Old Testament says: "The Hebrews could not have learned anything even from the most advanced scientists of their day. If there is any possible connection between the Babylonian myth and the narrative in Genesis it implies that the Babylonian based his barbaric myth upon the Hebrew narrative."

Again, it is useless to criticize the language of the Bible as unscientific because it speaks of the "sun rising" when astronomers today in technical papers use the expression "acceleration of the sun's motion," when acceleration of the earth's motion is meant.

When the author speaks of "the narrow view current at the time that this earth is the center of the universe and the only populated spot," he indicates that he is not familiar with the recent books of Professors Townsend, Maunder and Alfred Russel Wallace upon this subject, or the latest evidence in astronomy which indicates that the solar system contains no other habitable planet and that the earth of all celestial spheres is the only probable abode of life.

How Came Job to Know It?

The Bible has nothing to fear from the searchlight of any trustworthy scientific investigation. When the evidence of facts is made the basis of comparison, sooner or later the scientific exactness of biblical expressions and events will be confirmed. Moreover it will not be necessary to prove that the Bible writers were far in advance of the intellectual knowledge of the day, but that this extraordinary scientific information was what these men claimed it to be—a supernatural revelation.

Evidences of this are constantly coming to light. For instance, it is only in recent months we have had a perfect understanding of that passage, "He stretcheth the north over the empty space" (Job 26:7). Careful measurements place the solar system 60,000 light years from the center and 90,000 light years from the circumference of our great disk shaped universe. To the south of the solar system in the constellation of Saggittarius where the stars are in clouds of countless clusters, lies the center of the universe. To the north of the solar system, in the region of Polaris, towards the edge of the universe, the stars are comparatively near and far apart.

Years ago Sir Isaac Newton revealed to science that it was the law of gravitation that enabled the inspired Bible writer to declare, "He hangeth the earth upon nothing." Recently the great 100-inch Hooker telescope at Mt. Wilson confirmed the ancient prophet's assertion, "The host of heaven cannot be numbered." And now that astronomers are definitely locating the solar system in the northern part of the universe we can appreciate for the first time the scientific accuracy of the words, "He stretcheth the north over the empty space."

A New Scholarship Needed

By Professor Lowell H. Coate, B. D., Marion College, Ind.

THERE is a growing conviction on the part of orthodox believers in general and of Christian educators in particular, that one of the greatest needs of the church today is a new scholarship.

Upon the announcement of this statement questions may arise in the minds of some. What kind of scholarship is this? Is it a reflection on the scholarship of the world today? Is it supplementary to it, or in addition to it? Wherein must it differ from our modern American scholarship?

The College to Blame for the Church

By way of answer permit us to say that, in our humble opinion, the generally accepted scholarship of today is largely responsible for the backslidden and apostate condition of the churches of our country. In other words, the colleges have backslidden the churches.

The question now comes, Can the younger, smaller, more spiritual organizations and institutions follow along the same old path and continue to pursue the same educational policies of the older denominations, and hope to arrive at an end different from that to which they have arrived?

We can see no reasonable or intelligent justification for such a hope. Similar policies are bound to bring similar results. Yet consciously or unconsciously these very policies are in operation in almost every small church and institution in the land today.

The Child Wiser Than Its Parents

How does this serious condition of things come to be?

In the first place, the college, like every other Christian institution, is a child of the church. Every evangelical church is established upon certain fundamental Christian principles; and it is the purpose of the church that all its institutions shall promote and promulgate these fundamentals.

But all too soon the child becomes more important and, in its own eyes, wiser than its mother. It may be said of the child, however, that it has more zeal than knowledge, and has become wise above that which is written; for it proceeds to teach doctrines different from those for which the church has stood through the centuries.

Whether we admit it or not, this is about the status of the relation between many of the churches and their colleges. Instead of championing the conservative doctrines upon which the church was built, the average denominational college has gone over to the modern philosophy, rationalistic materialism, evolution, destructive cricitism, radicalism, and liberalism, which its professors have been taught in the larger graduate institutions.

America entered the World War ostensibly for the purpose of defeating Prussian militarism, but if she succeeded in doing so she has continued to retain in her institutions the destructive teachings of that German philosopher, Immanuel Kant, whose evolutionary and unchristian doctrine of rationalism was, as many believe, responsible for the war.

The World War Victory Not Complete

Has America's victory been a genuine and a permanent one? We fear not. If, in defeating German militarism we have only succeeded in suppressing an incidental result, while retaining the treacherous cause,—that system of philosophy responsible for the war,—then we have accomplished only a temporary advantage; and the loss of life, money, energy and effort will probably be repeated soon again as the natural result of the same cause,—unless we hasten to destroy that cause from our institutions.

The question now is, Are our educators, even Christian educators, and churchmen, learning anything from the lessons of the past?

This brings us face to face with the subject of this article; a new scholarship needed.

The fact that our colleges, almost without exception, are clinging tenaciously to this unchristian system of philosophy, which literally permeates the text-books, from the primary grades in the public schools to the universities, and which is the basis for our whole educational system, proves their inability to learn the lesson experience has tried to teach.

Even theology has not escaped the influence of this system. New thought, destructive criticism, and liberalism are all the logical application and working out of the theory of evolution in theology and religion. Our educational system is built on a false basis—a foundation of sand. The world is trying to build character without the only true foundation for character.

Colleges Wrecking Faith

The next question arises, Will it be possible for us to secure a new scholarship so long as we continue to send our college graduates, our teachers, and professors to the world's institutions to receive their graduate training?

We think not. The churches have built and heavily endowed their large colleges, and secured the world's recognition in order that their graduates may go to the post-graduate universities without inconvenience and embarrassment, and with the disappointing result that whatever of evangelical truth they have received may be entirely counteracted, and their Christian faith wrecked.

When the church herself sets the example by spending millions of dollars to secure the world's recognition she need not be surprised when her young people follow the course to its logical conclusion,—enter the larger graduate institutions to the undoing of their faith. Perhaps nine out of ten of them never return to the work of the church, while the other one-tenth is practically unfitted for any practical service to the church.

How often have we all witnessed this sad experience! The youth was made of less service to the church than before he went to college, and the church had better kept her millions, or given them for missions if she could find any missionaries among the graduates of such institutions.

The church exists because it has a peculiar work to do, and a special commission to fulfill. Its young people, therefore, must receive a special preparation for that work, if they are to be of service to the church.

The first duty of the church school, then, is to prepare its young people for the work of the church. It matters not how many other good and desirable things a school may do, if it fails to prepare its young people for the work of the church, it has failed as a church school. Any church institution which fails to do this is no longer worthy of the support of the church.

Why Should Denominational Colleges Exist?

If our church schools are going to offer the same courses of instruction, from the same text-books, and with the same objective that the world has, they can give no adequate reason for their continued existence.

With the unlimited wealth and resources at its command, the world can equip and operate stronger institutions than is possible for the church; therefore, competition from the church along the same line is so much fruitless effort and unnecessary duplication of expense. If a few young people of the church prefer the preparation the world offers, there are a thousand schools better equipped to give them that than the church is or ever will be. The church institution need not feel under obligation to compete for that class of students.

The question now comes, Where can we find church schools among our denominational institutions which are preparing the young people for definite service in the church?

And the next question follows, Why are these schools so scarce?

This brings us to a third which is the crux of the whole proposition, and he who can satisfactorily answer it will perform a service which will merit the thanks of generations present and future.

The Church the Pioneer in Education

In discussing this question we do not claim to present the answer, but we believe that Providence will enable us to give at least a partial explanation of the present dilemma.

Every one familiar with the history of education in America knows that it was Christian people who were the pioneers in the field of education in this country. They established the early Latin grammar schools in the East, and later the academies of the nineteenth century, a few of which still remain. It was the church which established the first colleges in America. She outlined the courses of study and the curricula, wrote and adopted the text-books, and raised the educational standards generally.

The English Bible was a prominent and universal text-book in every institution; indeed, the chief aim and purpose of education was to enable students better to read and understand the truths contained in the precious book.

It was these institutions which produced the strong type of Christian manhood and womanhood of recent generations, which made America the ideal nation of the world.

The Menace of the State

Today all this is changed. Education has become an end in itself. The state has taken over supervision of the whole educational system; and, pursuing its consistent policy of centralization, has arbitrarily taken unto itself, almost entirely, the prerogative of outlining the curricula, prescribing the text-books, and setting the standards to which the church institutions must conform if they would receive "recognition." Already several states have proposed laws which would compel students to attend the public schools, and in some states these laws have been passed.

At this point permit us to introduce the main question—the question previously alluded to, Is it consistent with the dignity and purpose of the church to bow and beg for recognition from the world from which she professes separation? Has the church, who was the pioneer in all educational work in America, become so weak and impotent that she is no longer capable of organizing her own courses of study and of establishing her own standards independently of the world, which has always been her avowed enemy?

We trust not; and yet where is the church college that has done so? Instead of seeking the recognition of God and of the church, colleges are almost universally bending every effort to conform to the standards which have been arbitrarily set up by the world for its own purposes, and certainly not for the particular welfare of the church.

We seem not to be cognizant of the fact that the church and the world are headed in exactly opposite directions—the church toward heaven and eternal happiness; the world toward perdition and everlasting woe. But the church and the world following the same educational program can never hope to arrive at different destinies. The church must right-about face, and adopt a system in harmony with her call and purpose, if she is going to rescue others, or save herself, from the destruction awaiting the travelers of the broad way.

"If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." How can Christian people and institutions be ambitious for the endorsement and recommendation of the world and at the same time retain the love of the Father? Let us think on these things.

Come Out and Be Separate

Perhaps the greatest educational need of the hour is a Christian college with sufficient independence of the world and sufficient faith in God, to ignore the whole worldly system, and to organize strong courses independent of the world's stereotyped curricula, engage the strongest conservative scholarship in America, raise the educational standard above the present unchristian philosophy, establish it upon the "faith once for all delivered to the saints," and then challenge the world to meet the new scholarship.

"If God be for us, who can be against us?" Such an institution would cause rejoicing throughout all orthodox Christendom.

At least one such college is needed in America now, with courses suited to the needs of young people preparing for service in the evangelical churches. Teach them the message of the church, and teach them to preach the doctrines of the inspired Word of God in harmony with His eternal purposes and His great commission to the church of this dispensation.

Ministers and laymen alike need to be trained in the same kind of institution and atmosphere.

Such an institution should not be a college only, but an institution complete in itself. It should have a graduate department which could recognize its own college graduates, and those of similar colleges which would rise up everywhere throughout the country and rally to the new standard.

Such an institution is absolutely essential to the new scholarship; and the new scholarship is essential to the preservation of the Christian faith—the hope of the world.

Modernism an Ecclesiastical Tragedy

By Rev. Charles Frederic Sheldon, D. D., St. Louis, Mo.

IN THESE days we do not need to visit the theater to witness tragedy. There is being enacted on the stage of our church life a tragedy so real and so far-reaching in its effect, that it should make every lover of the truth stand aghast and indignant.

The actors are more cold-blooded and treacherous than those who participated in the murder of Caesar, more cruel than Judas Iscariot in the betrayal of his Lord.

It is no less a crime than the attempt to cut the very heart out of revealed truth, and by men who profess to be adherents of the truth, and followers of Jesus Christ, and teachers and preachers of the Word of God.

They are not openly wicked men, blatant infidels openly deriding religion. They are not drunken, profane, lustful; they would be less dangerous if they were. They are men of culture, of engaging manners and pleasing personality, amiable, genial, kindly-disposed men. They are profoundly religious in their expression and attitude. They talk of God and His kingdom, and of the work of the church in the most beautiful and altruistic manner. They appear, to the casual observer, to possess all the graces that belong to real ministers of the gospel; and yet, they are concealing neath the cloak of religion the daggers with which to stab truth to the heart.

Another tragic feature is that these men are using their vantage ground as preachers and teachers to lay hold of the church machinery and organization and use them to compass their wicked end and aim.

For example, the people of the churches are exhorted to pour their money into the treasury, in order that the gospel be carried to the ends of the earth and that Christian educational institutions may be supported. But this money and these agencies are, in large part, being used for the propagation of a gospel from which real salvation has been subtracted, a gospel of ethical culture, a gospel that has in it no cross and no atonement, no divine. dying, risen Redeemer; a teaching that denies in polite, scholastic language the vital, basic truths of Christianity.

Still another tragic feature is this. There are many who sit in the pews and watch the performers on the stage who do not know what is being enacted before their eyes. They have not been trained in the analysis of the Word, and are not quick to discover the half-truth in the utterance of the man in the pulpit. They reason that it must be true because the man who says it is a learned man and ought to know. And so they continue to pour their money into the treasury to be used to cut the heart out of the Bible, to so pervert the message that there will be no salvation in it. And if the money is withheld, they charge those who withhold it with intolerance and ignorance.

Recently a teacher in a Baptist college in Missouri has been asked to resign by the trustees because he was denying the fundamental truths of the Bible; and a protest was entered by the student body and by the faculty against his dismissal, because he is a man of such fine character and lovable manners. The man claims that he should have the right to teach what he believes, and that to prevent him from so doing is an evidence of bigotry, narrowness and intolerance.

But if such men are desirous of propagating their beliefs, why do they not organize churches and found schools to be supported by the money of those who believe as they do? This is the tragedy: that the money given by those who believe the Bible is being used to spread the teaching of those who do not believe it.

But after all, perhaps, the most tragic feature of the whole matter, that which stirs in our hearts a deep pity and compassion is, that these men, many of them at least, who are trying to destroy the faith of the people, are apparently not conscious of their sin. We give them credit for believing what they teach and write, but there can be but one explanation of it. We are taught in 2 Corinthians 11 that Satan is transformed into an angel of light; therefore, it is no great marvel if Satan is able to so blind the minds of men, to so dominate their intellects, that they shall teach that which is untrue and yet think they are doing God's service. The rank and file of the church have never understood the cunning, the subtlety and the power of Satan as they should.

What then shall the common people do? How are they to discern between the true and the false? We are instructed in 1 John 4 to test the spirits; to believe not every spirit that speaks through man's tongue. The test is not, does a man have a pleasing personality and a correct outward life, but does he speak according to the Word of God? We are told by the inspired Apostle how we are to discern the spirit of God, so that there may be no mistake.

May God raise up more and more men and women who shall know and teach the Word of God, is our prayer.

What Can God Do With An Impenitent Sinner?

By Rev. Christopher G. Hazard, D. D., Catskill, N. Y.

WE KNOW what God can do with a penitent sinner: he can forgive him, take him into the family of God's children, create in him a clean heart, renew a right spirit within him, help him to be a Christian, lead him to his heavenly home. He can give him peace, joy, hope, love and an overcoming faith.

But what can God do with an impenitent sinner? How can he deal with a man who means to keep on breaking the wise and holy laws that have been made for his happiness, all the while contradicting God by declaring that he is a righteous man? How shall he treat the man who despises mercy, saying that he has no need of it; who refuses salvation because he does not want it; who sees no good in the church, no attraction in heaven? What place can God give such a one in the new society which he intends to make, where every one must respect the rights of others and live in holy love?

What Does God Think About It?

We can imagine this to be a question that arises in the divine mind. God has no pleasure in punishing sinners, he suffers them and their manners in patient hope that they will repent and accept the blessings that He has provided for them and that He offers to them through the Saviour, seeking to bring them to repentance by goodness, to win them by His love while He warns them by His truth. But what can He do as men will not listen, as they harden their hearts, as they go on in wickedness?

We know what we do in such cases between men and we know that we have to do it, however much we dislike to do it. We are compelled to put offenders against public welfare into jail; we have to keep hardened criminals permanently confined; atrocious sinners we put out of the world, taking away their forfeited lives. We believe that we are justified in such actions, that it is right to so do, that there is no other way of securing the interests of a good society.

And we really believe that in the larger society of the universe, on the great field of the future life, God will be forced to adopt the same course. We believe if it is right for us to so act it is right by those natural moral laws which God has created, which are implanted by Him in the very constitution of society and revealed to us by revelation as well as by consciousness, those laws which must prevail everywhere and always, and which must even govern God, since He cannot deny Himself or refuse to do what He has declared to be right.

What Else Can God Do?

Can He force a wicked man to change his mind? No one can do that.

Can He compel a hater of good to love it? No one can do that.

Can He thrust faith upon an unwilling soul? No one can do that.

Can He break into a human heart? No, He stands at its door and knocks

Can He make wickedness happy? Not until He can gather figs from thistles.

Can He always allow the wicked liberty to do as they please? Not if He intends to have peace on earth.

Can He admit sinners into heaven? Not unless He is willing to defile and spoil it.

Would it be a kindness to sinners to open heaven's gates to them? No, they would find no satisfaction and no fellowship there. Heaven's holiness would accuse them, its light of truth would torture them, its employments would be tiresome to them, its joy would seem tame to them, it would be filled with things that they would hate. Magistrates today are sending criminals to church, sentencing them to go to church for a year as a punishment for crime.

No, sinners do not want to go to heaven, they prefer to go to hell. And, if men persist in sin, to its own place they must go. With us all it is repent or perish, even as Christ said through His tears.

Lost in the Mountains

By William Henderson, Superintendent, Shantymen's Christian Association

IT IS Saturday afternoon in a little village in the mountains of Kentucky. On each of the past two days Mr. Lean and myself have spent from five to six hours in the saddle. Two horses were loaned us to visit places lying at the other side of the two ranges of mountains, and the friend who loaned them accompanied us till there was only a straight road of three miles to our destination.

We had watched the trail carefully and had no fear but that we could return the way we went. Instead of that, at the hour of the day yesterday, at which I am writing, we were hopelessly lost in the mountains.

How we lost the trail we have no idea, but the fact remains that for an hour we were tramping through the woods and the clearings leading our horses in search of it. From the clearing we could see mountains in every direction, but no sign of a road, nor of a human habitation where we might get information.

It would have been delightful to have sat down and enjoyed the beauties of nature; but for the fact that we were lost, and would need at least three hours more of traveling over paths that city people would consider only fit for sure-footed goats to travel.

A Typical Cabin Home in the Cumberland Mountains in Kentucky

We had been looking to the Lord for guidance, and after leading our horses up a hill so steep that my companion felt sure it could not be climbed, we were glad to find a path where we could get once more into the saddle.

Right there on the top of the mountain with only foot paths leading to it, was a little cemetery, with marble stones marking some of the graves.

One of the paths led us down to a pike road, but again we had to seek special guidance whether to turn to the right or left.

Following this guidance we came to a house where we were thankful to get a drink of water and directions as to our path.

It was an entirely different road from that on which we had come, but the woman assured us it was the right way, all we had to do was to ride up to the creek to a widow's house, then turn to the right up the mountain and it would take us to the folks of which we were in search.

Not having learned to distinguish a "widow's house" from any other, we had to ask a few more questions, and sure enough had no further trouble.

As we look back on it, the lonely mountain homes shut off from the busy world came up before us. These kind people could refresh us with water to drink and give guidance on our way, but they have no one to minister to them the water of life or tell them the way to the eternal home.

Where we were the night before, there was a busy center with hundreds of men, women and children around, but according to one farmer they have a visit from an ordained minister about once in five years.

"You talk about the heathen lands," one man who is there on business said to us, "but I tell you that you cannot beat the wickedness that we have right around here." The same man told of a lady friend who having been hindered going to the foreign field offered to come there, but after he found out the conditions, he would not hear of her coming. Another told us of a missionary who had been in Africa for three years, who had come there to do mission work, and said it was a harder field than Africa.

Without any more than telling two or three people we would have a meeting in the lumber camp boarding house that night, we had the place filled mostly with men, but also a goodly number of women and children. No one could desire a more interested audience as we sought for an hour to give the gospel message in language they could understand.

One mother of a large family, the eldest a young man, said she had attended Sunday-school when a girl, but none of her children had, as "there ain't been any Sunday-school where we have lived."

There are many such people spiritually "Lost in the Mountains." The most authentic information we can get places the mountain population at over 5,000,000, spread over the states.

For the past twenty years the large denominations seem to have forgotten, or to no longer believe that the gospel is the power of God everywhere we are told that the hope of the mountains lies in the children.

Thus instead of sending soul-winning evangelists traveling through these valleys, literally millions of dollars are being spent in educational institutions.

These institutions do splendid work for the few thousand children they reach, but leave the mountains thereby impoverished by some of their most hopeful children being given an education that takes them to positions in the cities.

Meantime the millions unreached by these institutions are going from bad to worse. Being religiously inclined, they turn to preachers of their own; in many cases men and women who cannot read a word, and having nothing to say, sing it over in a remarkable sing-song fashion, a repetition of phrases without sense or reason. Confusing perspiration for inspiration, they dance round and shout till the hills re-echo with their voices. Their religion does not in any way interfere with their daily life and habits; and therefore the preachers are as needy a class as any.

Because our work is not building churches or denominations, those ignorant preachers have been friendly and in some instances showing a real desire to learn the truth. We must pray for them as their conversion would provide a powerful force to work for God among their own people.

Meantime there is only one way of meeting the need of these lost people, scattered among the mountains as sheep without a shepherd, that is to have bands of men traveling from place to place. With a light camping outfit, they could visit the homes in the day time and every summer evening have open-air meetings in some of the villages.

Many young men from various Bible Institutes have already volunteered for service; so we ask all to pray that necessary means be furnished to enable them to seek and to save these people, "Lost in the Mountains."

Jesus the Vine—Believers the Branches

By Rev. James Dean, Oakland, Fla.

THE Gospel of St. John opens with a statement anent Christ's Godhead. It is a prelude to the book and what follows emphasizes it.

Jesus in His divine incarnation is many things. He is the Divine Creator, the Divine Lover, the Divine Shepherd, the Divine Preparer, the Divine Sender, and he is the Vine from Above. The Gospel of St. John is a casket of divine jewels. The rubies and diamonds of the world are as dust to the things revealed in this gospel. What a feast to the spiritual eyes of the Christian is this book! A perusal of it compels the Christian to worship as never before.

The Vine Must Have Life

It must have life-giving substance before it can communicate life. Jesus came that we might have life, and that we might have it more abundantly. He was life in Himself. A vine must have deep roots. The roots of Christ are from eternity—from everlasting.

A World Destitute of Life

When Jesus came this was so. All the welcome that Jesus received was God-prepared. Astronomy spoke to the wise men, the angels spoke to the shepherds, an angel spoke to Joseph, Anna had lived near to God for many years, and Simeon had the Holy Spirit upon him. Elizabeth and Zacharias were both filled with the Holy Ghost when they spake forth their thanksgiving and prophecy.

But for the grace of God what would have happened with all these people? Think of the intentions of Joseph alone!

Now look outside upon the world. Herod sought the young child's life, and God again interposed with advice. Even at the beginning of His ministry the world desired to thrust Him out, and cast Him down. The world was destitute of life, life, as known above. Jesus came to be the divine Vine, and to communicate that life.

No Life Today Outside of Christ

As then, so now, the world is dead in tresspasses and sin. The eye can be blind to material things, the soul can be blind to spiritual things. As there are degrees of blindness, so are there degrees of life.

Drummond uses the expression that a tree only has life in its immediate environment. So with men. We can only have a higher life, as that higher life is communicated to us. Life does not consist in possessing, but in being possessed. That life-giving substance of the Vine must possess us.

Learning from an Orange Grove

As I sit here in my study, all around me are orange groves. The science of ingrafting is well known. The branches have no life in themselves. Just as long as they abide in the vine can they have life. Detached they fall, wither, and are gathered up and burned.

There can be no life outside of Jesus, we must abide in Him. Let the cares of the world slip in, and separate the branch from the vine, and life is gone. If, through persecution, the branch withdraws, spiritual life ceases. The necessity of abiding also reveals that we have the will to stay. What a powerful being God has made man that he can will himself to spiritual death!

The Husbandman

The Father is the husbandman. Every orange grower desires his grove to be the best. Surely our Father has as much right to the same desire. Every orange grower desires his oranges to look the best. Surely our Father has as much right to His desire. If the grower desires the best of fruit, well may the Father of Lights also desire the best.

As the husbandman goes among his trees, if they look as if they had the "flu" he considers a remedy. He sprays, cultivates, and prunes, if the branches hang too low. And our husbandman, God the Father—ah! let us be still and know that He is God.

The branch does not understand the husbandman, neither can we understand the way of our Husbandman. Yea, though it bleeds the heart, and fills the eyes with tears yet, let us bow the head and worship. He would have us be perfect men, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.

The Ore in the Fire

I have looked on the Forth Bridge and walked upon it; I have gone under the Quebec Bridge, with its longest span in the world; and every inch of those massive structures had to go through the fire ere it could be of service.

The blacksmith places his ore in the fire, takes it out, and hammers; not merely once or twice does he do this, but time and time again. We are of more value than a piece of ore. We are of more value than a mere tree branch. Let us abide in the Vine and accept our lot; by-and-by we shall know the why and wherefore of much that is at present hidden.

"I am the vine, and my Father is the husbandman. Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit in itself except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away; and every branch that bearest fruit he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit."

In Out-of-the-way Places

Two Moody Bible Institute Graduates had a special car constructed last Summer for gospel work among unreached people in our western states. Recently they wrote a member of the Faculty as to results and he has given us the privilege of publishing their letter. Their names are: G. H. Wertz and William H. Donnor. —Editors.

SINCE leaving the Institute last August we have had many and varied experiences. Through them all the Lord has led and blessed us. We have been holding meetings in out-of-the-way places, untouched by evangelistic effort. Sometimes we have found ourselves as far as seventy-five miles from a railroad. Last fall we did not see a train, nor hear a whistle for more than two months. By means of our car we have reached places where there had been no preaching for one, two, or even three years. In one place there had been only two sermons preached in four years. Some of the people came for a distance of twenty miles to attend our service. On Sunday evenings the buildings frequently would not hold the crowd.

How the Meetings Were Conducted

"We conduct our services after this fashion: beginning with song and prayer we devote fifteen minutes to an object lesson for the children. Sometimes this takes the form of a chalk talk. After this we read and expound a chapter of the Bible; then after further singing and prayer one of us gives the message for the occasion.

"We have found this to be the best method of procedure for the people whom we reach. By taking a chapter each evening we are sometimes able to go through a whole book during one campaign. By constantly reviewing we get a good number of them to learn the outline of the book before the meeting is over. This seems to give them a desire for continual reading, and some have confessed that the Bible has become a new book to them. It has also been a means of strength to both of us.

What Results Followed

"We are now in our twelfth campaign since September 1, having held 185 services up to date. We have sold 215 Colportage books and 173 New Testaments, besides giving away 2,000 tracts, many books and Testaments. A goodly number have been led to a saving faith in Jesus Christ; family altars have been established; weak churches almost at the point of closing have been built up and encouraged to go forward in the work. Several young people have expressed determination to seek further training to become Christian workers.

"Last month we were holding meetings at one place where there was an unusual number of young people and all of them unsaved. Through our practice of taking a chapter each night we induced many of them to begin reading the Bible and learning the outline of Romans which we were teaching. As a result nine of these young people came up the aisles at the closing service and knelt at the altar to give themselves to Christ as their Saviour.

"On the closing Sunday afternoon we held a meeting for those who had professed faith in Christ, and had a good service of testimony and prayer. It greatly encouraged us to hear these young people pray and testify. They decided to start a young people's meeting, and promised to help each other in any way they could. We had more conversions at this place than at any other although we have had as many as ten at other places.

"On several Sundays we have separated and preached in different places, sometimes as many as fifty miles apart, and in this way we have been able to hold four services instead of two.

"We can never thank God enough for the instruction received in the Moody Bible Institute, and the training given to us at that dear old place. We ask to be remembered as you come together to pray."

The Gospel Song in Disrepute

By Professor George S. Schuler, The Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TO SOME people a gospel song is worth less than the paper upon which it is written, while to others it is very precious. In considering its merits, however, two lines of thought must be borne in mind, the music and the poem.

Immortal Hymn Writers

By reason of the simplicity of gospel music it is tabooed by many musicians, but this seems hardly justifiable inasmuch as the purpose of the gospel song is to set to music a religious poem which can be easily sung by the masses. One reason why musicians who compose in the larger forms are not composers of gospel music, is not because of lack of interest in it, but because they cannot readily limit themselves to this simple form of music.

It is difficult to recall an opera or symphony composer who has written a simple hymn tune or gospel song, but on the other hand, such men as John B. Dykes, composer of "Lead Kindly Light"; Lowell Mason, composer of "Nearer My God to Thee"; Thomas Hastings, Barnby, Woodbury, Bradbury, and a host of others, were men who knew little about opera and symphony writing, yet they have made their names immortal by their contributions of hymn tunes and gospel songs.

How to Test a New Song

Because gospel music is simple, many inexperienced harmony students rush too quickly to the press with their immature compositions, and this has contributed largely to the feeling against gospel music. As the young mother looks upon her first born, so many of these young writers feel regarding their first creations, and almost force them upon the unsuspecting public.

Dr. Towner used to advise students to write much for practice, but to destroy what they wrote. "Too many," he would say, "think their first compositions are destined to become masterpieces."

To write simple compositions containing charm, beauty, and at the same time be "singable," is by no means an easy accomplishment. The great things in art assume the form of simplicity.

A song should be submitted to a reliable publisher, who, if it has merit, will accept it for publication. If it is returned, let it be submitted to a second publisher, considering the judgment of these two sufficient evidence as to its practical worth.

The Publisher Has Responsibility

But the publisher must share a goodly portion of the responsibility for this adverse criticism of gospel songs, as too many cater to public opinion rather than to the uplifting of church music. A representative of one of the church music publishing concerns recently remarked, "The publishers as a whole are giving the church going public too many unwholesome 'holy jingles.'" This is a serious indictment and comes with much force from such a source, but the publisher must not be criticized too severely, for he must make his business pay.

And then too, the poem plays no small part when considering the success of hymn-tunes and gospel songs. Many aspiring to write religious poems have had little or no preparation for the task. A week seldom goes by when poems are not received from some dear saint to be set to music, who does not seem to realize that poetry involves more than having the end of lines rhyme.

Mr. Gabriel, who is in a position to know, recognizes the dearth of good religious and gospel poetry as appalling.

How Others May Aid

Nevertheless although the gospel song may be held in disrepute by many, we should, as far as we individually are able, exert every effort to place it above criticism. Those who have the conducting of meetings may assist by declining to select songs that are below standard, even though they may be popular.

Singing the so-called religious song, whose message is more or less cumbered with intricate music, distracting accompaniments, and the idle repetition of words and phrases, can never take the place of the well-selected and well-rendered gospel song. The song that brings the gospel to the lost is the gospel song when at its best.

How the French Bible Institute Began

By Rev. A. C. Dixon, D. D., Baltimore, Md.

DR. REUBEN SAILLENS and I spent several weeks together at the same hotel in London, when he came over to hold evangelistic missions in the Metropolitan Tabernacle, and many times he expressed his conviction that the great need of evangelical Christianity in France was a Bible institute like the one in Chicago or Los Angeles for the training of young men and women in Bible study and methods of Christian work.

After I had been in the Los Angeles Bible Institute as teacher for a few weeks, I felt impressed to write Dr. Saillens, and ask him how much money he needed with which to begin such an institute; and his reply was that he would take it as a token from God that he ought to begin the movement, if sufficient money were in hand to lease a suitable building and pay expenses for one year; and he thought about $7,000 was the amount required.

The First Gift

I read the letter of Dr. Saillens to a group of students in the Los Angeles Bible Institute one evening and asked them to pray God to give us the money. For an hour, one after another, they laid the need before God, and asked for that definite amount. About 10:30 p. m. there was a knock at my door by a young woman, a student in the Institute, who had come to tell me that she had just received a letter from home, in which she was informed that her crop of wheat had sold for 50 cents a bushel more than she expected to receive, and she wanted to give that extra fifty cents a bushel toward starting the Bible institute in France. Next morning she brought me one hundred dollars in cash. This was the first contribution ever made to this movement, and, if the young woman who made it should read this, will she be kind enough to send me her name and address.

A Mountain-Top Meeting

Two days afterward a business man invited me to go with him and a group of others to the top of Mt. Wilson for a day of Bible study and prayer for foreign mission movements in which they were interested as secretarial managers. There were some complications and embarrassments which made them feel that they would like to go apart for a day with God and His Word. In the party, filling his automobile, were a lawyer, a manufacturer, a commercial traveler, a clerk, a missionary and a preacher. After several hours of Bible exposition and testimony concerning prayer, with earnest praying for the special objects in which they were interested, I read to them Dr. Saillens' letter and asked them to pray God to give us the $7,000 needed for starting the Bible institute in France. Each of them in turn prayed for this definite object, and, as we rose from the place of prayer, one of them turned to me and said: "Our prayer is answered. God will certainly give us that money." I thought perhaps he meant to be the steward through whom it would come. But not so; for, while we were on Mt. Wilson praying for the $7,000, a group of men in Los Angeles were voting to appropriate that amount from a fund set apart for the Lord's work.

Difficulties Overcome

When Dr. Saillens heard the good news, he began at once to look for a suitable building; and then his troubles began. There were few buildings to be leased, and when he found one that seemed to be suitable, and it was learned by the owner that it was wanted for a Bible school, he refused to lease it for that purpose. There was much testing of faith. The committee in Los Angeles began to fear that they had gone ahead of God's purpose, and were thinking of asking that the money be turned into other channels. But Dr. Saillens and his co-workers continued to pray God to give them a building, while they diligently sought for it. Then was found the beautiful villa in Nogent Sur-Marne, which could be had for a reasonable rental with the option of purchase. It was at once secured, and the letter announcing their success was on its way to Los Angeles before the committee's suggestion that the money might be devoted to other channels had reached France.

Enlarged Faith

The fact that the villa might be purchased and the Bible institute then have a permanent home led Dr. Saillens and his praying band to ask God for the 200,000 francs needed for this purpose, and through the timely visits of Charles L. Hurlburt, director of the African Inland Mission, the matter was brought by him, when he came to America, before Mr. and Mrs. Stewart of Los Angeles, and the money was received for the purchase of the property and the erection of a chapel on the premises, in which the gospel might be preached to the people of the town.

Present Needs

Dr. Saillens selected an excellent faculty; and now the Bible institute is full of students, preparing for work among French-speaking peoples at home and abroad. There is already need of more room.

The work is not endowed and is, therefore, dependent upon God for support through the liberality of His people, and, if there are others in America, who would like to lend a hand to the maintenance and enlargement of this work, born and nurtured in prayer, I will be glad to receive their contributions and take them over in person to Dr. Saillens who, in addition to my receipt, will make a personal acknowledgment of such gift.

Whatever else France may need, her most pressing need is the glorious gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, which Dr. Saillens preaches, and which the Bible Institute of France teaches to those within its walls. While politicians wrangle and statesmen disagree as to what is the best political policy to pursue, let us by prayer and sacrifice unite in what we know is the one thing needful for the French people.

HOME TRAINING

Ohio State Journal

Lack of proper home training is the great cause assigned by Judge E. V. Mahaffey of the municipal court, for juvenile crime. He is not the first judge to come to that conclusion. It has been said again and again, but it cannot be said too often. For, unfortunately, there is an undeniable tendency today to shift responsibility from the home to the schools or the lawmakers or anywhere else. But the home responsibility cannot be shirked. It is there that the common virtues must chiefly be learned, if at all.

When a man has achieved a prominence or honor in any line, we always want to know something about his people, and the home from which he came. The pictures of the wife and the parents of the Hon. Mr. So-and-So have a right to their place in print, because in most cases these home people have helped to build up the honor in question. If all altruistic social work in America could be centered on home improvement there would be little need of other improvement. It is a dangerous thing to take away from the home any functions, educational or otherwise, that can properly be performed there. The home lessons are the ones that last.

CONAN DOYLE MAKES US TIRED

New York Times

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is placing on many of this country's inhabitants the embarrassing task of trying to strike a balance between their long-established liking for him and their well-settled dislike for what he is doing. They are not less surprised than grieved that he should be devoting his time and intelligence to the exposition of beliefs that to them seem founded on illusions or in misinterpretations of mental and physical phenomena not in essence any more mysterious, any more confirmative of spiritistic theories, than are multitudes of other phenomena of origin not immediately obvious.

More difficult to explain than any of these phenomena is the fact of Sir Arthur's wandering off into a domain which, while worthy of investigation by those whom it interests, never yet has rewarded labor to any measurable extent and promises none of the important results which he, with such pathetic confidence, is prophesying. Religion never has needed the sort of "proof" he offers and science some time since reached other conclusions than his with respect to the peculiarities of those whom he believes to be mediums of communication with the dead.

Surprise at these vagaries should not be too great, however. In the earlier and happier days, Sir Arthur, in his detective stories, admirable as they were, revealed that the tendency of his mind is toward deductive, rather than inductive reasoning. That is why men doing real police work always have said that the methods of his hero were not theirs and would be of little, or no use in the solution of real criminal mysteries.

BOOKSELLERS DEPLORE MODERN BOOKS

The Presbyterian

Censorship is not the proper way to get rid of objectionable books, according to speakers at the April meeting of the Booksellers' Association of Philadelphia. They agreed that the censoring power would be sure to fall into the hands of fanatics who would abuse it.

As alternatives to censorship, they suggested that children should be trained to despise poor reading matter, that public sentiment should be educated to ostracize the offending writers and publishers.

Dr. Charles W. Burr, well-known alienist, gave the mental specialist's opinion of objectionable books. Speaking of "Erotic Literature and Moral Health," he said:

"There is more erotic literature published to-day than there has been at any previous time in the world's history. It is a symptom of moral disease. The output of such literature forms a perfect orgy of pathological literary filth. It is not written to show life, but merely to satisfy an unnatural craving set up by the diseased minds and morals of the writers.

"The fundamental way to correct this evil, depends on the mothers. If the childhood training is all right, the boy or girl will not be tempted by the wrong kind of reading."

IN DEFENSE OF THE AMERICAN HERITAGE

The Chicago Tribune

The formation at an enthusiastic meeting in Evanston, Ill., of an organization to be known as "The Minute Men of the Constitution" is more than an event. It is a portent. It is one of many portents which show that the wind of American loyalty is rising. For years American principles and American institutions have been subjected to persistent attack. A part of this attack has been open and direct; a greater part has been subterranean and seldom seen. But it has moved steadily by innumerable avenues against the American state. We have given this phenomenon little heed and less resistance, but we are wakening to its meaning and to its danger. Courageous voices are raised; organized defense is appearing. We are realizing that the country is full of disintegrating forces and that it is time for us to protect our birthright.

A sign of this inspiring change, we believe, is the formation of the Minute Men of the Constitution. We do not hazard prediction of how far it will go. But we believe that if it develops as an all-American popular movement, devoted to the invigorating of American citizenship in the inspiration of American principles, it will go fast and far.

The organization, as formed, is confined wisely to a certain definite purpose within the political confines of Illinois. It proposes to win delegates in Illinois in both parties to place certain declarations in both party platforms. But the spirit and conviction it expresses is obviously becoming militant throughout the nation and in one form or another it is going to be heard.

Of course it will be opposed, suspected, and misinterpreted. Even before the first meeting one labor leader has forejudged it and charged it with being an anti-labor movement in disguise, although one of the principles it declares for is the right of association on which labor unionism and collective bargaining is founded. But unjust attack never killed a good cause, and the reinvigorating of fundamental Americanism is the best of causes at this hour. American labor has ever reason for joining the defense of American principles, and every American workman who has not been perverted and betrayed by foreign-made fallacies will not fail to respond to any genuine call.

A SHEPHERD'S WARNING

Chicago Evening Post

About 2,500 years ago, in a little village a few miles south of Jerusalem, a shepherd tended his flocks of sheep and goats and did a small business in the cultivation and sale of figs. Amos of Tekoa was a meditative shepherd. He had much time to think while his flocks were grazing, and he employed it seriously. Now and again he would take the marketable animals to Jerusalem or northern Bethel, where he would meet the traders and hear the gossip of the city and the rumors from the great world beyond.

He was an observant man, and he noticed the manner of life of the city people, the rich and the officeholders, the judges and the rulers. He pieced together the stories that came to his ears, the talk of the streets and the tales of travelers.

Israel was prosperous, with a topheavy prosperity. It had a wealthy, luxury-loving, pleasure-chasing upper class, and a mass of exploited and oppressed people. Its accumulated riches were a temptation to predatory nations. Men whom he met casually, and who had been beyond the confines of Israel, told him of the increasing power of Assyria and its sweep westward, conquering and despoiling.

Home again in Tekoa, stretched on his back near his folded flocks, his vision lost in the immensity of the starry sky, he pondered these things in his heart. Israel was in danger, and her chief danger lay in the indifference and corruption which prevailed among those who should be her leaders and protectors. If the Assyrian came down upon her she would be unready, her morale at low ebb, her people helpless in dependence upon men who were pursuing self-interest and bartering justice. There was no hope for her, he thought, unless she could be aroused to make clean her life and to turn back to that faith in God which impels to righteousness. He was an inconspicuous and uninfluential shepherd, but he saw what others did not see, and he felt that he must speak, even though none listened.

So when next he went to the city he lifted his voice in the market place and cried the things that were in his heart.

"The lion has roared; who does not fear?" was his dramatic appeal for attention. The roar of the Assyrian lion could be heard with low menace in the east.

As men gathered about him, wondering, amused at his uncouth speech, he struck home to the evils in his land:

"Alas for those who are careless in Zion
And overconfident on the mountain of Samaria!
Men of prominence in the first of the nations
To whom the people of Israel resort!
They who would postpone the day of calamity,
And yet have instituted a rule of violence."

Then, warming to his theme, he denounced the idle and indifferent luxury of the nation:

"They who lie on ivory couches,
And sprawl upon their divans;
Who eat lambs from the flock,
And calves from out the stall;
They drawl to the sound of the lyre
They drink bowlfuls of wine . . .
But they do not grieve over the ruin of Joseph!"

He looked toward the city gate, where the judges sat, and exclaimed:

"Woe to those who turn judgment to wormwood,
And cast righteousness to the ground;
Who hate him that reproves in the gate,
And abhor one who speaks uprightly
How great are your sins—
You persecutors of the righteous, takers of bribes!"

Disaster threatens, he declared, because of these things; defeat and captivity "Because they sell the righteous for money, and the needy for a pair of shoes; they trample on the head of the poor, and turn aside the way of the humble."

It was not a popular message. It never is. But the world has not ceased to need it. Modern civilization is menaced by the same evils which brought overthrow to Israel. The Bible is the most up-to-date book in the world. We could silence all our modern prophets, and find in its pages the very warnings and exhortations which must be heeded if we are to be saved. Had the nations listened to the cry of Amos, the Tekoa herdsmen, there would have been no European war. The sins he denounces are the sins we still cherish. They will lead inevitably to another such judgment if the world does not turn from them.

THE BIBLE IN NEARLY 800 LANGUAGES

The American Bible Society has just published a chart showing the number of languages and dialects into which the Scriptures have been translated. The total is 770 languages out of a possible 1000. The number of translations is being quite rapidly increased, and it is possible that the Bible will be in every known world language in the near future.

Lessons From Everyday Objects

Proverbs 24:20; 26:20; 27:17; Jeremiah 23:29

In the record of our Lord's ministry on earth we frequently meet with this phrase—"As Jesus passed by He saw," that is, He went about with open eyes. In everyday objects He saw the lesson worth learning and teaching, and in His presentation of truth He used these common objects. His allusions to the sower and the seed, the lost sheep on the hillside, the lost coin in the house, the old wineskins, and the burning candle all testify to this.

In the four passages given above, the common every-day objects of life are mentioned and made to illustrate some worth-while lesson.

Who has not seen a candle or lamp or light of some kind burning? How quickly is that light put out. Just a breath of wind, a current of air or the touch of a button, and it is gone. Suddenly, unexpectedly, instantly it disappears; so shall the candle or lamp of the wicked be put out. At a time least expected and in a way entirely unforseen this frequently occurs; a joy ride, some excessive indulgence, some act of bravado and, behold, he is gone! Let this everyday object of the candle or lamp and its sudden disappearance speak its own message.

The replenishing of a fire is a matter of common experience, unless replenished it dies. There are other fires besides those made with straw and wood and coal. What about the fires kindled by silly talk and replenished by slanderous speech? Are you a tale bearer, do you eagerly listen to something harmful to the interests of another? That is like adding wood to a fire. Remember Proverbs 26:20 and repent.

An object lesson in fellowship is brought out in Proverbs 17:17. Did you ever see the butcher sharpen his knife? "As iron sharpeneth iron," through contact, so may our human contact be made beneficial to chase dull care away, to sharpen the wits and to refine the soul.

As we use a hammer to break some hard substance, so is the Word of God used on some lives. It pounds against the rocky walls of ignorance and indifference that surround "the city of man's soul" until they are battered down, and the city is entered by the Lord in His saving and life giving power.

What Are Some Reforms That Call For Our Help?

Luke 3:7-14

After we have become inwardly transformed by the saving grace of God, our lives ought to be properly adjusted to the "reforms that call for our help." The first essential in the matter of reform is to keep things in their proper order, to be clear and logical as a Christian. Remember verse 8, "That God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham," or in other words, He can bring life out of death. He quickens those who are dead in trespasses and sin, stones indeed, into newness of life in Christ Jesus. The children of Abraham are the children of faith, those who believe what God says concerning His Son, that He was "delivered up for our sins" and "raised again in acknowledgment of our justification." All who thus believe are reckoned righteous, they are justified by God. See Romans 4:24, 25.

The greatest and most beneficial reforms have been advocated and brought to fulfilment by men and women positively and intelligently Christian. Who among men in this present generation has struck harder blows at the saloon and its attending evils than Evangelist William A. Sunday? The true children of God being indwelt by the Spirit of Christ feel compassion for all who suffer wrong and within the limits of their power are willing and eager to right existing wrongs.

The message of John the Baptist as recorded in our Scripture lesson, emphasizes the necessity of kindness, justice, honesty, integrity, fairness and contentment. See verses 11, 13, 14. The establishment of such qualities in the various activities of life call for our help. Let us notice that John did not stop with mere good advice, he proclaimed some good news concerning the Holy Spirit, whose coming into human hearts makes all things new and is the real beginning of all true reforms. See verse 16 and compare 1 Corinthians 12:13 and Galatians 5:22,23.

How Can We Win Friends and Keep Them?

Proverbs 27:5, 6, 9, 10

The words of Proverbs 18:24 may well be added to the verses given above. Here is disclosed the first essential in winning friends and in keeping them. In the Authorized Version, it reads, "A man that hath many friends must show himself friendly." The Revised Version gives a different rendering and reads in this way, "He that maketh many friends, doeth it to his own destruction, but there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." In order to find friends, one must be friendly. People are not drawn to those of unfriendly dispositions. It is also true that the kind of friends one makes determines the worth of the friendship. If the friends made are simply feeders, borrowers or so-called spongers, then "he that maketh many friends doeth it to his own destruction."

The counsel of the other Scripture verses is worthy of careful attention.

"To tried friends be faithful." Friendships must be tested and tried. To those that stand the test, to those really tried in the various experiences of life and not found wanting, to those be faithful and true at any cost.

Again, "Faithful are the wounds of a friend." A true friend will not shrink from the task of kindly criticism and correction. The process may not be pleasant to either party in the friendship, but it will be for the profit of both.

"There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother"—the Lord Jesus Christ. How may we gain and hold His friendship? "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." These words were spoken to those who had put faith in Him and made Him the Lord of their lives. Have you followed their good example?

Lessons from the Psalms

Psalm 44:1-8 (Patriotic Consecration Meeting)

The 44th Psalm is divided by Dr. F. B. Meyer in this way:

Verses 1-3—Thou hast helped us.

Verses 4-8—Thou must help us.

Verses 9-16—Thou art not helping us.

Verses 17-22—We are not conscious of having done anything to forfeit thy help.

Verses 23-26—We invoke thy help.

The Psalm recognizes God's control in all things. History attests His goodness and the fathers confirm it. All that we have and are and hope for is of His goodness and mercy which follows us all the days of our life. Out of this recognition there issue the expressions of confidence found in verses 5-8.

The word "but" in verse 9 indicates change: distress and disaster have come.

The closing verses, 23-26, contain a prayer for deliverance from difficulty and defeat, so that all the way through, in prosperity, in perplexity and in prayer God is recognized as supreme and sufficient.

The renewal of such faith in God and of loyalty to His will in community and national affairs should characterize this meeting if it is to carry out the purpose of the committee on topics and be a "Patriotic Consecration Meeting."

A movement has just been inaugurated under the name of the "Minute Men of the Constitution" which gives promise of rapid growth and great usefulness. Company No. 1 of the Minute Men was organized at Evanston, Ill., on the first of May of this present year. Three thousand five hundred people were enrolled at the opening meeting. The organization stands for the renewal and building up of respect for law and the Constitution of the United States. It declares that loyalty to the government of the United States must be above and beyond that of any other organization or group of any kind. It is a movement for good government and is not launched for the interest of any political party. It has come into being largely becauses the safety of our great free and constistitutional government is endangered through aggressive and minority organizations to which political leaders and office seekers often surrender.

Practical and Perplexing Questions

The right is reserved to reject controversial questions and others which may be deemed unprofitable to answer. All questions should be briefly, but clearly stated. Personal answers cannot be sent.—Editors.

"PENTECOSTAL" ERRORS

J. N., Watertown, S. D.,

We are informed that there are divisions among the Pentecostal people, but so far as we know they all hold erroneous views about the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is the third person of the Trinity, and not simply "the spirit of Jesus." The particular branch in your section is also wrong in teaching healing of the body through immersion. As to the baptismal formula there may be difference in practice without being heretical.

"YE ARE GODS"

R. I. H., Roahn, Ind.

Question: Please explain "Ye are Gods" (John 10:34).

Answer: The quotation is from Psalms 82:6. This psalm is a reproof of unrighteous judges, who were the official epresentatives of God to the people, and so elevated above ordinary as sometimes to be called "Gods" figuratively. If they were called "gods" unto whom the word of God merely "came," why should Christ, "the Word of God," be called a blasphemer because He said He was "the Son of God" (vv.35,36)? Such is Christ's argument.

MEANING OF "LAW"

R. W., Madison, Wis.

Questions: (1) What is the scope, or meaning of Paul's use of the term "law" in Galatians 5:4 and other places? (2) Is the law included in Paul's statement in Romans 1:16?

Answers: (1) In Galatians 5:4 Paul places justification by grace alone as over against justification by keeping the law of Moses. But Paul makes variant use of the term "law," and the meaning in each case must be determined by the context. In addition to its meaning the law of Moses see such passages as the following for other uses of the word—Romans 7:21, 23; 8:2; 9:31. (2) Paul is here referring to the gospel.

HOW WE ARE SAVED

M. H. W., Battle Creek, Mich.

Question: Are we saved by the death of Christ, or by His life?

Answer: This question is behind all of the questions now dividing Protestantism. But since salvation deals primarily with sin the answer of the Bible and of the church always has been that we are saved by the substitutionary sacrifice of Jesus Christ upon the cross. However, another answer is now being given by the modern rationalists to the effect that the cross of Christ was simply an appeal and an inspiration to pattern our lives after His sacrificial life, according to which the death of Christ as an atonement for sin is abolished. We of course hold to the plain teaching of Scripture as above stated.

HOLINESS

E. H. K., Broughton, Kan.

Question: What do you teach about holiness, the new birth, and the new theology?

Answers: (1) As to holiness, or sanctification, we believe that positionally we are sanctified when we are regenerated; that we are continually being sanctified as we grow in grace and knowledge; that we shall be completely sanctified when the body is redeemed. No, we do not believe in complete eradication of sin, as the result of a "second blessing." (2) The doctrine of the new birth, or regeneration, is clearly taught in the Scriptures. (3) We do not accept the teachings of the new theology for they are contrary to the teaching of the Bible.

WRITERS OF THE CREEDS

W. L., Bridgeton, N. J.

Questions: (1) Who wrote the Nicene Creed? (2) The Apostles' Creed? (3) Where is the doctrine of the trinity found?

Answers: (1) At the Council of Nicea, B. C. 325, Eusebius of Caesarea was the man who proposed a creed already in use in his own church, and and which was adopted after being amended and modified. The amendments were not satisfactory to Eusebius, however. (2) The oldest form of the Apostles' Creed was in existence before the middle of the second century. Its present form came into existence considerably later. The additions were made by unknown writers. (3) The doctrine of the trinity is not found in any one place in the Bible, but is rather the general teaching of Scripture. The passage in 1 John 5:7, to which you refer, is not in the oldest manuscripts, but no doubt expresses the belief of the early church.

NEED OF THE RESURRECTION

J. J. S., Grandview, Man.

Questions: (1) Why was it necessary for Jesus to have a literal bodily resurrection? (2) Why is it necessary for believers? (3) What does "raised again for our justification" mean? (4) How is the risen Christ "our life"? (5) In what sense did "Christ die the death that we should die" if only His body died?

Answers: (1) In order to prove His complete victory over death, to show God's power in our behalf (Eph. 1:19, 20), and to become "the firstfruits" (1 Cor. 15:20). (2) Because our salvation includes the body (Rom. 8:11,23). (3) Because His resurrection sealed to us all the benefits of His death. (4) Because we are united to Him by faith, as the branch is united to the vine. (5) The crucifixion was more than the mere death of the body. In that awful hour of agony Christ bore the sin of the world, even to experiencing the sense of separation from the Father. He bore our sins, and was made to be sin for us (2 Cor. 5:21; Gal. 3:13).

MYSTERY OF CHRIST'S DEATH

M. T. M., New Providence, Iowa.

Questions: (1) Was it just the humanity of Christ that died upon the cross? Or, was it some mysterious blending of the divine and the human? (2) Please explain the enclosed texts.

Answers: (1) There was never any "mysterious blending of the divine and the human" natures in Christ. They were united, but not blended. The crucifixion of Christ affected only His body though it meant more than the mere death of His body. In that awful hour there was a sense of utter loneliness and separation from the Father during which Christ suffered in the place of the sinner. (2) John 6:48, 53, 57. Christ as the "Bread of Life" is appropriated only by faith. Romans 5:6, 8, 9, 10. The sinner is justified and reconciled to God by the death of Christ. Since there was power in His death to reconcile us to God, i. e., if we are saved from the guilt of sin through the Cross, much more will the living Christ be able to save us unto the uttermost. He is able to both to save and to keep us saved.

BRIEF MENTION

M. V. B., Douglass, Man.

Repentance was just as necessary under Paul's preaching as under Peter's. It necessarily precedes baptism.

J. C. T., Baltimore, Md.

Yes; in Galatians 4:4 Paul plainly refers to the virgin birth of our Lord, as does also John in the phrase, "only begotten Son."

W. M. G., Mathiston, Miss.

We are not acquainted with any denomination that teaches that the spirit at death returns to God and is immediately rewarded or judged while the body goes to the grave and is never resurrected.

J. T. D., Union, I. C.

It is possible that the relative lengths of the different parts of Nebuchadnezzar's great image may signify the relative duration of the four great world empires, but it is going beyond what is written to place much emphasis upon this parallelism.

E. J., Brookville, O.

The "fruit of the Spirit" (Gal. 5:22,23) describes those personal qualities which are the result of the indwelling and power of the Holy Spirit, while the "much fruit" of John 15:5 is the fruit of discipleship (v. 8) and is the result of service.

M. B. H., Rolling Hill, Va.

John 3:5 and 1 John 5:8 apparently refer to water baptism. They do not teach that water baptism produces salvation, although it bears an essential relationship to salvation. In the second passage baptism is one of the three witnesses.

In our reply in the April issue to H. A., Brinkly, Ark., we stated that we did not know where a correspondence course in New Testament Greek was to be had. We are pleased now to state that such a course may be obtained from the School of Simplified Study Ltd., 19-21 Ludgate Hill, London, E. C. 4., England. The same school also issues a correspondence course in Hebrew.

K. B., Bluefields, Nic., C. A.

(1) Marriage was divinely instituted long before the Christian church existed. The marriage vow can hardly be called "the vow of the church." But each minister must decide for himself whether he shall solemnize the marriage of any who are not Christians. (2) That Christ died as a penalty for sin is proved by such texts as the following: John 1:29; 2 Corinthians 5:21; Galatians 3:13; Isaiah 53:5; 1 Peter 2:24.

B. H. E., Marion Jct., S. Dak.

"Let the dead bury the dead" (Matt. 8:22) means that it is of greater importance to follow Christ immediately than to wait to bury the dead. It is not likely that the father had yet died, for it was customary to bury upon the day of death. The case is one of indefinite procrastination. Literally understood it is, let the spiritually dead bury the physically dead. He is spiritually dead who for any reason whatever should delay to follow Christ.

Nehemiah, the Bold Builder
Nehemiah 4:6-15

Golden Text:—"Be ye not afraid of them, remember the Lord."—Nehemiah 4:14.

In order to properly teach this lesson, it will be necessary to master the content of the book of Nehemiah. So, in presenting the lesson we will take a wider view than the text to be printed.

Nehemiah was a cupbearer to the Persian king. While performing his duty as cupbearer, he learned of the distress of his brethren in Jerusalem. The walls of the city were broken down and its gates burned and the remnant of the captives were in great affliction and reproach. This news greatly moved Nehemiah. He sat down and wept and mourned several days, fasting and praying before God.

Having secured a leave of absence from the Persian court and credentials from the king, he journeyed to Jerusalem. After resting three days without disclosing his purpose to anyone, he made a survey of the lands by night. Having thus obtained first-hand information, he called the representatives of the Jews together and said, "Let us build the walls of Jerusalem." He thus made known the hand of God in bringing him to Jerusalem with the authority to rebuild its walls.

I. Preparation for the Building (chap. 3).

The division of labor in this project shows Nehemiah's administrative ability. A wise distribution of labor makes difficult tasks easy. If a man is assigned a definite task to perform and held responsible for doing it, he is thus impelled to do his best. Note some outstanding features of this great work:

1. Stress Laid upon Indifference (3:5). In administrative tasks it is just that unfaithfulness should be pointed out. Such action will be a warning to some and encouragement to others, in that it shows the integrity of the director.

2. Help Rendered by the Women (3:12). Perhaps Shallum had no sons to aid him. It is a fine thing for women to take hold, even in building a wall, when there are no men to do it.

3. Stress Laid upon Earnestness of Some (3:20). If one knows that his faithfulness will be recognized, he will earnestly pursue his tasks.

4. Everyone Built over Against His Own House (3:10,23,28). Man's chief concern is for his family. No incentive to exertion is quite so strong as that which concerns his own family. For them a man will do, dare and die.

5. Certain Guilds of Men Undertook Certain Work. (3:8, 31, 32). Wise administration sometimes calls for such alignment of efforts. Men of the same class and craft will surely work better together.

II. Hindrances Encountered. (4:1-6:14).

1. Scoffing of Sanballat and Tobiah (4:1-6; cf. 2:19, 20). The opposers of God's servants usually begin by hurling at them shafts of ridicule. They called the Jews but a feeble folk and asserted that the tread of a prowling fox would break down their stone wall.

2. Conspiracy for a Sudden Attack (4:7-9). When the enemy saw that the work was actually succeeding they changed from ridicule to an attempt to throw the workmen into a panic. When the enemy cannot succeed by scoffing then he resorts to intimidation.

3. Conspiracy with the Jews (4:10-23). They sought by means of the Jews from the outside to discourage their brethren by showing that the task was hopeless and that at any time they were subject to a sudden and secret attack.

4. Greed and Oppression of the Rulers (5:1-13). The Jews of that day like the profiteers in our day, took advantage of the poor, and oppressed them so that they mortgaged their land and sold their daughters into slavery. Nehemiah boldly rebuked them for their crimes and ordered a restoration to be made, exacting an oath of them that they would fulfil their promises.

5. Scheme to Take Nehemiah's Life (6:1-14). When Sanballat and Tobiah failed in every way they sought by craft to get Nehemiah away that they might kill him. Though they besought him four times he could not be entrapped.

III. The Wall Completed. (6:15-7:4).

So energetically did they pursue their tasks that in fifty-two days the wall was completed. When the enemies heard that in spite of all their schemes the work was actually completed they were cast down, for they perceived that the work was of God. Upon the completion of the work Nehemiah set his brother to rule over Jerusalem and gave instructions as to the opening and closing of the gates of the city.

We may learn from this:

1. That God's children are beset by enemies, but in view of Romans 8:31 they should not fear.

2. That when beset by enemies, we should pray (4:9). Their faith was accompanied by wise precautions: (1) Set a watch (4:9). (2) Men were permitted to be with their families (4:13), and would thus fight better. (3) Half worked and half watched, all armed for battle (4:16). (4) They worked with sword in one hand (4:17). (5) They slept in their clothes in readiness (4:23). Prayer and faith are not slothful or inactive. Faith is always accompanied with precautionary means.

IV. Nehemiah's Reforms.

After the dedication of the walls, they read in the book of Moses God's laws concerning marriage, and it was found that many of the Jews had married heathen wives. Nehemiah demanded a correction of this evil. Then, too, it was discovered that the house of the Lord was made a place for buying and selling. Tobiah who had been allowed to come into the courts of God for this business was cast forth with all his household stuff. Then there was the violation of the Sabbath, in that business was carried on on that holy day. Nehemiah courageously met the situation and corrected these abuses.

Esther, the Patriot Queen
Esther 4:13-5:3

Golden Text:—"Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?"—Esther 4:14.

In order to appreciate this lesson it will be necessary to make a brief survey of the book. Though the name of God does not appear in the book, there is a hidden hand back of all its movements causing all things to work together for good. It is a book of divine providence.

I. Esther Made Queen (chaps. 1, 2).

The scene of this drama took place in the Persian court where Ahasuerus (Xerxes) sat upon his throne surrounded by his princes and servants in a six month's festival, the aim of which was to impress the people of his mighty empire with the fact of his greatness. The last days of this feast were marked with drunken debauchery. In his drunken frenzy the king commanded Vashti to come before the people to make a display of her beauty. Vashti showed her independence by refusing to obey. She was instantly deposed. In providing a queen to take her place, the most beautiful maidens in the empire were brought together from which the king might make a selection. The choice fell upon Esther, a maid of the Jewish captivity. The king did not know that she was a Jewess, but God knew, and He put her there for a purpose.

II. Haman's Plot Against the Jews (chap. 3).

1. The Occasion (vv. 1-6). For some reason Haman was given chief place over the princes. Though all bowed before him, Mordecai, Esther's cousin, stoutly refused to do so.

2. Its Nature (vv. 7-15). Haman was moved to lay hands upon Mordecai for his insubordination, but for some reason he desisted. Instead of such drastic action he laid a plot to destroy all the Jews and thereby take vengeance on Mordecai, for he had learned that he was a Jew. He made the king believe that the Jews were an unprofitable people and induced him to order their annihilation, promising to bring into the royal treasury an enormous sum of money.

III. Haman's Plot Foiled (4:1-8:14).

1. Fasting Among the Jews (4:1-3). When Mordecai and his people perceived all that was done they put on sackcloth and ashes and cried to God. "Is any afflicted, let him pray" (James 5:13). God is greater than the mightiest king.

2. Mordecai's Charge to Esther (4:4-14). He sent to Esther a copy of the decree and charged her to go before the king and make supplication for her people.

Esther pointed out the difficulties in the way. Possible death awaited her should her uninvited presence not meet the approval of the king. There are times when death must be faced in doing duty.

3. Esther's Daring Adventure (4:16-5:2). Mordecai pointed out to her that her own life was endangered. She might meet death by venturing into the king's presence. She was sure she would meet death unless Haman's plot was foiled. When thus brought face to face with her duty, the heroism which so frequently has characterized her race moved her to accept the hazardous task and prayerfully carry it out. On the third day of her fasting and prayer she put on her royal apparel and stood in the king's court, winning his approval.

4. Esther Pleading for Her People (5:3-7:6). Esther knew that an easy way to the heart of the king was through his stomach, so she invited him and Haman to a banquet. She proposed a second banquet, at which she would make her request known. During this interval some strange things were taking place—a gallows was being built upon which to hang Mordecai, at the heartless suggestion of Haman's wife. Then the king was having a sleepless night. He was moved to search the court records where he found that Mordecai had not been rewarded for saving the king's life. So in order to express his appreciation for this act of heroism on the part of Mordecai, it turned out that Haman was obliged to do honor to the one he was getting ready to hang. At the second banquet Esther pointed out Haman's wicked plot to kill the Jews and asked of the king that her people be saved. In his wrath the king ordered Haman hanged on the gallows which he had prepared for Mordecai.

5. The Counter Decree Issued (8:5-14). The original decree could not be reversed, so a counter decree was issued which enabled the Jews to defend themselves. This was dispatched to the furthest parts of the kingdom, so at the appointed time there was great slaughter and the Jews were saved. God granted relief, and the Feast of Purim was instituted as a memorial of their deliverance.

Review: Great Men and Women of the Old Testament
Devotional Reading, Psalm 99

Golden Text:—"Seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us"—Hebrews 12:1.

The method of review again must be determined by the grade of class, by the inclination of the teacher, and by the nature of the studies of the quarter. Two methods are suggested. The first one is taken from Crannell's Pocket Lessons. The general subject is, "What Twenty Centuries Teach the Twentieth."

I. The Lesson of Vision.
1. Abraham, the Pioneer—Lesson 2.
2. Moses, the Nation Builder—Lesson 4.
3. Isaiah, the Kingdom Seer—Lesson 9.

II. The Lesson of Leadership.
1. Samuel, the Foundation Layer—Lesson 6.
2. David, the Solidifier—Lesson 7.
3. Nehemiah, the Rebuilder—Lesson 11.

III. The Lesson of Courage.
1. Elijah, the Reformer—Lesson 8.
2. Jeremiah, the Truth Teller—Lesson 10.
3. Esther, the Intercessor—Lesson 12

IV. The Lesson of Character.
1. Ruth, the Woman Who Clave—Lesson 5.
2. Joseph, the Son Who Remembered—Lesson 3.

V. The Lesson of Life.

Jesus, the summit of the Old Testament, Foundation of the New, Life of Both—Lesson 1.

The second method suggested—character study. The different characters can be assigned two weeks before, upon which the pupils bring a brief essay or report giving a sketch of the particular hero.

A third method is to give a brief summary of each lesson.

Lesson 1. The truth concerning the risen Christ is the answer for all our questions and the impulse of our testimony to others.

Lesson 2. Abraham in obedience to the call of God went out not knowing whither he went. He so completely trusted God that he was willing to go all the way with Him.

Lesson 3. Though Joseph was sold into slavery because of the hatred of his brethren, God exalted him to a place of power in Egypt and made him the saviour of his brethren who hated him. Joseph's forgiving love is a reminder of the forgiving love of our Saviour.

Lesson 4. Even though Pharaoh's decree was for the destruction of all the male children of the Hebrews, Moses was preserved and educated in the Egyptian court. God was thus shaping an instrument for the destruction of the Egyptians and to give to the world a code of laws which is dominant today.

Lesson 5. When Ruth became acquainted with the true God, she chose to turn her back upon her native land and kindred and identify herself with God's people.

Lesson 6. Samuel was given in answer to his mother's prayer. In early boyhood his mother gave him back to the Lord. He lived before the people and served the Lord in such a way that he could challenge the people to show wherein he had wronged them.

Lesson 7. When Samuel went to anoint a new king over Israel, he had all the sons of Jesse to pass before him. Although the eldest to human eyes seemed fitted to be a king, yet while outer appearances were favorable the inner reality seen by God were against him. "Man looketh on the outer appearance, but God looketh on the heart."

Lesson 8. Elijah threw down to the people his ringing challenge, calling upon the people to decide between Baal and the Lord. The God who answered by fire was to be the true God. Following the complete failure of the priests of Baal, the false prophets were executed.

Lesson 9. Upon the sight of the Lord, Isaiah was convicted of his sin. When cleansed by fire from the divine altar he heard and responded to the call of God. Only those who have had a vision of the Almighty are fit for His service.

Lesson 10. Jeremiah for his faithfulness in making known the Word of the Lord, was most bitterly hated and persecuted. Though he was regarded as a traitor and put into the place of death, he remained faithful to God who called him.

Lesson 11. When Nehemiah heard of the distress of his brethren in Jerusalem, he was moved with pity for them. Although enjoying prosperity, the grave distress of his people was taken to his own heart. Though doing the Lord's work, he was bitterly opposed.

Lesson 12. In the providence of God, Esther came to be queen of Persia at the opportune time to save her people. There is a definite place and purpose in every life. The great need for each one is to discern it and respond to it.

July 1
John the Baptist
Luke 3:3-8; 7:24-28

Golden Text:—"He shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink"—Luke 1:15.

John was a great man. In announcing his birth the angel said, "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord." He was not only great in the Lord's sight, but was great when measured by the standards of men. In the teaching of this lesson a survey should be made of John's life and work.

I. Birth and Ministry Foretold (Matt. 3:3; cf. Isa. 40:3).

He was thought about and his work planned long before he was born. He came as God's messenger. His life was a plan of God. He was said to be a man sent from God (John 1:6). There is a sense in which every life is planned—everyone is sent from God. Everyone should remember that God has something to do with his life. God thought about us before we were born. Every life that is marred and blighted is contrary to God's plan and purpose. It is not God's will that any should perish. Everyone's life should be a blessing to others and to himself.

II. His Character.

1. Humble (Luke 3:4). He did not seek human praise and commendation, but rather shrank from them. His supreme concern was to proclaim Christ. He did not make himself prominent—was only a voice calling upon people to prepare for the Messiah. His person and habits were a protest against the luxury and hypocritical formality of his time. Every true preacher and teacher seeks to honor Christ rather than himself.

2. Courageous (Luke 3:7). He faced a great multitude and struck hard at their sins. He did not trim his message to suit the crowd. He even denounced the religious leaders of his time and demanded to them fruits worthy of repentance. There is great need today for men of courage to speak forth the message of God without fear or favor.

III. His Preaching (Luke 3:3-8).

1. Demanded Repentance (vv. 3-6). Suddenly emerging from his seclusion, he came into the region of the Jordan as a messenger of God, calling upon the people to repent as a means of a preparation for the coming of the Messiah. He declared the crooked way must be made straight, the proud and selfish must be abased, and the rough ways should be made smooth.

2. Demanded Proofs of Penitence (vv. 7, 8). He insisted that their false religions had to be abandoned—their sinful hearts had to be renovated—showed them that the vile passions of their souls must be uprooted. A change of mind, that is, the turning of a soul from sin to God, was necessary. This is a preparation which must be made before one can see and experience the salvation of God. John told them frankly that their ancestry would not avail anything. The only thing that would count before God was a changed heart.

IV. Jesus' Testimony to John (Luke 7:24-28).

Because John did not see the interval between the "sufferings of Christ" and the "glory that should follow" he was perplexed, therefore he sent a deputation to Jesus for light. The prophets did not see, or at least did not make clear, the interval between the crucifixion of Christ and His second coming. The two events were so presented as to appear to be in close succession. John in his preaching had stressed the mighty judgments which should take place at the appearance of the Messiah. The turn things were taking, he himself being imprisoned with the gloomy prospect of death, was in great contrast with the coming of the Messiah in fiery judgment—"the ax laid at the root of the tree" and "the chaff to be burned up with unquenchable fire" (Matt. 3:10, 12). The Messiah had to be the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world (John 1:29). The trend of events puzzled him. It was not lack of faith, but confusion of mind that prompted his inquiry. Christ's testimony defends him against such an accusation. He declared that John was inferior to no prophet that had appeared. Christ vindicated him against a vacillating mind because of the storms of persecution. He was not like a reed shaken by the wind (v. 24) or the hardships of prison life (v. 25). John had lived a life of self-denial, therefore he did not leave his faith in Christ because of the dungeon. Jesus declared that no greater prophet had arisen. That which perplexed John was the delay in judgment—the day of God's patience while gathering out the Church. This was a truth not disclosed to the prophets—that which Paul made known because a special revelation had been granted.

V. The Martyrdom of John (Mark 6:14-29).

While John was in prison Herod had frequent interviews with him. John boldly told him that it was unlawful for him to have his brother's wife. He did not mince matters even with the king. This so enraged the licentious Herodias that she caused his death. He sealed his testimony with his blood.

NOTICE TO OUR READERS

William J. Davis, evangelist, Box 242, Ozark, Ark., writes that in the mountain district, where he has been working for the past two years, the people have very little or no reading matter. Mr. Davis would appreciate it if our readers would send him back numbers of the MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY, or Sunday-school papers, both for children and young people, wall charts, mottoes, etc. Mr. Davis will see that these are properly distributed.

A REQUEST FOR MISSIONARY SUPPLIES

Dr. R. M. Wilson of Korea, whose present address is 5102 Wells Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., in writing to the Family Altar League, asks that the following announcement be published in the magazine:

"We are planning to return this summer, August 23, and I wish to take back some supplies for the lepers. Could you get into the Family Altar League Magazine, or the one that takes its place, that we need for the lepers at Kwangju, Korea, the following: Two graphophones, two sewing machines, two dental engines and other dental instruments, and other surgical instruments; also any kind of old clothing that is in good shape? All that is necessary is to pack your box, ship to Montgomery Ward & Company, Chicago, Illinois, and ask that it be sent with Dr. R. M. Wilson's shipment to Korea. We could use also blankets, bandages and surgical supplies, in fact most any kind of hospital supplies. There is enough waste material in this country about the hospitals to run our hospitals out there if there was some way to make the needs known."

"The dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty"—Psalm 74:20.

When Christ's testimony, "By their fruits ye shall know them," is applied to the heathen religions their origin is unmistakably revealed as being satanic and not divine. Not only do they utterly lack the lofty moral tone and beneficent acts that characterize Christianity, but they display the very opposite qualities of nauseating licentiousness and revolting brutality.

Heathen religions are religions of terror and hate, and their philosophy has given rise to many horrible practices. In Africa and the South Sea Islands, for example, it has led to human sacrifices in order to supply the needs and avert the vengeance of the gods. It is responsible for the burial alive of the wives or slaves of a chieftain along with his dead body. Even cannibalism itself is said to have had a religious origin as a sacrificial feast. Heathen religion produces witchcraft, that fiendish system which has taken a toll of countless lives as victims of the poison cup. Slavery, polygamy, caste and child-marriage, with all their unspeakable horrors, are other direct products of these religions.

Heathen lands are thus fitly spoken of as "the dark places of the earth," because they are without that true moral and spiritual light which only the gospel can supply. Consequently they are "full of the habitations of cruelty," where Satan the "god of this world" reigns and through his deluded devotees perpetrates all manner of wickedness and inflicts every form of suffering.

"HEATHEN RELIGIONS GOOD ENOUGH!"

Answering the old stock argument of missionary critics that "the religions of other races are good enough for them." Dr. A. J. Brown, the well known secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Missions, says: "Then they are 'good enough' for us, for the peoples of 'other races' are our fellow men, with the needs of our common humanity. We have not heard, however, of any critic who believes that Islam and Hinduism and Buddhism are 'good enough' for Europeans and Americans, and we have scant respect for the Phariseeism which asserts that they will suffice for the Persians and East Indians and Chinese. The fact is that the best of the ethnic faiths have utterly failed to produce high character or social purity."

The following is a description, necessarily much abbreviated, of a religious festival of the Tamils of South India, written by an eye witness:

"This Thaipusam festival celebrates the appearance of the Hindoo god Subermanium to his devotees. The ceremonies last two days. On the evening of the first day the procession of the Silver Car takes place. The car is very ornate, made of silver and studded with jewels, and is drawn by two white oxen with horns highly polished and tipped with gold ornaments. It proceeds slowly through all the principal streets of the city and is followed by thousands of Tamil Hindoos. In front of it go four dancing figures, two men and two women, like the big figures in an American circus with men inside to make them appear to walk and dance. These figures are crude and vulgar in outline. The heat from the torches, the odor of the incense and the reeking bodies of the dancers are all very repulsive.

"The next day begin the horrible tortures that these ignorant people go through in the name of religion. We went to the temple early in the morning to watch them get ready for the day's procession. In every available space were the brass vessels containing the sacrifices—goat's milk, rice, flowers and other things supposed to secure a special blessing from the gods. Nearby was a sacred (?) stagnant pool of vile water in which the people cleansed themselves for worship. We saw men having pins an inch long put into their flesh. Some had as many as 700 pins put in, and I never saw such suffering in all my life. Their faces wore an agonized expression, they fairly writhed with pain, and the perspiration poured from their bodies. A group of men stood round each of them and with every insertion of a pin they chanted Hindoo songs. Others had spikes fully six inches long through their cheeks and tongues. Their tongues were swollen as they held them out of their mouths by the long spikes. Still others had spikes three feet long in their bodies, and supported a god over their heads. One man who had spikes through his face and pins all over his body was so wild with pain that he fairly danced all the way. The most horrible sight of all was a man who had long hooks inserted in the flesh of his back, by which he pulled a sacred cart. I hope never to see again such an expression of agony on any one's face. He had to be supported all the way along. And then there were those who walked on spiked shoes, or wore hoops round their bodies from which projecting sharp spikes pierced them at every step.

"We saw only the pins inserted. The spiking was done inside the temple where we were not allowed to go, and when we caught a glimpse of the filth of the temple floor we certainly had no desire to enter. But the groaning of the victims inside was enough for us.

"All of these per-

MOHAMMEDANS AT PRAYER

This is a picture of what is probably the largest "prayer meeting" in the world. It shows 100,000 Moslems at prayer in the great Jumna Mosque at Delhi, India.

Such a scene has a significant bearing upon the political crisis today in India and the Near East. Appeals are made to the young manhood of India to help throw off the yoke of foreign rule by means of "non-cooperation" plus "soul-force." These two words recur again and again in the political speeches of Indian leaders.

By "non-co-operation" is meant a systematic attempt to boycott everything British. But what is "soul-force?" The independence leaders in India are playing upon religious susceptibilities and have thus succeeded in enlisting the help of both Hindoos and Mohammedans. These two bitterly antagonistic races have been strangely united in a common cause and the secret of their union finds expression in the one word "soul-force." The annulling of the Treaty of Sevres and the successful stand of Turkey against the allied powers is attributed to this same power or magic.

If it be asked how this "soul-force" is generated, the Moslems will point with pride to their great gatherings for prayer, such as this picture shows, as well as to their pilgrimages to sacred places.

Christians will do well to realize the tremendous influence exerted upon the millions of India by these gatherings and ceremonies. And what a lesson is there here for us as to the need and power of real prayer to the true God as the only hope of success against the powers of darkness in heathen and Moslem lands!

formances are in fulfilment of some vow made at a time of great trouble, and with the hope of securing the favor of the gods."

HOW MONEY IS TURNED INTO SOULS

Among the many letters from the mission fields expressing gratitude for donations sent by the Missionary Union of the Institute is one of special interest from the Moravian mission among the Indians of Nicaragua, C. A. The missionary tells how the money is being used for pioneer work among the Sumu Indians on the Waspuck River. He goes on to say: "Last year we had quite a unique experience with these Indians. They live ten days' distance from Sangsangta, our youngest station, opened in 1907 in the center of a vast heathen district. Already we have over 600 members here. These Sumus had been visited a few times, but were so far away that we had been unable to open work among them. What was our surprise and joy when last August twenty Sumu Indians, half-naked and with long, disorderly hair hanging over their shoulders appeared in Sangsangta and begged our missionary there to go and dedicate a church which they had built among them in order to hear more about Jesus. The missionary gladly responded, and found a neat little meeting house and also a house prepared for the missionary to stay in. On the dedication day he preached to 200 people from far and near, who eagerly listened to the gospel message.

"These new developments necessitated our seeking an evangelist to place in the midst of these people to guide them into the truth. Our prayers were answered and God sent us the right man. He has gone there with his family and is doing splendid work. The last report tells that sixty-six heathen had already applied for baptism. It is to the support of this worker in this pioneer field that your money is being applied."

The missionary who writes the above added that he was himself planning to leave after Easter for a thorough visit to the Sumu Indian district, and he asked for earnest prayer in behalf of this promising new field and work.

THE TENDER MERCIES OF THE TURKS

Following upon the publicity given in the press to the atrocities committed by the Turks in connection with the sack of Smyrna and the deportation of Armenians and other Christians from their homes in Asia Minor, certain American newspapers saw fit to come to the defense of Turkey on the assumption that unwarranted charges had been made against her. One editorial quoted a U. S, Rear-Admiral as saying "that the Turks have been much maligned and misunderstood, that most of the Armenian massacres were fakes, and that in the so-called deportations the Moslems merely removed the Christians from arid mountain regions of the interior to smiling valleys along the Mediterranean." Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Boyes (M. B. I. graduate of 1912, and Correspondence student respectively), in charge of the Kennedy Memorial Hospital of the Presbyterian Mission, Tripoli, Syria, have sent an effective reply to these pro-Turkish reports in the form of an article accompanied by photos taken by themselves, setting forth the actual condition of numerous Armenian refugees who had been succored and medically treated in their hospital. Their description of the pitiful plight of these sick, wounded and starving victims of Turkish hate and cruelty at once shows up the hollowness of the attempts to cover the Turkish crimes.

The situation in the Near East is grave indeed. The Turks' military victory over the Greeks has been almost eclipsed by their diplomatic victory over the Allies. They have won control over Constantinople and the right to expel their non-Moslem population, and have secured the abrogation of all agreements prior to 1918. Far from being brought to book for their outrages upon the Armenians, there has been a shameful begging

A CHILDREN'S SERMON

"A little child shall lead them."—Isa. 11:6

1. Lead them in Faith (1 Sam. 17: 33-37).
2. Lead them in Prayer (2 Kings 5:2, 3).
3. Lead them in Work (Luke 2:49).
4. Lead them to Church (2 Chron. 34:1-3).
5. Lead them to Christ (Mark 10: 13, 14).
6. Lead them to Heaven (2 Sam. 12:23).

—C. H. Benson.

ASK!

A Suggestion for a Children's Day Talk

Matthew 7:7

Ask. Something needed. Child needs bread, asks mother. We need saving from sin. Whom shall we ask? There is only One who can save us.

Seek. Something lost. Illustrate. Through sin we have lost peace, joy, heaven. The promise to those who seek is—"ye shall find."

Knock. Some one wanting to come in: Don't give a runaway knock! Wait for answer.—Home Mission Worker.

THE THREE CROSSES

"And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right-hand, and the other on the left."—Luke 23:33.

1. One dies for Sin (John 1:29).
2. One dies in Sin (Luke 23:39-41).
3. One dies saved from Sin (Luke 23:42, 43).

One dies in love; one dies in anguish; one dies in faith.

One dies a benefactor; one dies a blasphemer; one dies a believer.

One tree yields blood; one tree yields briers; one tree yields blossoms.

—C. H. Benson.

HOMILETICAL HINTS

Sometimes a title is all that is needed to start the sermonizer on a train of thought, and may prove as good or better than an outline. The following are suggestions:

Rom. 8: 23. Groans that should be encouraged!

Luke 12: 20. An uncertain certainty, and a certain uncertainty.

1 John 1: 10 and 5: 10. The dreadful truth!

Luke 3:20. The last straw of sin.

Ps. 116:12,13. A wistful question and a wise resolve.

Luke 14:17 ("Come"). The gospel in one syllable.

John 15:16. The unsought nomination.

SEVEN PORTRAITS OF CHRIST

As Given in the Addresses to the Seven Churches (Revelation 1 and 3)

1. "He that holdeth the seven stars in His right hand, who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks." He is not indifferent to declension. He examines and marks departure from first love.

2. "The first and the last, which was dead and is alive." If persecution breaks out, we are reminded of our Lord who was put to death, but who is alive again, and is the Overcomer of death, and the Giver of a crown of life.

3. "He which hath the sharp sword with the two edges." This is Christ's character where there is a mingling with the world, the teaching of error, and the presence of evil among His people.

4. "The Son of God, who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet like fine brass." This is where Jezebel, the false prophetess, is allowed, and communion with an evil and idolatrous world.

5. "He that hath the seven Spirits of God and the seven stars." Here is profession without reality; but Christ still holds "the seven stars," and the plentitude of the Spirit's power. Nothing can touch that!

6. "He that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and shutteth and no man openeth." He that is holy and true calls for separation from evil, and, spite of opposition, preserves an open door.

7. "The Amen, the faithful and true Witness, the beginning of the creation of God." Amid open apostasy, we are reminded of the Amen, by whom God works out all His purposes, and who was the faithful Witness when all had failed. Individuals are counselled, and if "any man" hears and opens, communion is enjoyed.

The Bible Champion

THE BIBLE CHAMPION stands for precisely what its name indicates. It holds that the whole Bible is Divinely inspired, its truth invincible, its authority in matters of faith and practice absolute.

The CHAMPION believes that the Bible and true science and philosophy are ever in accord; its editors and contributors are men of culture and lovers of knowledge. However, they do not believe that the Bible can always be made to harmonize with the human speculations and unproved hypothesis.

The CHAMPION aims to be a practical, suggestive magazine of religious thought. It does not sidestep any of the fundamental doctrines; it never uses camouflage in any of its statements, but is always frank and aboveboard. It says what it means and means what it says.

Alike in the helpful character of its contents and in the excellence of its typographical make-up, the CHAMPION commends itself to ministers, college and seminary students, and thinking laymen. It is published monthly.

CHRISTIAN CHARACTER
(Titus 2:12, 13)

Sober should a Christian be,
None more sensible than he!
Balanced, sane, without excess;
Marked by even-temperedness;
Adding virtue to his faith,
Being, doing, all he saith!

Righteous should a Christian be,
None more honorable than he!
Honest as the day, and straight;
Just in measure, just in weight;
Truth and fairness having learned,
Right where others are concerned.

Godly should a Christian be,
None more fixed of heart than he!
God within him, God around,
God in all life's workings found;
Loving God with strength and soul,
Godliness his aim and goal.

Watchful should a Christian be,
None more open-eyed than he;
Seeking for the signs of day,
And his Lord upon the way;
Trained with life and work to cope
Looking for that blessed hope!

HOW TO KEEP THE HOME (ALTAR) FIRES BURNING
Deuteronomy 6:6-12

1. By Memorizing the Word.
   "Shall be in thine heart" (v. 6).
2. By Teaching the Word to your own children.
   "Teach them diligently unto thy children (v. 7).
3. By Godly Conversation in the home.
   "Shalt talk of them (his words) when thou sittest in thine house" (v. 7).
4. By Godly Conversation when out of the home (v 7).
   "When thou walkest by the way" (v. 7).
5. By Meditation (day and night, Ps. 1).
   "When thou liest down, and risest up" (v. 7).
6. By Carrying the Word, and putting it where you can see it.
   "Bind them for a sign upon thine hand" (v. 8).
   Every Christian should carry at least a New Testament.
   "Write them upon the posts of thy house" (v. 9).
7. By Not Forgetting the Lord.
   "Beware lest thou forget the Lord" (v. 12).

—W. A. Rowland.

A LIFE OF COMPROMISE
2 Kings 5:18

Naaman type of sinner cleansed, but does not make Christ Lord in life.

I. Requirements for Compromise.

1. Faith held in silence—no confession before king.
2. Life lived in seclusion—Nicodemus; Joseph of Arimathea.

II. Reasons for Compromise.

1. Associations—King and nobles.
2. Cowardice—feared to testify for Israel's God.
3. Indulgence—intended to continue idolatry.
4. Gain—feared loss of position.

III. Results of Compromise.

1. Negligence—no revival in Damascus from his testimony.
2. Weakness—never became leader for God.
3. Hypocrisy—saved by Jehovah, worshipped Rimmon.
4. Disloyalty — no public witness (Rom. 10:10).
5. Idolatry—faith without works dead.

Judgment upon compromising—Saul and Amalek.

Blessing upon faithful—Elijah at Carmel; Daniel in Babylon. Rufus had a shield, image God one side, Devil on other. We cannot serve two masters; not worship God and serve idols.

—D. Lauck Currens.

You will find, as life goes on, that the amount of time you spend alone with God, and with your own soul, has no little to do with your comfort, and your strength, and your fruitfulness.—Alexander Whyte.

THE GREATEST BOOK ON "DISPENSATIONAL TRUTH" IN THE WORLD

This book is bound in cloth, Atlas form, size 10½x11 inches, and is one inch thick. It contains 34 chapters, 300 columns of reading matter, equivalent to an ordinary book of 450 pages, and also 42 splendid Prophetical Charts, 9x20 inches, covering two pages, 48 one page charts, and numerous cuts. The Charts are simple, clear, uniform in style, and present every phase of "Dispensational Truth." It is the result of 35 years' study of the "Prophetic Word." The book is SANE, not a "TIME SETTER," contains no speculative matter, is not made up of quotations from other writers, but is based solely on the Scriptures from the "FUTURIST STANDPOINT." It is of permanent value, and a mine of information on "Prophetic Truth" for the busy Pastor, Evangelist, Bible Teacher, and all lovers of the Word. It is largely used in Bible Schools all over the world

TESTIMONIALS

"Mr. Larkin is a 'Master Workman' in 'Rightly Dividing the Word'." (Rev. I. M. Haldeman, D. D.)

"It is the best collection of 'Dispensational Charts' ever published. I know of none to compare with it." (Rev. Frank S. Weston, Toronto Bible College).

"It is the most remarkable publication on 'Dispensational Truth' in existence. The Charts are masterly and cover the entire range of Bible History and Prophecy. With the Scofield Bible and this book before him the student will be well equipped to secure an all-around knowledge of the 'Plan of the Ages.'" (Rev. Charles C. Cook).

"Pastor Clarence Larkin has published what may be called the most elaborate and exhaustive specimen of Biblical and Dispensational Cartography that has ever been designed." (Rev. F. W. Farr, D. D.)

THREE KINDS OF GIVERS

Some witty person once said: "There are three kinds of givers—the flint, the sponge, and the honeycomb."

To get anything out of a flint, you must hammer it, and then you can get only chips and sparks.

To get water out of a sponge, you must squeeze it, and the more you squeeze, the more you will get.

But the honeycomb just overflows with its own sweetness.

Some people are stingy and hard. They give nothing away if they can help it. Others are good-natured. They yield to pressure, and the more they are pressed, the more they will give.

A few delight in giving, without being asked at all. Of these the Bible says, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." —The Christian.

"MUST"

Many are afraid of the precious compelling of love. They seem to think that love must be jerky and uncontrolled. This is the reverse of the truth. Uncommanded love is not the love that pleases God (John 13:34: 14:15). Far from commandments involving a slavery, there is a sad self-slavery unless we are thus in the precious will of the Lord. It is enjoyable to see some of the precious "musts" of His life, for there was no mere "form of duty" in the abounding love He felt and showed!

"I must be about my Father's business" (Luke 2:49).

"I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also" (Luke 4:43).

"He must needs go through Samaria" (John 4:4).

"I must walk today ,and tomorrow, and the day following" (Luke 13:33).

"I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day" (John 9:4).

"Today I must abide at thy house" (Luke 19:5).

"He must go unto Jerusalem and suffer many things" (Matt. 16:21).

"As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up" (John 3:14).

"Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice" (John 10:16).

"Opening and alleging that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus whom I preach unto you, is Christ" (Acts 17:3).

"Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into his glory?" (Luke 24:26).

—The Student of Scripture.

"As thy days thy strength shall be."
God has sent this word to me.
Are thy burdens hard to bear?
Does there seem no refuge there?
Ere you sink beneath the load
He will find you on the road,
Give you strength upon the way,
Added strength from day to day.
This is what it means to me—
"As thy days thy strength shall be."

—Kate Harrie Dane.

A GOOD INVESTMENT

When the widow (with the two mites) gave her all into the hands of the Lord she made investment in a bank that never goes out of business. Had the woman invested this money, estimated at one-fourth of a cent, in a bank paying 6 per cent, approximately doubling every sixteen years its present amount would have been enormous. We figured it for eight centuries and found it to be $2,621,440,000,000 and ceased figuring. Who can say it has not been on interest ever since she put it in the treasury of the never failing bank?—W. M. Smith.

THE DIVINE WISDOM

The infidel Ingersoll once came across an old negro scrub-woman reading her Bible.

"Mary, do you believe all you read there?" inquired he. "Do you believe God made man out of dust?"

"'Course I does," stoutly declared Mary.

"But suppose it happened to rain and there was nothing but mud?" quizzed the colonel.

"Why, sure," retorted the old mammy, "de good Lawd den knowed well 'nough twas jes de right time to make dem lawyers an' infidels."—Selected.

A PRAYER

O God, our Father, who dost care for us; who loved us so that Thou didst send to us Thy Son—Thine only Son—down from the eternal glory of the heavenly home, to purchase our redemption by the shedding of His blood upon the painful cross, so that "our sins, though scarlet, should become as white as snow," with adoration meet we bow before Thy throne.

We ask that Thou wilt guide our feet in paths of Thine own choosing, leading us on from day to day where Thou wouldst have us go, making us better in our Christian life, filling our hearts with love for Thee and for our fellow men; inspiring us with hope, which rises with a faith sublime for all the years to come; giving us trust the while we journey here; helping us to know and feel that, as the Christ, the God-man, served, so should we serve, our Heavenly Father first of all, and for His sake give willing service to our brother man; bestowing grace and strength and joy, so that, content with whatsoever lot we have, we shall each day perform our task with cheerfulness, and forward look with glorious hope unto the closing of this earthly day, the sunset sky aglow with beauteous tints and portals opening at Thy finger's touch to give us welcome to the better land.—J. Henry Allen, Supt. Public Schools, Buhl, Idaho.

OUR OBLIGATION TO MISSIONS

To pray, Matt 9:37, 38.
To give, Matt 10:8.
To go, Matt. 28:19.
"Then said I, Here am I; send me." —Isaiah 6:8.

—Fred S. Shepard.

CATCH THE GLEAM!

It was a good homiletical suggestion from that prince of Bible expounders, G. Campbell Morgan, "If gripped by a text, do not save it for a great occasion: preach it now." Otherwise, it may be lost. Trust the Spirit's swift intimations. And if you would further follow Dr. Morgan's luminous method with the Book, you will let the whole light of the whole Word play on every text of Scripture that comes to you. This, as the writer takes it, is the secret of true expository preaching, and it is what the dim-lit eyes of men in this old world are waiting for today. "Let there be light!" —J. W. Weddell.

Truth Illuminated

By Shafts from Various Quarters

ROMANS 8:28

When a person is ill and a doctor is called in, he usually writes out a prescription for medicine. It is taken to the druggist who prepares it. He takes an empty bottle and puts into it so much liquid out of one bottle, so much powder out of another bottle, and so on, and puts a label on it with the words, "Shake the bottle." All those different medicines work together for the good of the patient. The liquid may be disagreeable to the taste, but it is for the sick person's good. So all things, even the bitter disagreeable things which God allows to reach us, are all for our good. "All things work together for good to them that love God."

A SILENT BUT MIGHTY POWER

A great preacher who has just passed away told how one man in his congregation, who never missed a service, was a great stimulus to keep him from shirking or slurring his work. Every preacher knows the help or hindrance he gets by the presence or absence of some particular person in his place, yet, as likely as not, the person himself may never imagine he is in the minister's thoughts. He is a poor shepherd, however, who does not know his own sheep, and a still poorer one who has not each in his mind's eye while thinking out his discourse. It is another witness to the old truth—that we are all more than flesh and blood: we are influences.—London Presbyterian.

OUR PLACE IN LIFE

The minister had just sung a closing hymn, and dismissed his audience. He was a great singer, whose wonderfully beautiful voice touched the hearts of his hearers with an earnest desire to go out and labor for God.

"Oh, I wish I could sing like that," said a young girl. "How much good I could do."

The lady, who heard, turned to her with a smile:

"Miss Sheldon," she said, "I remember once expressing a wish similar to that, and an old lady told me this story:

" 'When I wish to be something God has not permitted me to be, and think my life and its talents amount to nothing, I always recall a poem that was on the first page of my reader when I was a child at school. A tiny buttercup became discontented and longed to be a tall and beautiful daisy, and the answer was given to it, "But God wants a buttercup—just where you're growing." '

"So," the woman continued, "whatever place we fill, God puts us there, and it is a part of his great unerring plan."

The girl listened, with a smile coming to her lips. "I'll not forget that," she said, softly. "God wants a buttercup—just where you're growing."

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.
Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

Dr. T. M. Hofmeister closed a revival with the First Baptist Church, New Philadelphia, O., on Easter Sunday. The meetings were conducted for two weeks.

John and Mrs. Imrie, evangelistic singers report being in pre-Easter meetings in St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo. The St. Louis campaign was especially blessed. They next went to Bernie, Mo., beginning April 19.

Rayburn and Cheek report a tabernacle campaign of all the churches at (city unnamed) which began April 15. From there the party planned to go to La Junta, Colo., beginning May 27. They report a very large number of conversions in their evangelistic campaigns.

Dr. S. P. Brite, pastor, and J. W. Maxwell, soloist and chorus leader, conducted a special meeting at Sikeston, Mo., April 8-22. There were 4 conversions and 7 additions to the church. On May 6, Mr. Maxwell and Evangelist H. S. Ashley plan to cross the country with a big tent for gospel meetings.

The Taylor-Fleming Gospel Team, Rev. Myron E. Taylor, evangelist, and Howard K. Fleming, musical director, report a fine meeting at Canton, Wis. The interest increased so rapidly that the church was over-crowded and at the time of writing a tent was being secured to meet the needs.

The Vinaroffs closed a two weeks meeting at Louisville, O., early in April, and at Akron, O., the end of April. In both places they assisted the pastors of the U. B. churches. In the first meeting there were 31 conversions and at the later meeting 32 conversions. The Vinaroffs next went to Warren, O., for the first two weeks in May.

Rev. W. H. Clagett, D. D., of Dallas, Tex., celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday on May 3, and was honored by a large number of friends among the ministers and laymen of that and other cities which he has served as a pastor and evangelist. Dr. Clagett knew Moody and Sankey well, and worked with the former in Chicago and other cities.

C. F. Badder, pastor of Manwell Memorial Wesleyan Methodist Church, Jackson, Mich., reports that Evangelist P. H. Kadey recently closed a three and one-half weeks campaign in that church. From beginning to end, the meetings were blessed of the Lord. About 35 bowed at the altar and accepted Christ as Saviour and Lord. The church will be nearly doubled in membership.

Dr. and Mrs. H. P. Dunlop report their second successful season in California. At the time of writing in April, they were in a tabernacle meeting at Arvin, in which 64 persons had already gone forward. The party will travel by motor north as far as Vancouver before starting East for their next season's work. They get their mail through the Bible Institute of Los Angeles.

Raymond T. Rickey conducted a revival campaign at Tulsa, Okla., April 22-May 20. A tabernacle with a seating capacity of 6,000 was erected, with accommodations for cafeteria, for the convenience of people attending from out of town. The feature of the campaign was an arrangement by Mr. Charlie Page giving use of a large camp ground for the benefit of those who wished to attend the revival.

Clarence M. Keen and wife finished their winter season's evangelistic work in April. They conducted two campaigns in Lebanon, Pa., one at Holmes, Pa., Newport, N. J., and one at Port Norris, N. J. A number accepted the Lord at each place. During the summer, Mr. Keen will supply the pulpit at North Baptist Church, Wilmington, Del., in the absence of Dr. William L. Pettingill, pastor.

Evangelist Raymond O. Wine reports a meeting at Fort Recovery, O., with 65 conversions. At the final service 36 young people dedicated their lives for special service. Mr. Wine next made a trip through the West with encouraging results and reports at Fort Dodge, Iowa, Baptist church, 7 conversions in an ordinary service on one Sunday night. His next appointment was at Owosso, Mich.

Rev. E. Ward Decker, pastor of the Westwood Reformed Church, Westwood, N. J., reports special evangelistic services held March 18-April 8, inclusive, with Rev. L. R. MontGomerie, evangelist. Although the original arrangements were for a period of only two weeks, at the expiration of that time the spirit of the meetings was such that Mr. MontGomerie was asked to remain another week. The church was signally blessed, many souls were led to accept Christ, backsliders were reclaimed and a general sense of quickening was experienced.

The Toronto Council of the Shantymen's Christian Association recently held its annual meeting in Toronto, at which time reports of the workers were received. Evangelist L. R. Montgomerie reported encouraging work in the lumber camps of Minnesota, Wisconsin and upper and lower Michigan. He was accompanied in his work by Rev. John Miller, another worker under the mission. Mr. Courtney Smith, also has been doing creditable work in Michigan, and the work of Mr. and Mrs. David McLean in Kentucky was commended.

Dr. French E. Oliver, writing from Auckland, N. Z., says, "We have seen hundreds saved in Auckland, Hamilton and Palmerston North, N. Z. The appalling unbelief amongst the ministers in the churches is simply dreadful. An article has recently been published in the official church organs, Methodist and Presbyterian, charging me with three serious offenses: (1) Preaching the verbal inspiration of the Word of God. (2) Preaching a literal hell. (3) Preaching the glorious return of Jesus Christ to this earth to reign a thousand years."

P. S. Rowland reported a good meeting which closed April 1 at Crawford Ave. Baptist Church, Augusta, Ga., in which there were 40 additions. He later reports that there was a gracious meeting with the First Baptist Church, Americus, Ga., in which Dr. William Russel Owen, Pastor First Baptist Church, Macon, Ga., did the preaching. The whole town was stirred and scores won to Christ. Mr. Rowland led the singing with the assistance of two large chorus choirs. He will return there for another campaign in midsummer.

Over 200 decisions for Christ were registered in a three weeks meeting closed early in May at the Grace Evangelical Church, Canton, O., W. Elmer Baily, pastor. The expenses were easily met and the church was filled at every service and standing room often at a premium. It is expected that many young people will enter the Moody Bible Institute as a result of the meetings which were conducted by the Vom Bruch Evangelistic Party. The party next went to Des Moines, Iowa, for meetings in May.

The First Baptist Church of Tucson, Ariz., of which Rev. S. Beal, formerly of Denver, is pastor, recently closed an evangelistic campaign conducted by Harry O. Anderson of Berkeley, Calif., whose work is widely known, especially among young people. During the three weeks meetings, 175 conversions were reported besides scores of others becoming interested in the work of the church. Mr. Anderson was assisted by Mr. and Mrs. John Basil Long whose work had much to do with the success of the meetings. The party next went to the Jefferson Baptist Church of Los Angeles, and from there were scheduled to open meetings in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Evangelist T. L. Fretz, who resigned as superintendent of the Christian Workers' Union, Newark, Del., has been sent by the mission board of the church of the Brethren to Wilmington, Dela., where he has preached on Sundays for about a year. He also had the mid-week services at the First Church of the Brethren, Philadelphia. Mr. Fretz recently closed a two weeks evangelistic campaign at Washington, D. C., and then a three weeks campaign at Charleston, S. C., after which he expected to visit Chicago and Minneapolis.

The first annual Bible convention of the Fundamentalists among the Baptists was held at Kansas City, Mo., May 10-15, the meeting being held in a large tent 120x200 which was located on the Sweeney Auto tractor lot, near the Union Station. Among the speakers scheduled were the Hon. William Jennings Bryan; D. D. Munro; Rev. R. E. Neighbor; Rev. A. C. Dixon, D.D.; Rev. W. B. Riley, D.D.; Rev. J. F. Norris; Rev. W. L. Pettingill, D.D. and Rev. T. T. Shields. The call was issued to believers of every denominations to stand fast for the faith of the gospel.

Rev. John J. Parsons, pastor of the Woodland Heights Baptist Church, Richmond, Va., reports closing a three weeks meeting under the direction of Miss Sara C. Palmer, evangelist and Bible teacher. The church has been led into new spiritual experiences and a profound study of the Bible as the very word of God. Upwards of 150 professions have been made and several hundred persons have been led to consecrate their lives to some form of Christian service. The effects of these meetings will long abide and the church is praising God for all the good which resulted.

The ninth annual conference of the Hebrew Christian Alliance of America will be held under the auspices of the Trenton Inter-Church Federation, Trenton, N. J., June 4-8, inclusive. The business sessions will be held at St. Michael's Parish House, and meetings for the general public at the First Presbyterian Church. An invitation is given to the readers of the MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY to attend the conference and hear what the Lord is doing among the Hebrew Christians. Further information may be secured by addressing Rev. Max I Reich, Morrisville, Pa.

Albert Allen Ketchum reports the greatest revival it has ever been his privilege to lead since going into Christian work, in Mahanoy City, Pa., in the Primative Methodist Church, Rev. H. O. Fichter, pastor. The membership was 195. There were 137 decisions and during the last Sunday night service, 66 persons who had found Christ in the meeting, joined the church. The interest was so keen that the Catholic priest asked "When that party at the P. M. Church was going to leave town." Mr. Ketchum next conducted a meeting in the Fairview Ave. Evangelical Church at Niles, O., with 22 decisions. From there he went to Canton in another evangelical church, after a little rest from preaching and leading the singing for Evangelist Harry Vom Bruch in a wonderful and real revival. Twenty-two forward at the first call on Sunday night, April 15.

Good reports come from Belfast, Ireland, about recent services conducted there by Evangelist Nicholson. A newspaper report shows that Belfast is becoming much affected by the large number of conversions. Petty thieving is on the decline. Many employers have had stolen goods returned. Dozens of bags of tools "borrowed" from shipyards have been returned. A grocer was paid £5 that a woman customer had owed him for twenty years. For over an hour an ex-sailor tried to persuade the local pensions' staff that he was not entitled to a weekly disablement grant he had been drawing. Mr. Nicholson is accompanied by a band of seventy chosen workers from his thousands of converts. It is necessary to go to church two hours before time to hear him preach, the men forego their supper and march direct from their shipyard work in the evening to listen to him.

Amy B. M. Unruhe sent out invitations to attend the fifth anniversary, on May first, of her conversion at the Rescue Society, Old Chinese Theater, New York City. The month of April was the occasion of celebration at the mission, marking the thirtieth anniversary. Many of the churches of New York participated in the services during the month. It was on April 24, 1893, that the Rescue Society was started by some members of the Gospel Tabernacle, under the name of the Old New York Rescue Band. It occupied a store at 18 Doyers Street and devoted itself chiefly to work among fallen girls. After a time a store across the street was rented and when this became too small No. 15 was added. Later the Old Chinese Theater at 5 and 7 Doyers was secured and cleaned up for the mission's use, and there extensive work is conducted in the saving of souls at the midnight services.

CEDAR FALLS CONFERENCE

The Second Annual Bible Conference will be conducted at Cedar Falls, Iowa, August 5 to 12, under the direction of the Cedar Falls Bible Conference, Rev. Parley E. Zartman, D. D., dircetor. The conference sessions will be held in Riverview Park, and accommodations may be secured in the hotel or some of the excellent cottages on the grounds, also in Cedar Falls. This conference is interdenominational, evangelical, inspirational, spiritual and non-controversial. A number of well-known teachers are on the program, including G. Campbell Morgan, D. D ., W. H. Griffin-Thomas, D. D., A. T. Robertson, D. D., W. E. Biederwolf, D. D., C. H. Woolston, D. D., Miss Edith Mae Bell, Charles H. Wieand, and others. Full particulars may be secured from Dr. Parley E. Zartmann, Winona Lake, Ind.

The fourth annual conference on open air evangelism was held by the Chicago Church Federation and the Business Men's Gospel Teams of the Central Y. M. C. A. on the evening of Thursday, April 26. There were present 132 persons from about fifty different churches and societies. Every speaker kept to the text—outdoor preaching. The printed program carried the slogan of "One open air meeting every week for every church."

Dr. Simon Peter Long, pastor of Wicker Park Lutheran Church, told of his observations in the lands where the Bible was made, and called the Bible "an open air book." He mentioned his own experience preaching on Mars' Hill in Athens, his joy at seeing the market-place in Saxony where Luther preached to 25,000, and his own outdoor sermons in Pennsylvania and Virginia. Once he preached to ninety-three congregations in one—perhaps 30,000 people, gathered on a fair-ground. The whole world, he said, is God's great big temple, and the Most High cannot be restricted within houses made by hands. In Edinburgh, Scotland, at ten o'clock at night in an open air meeting he had answered a blasphemer, till the scoffer was so silenced that people thought he had been struck dumb.

The Salvation Army presented a demonstration open air meeting with fine spirit and effectiveness.

Rev. Peter W. Philpott said that he had received his earliest experience in the Christian life in an open air service, had begun his ministry in Hamilton, Ont., on the street corner, and had "caught most of his big fish" in outdoor meetings.

The Rev. Mr. Foster, Bishop Fallows' successor as pastor of St. Paul's, said that his own life had been determined for Christian service in an open air meeting in San Francisco.

The Rev. Francis C. Brading, secretary of the Bible Society, called the Scripture Gift Mission, London, greeted the conference, made a short address, and offered Scriptures in all languages for free distribution.

THE TENDER MERCIES OF THE TURKS

of the whole Armenian question, which leaves that long-afflicted nation, as well as other Christian minority populations, still at the mercy of the wicked power that has long sought their extermination.

The missions working in Turkish territory have suffered extremely heavy losses and face a very problematic future. It is only too evident that hope of Allied or American intervention is vain. There is hope only in the intervention of a Higher Power than any human government, and only in an appeal to a Higher Court than "the moral judgment of the world."

May man's extremity once more prove to be God's opportunity, not only, but God's occasion of working deliverance for those imperiled races, and safeguarding missionary work against every effort to paralyze it.

June 1 (Friday). Jeremiah 42:4-12.

Jerusalem had now been destroyed, and the Babylonians had appointed Gedaliah as governor. But he had been assassinated, and the question was now whether the remnant of the Jews left in the land with Jeremiah (although they had been in no direct way responsible for the murder) should stay and wait the wrath of the Babylonians or should flee for refuge into Egypt. At Bethlehem they asked Jeremiah to inquire of Jehovah and after ten days the answer came. If they should remain in the land, the Lord would take pity on them and protect them, but if they should go to Egypt, they would perish.

In this there is a lesson concerning faith. Not that it is necesssary to expect a special word from God for every decision that we are called upon to make, but there is a great standing Word of God for all men—remain with Jesus Christ and you will be saved.

June 2 (Saturday). Jeremiah 43:4-10.

"So . . . all the people obeyed not the voice of the Lord, to dwell in the land of Judah." This was the melancholy fact. Let us try to see things, however, from the people's standpoint, and to understand their reasons for disobeying. In the first place they had promised to obey God's message through Jeremiah, but this promise they asserted was to obey God's message, whereas the prophet had delivered his own deceitful and lying advice. In the next place they could point out that ordinary human prudence and common sense told them that to stay in the land of Judah was merely to be overwhelmed by the wrathful vengeance of Babylon: to go to Egypt was to escape. There was a certain plausibility in all this, was there not? But the proper method of procedure is not to go first to the light of nature, and then to human prudence, and last to the Word of God, and if this last does not conform to the first two, to reject it.

June 3 (Sunday). Psalm 94:16-23.

"She's slippin'," said my Scotch ironworking friend to me one day as we stood watching the lofty chimney of the iron furnace out of which were coming dense clouds of dark red vapor and smoke. "She" referred to the great load of orel and coke and flux through which the blast was boring its fiery and irresistible way. "He's slippin'," I sometimes think when I hear a Christian brother uttering words of complaint and foreboding and doubt as to the course of affairs in his life and neighborhood. But is it not enough to have faith that the right will win? Why should we worry over the time and the manner of the victory? Is it not much better to have faith in the Great Champion of the Rightful Cause who will bring it to pass in His own way and in His own day?

June 4 (Monday). Nehemiah 1:5-11.

Prayer has many forms. There is prayer private, and prayer public; prayer that is voiced, and prayer that is voiceless; prayer liturgical, and prayer informal; prayer that gives thanks, and prayer that asks; but of whatever kind it may be, all genuine prayer can draw aside the veils of the eternal and usher us into the presence of the heavenly Father Himself. Now prayer is a gift of the Spirit, and like all such gifts it is no jewel to be kept in a case, but a power to be used and cultivated in order that it may increase. One way to increase its expressiveness is to study the Bible prayers since they must ever be our models. Nehemiah's prayer has an admirable order. First is an opening address in verse 5. Then comes a humble approach in verse 6a. Then the confession of sins in verses 6b and 7. Then the appeal to the divine promise in verses 8 to 10. Last the petition for the people in general and for Nehemiah in particular.

June 5 (Tuesday). Nehemiah 2:1-8.

When we use our radio receiving set we sometimes find it a tedious and difficult operation to "tune in." The sending station we are trying to get somehow or other eludes us, and in place of the voice or the music we wish to hear we get howling or snapping or silence. But the Christian for whom Christ has opened the way of prayer to the Father can "tune in" instantaneously at any time. There is no need of any long formula nor any set surroundings, but like Nehemiah who turned from the King of Persia to the King of kings, the Christian can use what has been termed, "ejaculatory" prayer—the prayer of the sentence, the upward look, the thought that goes straight home to God. Our Lord used it at the raising of Lazarus; when His soul was troubled by the vision of His impending death; and when the soldiers were nailing Him to the cross. Stephen used it when they were stoning him to death.

June 6 (Wednesday). Nehemiah 4:6-15.

Those who are mentioned in verse 7 are typical of the many foes of the faith and of the church today. Sanballat represents those who are all the while belittling the efforts of the church to "revive the stones out of the rubbish." Tobiah is of the tribe that sneers and scoffs and uses coarse jokes and mockery. The Arabians are the type of the wild and predatory and murderous enemies of Christianity. The Ammonites and the Ashdodites belong to those who suggest that Christianity has had its day and that all missionary effort is an impertinent intrusion. On the other hand we have in Nehemiah, the man who prayed and ceased from fear, an exemplification of the ideal of Christian leadership.

June 7 (Thursday). Nehemiah 5:6-13.

One matter of interest in this story is the emphasis placed on brotherly love as a practical business device. There must be state laws governing business contracts; there must be unwritten usages and conventions and procedures, for these are the outward machinery or the external organization of business life. But for the perfection of this life, in order that it may do its maximum service and reap its greatest returns, there must be brotherly helpfulness and love. There are not a few men who when such love is mentioned admit its desirability, but treat it and look upon it as something in the nature of a luxury—something that is not really necessary for the doing of business, but still rather a nice thing if it can be had without harming efficiency and lessening profits, an opinion that is totally mistaken.

June 8 (Friday). Nehemiah 8:9-12.

If the ability to comfort is a mark of genuine greatness, Nehemiah was a truly great man. If this ability is measured by the gift of uttering striking phrases that will keep ringing in the memory to emphasize the message of consolation, then Nehemiah stands high in the noble company of comforters, for on that memorable day in Israel's history he said a notable thing, "The joy of the Lord is your strength." This joy is not the Lord's joy in His people, but His people's joy in Him. Such joy is the outcome of faith and confidence that He will always protect them and care for them, and it is therefore a most strengthening and uplifting emotion.

June 9 (Saturday). Nehemiah 13:10-19.

In Nehemiah's efforts at reform there is nothing more notable than his vindication of the Sabbath. The spiritual and the physical are connected in man's nature, but not so closely that they cannot be thought of apart from each other. It is for this reason that there are some sins that seemingly affect the spirit while leaving, for the time at least, the body unimpaired. But the sin against the Sabbath deteriorates both soul and body. It prevents the soul from having intercourse with God and so refreshing its life; it prevents the body from its weekly rest and therefore lowers its efficiency. This was true in the days of Nehemiah and it is still true. It explains why actors and preachers, labor leaders and board secretaries should recently have joined in efforts to fight a proposed bill in New York legalizing Sunday shows. It may not be in our power to do much that is spectacular or far-reaching in vindication of the Sabbath, but we can probably control our own personal conduct so that we at least remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.

June 10 (Sunday). Psalm 46:1-7.

We should read this Psalm with Psalms 47 and 48. In Psalm 46 the leading idea is that Jehovah is present with His people and therefore they may always have confidence in Him. In Psalm 47 the universal sovereignty of Jehovah is the theme, and in Psalm 48 the singer celebrates in beautiful and moving language the safety of Zion. The three Psalms are not mere general expressions of confidence in God, but they came out of some great national deliverance. This must have been the wonderful and miraculous rescue of Jerusalem from Sennacherib's army in the reign of Hezekiah, and therefore we cannot get a better setting for the reading of the three than the chapters in Isaiah in which the same great event is celebrated.

Luther based his famous hymn upon these Psalms and they sustained him in his conflict.

June 11 (Monday). Esther 1:13-22.

This first reading from the book of Esther brings before us the status of women in the non-Christian world. The picture drawn is that of an incident that happened many centuries ago, and nevertheless it is not unlike what is true of the present age in a great part of the world. Dr. Dennis once said, "The status of women may be indicated by the estimate put upon her, by the opportunity given her, by the functions assigned her, by the privilege accorded her, and by the service expected of her." If we use these words as tests, we shall find that under the world religions outside of Christianity, modern women like ancient Vashti, are nowhere accepted as man's equal, nowhere are they free, nowhere are they educated, nowhere is their right to their own persons recognized.

June 12 (Tuesday). Esther 2:15-18.

Like the motion of the earth as it whirls on its axis and carries with it all the beings animate and inanimate that live upon its surface, so the providence of God preserves and governs all His creatures and all their actions. But let us never forget that this Providence always respects and never does violence to any of the characters that Creation has placed upon or within these same creatures. This feature of Providence makes it misleading to depend over much on the simile with which we began our paragraph. The motion of the earth does not regard my freedom; Providence, however, never forgets to treat me as a free-will being. This is what makes the story of Esther so instructive. It makes clear the ways of God even if God's names are never once used in the book.

June 13 (Wednesday). Esther 3:8-13.

"If it please the king," said Haman, "let it be written that they be destroyed." These words show that Haman had not grasped the principle of toleration. How shall we treat people who differ with us in opinion and practice? "Kill them," is one answer; "Imprison them," is another; "Pay no attention to them," is a third; "Convert them," is a fourth. Haman chose the first answer, and in the Orient and indeed in many places today, this answer is favored. Take away their lives and you will have no further bother, is a not infrequent sentiment. The persecutors and the indifferentists, are both united on the second and third answers cited in the foregoing. It is Jesus only who advises, "Convert them."

June 14 (Thursday). Esther 4:13-5:3.

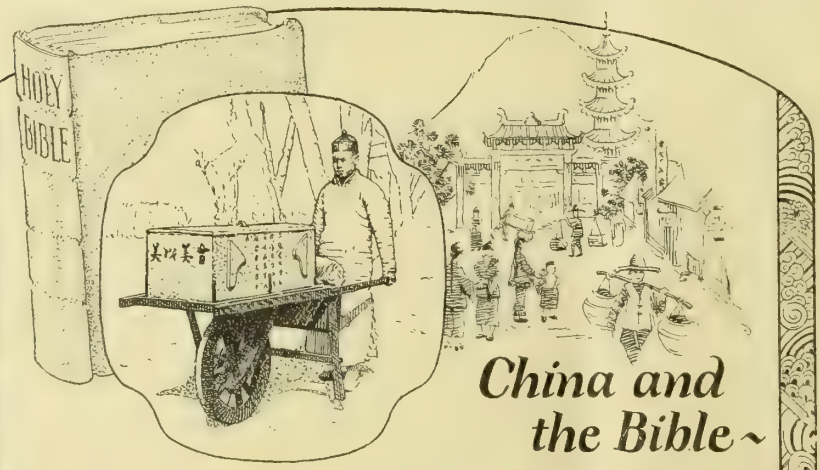
Mordecai's words, "Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this," have become in a certain sense proverbial because they express a great truth. "Promotion cometh," said the Psalmist, "neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south. But God is the judge. . ." "Thou art my servant," said the prophet, "I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away." In other words the life of God's people presents daily opportunities of special and heroic service, and these are the times of the kingdom for which the people of God have come. Consider then the circumstances in which your lot has been placed. Are you to judge these circumstances by the norms of men or by the Word of God? Are you to value them according to merely human standards or by the standard of Jesus Christ? Or, are you to aim at the endowment of divine strength, promised in Christ to all the faithful?

June 15 (Friday). Esther 6:4-11.

Self-restraint is evidently one of the key-notes of Mordecai's character as drawn for us in this story. A remarkable honor had been done to him and that by his most implacable enemy. What more natural than that those inborn traits of exaltation and self-pride might have so filled him that he would have despised and abandoned his former place of service? But after the triumphal ride through the city he "came again to the king's gate," there to resume his "watchful waiting" for the benefit of Esther and his people. Like the Psalmist, Mordecai's heart was not haughty, nor his eyes lofty: he did not allow his steps to be diverted into alien ways too high for him. How often we see men and women whose heads are "turned" by the honors real or imaginary that come to them.

June 16 (Saturday). Esther 7:1-10.

Here is the end of the arch-villain of the story of Esther. Let us reflect a moment upon his character, and the way in which it is presented, since one of the arts in narration is so to depict character historical or fictitious that the bad may not rouse either our sympathy or our impulse of imitation. Haman, the writer tells us, was "greatened" by King Xerxes. His soul, however, was base and brutal. He was a typical product of the oriental system that brings forth characters filled with falsehood; that think only of their own advantage; that refuse



China and the Bible

China, after centuries, has awakened out of her slumber to take her place as a Republic in the family of nations. She seeks a sure foundation on which to build her new culture and her new spiritual aspirations. She has turned to the Bible as the great foundation of truth.

In 25 languages and dialects and in the new phonetic script the scriptures have been made available. Over 2,362,000 volumes were distributed here in one year by the American Bible Society alone. Who is competent to measure the value of this service to China?

no means even universal massacre and murder to gain their ends. The Great War discovered for us not a few such men. External "greatening" can merely give these characters larger opportunity for misdeeds.

June 17 (Sunday). Psalm 124.

In studying the psalms it is always interesting and many times profitable to be able to fit them into the historical occasion that gave rise to them. The spirited hymn of thanksgiving now before us was evidently composed under a fresh impression of recent escape. But what escape? No one can tell, nor does it really matter. Let us repeat rather the opening words and apply them to our own life experience. "If it had not been the Lord" who sent Jesus Christ to be our Saviour and our all sufficient friend, where would we be standing today? "If it had not been the Lord" how could we have endured when that great and terror-inspiring calamity came into our lives?

June 18 (Monday). Genesis 12:1-5.

"Lay out the line of your own destiny," writes a modern essayist, "then work faithfully on that line year after year with the zeal for improvement and the love of excellence which open the doors of a natural aristocracy, and you may rest assured that twenty years hence, in your own circle, in your own community, you will be one of the 'indispensable' members of your generation." This is excellent advice so far as it goes, but it falls somewhat short of the exhortation for living implied by the career of him who was the "father of the faithful." It was not Abram but God who laid out the line of the patriarch's destiny. "Get thee out of thy country," commanded the divine voice. And again it was not Abram but God who fixed the goal towards which the patriarch was to work faithfully year after year.

June 19 (Tuesday). Genesis 45:3-11.

In Joseph's words, "Come near to me, I pray you," we may find the essential and indispensable portion of forgiveness. Because forgiveness is more than the cherishing of gold feeling; it is the restoring to good will and fellowship. It is possible to abandon resentment at wrong treatment; it is even possible to be of such a character that resentment is not even felt, although this is rare; and these attitudes depend entirely upon ourselves; but to restore to good will and fellowship depends upon the state of being of the offending party. For this reason the writer of Genesis with the keenest imaginable insight into moral conditions details to us the efforts of Joseph to discover whether his brethren had experienced a real change of heart. Only when he was convinced of this fact was he able to say, "Come near to me, I pray you."

June 20 (Wednesday). Exodus 3:1-10.

It has been well said that the story told in our portion today marks an epoch in the revelation of God to men. The assertion, "I AM THAT I AM," meant the end of the fictitious gods of heathendom, and in the symbol of the bush that burned and was not consumed, we are taught the fundamental truth that the fire that God kindles never goes out, and the light that He sends never ceases. It is the nature of earthly fire and light to destroy themselves by their own activity. It is characteristic of the little systems of men to have their day and cease to be. But the religion that reached its culminating revelation in Jesus Christ is an eternal fire that warms the soul into life and an everlasting light that cheers and guides. In the possession of Jesus Christ as a spiritually real presence with us we have that to which the vision of Moses pointed forward.

June 21 (Thursday). Ruth 1:14-22.

The difference between Orpah and Ruth is well brought out in the statement, "Orpah kissed her mother-in-law; but Ruth clave unto her." The former was the kiss of farewell, an expression of affection, doubtless, but of no practical value; the latter was the manifestation of the love that clings and restores. Now it is said, not without reason, that sons take after their mother. Therefore we are not surprised when later the little Obed was born that the women of Bethlehem coming to congratulate Naomi upon the arrival of her grandson, prophesied as people will do on such occasions, "He shall be unto thee a restorer of life." That was what his mother had been before him, and that was what his great descendant, Jesus Christ, was to be in the pre-eminent sense.

June 22 (Friday). Isaiah 6:1-8.

It has been pointed out that in Isaiah's dating his vision of the Lord in the year that King Uzziah died, there is more than mere chronology. For Uzziah's reign had been very remarkable. He had been Israel's leader for fifty years and he after Solomon was the most illustrious king. He had extended the bounds of the kindgom, had fortified the cities, had dug the wells, had kept the foreign enemy at bay. But the glorious life came to a sorrowful end—Uzziah died outside the walls a leper in a leper's hut. Picture Isaiah: young, eager, imaginative, patriotic. What a shock the sad end of Uzziah must have been! But in the year that King Uzziah died, he saw the Lord. Friend, if you live close enough to Jesus Christ, you will have an experience like Isaiah's.

June 23 (Saturday). Psalm 23.

Robert Williams Buchanan, the Scottish poet and prose writer, has a poem in which he sings of the glad things of this world: the light and the golden day, the silvery shimmer of a moonlight night, the young lambs leaping, the singing larks, the tossing sea and the mountain height. Then he introduces death as the "all-darkener" and says,

"He hunts us fleetly on the snowy steep;
He finds us as we sow and as we reap;
He creepeth in to slay us as we sleep.
Ah! death maketh all things dark."

But the writer of the Shepherd Psalm as well as the modern poet knows that he cannot avoid walking through the valley of the shadow, but unlike the modern poet he is not afraid because in that dark valley he is sure that a presence will be at his side to make all things bright and beautiful.

June 24 (Sunday). Psalm 99.

Most of the Psalms have some notable individual feature, which, enables us to keep each in mind. Let us think of the Ninety-ninth Psalm as the one that contains a call to all people to worship Jehovah as the thrice Holy God. There are three stanzas, the first ending with verse 3, the second with verse 5, and the third with verse 9, and in each is the word "holy." "Praise his name," says the psalmist, "for it is holy; worship at his footstool, for he is holy; worship at his holy hill, for the Lord our God is holy." We know that worship is the expression of our homage to God in customary forms and in appointed places, but we may not know the reason for such expression.

June 25 (Monday). Luke 3:1-8.

The message of John was far more than the messenger, and therefore John is regarded as mainly a voice. We also may be voices used by Christ. Only let us remember that the value of any voice consists in expression, not in distortion. Let us not pretend that we are voicing Christ's words and works when we are really changing them and obscuring them. May our prayer be to see Jesus only, to attend to Him solely, to love Him wholly, to hear Him always, and to have Him so indwelling in us that we may be the voice of Him alone.

June 26 (Tuesday). Luke 1:5-17.

Notice the content of John's greatness. He was to have two personal characteristics: subjection of the flesh and sovereignty of the Spirit; and these were to manifest themselves in two external effects: a great religious revival and the preparation of Messiah's kingdom. God's standards do not change. What was true in the days of John is just as true today. We long and pray for revival, but are we willing to supply the personal conditions?

June 27 (Wednesday). Luke 1:67-80.

The "Magnificat" of Mary re-echoes the Psalms; the "Benedictus" of Zacharias recalls the prophecies The tone of the former is kingly as befits a daughter of royal David; the tone of the latter is priestly as is appropriate to a son of Aaron. Let us meditate on the closing words that fall on our ears like a musical cadence, "To guide our feet into the way of peace." This is the way that leads to peace, and the peace that is thought of is, as the Old Testament so often says, the fundamental peace, that between God and men which the priestly work of the Messiah was to accomplish.

June 28 (Thursday). John 1:19-34.

"There standeth one among you," said John, "whom ye know not." That was true of Jesus when He came to earth long years ago, and it is still true of Him. He wore the regulation garb of our common humanity. He was a child of the poor. He earned His bread by the sweat of His brow. He walked with men along the pilgrim way of the earthly life. He wore no decorations and used no prerogatives. He called Himself by a name, Son of Man, that emphasized His oneness with us. His bodily presence left the earth, but His spiritual presence remained, and He stands now as of old among us and how many know Him not!

June 29 (Friday). Luke 7:24-28.

Our Lord's estimates of character and work are of the very highest interest and value. Here is what might almost be called His funeral oration over John the Baptist, for his death came shortly after. The words of praise are extraordinary, but the closing thought contains a bit of analysis that is wonderful. "He that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he." John's greatness lay not in his personal character, but in his office and mission of being the immediate forerunner of the Messiah. In this his glory was unique, and yet in spiritual privileges, in grace, in knowledge, any, even the little ones, of the kingdom are superior to him. He was a servant; we are sons. He was the friend of the bridegroom; we are part of the bride.

June 30 (Saturday). Mark 6:14-29.

This story in its contrast of licentiousness and holiness is one of the most horrible ever told. We recoil from it in fear, and yet why should we ever be surprised at the extent to which lust and sin can go? Let us, however, dwell on the beautiful and comforting words with which Matthew closes the story. John's body was not left to dishonor, for his disciples came and buried it decently, and then they came and told Jesus. "When anything ails us at any time," says Matthew Henry, "it is our duty and privilege to make Christ acquainted with it." What a blessing this is!

Here and There Among the Papyri, by George Milligan, D. D.

Because of discoveries of numerous Greek papyri in Egypt, and the possible value they may have in a better understanding of the form and language of the New Testament writings, such a book is appreciated. The treatment is not technical and the matter is of considerable general interest.

Pulpit Germs, by Rev. William W. Wythe.

Here is a volume of real help to the preacher who is able to adopt another man's outline for sermons, or to whom such an outline is otherwise suggestive, while in the main using his own material. The book contains 455 such useful "skeletons," with a good index to the texts chosen

The Virgin Birth, by Prof. John McNaugher.

This is an excellent monograph. It was read as a paper before the United Presbyterian Ministerial Association of Pittsburgh, Pa. Since the doctrine of the virgin birth is being fiercely attacked by the modernists, it is well to have such a scholarly defense of the doctrine in a form that may be readily distributed.

The Meaning of the Cross, by Rev. Gordon Watt, M. A.

This volume comprises a series of spiritual and devotional studies of the Cross of Christ throughout the Bible, showing its central place in salvation, victory, power, and service. They were given in the form of addresses at the summer conference of the Victorious Life Testimony, in July, 1922, at Stony Brook, Long Island, N. Y. They are full of profound and practical teaching.

The Resurrection Body, by Rev. Wilbert W. White, Ph. D., D. D.

This timely discussion of the nature of the resurrection body of our Lord is eagerly welcomed. Dr. White is a close Bible student and his appeal is based upon careful exegesis and interpretation. His position as president of the Biblical Seminary in New York also enables him to speak with a considerable degree of authority. This is a book we can heartily recommend in a day when the doctrine of the bodily resurrection is being denied by many modernists, such as Dr. Fosdick.

Bible History of World Government, by William M. Smith.

This is not simply a book of history, but also a forecast from prophecy of the future government of the world. The argument is that Lucifer, or Satan, first provincial governor of the earth, incapacitated himself; that Adam, second provincial governor, failed to qualify; and that Jesus Christ, though qualified, has not yet seen fit to take over the political rule of the world. Meanwhile the world is in the control of Gentile nations. But eventually the power of Satan is to be utterly destroyed and Christ is to reign.

Flash-Lights from the Seven Seas, by William L. Stidger.

In ten chapters, under the captions, Flash-Lights of Flame, Flash-Lights Physical, Feminine Flash-Lights, Flash-Lights of Faith, of Fear, of Frightfulness, of Fun, of Freedom, of Failure and of Friendship, the author gives vivid pictures of the deepest impressions made up on him during a year of travel in Hawaii Japan, Korea, China, the Philippines and Malaysia. The book is entertaining reading, but the pictures it draws of Oriental land and life are to be regarded as merely "flash-lights," indistinct and fragmentary, taken by one man's camera and that man a casual visitor, rather than full and finished photos by a long resident.

Large space is given to Japan-Korea relations, and Japan is roundly scored for her injustices and cruelties in Korea.

Within the Gateways of the Far East, by Rev. Charles R. Erdman, D. D.

This well-known Princeton professor was delegated to the National Christian Conference held at Shanghai in May, 1922, and spent several months in Japan, China and Korea, with associations which afforded excellent opportunities of studying the situation and forming correct judgments. In this little volume he graphically describes what he saw and learned, and with becoming deference states some of his conclusions.

Although Dr. Erdman's personal contact with the Far East has been short, yet the reaction of a man of his broad intelligence and keen discernment upon the conditions and problems in those countries is of interest and value. He gives a fine, sane estimate of missionaries, their work and influence. His style is easy and pleasing, and the book is well worth reading.

Kashmir in Sunlight and Shade, by C. E. Tynedale-Biscoe, M. A.

In the words of its sub-title this book is "a description of the beauties of the country, the life, habits and humor of its inhabitants, and an account of the gradual but steady rebuilding of a once down-trodden people." The author is the head of a large mission school under the C. M. S. in the capital of Kashmir. His keen powers of observation, fine sense of humor and fascinating style of writing have produced a rarely interesting book on this out-of-the-way and little known corner of India. The last several chapters tell something of the hospital and school work of the mission, but nothing is said about direct evangelism, nor does the book contain any complete statement about existing missionary effort nor turn to account its fine assembly of facts to set forth the spiritual needs of the country or make any missionary appeal. This lack is a disappointment. The book has twenty-eight fine photographs and a map.

With P'u and His Brigands, by Mrs. Howard Taylor.

This is an account of the experiences which befell Dr. and Mrs. Taylor in being taken captive by a notorious band of brigands in southwest China early in 1922. Presented in the attractive style of this well-known missionary writer, it is a story of thrilling interest throughout. In addition to furnishing a clear insight into chaotic conditions at present prevailing in many parts of China, and their causes, this little book cannot fail to prove a real spiritual tonic to every Christian reader because of the beautiful spirit of simple trust in a living, loving God of deliverances which breathes on every page. Rich indeed are these missionaries and others who, having been called to pass through such furnaces of affliction have found "One like unto the Son of God" walking with them in the midst of the fire, and have come forth with no hurt nor even the smell of fire upon them, but rather with the fragrance of Jesus clinging to them.

The Return of Christ, by Rev. F. L. Piper, D. D.

Yes, this book is another one on the subject that is announced in the title. It is the purpose of the author to bring the basis of the blessed hope "into clearer perspective and give it a larger relative value in the discussion of the new hope of the future," and this is said in no apologetic way.

Although the reviewer has read scores of books on the general subject, this one is different. As one would go to a close friend and say, "Let us sit down and have a heart to heart talk over our mutual interests," this author says, "Let us sit down with Bible in hand and quietly talk together about the return of Christ, for it is a subject that is before the people and will not down. Some violently oppose any discussion of it; others make it a hobby; we believe there is a middle territory where we can reason together and go to neither extreme." It may be considered a quiet talk about the return of Christ, and can be recommended for while it is very positive in its findings, it is not irritating by any thing like insistent propagandism.

Christianity and Liberalism, by J. Gresham Machen, D. D., Assistant Professor of New Testament Literature and Exegesis in Princeton Theological Seminary.

This book is a complement to John Horsch's invaluable volume, Modern Religious Liberalism, which we are glad to mention again, feeling as we do that the two together should be in the possession of, and read by, every pastor, evangelist, missionary, Sunday-school teacher, and Christian worker throughout Christendom. John Horsch gives us the facts, names, books, chapters and verses, and Professor Machen interprets and philosophizes about them with the culture of a scholar but the courage of a warrior. He calls no names, and engages in no villification, but he knows a lie when he hears it, and he tags it at once.

Professor Machen makes it clear that the charter under which Christianity or the church was incorporated, so to speak, is the Bible, both the Old and the New Testament, and that if you wish to know what it is you must go there, and no where else to find out.

He also makes it clear that everything taught in the name of the Christian religion which is not in accordance with the Holy Spirit is not Christianity, but anti-Christianity. And he points out what some of these things are concerning God, Christ, man, salvation, sin, the Bible, the church, etc.

John Horsch's book shows you where your enemy is, and Professor Machen's book helps you to hit him. Get both by all means.

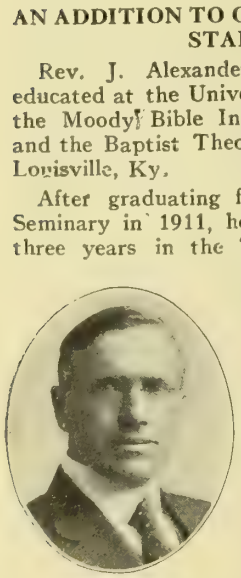
AN ADDITION TO OUR EXTENSION STAFF

Rev. J. Alexander Sutherland was educated at the University of California, the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, and the Baptist Theological Seminary of Louisville, Ky.



After graduating from the Louisville Seminary in 1911, he labored for nearly three years in the Tabernacle Baptist Church of San Francisco, from which church he was called to San Jose, Calif., where he was for nearly nine years pastor of the Grace Baptist Church.

During these years he was often called to do evangelistic work and engage in Bible conferences among the various churches, being finally chosen as the executive secretary of the Mt. Hermon Bible Conferences of California.

So frequent became the calls for field work that he finally resigned his pastorate to devote himself to it in his own denomination in the southern states, but again his choosing was over-ruled of God to accept a call to the Extension Department of the Moody Bible Institute.

A useful ministry is opening up for Mr. Sutherland, especially among boys and girls, through his ministry of song and unique method of illustrating the truths of God's Word.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT

Dr. J. E. Conant attended the Baptist Bible Union at Kansas City, Mo., May 10-15. Regarding his meetings in Battle Creek, Neb., a former student, now pastor of the First Baptist Church of Battle Creek, writes: "It seems that the ten days meetings with Dr. J. E. Conant have resulted in making possible a continuous campaign of personal evangelism. Two unsaved men came to my door yesterday—one to plow the garden, another to grind knives and scissors—both were led to Christ."

Rev. George E. Guille and Dr. Henry Ostrom conducted a Bible conference at the Baton Rouge (La.) Presbyterian church. Following this Rev. Guille gave a series of Bible studies at the Presbyterian churches of Americus and Bainbridge, Ga.

Miss Elinor Stafford Millar filled an engagement in St. Louis, Mo., at the invitation of the Y. W. C. A. and the women of the Southern Presbyterian church.

After a winter season in Florida, Mr. C. E. Putman conducted Bible study meetings in which the evangelistic note was predominant at the Protestant Methodist Church of Athens, O.

Rev. J. A. Sutherland followed his evangelistic campaign in the Galilee Baptist Church of Denver with several addresses at the First Baptist Church of Santa Barbara, Calif. He also supplied the pulpit of Grace Baptist Church, San Jose, Calif., of which he was formerly pastor for nearly nine years. He concluded his western trip by holding a union evangelistic meeting at Sparks, Nev.

Dr. Gordon B. Watt of Aberdeen University was most warmly received by the gospel centers of Evansville, Ind., and St. Louis, Mo., and by Grace Evangelical Church of Canton, O. In every place it was felt that his message met a real need. Dr. Watt will leave New York for England on June 4.

Miss Virginia C. Williams taught the Bible at Bellevue, O., under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian League. She conducted the Bible hour at the annual convention of the Women's Missionary Association of the United Brethren Church at Marion, O., May 15-17.

SPECIAL SUMMER COURSE, 1923

The home life of our early American fathers comes as near to the scriptural ideal as anything history has ever revealed. The Bible was used every day in the average colonial home. Bible reading and devotional exercises were a large part of the Sabbath program. The Bible also filled a large place in the school. The most important of early school books was the celebrated New England Primer. For more than one hundred and fifty years this was the most important book used in the schools and it is estimated that no less than three million copies were printed. And what was this wonderful New England Primer that held its place longer than any other text-book that has ever been printed? Eighty-eight per cent of its contents were quotations and selections from the Bible.

Recently the school teachers of New York City discovered 860,000 pupils without any knowledge of the Bible, and void of all sense of right and wrong, because there was not a vestige of Bible or Bible religion in their homes.

Reliable investigators tell us that one-half of the American children are growing up today without any religious instruction whatever.

With the Bible so largely banished from home and school is it any wonder that in these days of "famine of the Word of God," that Bible institutes and Bible conferences are being so earnestly advocated and promoted? If the Bible is "the rock upon which our republic rests," here is a patriotic as well as a Christian duty.

Too much emphasis then cannot be laid upon the Special Summer Course that the Moody Bible Institute is arranging for July 5-August 3, to train as religious leaders men and women whose duties prevent their attending the regular classes of the Institute. Instead of being a separate course, in reality the plan provides an opportunity to participate with hundreds of other students in the regular work of the Institute. The members of the Faculty have especially arranged their lectures to present at this time the most vital truths of each course, and the addition of special addresses from some of the best educators and clergymen of the country will present an unprecedented program for Bible students and teachers.

SUMMER BIBLE CONFERENCES

The front cover of the current issue calls attention to the Bible Conference at Lake Mendota, Madison, Wis., one of the four summer conferences which the Institute will hold at different dates and in different parts of the country:

Eagles Mere, Pa., July 6-15
Cedar Lake, Ind., July 29-Aug. 12
Lake Mendota, Madison, Wis., Aug. 5-12
Ocean City, N. J., Aug. 9-19

Here is a variety in scenery to choose from, including mountains, lake and sea. The details as to location, routes, accommodations, programs, etc., are available in the form of an illustrated bulletin which the Extension Department will be glad to send to any one upon application.

DR. GLOVER IN TORONTO

Dr. R. H. Glover was one of the speakers at the Annual Prophetical Conference held in Knox Church, Toronto, April 16-20. The Conference was blessed in an unusual degree. The attendance was large. At one evening service fifty young people rose in answer to an appeal for missionary service.

WINTER TERM GRADUATION EXERCISES

Fifty-eight Day Class students were awarded diplomas at the Institute Winter Term graduation exercises held in the Auditorium on April 19. It was announced that 209 students had completed courses in the Correspondence Department during the period from Nov. 1, 1922, to March 3, 1923.

The day was more than mere graduation day,—it was a call to whole-hearted service for the Lord, denial of self, a deeper spirituality. Speaking at the evening exercises on the subject "Ambassadors for Christ," Rev. R. E. Vale, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Oak Park, Ill., said in part: "You go forth as ambassadors—but ambassadors of what? If you have not already learned, you will in the course of a few years, that the world will little know or long remember what institutions we have come from, but the world will be concerned to know what message we can proclaim. You and I are to be the ambassadors not of a particular institution, however deep our love and loyalty for that should be, but we are to be primarily ambassadors for Christ. That ambassadorship rests upon four foundations, our conception of Jesus Christ, the credentials that we bear, our heart to heart contact with other people, and upon another thing—our courage. I do not know what you will be called upon to face, but I have never yet seen an easy place to do Christian work. Wherever it is you go you will need a great deal of courage, a great deal of grace. Then you may say with the poet, 'Be strong in the Lord of hosts and in the power of his might.'" Dr. Vale closed with the touching story of an incident from the history of early Christianity.

At the morning exercises Hazel I. Anderson, representing the women of the graduating class, spoke on "The Surrendered Life." Quoting, "The record of the past two years contains our varied experiences: Our battlefields and victories, our sorrows and joys; and the future lies before us with its experiences, its battlefields and victories; yet the past in itself is impotent and the future in itself is insufficient; but if we are true men and women, we bind all our days together with an earnest, intense, and passionate purpose. Our past, our present, and our future will be linked together, animated by one thought, constrained by one desire, actuated by one holy and helpful purpose—to serve God with a sincere surrender of our lives to Him."

The class speaker representing the men was Charles B. Bowser. His message was "Maintaining the Spiritual Glow." "If the spiritual glow is to be maintained," Mr. Bowser said, "we must have prayer and separation, and must recognize our self-worthlessness and Christ's all-sufficiency. And as a necessary adjunct to these, we must also have a vision. What a vision! A world, forgetting God, forgetting the Christ of God, ignoring the blood of the Cross; intent only upon the gratification of selfish desires with no thought of things eternal, nor of the coming Lord of glory. A people, with laughter on their lips, but no real joy in their hearts; a people lost—and dying. What a mission! Called of God, imbued with the Spirit, set on fire with a passion for lost souls, put in trust with the Word of life, the 'good news' that alone can bring salvation, and then, commissioned to go forth into all the world and preach the gospel—privileged of God to be used in stemming the tide of mankind's mad rush to destruction."

The graduates were given a reception in the afternoon by the Faculty and Business Staff. At the dinner which followed, Wiley Stean Young presented the class picture. Dr. Gray announced that the class had contributed $7,700 in pledges.

The list of graduates, twenty women and thirty-eight men, follows: Hazel I. Anderson, Gaynell Ardell, Nellie Bainbridge, Emma D. Bautz, Mary I. Blake, Ethel V. Bougher, Lena E. DeLange, Marcia E. Ford, Fern E. Greene, Kathleen Hawthorne, Edna E. Johnson, Mrs. Della Keeley, Minnie A. Linendoll, Isabel C. McLeod, Annette W. Manchester, Emma M. Mosely, Mrs. Jessie J. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ruch have safely arrived at Ruiru, East Africa. They are studying the native language at present with Dr. Henderson, the superintendent and language teacher of the Gospel Missionary Society.

Myron A. Goss '20, has recently been appointed to the United Evangelical church, Eldena, Ill. He also has an appointment six miles in the country.

Milton B. Davis, '22, was ordained April 19 at the Elizabeth Avenue Baptist Church, Newark, N. J., by Rev. George McNeely.

George R. Bernhard, '08, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Nunda, N. Y., reports a successful campaign in his church March 25-April 1. There were 47 who professed conversion. Mr. Bernhard was assisted by Evangelist L. J. Derk, '07.

"I am enclosing a picture to give you an idea of what the M. B. I. folk on the field look like," writes Charles H. Larson from Bolivia, S. A. These are former Moody students with the Bolivian Indian Mission. Back row, Mrs. Charles Larson, '19, Mrs. Leslie M. Shedd, '19, Ralph D. Smith, '95, Mrs. Verne D. Roberts, '19, and Mrs. Fred Legant (Ruth Tenny, '20). Front row, Charles Larson, '19, Leslie M. Shedd, '19, Verne D. Roberts, '19, and Mr. Kinkel, correspondence student.

Mary Pearl Hoffman, '22, with her father and sister conducted a series of evangelistic meetings in the West Side Baptist Church, Seattle, Wash., in April. Previously the trio had completed a series of successful meetings in Montana.

Wendell Pontius, '19, Fanny B. Mills, '15, J. C. Jorgensen, '09, E. Claude Smith, '14, and Mrs. E. Claude Smith, '14, were present at the Spring meeting of the Black Hills Presbytery which was held in the First Presbyterian Church of Philip, S. D., April 17, 18. Mr. Pontius is pastor of the church.

Since leaving her position as pastor's assistant in the 23rd Ave. Presbyterian Church, Denver, Colo., in July, Harriet B. Riggs, '18, has taught Bible classes in the same city. She now has seven classes with an average joint attendance of one hundred.

We read in The Russian Harvest Field that Paul L. Mishkoff, '11, is doing a blessed work in Bulgaria. In the last of nine meetings that he held in Philippople there were 400 decisions for Jesus Christ. In another meeting 360 professed conversion. Quoting Mr. Mishkoff, "We have prayed for revival and it is here. Thank God!"

C. G. Langley conducted evangelistic meetings in March in the Presbyterian church, Wascott, Wis., of which Edward W. Von Busch is pastor. The following former Moody students present held a reunion: Walter Titus, '15, Mrs. Walter Titus, Mrs. Laura Hintze Woodwin, '07, Edward W. Von Busch, '20, and C. G. Langley, '20. Mr. Titus is pastor of the Wesleyan Methodist church at Chittemo, Wis. Mr. Langley is pastor of the Presbyterian church, Port Wing, Wis.

Francina E. Porter, who was at the Institute in 1900, is working among the women in Kyoto, Japan. She writes, "The year has brought much encouragement in the work. My Bible classes are full of young people earnestly studying the Bible." Two new churches have recently been built with funds contributed partly by friends in the United States. Of them she says, "It is a great joy to have these new churches after worshiping so long in the little dark Japanese homes." Eizo Yoshida, '13, is pastor of one of these churches. He organized it seven years ago and has been its evangelist ever since. One of the members, a young man, desires to come to America for study if he can find a place where he can earn part of his expenses.

CHURCH BOOKSTAND SUGGESTIONS

By Grace Dahlstrom

The church (Lutheran) of which I am a member planned special Lenten services last year. My sister and I being interested in the spreading of good books, suggested having a bookstand. This idea met with the hearty approval of our pastor and the board of trustees.

As we were members of the young girls' missionary circle (Bethany Circle) that circle had charge of the bookstand.

The services were not very well attended, on account of bad weather, but those who came were enthused about the bookstand and we had many sales.

I believe there are many people in churches who are interested in purchasing good books but not knowing just where to get them go without, but who, when they are presented for sale, are anxious to buy. Although the various publishing houses advertise in the Sunday school and church papers, people do not seem to respond as readily as when the book itself is presented. Often after reading an advertisement they intend to order a book but fail to do so and it is then forgotten.

This year we again had special Lenten services and also had a bookstand. The sales were not quite as large as last year but the people were still enthused.

This is a small beginning but I believe has done some good and trust plans for a permanent bookstand in our church will develop.

Our circle not only added to their funds but had the joy of spreading good books.

To the critic the written Word is but a book, as any other, Shakespeare or Burns; but to those who come in conscious guilt and need, and who trust the words as the eternal truth, it is the Word of Life, the very Word of God.—J. R. Caldwell.

A MINISTER'S TOOLS

To a pulpit committee which was eagerly seeking for a pastor this advice was given: "Discover the man you are seeking in his study. Find out what he looks like in his work shop. See with what tools he works, and how deep is the mine in which he is digging. Find out what books of reference are on his shelves." This, of course, was wise advice, for how can a preacher preach without books?

* * *

No man can work without tooks, and no minister can do his best work without books. A congregation that understands could do much to supply what is lacking in the library of its minister. Why should it be thought a thing incredible that a church should through the years accumulate and possess an ever-increasing library into the possession of which the minister would come who was fortunate enough to be called to the pastorate of such a church? If the traditional Sunday-school library has fallen into disuse why should not the minister's library become the subject of thought on the part of a people that love good preaching? It is impossible for many ministers, on the salaries which they are now receiving, to equip themselves with the tools necessary for effective service, and it is asking only what a laboring man asks, that he should be supplied with the tools with which he is to do his work. Meanwhile, awaiting the coming of that day much could be done by the individual members of a congregation who understand and appreciate the fact that intellectual fires need fuel.—H. T. K., in Presbyterian Banner.

"The Death Rattle of Russellism:—
'Millions now living will never die.'"
This unique and masterful lecture by Evangelist Mel Morris is the most convincing argument against the future spread of Russellism yet given. From the utterances of Judge J. F. Rutherford he proves that Russellism will die a natural death after October 1, 1925. No sound minded, truth loving individual will continue in the ranks of the International Bible Students Association after that date. This lecture should be read and circulated by all true Christians. Above the Country Flies the Flag

By Rev. W. Lomax Childress, Cumberland, Md.

Above the country flies the flag,
The symbol of our hopes and fears;
Its field of white, the morning light
That dawned the yester years.

Its blue, the constancy of those Whose purpose proved the strength of truth,
And guides today the nation's way
As in the country's youth.

Its red, the blood of those who died
For freedom's sake and for the free,
That time might hold its wealth untold,
The boon of liberty.

In it the spirits of the just
Have put the courage of the right;
And it will fly till time shall die
Against the morning light.

No stain has rested on its folds,
No cloud has dimmed its shining stars;
The tyrant's chain was forged in vain,
It broke the prison bars.

Above the tumult still it flies,
And holds its people heart to heart,
In union bound where need is found,
To play a nation's part.

The flag of you, the flag of me,
It flies above the land and foam,
A banner bright to herald right,
The blessed flag of home.

The "O. M. B."

State prohibition was adopted in Kansas in 1880. For some four years the battle against persistent law-violation was waged, with varying but increasing success. The better enforced the law the more popular it grew, until sentiment overwhelmingly favored it. Then came an era of lethargy. Liquor advocates grew increasingly bold, then defiant. Temperance conventions were slimly attended and prohibition leaders became discouraged. It seemed impossible to arouse the people to the imminent danger of the repeal of the law, notwithstanding the fact that the liquor men had formed themselves into an organization known as the "Order of the Mystic Brotherhood," into which they had gathered, as far as possible, all the forces of moral and civic darkness, and were spending thousands of dollars in a systematic propaganda to break down prohibition. They claimed a voting strength of 50,000, and in the estimation of the public were "making good." The state could fight successfully its outside enemies, even its open enemies within, but not so easily this cunning foe boring at its very vitals. The four state-wide temperance organizations were all but in retreat. Leaders were failing to lead. These were the conditions that prevailed in 1895-96. Then, suddenly, a strange thing "happened."

A "PRAYER MOVEMENT" WAS FORMED. And soon the things which frantic appeals and human efforts had failed to accomplish, GOD did.

No one ever knew what became of the "O. M. B.;" within two years every vestige of the organization as such had completely disappeared. The tide began to turn, and within a few years not a state in the Union or a community on earth could show better results from prohibition. Kansas is still lied about, but it goes on its civic way, unconscious perhaps that the maintenance and popularity of its law is a monument to prevailing prayer.

But today another "O. M. B." has stealthily entrenched itself in forbidden territory and has grown to gigantic proportions—the "Order of the Modernist Brotherhood"—its chief doctrine "the universal brotherhood of man," without reference to spiritual regeneration through faith in the atoning merits of the blood of Christ. It is forcing its way everywhere. Its propaganda is insidious. It is opposed to every fundamental doctrine of evangelical religion. It boasts its growing power. Before it denominations are capitulating and leaders are quailing. In its presence even the Church itself, apart from God, is utterly helpless.

AH, BUT GOD STILL LIVES, AND PRAYER STILL AVAILS.

If evangelical leaders will lead, tens of thousands of evangelical people are ready to follow. If they will not lead (but they will), the people themselves will cry unto God until He raises up new leaders. The great heart of the Church is true to its living Head. Surely the day is not far distant when God will hear the SIMULTANEOUS SUPPLICATION of His interceding children from one end of the globe to the other. And the God who hears is the God who answers.

Nothing will so effectually stem the tide of world-wide Modernism as a thorough-going, heaven-sent Church-wide revival. "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man AVAILETH MUCH" (James 5:16).

EDITORIAL NOTES

FOR THE FOURTH OF JULY

Matthew 22:16-21

And they sent out unto him their disciples with the Herodians, saying, Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man: for thou regardest not the person of men.

Tell us, therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar, or not?

But Jesus perceived their wickedness and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?

Shew me the tribute money. And they brought unto him a penny.

Then he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription?

They say unto him, Caesar's. Then saith he unto them, Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's.

Romans 13:1-10

Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God.

Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation.

For rulers are not a terror to good works but to evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? Do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same:

For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid: for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.

Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake.

For this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour.

Owe no man any thing but to love one another, for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.

For this, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet, and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

Love worketh no ill to his neighbour; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.

1 Peter 2:13–17

Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme;

Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well.

For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:

As free, and not using your liberty for a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God.

Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the king.

Red Propaganda

There was a gathering of revolutionary radicals in Michigan less than a year ago which is still, we believe, the subject of judicial inquiry. Less than six months ago, the popular house of the Wisconsin legislature passed a bill abolishing the National Guard, and less than three months ago the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom waited upon Secretary Hughes, as stated in the fore-going editorial, to demand the recognition of the Soviet authorities at Moscow.

The Chicago Tribune believes that this community of "ideals" is manipulated and directed from a common center of Red propaganda, and we agree with it. This propaganda is working to destroy American morale, and to make it impossible for us to resist attack from without or revolt from within. Well-to-do people are mixed up in it, lots of church members are under its spell, church leaders of national fame are, wittingly or unwittingly, encouraging it by voice and pen, nevertheless it is an enemy of the peace it pretends to seek, and all of us should be on our guard against it as a public mischief. Modernistic preaching, let us add, is its strong ally, and Christians who believe in the Bible and the God of the Bible need particularly to be awake.

Dangerous Propaganda

Whom, or what, are we to believe in these days? Was there ever such propaganda going on in the history of the world as now? And what camouflaged names are being used, and what lies are being told! We feel stirred thus by a letter of warning recently sent out by the American Defense Association, declaring that the National Council for Prevention of War, and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, are working directly along lines laid down by the Soviet government of Moscow to bring about armed revolution and overthrow of existing organized governments.

The letter does not charge that all the members of these pacifist organizations are disloyal and know what they are doing, but that the leaders certainly are. It also charges, and we call our readers' particular attention to this point, that it is part of their scheme to change their names frequently. The National Council, for example, has had three names in as many years.

As to the Women's League, its publications show that it is definitely linked with the Communist movement, and goes so far as to endeavor to pledge the women of this country to refuse to nurse wounded soldiers.

Let us be on our guard, and do what we may to put others on their guard against these insidious assaults on our civil and religious liberty.

The Family at Stake

"It is worthy of note that those who seek to break down and destroy the life of the church, seek also to destroy the institutions of marriage and the family."

The above is quoted from an address of Bishop Manning, of New York, on "The Peril of Easy Divorces to Our Life as a Nation. No doubt he had in mind Rector Percy Stickney Grant, towards whom he has been very tolerant, too tolerant some would say, but which gives his words all the greater force. He is right in saying as he does further on, that the institution of the family based on monogamic marriages is the supreme possession that man has won through all the ages of his moral and spiritual progress, and yet as a nation we are traveling on a course which is under-mining and sapping the life of this institution. The proportion of divorces to marriages has reached the appalling figure in this country of one to eight, and in some of our states one divorce for every two or three marriages.

The ease with which divorce is secured by the rich has now been increased by facilities afforded in Paris, the Bishop pointed out. And no matter how scandalous the circumstances, some minister of religion seems to be found willing to perform the ceremony of re-marriage. If marriage may be ended by any passing quarrel, if husband and wife are united only by mutual consent while things go happily, then the provision of monogamy is abandoned and the system of free love has been substituted for holy marriage.

It is indeed time, as the Bishop stated, for all the churches and religious organizations to act together, Catholic, Protestant and Jewish, for the preservation of the home. But such acting together means, among other things, that the church must frown upon the teaching of modernism in its pulpits, and the state must forbid the teaching of materialistic evolution in its schools. There are the things which are weakening faith in a personal God whose voice of authority is heard in the Bible, and when men and women feel free to ignore or deny Him, law and order are gone, and with them all that makes up our Christian civilization.

College Murders

Years ago a Massachusetts philanthropist declared that our universities were turning out "educated demons." The remark was shocking, but further thought and observation on the subject tempered a second shock of the same nature when the wife of an influential pastor in a university town was quoted in the press as saying that she would as soon send her son to hell as to that particular university.

These remarks are brought to mind again by the awful results of hazing in Northwestern University during the last two years. But we are not of those who hold the University authorities entirely to blame for it. It is easy to say let them stop hazing, but it is not so easy to do, since it is a part of the educational system of the period, and the student enters the university with the savagery already in his heart. It was born in him to begin with, and has been fostered and encouraged in the schools of lower grade. Nor is it limited to the one sex, but almost any day we may hear of murder under similar circumstances among the co-eds.

Only a thoroughly aroused public sentiment among educated people can put a stop to this brutality, people who have gone through the system and know what it is. And the place for this sentiment to begin to express itself is in the home and on the part of mothers and fathers. It seems to us that parents are more to blame for this state of things than any others. What has become of the old-fashioned authority of father and mother? What about home example in these days? What are the topics most commonly discussed in the family circle? And what is the literature it encourages? The family altar is gone, the blessing at meals is gone, the sacredness of the Lord's Day is gone, the modesty of daughters is gone; what is to prevent the boys from savagery?

The new Commissioner of Public Works of this city, a professedly Christian man, has granted permission for Sunday dancing on the Municipal Pier on the ground that the public has as much right to dance on Sunday as he has to play golf. He seems to have assumed that as a Christian man he has a right to play golf on that day, and there are many other Christian fathers and mothers who take the same view. Here we reach a source of the trouble in university life.

But back of the home, responsibility for present conditions may be placed very largely upon the church, since a naturalistic religion under the name of liberalism has taken all the authority out of the Bible. God is not feared as He used to be. The Ten Commandments have no weight in the preaching of these days. Conviction of sin is not heard of, there is no hell, and no need for a divine Saviour and a sacrificial atonement. Every day in every way the world is growing better and better. Such being the philosophy that is dinned into the ears of the people who go to church, how could they be much different from what they are?

Of course the evolutionary doctrine taught in our university classrooms has its share in it all, but the university authorities seem powerless to combat it.

What do we need? What is the remedy? As the Chicago Tribune said about the Herrin massacres, law cannot reach such darkness and the only hope is in a patient missionary work. But a missionary work without the power of God upon it is also fruitless. What the church and the home and the nation need is God, who must in His mercy pour out His Holy Spirit upon us and shake things to the foundation. He must make us "horribly afraid" as the prophet says. He must show us our folly in forsaking Him, the Fountain of living waters, to hew out for ourselves cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water. To what better use could we put our Fourth of July holiday than to assemble in our various places of worship and call upon Him to hear us!

Salesmanship and Evangelism

A summer school for pastors has just been brought to a close in Columbus, O., which was held under the auspices of the Ohio Council of Churches and the Ohio State University. A feature of the program in which we were specially interested was a course in the psychology of salesmanship applied to evangelism, conducted by a professor of salesmanship of Syracuse University.

The secretary of the Council of Churches spoke of the course as "something entirely new in church work," adding that in his judgment, one of the fundamental weaknesses of the church is the lack of emphasis on the principles of salesmanship in winning people to the church and to Christ. He thought the time had come to lay less emphasis on the wholesale, and more on the retail, method of winning the different types of people in each community. "If you are going to get them to understand the gospel," said he, "you must present it to them in the way in which they will best understand it."

The course included such subjects as "The Kind of Psychology a Preacher Should Know," "The Psychological Basis of Appeal," "How to Catch the Attention of the Prospect," and "How to Secure Decision and Get Action."

We were interested in it first because it seems to be a reaction from the trend towards social service which neglects the spiritual need of the individual for the physical well-being of the group. But, secondly, because under another name it has been a leading feature of instruction in the Moody Bible Institute since its inception thirty-seven years ago. D. L. Moody, who was a successful salesman on the road before he became an evangelist, made his inquiry meetings unique by the system of personal work he introduced, individuals dealing with individuals. And when he founded the Institute he insisted that its Practical Work Course, as it has come to be called, should be placed on a par with its Bible Course. In his mind it was not enough that a pastor should know the Bible and human nature except as he also knew how to apply the teaching of the Bible to the different spiritual needs of the people to whom he ministered, especially in winning them to Christ.

Doctor Torrey, the first superintendent of the Institute, a master-teacher and a zealous soul-winner, laid a foundation for a course in personal work, or how to bring men to Christ, which, with but little addition, is still used in the Institute, and is the guide of the students as they put their classwork into operation every day, in the streets, the jails, the hospitals, the missions, the shops, and the factories of this great city, and also, like Paul, from house to house.

The students are taught how to meet and deal with different classes of individuals, such as out and out infidels, others who are misled by false teaching, Christians who need spiritual help in their life problems, and unbelievers who, for one reason or another, are hindered in the acceptance and confession of Christ.

It is one of the characteristics of men and women thus trained that they experience freedom in approaching others on the question of salvation, and that they have unusual success and blessing in soul-winning. Of course, without the enduement of the Holy Spirit psychology is without avail, for soul-winning is supernatural; but given the touch of God the man with gracious tact who can approach and help another on the subject of his deepest and eternal need possesses that which angels might envy.

The Church Awake

We are writing this as the daily press is bringing us the news of events in the Northern Baptist Convention at Atlantic City, and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church at Indianapolis.

The friends of Christ and His truth are showing courage and ability in both gatherings, and we trust the outcome of their efforts will hearten the rank and file of His disciples everywhere.

It is a matter of regret that the

The Moody Bible Institute will conduct a Bible Conference at Ocean City, N. J., August 9-19.

Assembly could not have made a more definite disclaimer against materialistic evolution than it did, but its stand on the Fosdick situation was all that could be desired under the circumstances. It looks to an outsider, however, as if the present victory were only that of a skirmish compared with what may be expected in the Assembly next year, when the action of the New York Presbytery is reported.

Let the people of God be not dismayed because of all these things. They are signs of spiritual life and evidences of loyalty to Christ. And they are not unusual, but have marked the course of the gospel of grace from apostolic times. Only let our conduct towards one another be as it becometh that gospel. Let us avoid hard speeches and hard names, let us keep near to God in prayer, let us continually feed the springs of our inner being with the water of life, and the whole church will be blessed by the controversy and believers will be the more added to the Lord.

The "O.M.B."

We call particular attention to this advertisement on another page. We fully believe in what it says about the results of prayer in civic affairs, and we could duplicate the illustration it gives. If God thus hears His people when they cry on behalf of the state, will He not hear when they cry on behalf of the church which He purchased with His own blood?

Already is God raising up new leaders in the church who, in the face of much abuse, falsehood and misrepresentation of motives, are marching right long with hosts of devoted followers. A revival is springing up in many places, but it lacks something yet, namely, deep conviction of sin and a real anxiety to save souls. Let us pray for that.

Houghton College

The president of this college which is located in Houghton, Alleghany County New, York, has asked us to call attention to it, which, after learning its attitude towards the Bible, we feel at liberty to do. It started as an academy some thirty years ago, but has received a college charter during the present year. This charter, however, has not come to the college as an untried school, inasmuch as for years her students have been received with advanced standing at Cornell University, the University of Michigan, and corresponding institutions, and some of them are now on university faculties.

It is the plan of the college to keep the expenses so low that boys and girls of families with small incomes may have an opportunity for a college education.

The president writes that they accept the Bible as a plenarily inspired revelation of God, and neither teach nor accept the evolutionary hypothesis. He mentions, however, that the teaching staff of the college believe and teach "entire sanctification as a second definite work of grace subsequent to regeneration, wrought by the Holy Spirit in the application of the blood, cleansing the heart from carnality and filling the entire being with Himself."

We do not entirely subscribe to this, in which we think we express the judgment of the great majority of our readers, but we have not thought that it ought to prevent our making mention of the college. It may be that the error, as we regard it, is not so serious as the language would seem to imply, but we will leave our readers to judge.

Rev. William Robertson Nicoll, D.D., LL.D., founded the British Weekly and continued its editor until his death May 4. His paper was very influential among Noncon formists and mediated between the conservatives and modernists. A special memorial edition was issued May 10, containing many tributes of appreciation from distinguished clergymen, statesmen, educators, editors and other leaders of the present day.

The Perfect Servant Revealed in the Prophecy of Isaiah

By Miss Homera Homer-Dixon, Niagara Falls, Ont.

THE perfect God must by rights have a perfect servant. Yet every saint in the Bible history was sin-stained, and "his angels he chargeth with folly." Therefore God Himself—seeing that His will can never be done with the exquisite perfection it deserves unless He does it Himself, became His own servant! "I am God, and there is none like me . . My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure," for "the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand" (Isa. 46:9,10; 53:10).

So Christ came down to earth and it is written that He "took upon himself the form of a servant . . . and became obedient unto death" (Phil. 2:7,8). Obedience was something which God had never before done. Speaking reverently, obedience was a new experience for the Almighty; hitherto the Father and the Son had been so intimately united that their wills had been one, but the dark night came when the blessed Son—prostrate under the olive trees of Gethsemane—cried out, "Not my will, but thine be done"!

And so we read that "though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered" (Luke 22:42; Heb. 6:8). And how perfectly He mastered His lesson!

For the sake of His bride He came down to where she lay in sin and distress, and became one of her race; and for her sake through all eternity He will be very man of very man, leaving His Father and His Father's level to cleave unto His bride (Gen. 2:24), and thus being subject unto the Father forevermore (1 Cor. 15:28). The Prince for love became a bondman, and forever in the glory will bear the dear scars of the thraldom of death.

In Isaiah, says Dr. Scofield, there are three servants of God mentioned—David, the nation of Israel, and the Messiah. It is well to keep these distinctions clearly in mind when reading, for Isaiah has much to say of the last two servants, and frequently presents to us the Servant Christ at work restoring the servant nation.

The fortieth chapter of Isaiah opens a new division of the book, and from there till the end of the fifty-third chapter it is largely a prophecy concerning the Servant Christ.

The Coming of the Perfect Servant

Chapter forty opens with the passage announcing the coming of the perfect Servant that is fittingly chosen of God to be the opening passage of the servant Gospel, Mark—for in Mark Christ is always seen as the Servant of God at work (compare Isa. 40:1-11 with Mark 1:1-3). There is the way prepared, and His work ready before Him; then Isaiah forty cries aloud,

"Behold your God!"

while Isaiah forty-two presents the same person with the words,

"Behold my servant!"

The God-Servant is an unknown thought outside the inspired pages, but within them He is often seen, divine yet lowly, toiling in obscurity yet adored by the watching hosts of heaven, apparently failing to achieve His object, yet in the end completing a work so magnificent that eternity alone can contain His praises.

The forty-second chapter of Isaiah should be read in this connection, for it is very deep and precious, and in it we can hear the Father's voice telling us His great joy, His pride, His heart-satisfaction with this wonderful Servant, saying, as it were,

"Behold Him! Just look at Him! Consider Him—how perfect He is, how meek, how wise, how tender, and how exquisitely obedient is this Servant of mine! And—hush—I would not tell the world, but cannot my people guess the wondrous secret of His identity? Who else but my own Beloved Son could be so ideal a servant? Consider each thing He does, how absolutely perfect it is!"

"Behold my Servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom my soul delighteth; I have put my Spirit upon him; he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench: He shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged till he have set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for his law . . Who is blind, but my servant? or deaf, as my messenger that I sent? Who is blind as He that is perfect, and blind as the Lord's servant? Seeing many things, but thou observest not; opening the ears, but he heareth not. The Lord is well pleased for his righteousness' sake; he will magnify the law and make it honourable" (Isa. 42:1-4, 19-21).

Blind and deaf to all temptations, the perfect Servant is seen moving onward to "make great" the law that has hitherto been minimized rather than magnified. For the first time the righteousness of a human being has been so perfect that the Holy One of Israel acknowledges that He is well pleased.

The Servant Nation Presented

The forty-third chapter of Isaiah presents the servant nation as well as the Servant Christ, and we find this suggested in the very first verse by the double call to "Jacob" and to "Israel."

This is not mere poetic repetition—it signifies that there are two distinct persons addressed. The ransomed nation of Israel is seen to have a certain likeness to Christ in that they, too, are blind and deaf as He was (42:8).

This chapter shows the gatherings of the remnant of Israel in the millennium, and also in the present time the sad lot of the unfaithful servant, given to the curse and reproaches.

The dual prophecy continues in the forty-fourth chapter where Israel and Jacob are both addressed; and just here let us notice a wonderful point illustrating the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ. He takes the name of Jacob and bears the sins, the curse, and the reproaches of the wicked servant; but the nation is called Israel, the prince with God, and has all the blessings that by right are Christ's; however these blessings are only hers when she is one with Christ in that day when "all Israel shall be saved."

"Yet now hear, O Jacob my servant; and Israel whom I have chosen . . . Fear not, O Jacob, my servant; and thou Jeshurun, whom I have chosen . . . Remember these, O Jacob and Israel; for thou art my servant: I have formed thee; thou art my servant . . ."

Here is the double statement that two different people are His servants—characters so different that He must perforce speak to each one separately, for the nation never could be a servant in the same degree of perfection as Christ (Isa. 44:1,2,21).

The perfect Servant's work is next seen, in the succeeding chapters, as far as the end of the forty-eighth chapter. He handles the destinies of nations and delivers Israel from her enemies.

But in the forty-ninth chapter the glorious personality of the Servant is presented and we find ourselves at the beginning of His earthly life.

The Servant is to have a miraculous birth, in which God takes a particularly important part (Isa. 7:14; 44:2,24; Heb. 10:5; Isa. 43:7; 44:21; 49:1,2). There is strong emphasis on the virgin birth, and the object is that the One thus born is to "be his servant, to bring Jacob again to him" (49:5).

But beyond this was the glorious duty of gathering in the Gentiles (49:6). Named of God, and called of God even before His birth, He answers, through the mouth of the Psalmist, long before His birth, "Lo, I come. . . . I delight to do thy will, O my God."

And when in the Psalms He speaks of the pierced ear of the perfect servant, the Holy Spirit changes this in Hebrews to the prepared body (compare Ps. 40:6 with Heb. 10:5).

Piercing the Servant's Ear

We are all familiar with the beautiful old custom ordained by God, that when a servant's time was up and they could by rights go free, if they chose to remain with master, wife, and children, the master led them to the doorpost and pierced their ear with an awl, in token that they chose to remain by that door, within those posts, for their whole life time (Ex.21:2-6).

So when Christ contemplates leaving the position of servitude which He had voluntarily taken, He cries, as it were—"No! I love, I love my master, and I love my bride! If I go out free, I would be leaving my wife behind! No, I will stay forever as the Servant as well as the Son of God! So let my ears be pierced before I am born. Before ever Thou dost prepare my body, do Thou pierce my ears."

Following His wondrous birth are years of obscurity and preparation; "In the shadow of his hand hath he hid me, and made me a polished shaft; in his quiver hath he hid me" (49:2).

After this comes the announcement of the Father's love, the Master's approval. Even in childhood He had been conscious that His duty was to "be about his Father's business," and when after the baptism the heavens are opened and the Father's voice proclaims that He is well-pleased in His Beloved Son, Christ does not take that proclamation as a mere cause of gratification; listen to His interpretation of it: "Thou art my servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified." To Christ, each gleam of glory was a fresh incentive to duty (49:3). It is a study of great blessing to read the Gospel of John with Christ's intensely eager obedience to the Father as a key thought. "I seek not my own will, but the will of the Father who sent me . . . the works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me. . . . My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work. . . . for I came down from heaven not to do my own will, but the will of him that sent me. . . . . I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things. And he that sent me is with me: for the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him . . . I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day; the night cometh, when no man can work." And the night did come at last, the black night of Calvary—but listen to His sunset prayer, just before the great evening sacrifice was offered, "I have glorified thee on the earth—as thou didst command me (compare John 17:4 with Isa. 49:3)—I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do . . . and now I come to thee." Then listen to His last great cry,

"It is finished."

Christ as the Servant does not make such a strong appeal to the carnal mind as Christ the King in glory, or the Royal Lover; but there is in the attitude of service to God a chastened beauty, a refined loveliness, and a glory of meekness that is especially dear to the heart of God, and winsome beyond words to the quiet soul that loves Him. His voluntary subjection, His wonderful obedience, and His divinely beautiful eagerness to fulfil the uttermost of His Father's will thrill the heart, when we contemplate it quietly.

The Perfect Servant a Sufferer

The suffering of the perfect Servant is suggested in Isaiah forty-ninth in a new light which we seldom realize.

There were of course many kinds which He bore, but in the fourth verse is the temptation to the very human sin of discouragement. A certain Christian worker was watching the ebb-tide of her service, and all seemed an utter failure; but oh! the fellowship of His sufferings was so sweet as this verse suddenly flashed before her in its comforting companionship—

"Then I said, I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength for naught, and in vain."

Did you ever realize how painful must have been the temptation to our Lord to be discouraged? After that our temptations seem almost precious, for we know we have His full understanding, since He has passed this way.

And the perfect Servant finds victory just where we find it—in resting on God and His perfect understanding of our efforts and desires and attempts.

"Yet surely my judgment is with the Lord, and my work with my God." Yes, we leave it in His hands, as Christ did, when all His work seemed a total failure. We rest there, where Christ the perfect Servant rested.

Do not let us think for an instant that the perfectness of a servant is his successfulness; his perfection is his faithfulness. That is what the Father reminded His Servant of when He was in the dark of discouragement.

"Yes, I did form you to save Israel, but even if you do not succeed, yet you will be glorious in my eyes for your faithfulness unto death, and I will be your strength" (Isa. 49:5, reversed). "As the cold of snow in time of harvest, so is a faithful messenger to them that send him: for he refresheth the soul of his masters" (Prov.25:13).

The work given to Christ was especially the salvation of the Jewish nation; and the Devil must have taunted Christ terribly, as He saw them turn against Him, their lawful King, their Immanuel! That poor nation is still so far from God, so madly unrepentant, that it seems as if Christ had failed; but no, Hallelujah! the day is not far distant when the spirit of supplications and grace will be poured out upon them and they will look upon Him whom they pierced, and crown Him Lord at last. He has not failed, although His success seems delayed.

The Moody Bible Institute will conduct a Bible Conference at Cedar Lake, Ind., July 29-August 12.

"And now, saith the Lord, that formed me from the womb to be his servant, to bring Jacob again to him, though Israel be not gathered, yet shall I be glorious in the eyes of the Lord, and my God shall be my strength. And he said, It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant, to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation to the ends of the earth. Thus saith the Lord, the Redeemer of Israel, and his Holy One, to him whom man despiseth, to him whom the nation abhorreth, to a servant of rulers, Kings shall see and arise, princes also shall worship, because of the Lord that is faithful, and the Holy One of Israel, and he shall choose thee" (Isa. 49:5-7).

The rest of the forty-ninth chapter deals mainly with the servant nation and its deliverance (because of the servant Christ, who beholds in the glorious future the delayed success of His labors).

The Dark Shadows

But the personal sorrows of Christ have been suggested, and now their shadows loom darker. He "whom man despiseth . . . . whom the nation abhorreth" has a still more bitter cup to drink. "The Lord God hath given me the tongue of the learned. . . . . The Lord God hath opened mine ear, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away back. I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair; I hid not my face from shame and spitting."

Taking the humblest position of learner at the feet of God, in the blessed morning watch, in the early hours, He was strong to be meek, and to take the humblest position before men, and to endure all their hatred and loathsome spite; the face before which angels and archangels bow was covered with the filthy expectoration of vile Roman soldiers, the lowest of the low. Oh! the depths of the love of Christ! Oh! the wonder of that perfect obedience which led Him so far down into the hideous mire of death! "The sorrows of death compassed me about, and the floods of ungodly men made me afraid. The sorrows of hell compassed me about: the snares of death prevented me," it is written in one of "the servant Psalms" (Ps. 18: 4, 5; see title).

Christ has borne every curse for us and among them the curse of servitude, placed on a certain branch of the human race, for sin (Gen. 9:25). That curse found its full mark in Christ as He stooped to Calvary, not only Servant of love, but finally Servant also by reason of the curse of God. He took it all upon Himself, and now every soul on earth may, by virtue of His death, go free from all domination of sin and the Devil and slavery.

How thoroughly Christ does His work! "He that committeth sin is the servant (slave) of sin," He said, and as He said it, He knew that the day was coming when He who knew no sin would be made sin for us, and becoming the slave of sin would be dragged down by an exultant Devil to receive to the full all the wages of sin! But that only lasted a little while, ere He rose triumphant, and the Devil is now vanquished forever.

The fifty-third chapter of Isaiah describes the sufferings of the Lord's Servant, and one feels that the chapter should begin at the thirteenth verse of the fifty-second chapter.

"Behold, my servant shall deal prudently, he shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high. As many were astonished at thee; his visage was so marred, more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men. He hath no form nor comeliness. He is despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised and we esteemed him not. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities, the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter. . . He had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth. Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief; when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many: for he shall bear their iniquities."

In this passage briefly quoted, we behold the righteous Servant of Jehovah descending to the depths of sorrow and death because it was the pleasure of Him He served. We pause and wonder at the infinite renunciation of self involved in this obedience unto death. We are on holy ground, as we contemplate the mystery of the suffering Servant-God, in the profound majesty of self-surrender to the will of the Father-God.

The Servant Exalted

Jacob, the perfect Servant, is at last laid away in the tomb. But that is not the end. He arises in glory, and we behold him again, moving serenely as ever in the paths of obedience, yet paths of unspeakable exaltation.

Yet there is this difference—there is no reference to "my servant Jacob" after his death; every time there is a prophecy of what the perfect Servant does after His resurrection, He is called "my servant David." Jacob the sinful has forever been left in the tomb, and the Servant is now seen as King of the nation He has died to save.

The fifty-third of Isaiah ends the message of the Servant as found in that book. The remaining chapters deal with the glory of redeemed Israel, and with hidden and spiritual messages for the church. The only reference to the working Christ is in the sixty-first chapter where He announces His mission under the anointing of the Spirit, as quoted in the fourth of Luke. The servant nation is once referred to (Isa. 65:14), but in the main the thought of the servant has passed away in the rapture of redemption.

We find, indeed, in Isaiah many prophecies of the exaltation of the perfect Servant, which of course follows His death and resurrection (Isa. 42:4; 49:6,7; 52:13,15; 53:10-12), but we now look to see what Jeremiah and Ezekiel tell us of Him.

"Fear thou not, O my servant Jacob, and be not dismayed, O Israel; for, behold, I will save thee from afar off and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and be in rest, and at ease, and none shall make him afraid. Fear thou not, O Jacob my servant, saith the Lord, for I am with thee" (Jer. 46:27, 28).

This message has a double interpretation, like the passages in Isaiah which refer to the Servant Christ and the servant nation. This is a true prophecy of the Jewish people, which may be fulfilled in our generation, God grant it! and it is also a word of comfort to Him who as the servant Jacob was going down into death, into the land afar off "behind God's back," bearing our sins away as the scapegoat bore the sins of Israel, into the land not inhabited. In sublime faith the perfect Servant laid down His life because it was the Father's will (John 10:18), and taking the name of Jacob upon Him signifies that He takes the nature of Jacob also, being made sin for us and all "Jacobs." And His faithful discharge of duty even unto death receives its reward, "I will save thee from afar off," even from the land of oblivion where He bore our sins. "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us," and so far did the blessed Christ take them (Ps. 103:12). "Behold the Lamb of God who taketh away (not "sendeth away") the sin of the world" (John 1:29).

Then in regard to His children, "He shall see of the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied," and God promised Him that He would save them "from the land of their captivity" where Satan had held us in bondage (Rom. 6:14, 16-22). "And Jacob shall return" from death, yes, and He shall return to this earth also, and be in rest—"He will rest in his love" (Zeph. 3:17), in that resurrection-rest which we are privileged to share spiritually now, and dispensationally in the future, when God ceases from His labor of salvation on the Sabbath of the ages.

Two Adams, Two Jacobs and Two Davids

Just as there are the two Adams (the literal and human, also the divine Adam) so there are the two Jacobs (the literal man and the divine one who took his name and nature and finally his sin), and there are also the two "servant Davids" (the literal man, and the great King divine). In humiliation and obedience Christ is called "my servant Jacob," for Jacob was an exile from his father's home. In Isaiah the servant Jacob is seen working, suffering, dying, for the sake of His "Rachel," and in obedience to His Master, the Father of His bride.

But finally, in Ezekiel we behold the perfect Servant now named by the name of the great Psalmist and King, "the man after God's own heart." Neither Jacob nor David could ever be perfect types of Christ, but by looking at Him from every view point and enriching our mental picture of Him by adding to it every type that we can, we gain much, and realize more and more of His wonderfully many-sided glory.

At last we behold the days of exaltation and glory, and we see the Father rewarding the faithful Servant by dominion over the nation He has saved at such a fearful cost.

We may ask why Christ as the perfect Servant has so much to do with Israel, in this particular study. The answer is, first, that we are largely limited to the Old Testament in considering Christ as Servant, and there the Church is not seen clearly, for she is "the mystery which was hid from ages and generations." Also, Christ to the church is Lord, Master, Bridegroom, and while we know He is the perfect Servant, and we glory in His wonderful obedience, yet His work was for Israel as Servant of Jehovah redeeming a nation, and we as the church are only grafted into God's plan with the failure of the Jews to accept their King. And we do not see Christ's failure, as perfect Servant; God rather points us on to behold His success in finally redeeming the nation that He set out to redeem.

"And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their Shepherd . . . and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters . . . in green pastures . . . . And I the Lord will be their God, and my servant David will be a Prince among them; I the Lord have spoken it. . . . He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end (Ezek. 34:23,24; Rev. 7:17; Ps. 23; Luke 1:32,33).

Amen. Even so, come Lord Jesus.

Irrefutable Proof of Christ's Resurrection*

By Rev. W. Schwind, L. C. M., London, England.

*This article was inadvertently omitted from our Easter (March) issue.

THE most valuable evidence in any case is that which is supplied by inference. Not appearing on the surface, unintentional and undesigned, it all the more compels conviction and demands acceptance.

The resurrection of the Lord Jesus is abundantly proved by evidence of this nature, happily available to every reader of the first five books of the New Testament; indeed, the book of Acts alone contains all that is needful to convince and satisfy the candid mind.

The disciples, chosen by the Lord, not for their wit, but for their simplicity and sincerity, failed to appreciate His oft-repeated words, "After three days I will rise again," but the chief priests had made a note of it, and determined to prevent such a catastrophe by placing a guard of sixty Roman soldiers to watch the tomb.

Dismayed and enraged by failure in this case, they next sought by means of cash and cruelty to cover up the truth and crush into silence those who persisted in proclaiming it.

Why the Rage?

It is natural to ask, Why this rage and fierce determination to overwhelm a handful of illiterate men?

The reason is not far to seek. The resurrection damaged the reputation of the rulers and would humble and discredit them before the people.

The Sadducees said, "There is no resurrection of the dead," but the simple testimony of an illiterate fisherman in one day convinced thousands that such a doctrine is a lie. Further, the declaration of His resurrection was an implied indictment of a terrible crime against the high priest and his fellows. Whether or not the words of Peter (Acts 2:23) were reported to him, his own angry denunciation of the apostle shows that the high priest recognized and felt keenly the inference that must be drawn from the resurrection of the crucified Christ, "Behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine and intend to bring this man's blood upon us" (Acts 5:28).

To be guilty of the blood of the Messiah would, in the eyes of the people, be an unpardonable crime against the nation, and a sin of inconceivable magnitude against God: the rulers would forever stand discredited, and the anger of the people might lead to most serious consequences.

A glimpse of what those consequences might be is gained from Acts 5:26. When about to arrest Peter and John, the captain of the temple "feared lest he and his officers should have been stoned" by the angry onlookers.

Were His Enemies Convinced?

Now is it not evident that the chief priests had no doubt about the Lord's resurrection? Apart from the forebodings of a guilty conscience and the remembrance of His prophecy, there was the empty tomb and the testimony of the men who had seen Him come forth, but were unable to move a finger against Him.

This witness of sixty unprejudiced Roman soldiers was indisputable and had a confirmation in the earthquake which, occurring at the moment of the resurrection, had shaken the whole city.

Again is it not certain that the least doubt on their part would have led them to adopt a different method of securing their ends? The punishment of the unfaithful guards, the arrest of the daring body snatchers, and the recovery of the stolen corpse, would certainly have been demanded and secured.

These haughty priests, at all times so difficult to rule, would not quietly sit under the stigma of a galling and terrible accusation brought against them by the contemptible Galileans.

Is it not also a remarkable fact that Peter and John were imprisoned and beaten, not to extort from them a confession of guilt, but to crush them into silence; not to wring a secret from them, but to effectually hush their joyful testimony?

Easy to Discover a Fraud

Fraud in this matter could be easily discovered and exposed. It could not be possible to keep such a secret for any length of time. There being nothing to gain and everything to lose, even to life itself, some one would surely ere long break their guilty silence and end their troubles by an open confession: or, another Judas, willing to earn a few pieces of silver, would strike a bargain and lead the authorities straight to the hiding place of the body.

What a joyful hour that would have been for the priests! With light hearts and clear consciences, they would speedily secure the corpse, expose the fraud, put the disciples to rout, and silence forever the lying testimony by which these deceivers had disgraced themselves and brought dishonor to their late master who had said, "The truth shall make you free."

But not so did it turn out. There was nothing to hide, nothing to confess but the truth. If, under excessive torture Peter could have been led to recant and deny the resurrection, yet he could not have revealed a hiding place which had no existence in fact.

A Few Questions to Answer

The more one considers the plain facts, the more gripping and compelling is the conviction that Peter spoke the truth when he said, "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all (120 men and women) are witnesses" (Acts 2:32).

I should like to ask some questions.

Is it possible that any person of sane, honest mind can accept as facts the following suggestions?

1. That with nothing to gain and no purpose to serve, Peter, who terror-stricken had declared with an oath, "I know not the man," yet three nights later, with the moon at the full, and in the presence of a Roman guard of sixty soldiers, raided the tomb and carried off the body of Christ?

2. That "good luck" favoring him sent the soldiers into a slumber from which they did not awaken until too late?

3. That the guard favored the plans and shielded the disciples by inventing the story of the resurrection?

4. That the enraged priests, not believing their story, breathed never a word against them, but reserved all their wrath for the disciples who had defied Caesar and his men?

5. That, believing the body to be stolen and knowing that their reputation was being seriously damaged by the spreading of a lie, the priests nevertheless made no attempt to expose the lie?

6. That while it would have been a simple matter to recover the body and to explode the fraud, no such attempt was made?

7. That Peter, with a lie on his conscience which was causing trouble and suffering to multitudes of his brethren and their families, could write them two letters filled with such sentiments as these: "He that will love life and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil and his lips that they speak no guile . . . the face of the Lord is against them that do evil" (1 Pet. 3:10-12)?

8. That Peter persisted in the lie hatched by himself which brought gain to no one but branded him an impostor, and willingly bore stripes, imprisonment, and the agonies of crucifixion, crowning his infamy by dying with sealed lips?

Many such questions will occur to others, and every time the answer must be—Impossible.

Man Immortal—An Appeal to Revelation and to History

By Rev. B. A. Disney, Chattanooga, Tenn.

AN ARTICLE appeared in The Homiletic Review, some time ago, in which the writer takes the position that man has not a soul distinct and separable from the body, and that he has not, and never had, an immortal nature. This is so dishonoring to God, so debasing to man, and so absolutely false that it should not go unchallenged.

I

Our Appeal to Revelation

Man was "created in the image of God" (Gen. 1:26, 27). But "God is a Spirit" (John 4:24), therefore, immaterial (Luke 24:39); "invisible" (Col. 1:15; Heb. 11:27), and "incorruptible" (Rom. 1:23), therefore "immortal" (1 Tim. 1:17).

If God is a material being, He has a material face, hands, feet, (Ruth 2:12; Ps. 91:4; Mal. 4:2), which is of course ridiculous and wicked. But man was "created in the image of God" and is therefore a spiritual being; He belongs to that order. "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding" (Job. 32:8).

God is a pure, holy, rational, conscious, perfect Being, in which image, also, man was created. And God is "the living God," so that man was created a living, not a dying, soul.

But death and corruption are in the world. How came they here? "By man came death . . . in Adam all die" (1 Cor. 15:21, 22). "By one man's offense death reigned by one . . . By one man's disobedience many were made sinners" (Rom. 5:17, 18).

Then what is the conclusion? Namely: had man never sinned, he never would have died, and was therefore created immortal.

Law and Its Penalty

But man was created a subject of government, and government cannot be without law, and law is worthless without penalty, and penalty amounts to nothing if it be not enforced. The law given to Adam reads thus: "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou mayest not eat of it: for in the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die" (Gen. 2:16, 17).

Adam transgressed this law and died—died "in the day" he consented to eat of the forbidden fruit. But it is evident his body did not die that day, for he, that is, his body, lived "nine hundred and thirty years" after that day (Gen. 5:5). His body could not sin, it was of itself only unthinking, helpless clay, only "the house" in which he dwelt, his "tabernacle," his "home." But in the day of his transgression he died, the real Adam, the real thinking, rational, conscious "man," the "living soul," the "spirit" died. How? He was cut off from the favor, communion and fellowship of God, he died "in trespasses and sins" (Eph. 2:1), he lost God's image of "righteousness and true holiness" (Col. 3:10; Eph. 4:24)—in a word, he died unto God.

Then the ground was cursed for his sake (Gen. 3:17, 18), and sentence was pronounced against his body: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground: for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19).

But this, mark you, was spoken of the body, not of the soul.

"Life is real! Life is earnest!
And the grave is not its goal:
Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
Was not spoken of the soul."

So man was created immortal as to both soul and body, and had he never sinned he never would have tasted death at any time, or in any form, and our earth would have remained an "Eden."

What, then, would have become of the human family? The answer is: One after another, in his time, having served his probationship on earth, would have been taken to heaven as Enoch and Elijah were.

This is the teaching of the Holy Scriptures and of our beloved Christ and his holy apostles.

II

Our Appeal to History

We appeal to the early Fathers of the Christian church. Their testimony cannot be impeached, for they were men of sound mind and veracity, who saw and heard for themselves, whose testimony would be taken by any court anywhere, at any time.

1. Ignatius (A. D. 30-107). Tradition says he was the little child which Jesus "sat in the midst" of his disciples as an example of humility. He and Polycarp were fellow-disciples of the apostle John. He received directly from Christ and his apostles what they taught as to the immortality of the soul. He says of Christ: "Being incorporeal, He was in a body; being impassible, He was in a passible body; being immortal, He was in a mortal body." (The Ante-Nicene Fathers, Vol. I., pp. 52, 55, 58).

2. Clement (A. D. 39-100). He was a disciple of St. Peter, converted under him and became his fellow-worker. He quotes Peter: "If any persist in impiety till the end of life, then as soon as the soul, which is immortal, departs, it shall pay the penalty of its persistence in impiety. For even the souls of the impious are immortal, though perhaps themselves would wish them to end with their bodies." (The Ante-Nicene Fathers, Vol. 8, pp. 231, 239, 288).

3. Polycarp (A. D. 60-166). Eusebius speaks of him as the "blessed Polycarp" and "the most admirable, apostolical, and prophetical teacher of our time." Irenaeus said: "Polycarp also was not only instructed by the apostles and conversed with many who had seen Christ, but was also appointed by the apostles bishop of the church of Smyrna, and whom I knew in my early youth. He always taught the things he had learned from the apostles, and which the church has handed down, and which also are true."

When the proconsul threatened to "consume him with fire" if he did not renounce Christ and swear (by the pagan gods)," Polycarp answered: "Thou threatenest me with fire which burneth for an hour, but art ignorant of the fire of the everlasting judgment and of the eternal punishment reserved for the ungodly." The church of Smyrna adds: "Having overcome, and thus acquired the crown of immortality, he, now, with apostles and all the righteous (in heaven) rejoicingly glorifies God." (The Ante-Nicene Fathers, A. D. 103-165). Vol. I., pp. 41-43; 148-150.

4. Justin, or Justinus the Martyr, A. D. 103-165. "This, then," says he, "is what we expect and have learned from Christ. Our teacher of these things is Jesus Christ." "We hold this view, that it is alike impossible for the wicked and for the good to escape the notice of God, and that each man goes to everlasting punishment or salvation, according to the value of his actions. Insensibility would be a godsend to all the wicked. But since sensation remains to all who have ever lived, and eternal punishment is laid up (i. e., for the wicked), see that ye neglect not to be convinced, and to hold as your belief that these things are true. Let them persuade you that even after death souls are in a state of sensation, for we know that our Master, Jesus Christ, said: 'Fear not them that kill you, and after that can do no more; but fear him who after death is able to cast both soul and body into hell.' And hell is a place where those are to be punished who have lived wickedly and do not believe what God has taught us by Christ will come to pass." (The Ante-Nicene Fathers, Vol. I., pp. 165, 169, 191).

5. Mathetes (A. D. 130). The author of this epistle gives himself the title of Mathetes, "Disciple of the Apostles." He was possibly a catechumen of St. Paul. The epistle is a gem of the purest ray, a precious work. He says: "The soul dwells in the body, yet it is not of the body. The invisible soul is guarded by a visible body. The immortal soul dwells in a mortal tabernacle."

6. Irenaeus (A. D. 120 or 130-202 or 208). "He was a pupil of the eminent Bishop Polycarp. He was well versed in ancient philosophy, as well as in evangelical doctrine. His book on heresies is highly appreciated as a historical monument and a vindication of the evangelical faith." Notice his words. How plain and incontrovertible! He says:

"The Lord has taught, with very great fulness, that souls not only continue to exist, but that they preserve the same form the body had to which they were adapted, and that they remember the deeds which they did in this state of existence, and from which they have now ceased,—in that narration which is recorded respecting the rich man and that Lazarus who found repose in the bosom of Abraham. In this account he states that Dives knew Lazarus after death, and Abraham, in like manner, and that each one of these persons continued in his own proper position. By these things, then, it is plainly declared that souls continue to exist, that they do not pass from body to body, that they possess the form of a man, so that they may be recognized, and retain the memory of things in this world; moreover, that each class receives a habitation such as it has deserved, even before the judgment." (The Ante-Nicene Fathers, Vol. I., pp. 411, 523).

Such is the testimony of the principal of the "Early Fathers" of the Christian church. They saw, and heard, and their testimony is indubitable. Who, with this evidence before him, if he be of sound mind and unprejudiced judgment, can for a moment doubt this orthodox and God-honoring and man-exalting view? Every rational, conscious human being should exclaim with Montgomery,

"The soul, immortal as its sire,
Can never die!"

The Monstrosity of War

By the Very Reverend Dean Inge, St. Paul's Cathedral, London, England.

The following is a verbatim report of the sermon of which so much has been said, and which was preached on the occasion of the Peace Congress last year.—Editors.

"SINCE ye are brethren, why do ye wrong one to another?" (Acts 7:26).

In the early part of the war a young English officer who was killed the following day, wrote his last letter to his father:

"Having been about all night digging, I was shifted to make room for some other company. I advanced to a cemetery to defend it, and stayed there most of the day. It was a beastly thing to have to do, digging trenches among graves and pulling crosses and ornamental wreathes to make room. One feels that something is wrong when a man lies down behind a child's grave to shoot at a bearded German who has probably got a family anxiously awaiting his return home. It was a miserable day, wet, and spent in a cemetery under those conditions. There was a large crucifix at one end. The sight of the bullets clipping Christ's image about, and the knowledge of what He had done for us and the Germans, and what we are doing to His consecrated ground and each other make one feel sick of the whole war, or sicker than before."

The men at the front "felt that something was wrong" and sometimes said so in plain, soldierly words like this poor boy. I think most of us feel it now. We learned in our childhood Southey's poem about the "Battle of Blenheim" with the child's unanswered and unanswerable question:

" 'And what good came of it at last?'
Said little Peterkin."

"The wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God." We knew it, of course. And I never met any one who wished for war with Germany or any other country. But we were told, perhaps rightly, it is not for me to say, that the country must fight, there was no help for it. The people of all the other belligerent countries were told the same, and so millions of men, who, a week before were absorbed in their peaceful work and play in their quiet homes with their families round them were hurled against each other for four years of scientific butchery.

We need not now apportion the guilt. It is as Europeans, as Christians, as civilized nations, that we are called to penitence, and penitence in which we may find the path to reconciliation. The young officer's words recall that unforgettable paragraph in Sartor Resartus:

"There dwell and toil in the British village of Dumdrudge some five hundred souls. From these, by certain 'natural enemies' of the French, there are selected during the French War say thirty able-bodied men. Dumdrudge, at her own expense, has suckled and nursed them. She has, not without difficulty and sorrow, fed them up to manhood, and even trained them to crafts, so that one can weave, another build, another hammer. Nevertheless, among much weeping and swearing they are selected, all dressed in red, and shipped away at the public charge, say to the south of Spain, and kept there till they are wanted. And now to that same spot in the south of Spain, are thirty similar French artisans from a French Dumdrudge, in like manner, wending, till at length the two parties come into actual juxtaposition, and thirty stand facing thirty, each with a gun in his hand. Straightway the word 'Fire!' is given, and they blow the souls out of one another, and in place of sixty brisk useful craftsmen, the world has sixty dead carcasses which it must bury and shed tears for. Had these men any quarrel? Busy as the Devil is, not the smallest. They lived far enough apart, were entire strangers; nay, in so wide a universe there was even unconsciously by commerce, some mutual helpfulness between them."

The war, while it lasted, seemed to us to have been caused by the deliberate wickedness of an abstract demon called "Germany." The Germans were more or less honestly persuaded that similar abstractions, called Russia, France, and England, were the criminals. Now, it seems to most of us, that we were all stark mad together.

The Obstacle to Penitence

The chief obstacle to penitence is indeed the suspicion that none of the parties concerned were responsible for their actions.

The utter futility and folly of modern war has often been demonstrated. Wars are waged, I suppose, for territory or for plunder or for trade. As for the first, nothing weakens a country more than unwilling subjects. As for indemnities, I have it on good authority that Bismarck declared that if he made another successful war, one of the terms of peace would be that Germany should pay a large idemnity to the losers. As for trade, if our most energetic competitor and our best customer happened to own the same head, it is not good business to cut that head off. And let anyone estimate the value to us of the tropics and all the blacks who inhabit them, and compare the totals with what the war has cost us. A sane man does not pay ten thousand pounds a year in fire insurance for a haystack.

I cannot admit that to demonstrate the economic lunacy of war is to appeal to low motives. That is sheer cant. National bankruptcy means widespread unemployment, starving children with pinched faces and legs like broomsticks; it means civil war and revolution. It means the relapse of civilization into barbarism, since it is the most highly educated classes—as we see everywhere in Europe—who are first ruined. That is what war means.

The Moody Bible Institute will conduct a Bible Conference at Cedar Lake, Ind., July 29-August 12.

More Common Sense Is Needed

Well, perhaps the business community will not again make the mistake of thinking that war can ever be good business. Even the press, I have been told, has found that it is very bad business from its point of view. But the liability to attacks of war fever is so great, and the irrationality of human beings so intractable that we cannot rely only on appeals to common sense. The moral appeal must come first, if for no other reason because the war spirit makes a successful appeal to the idealist as well as to the self-regarding.

As has been said, it was the moral effect of an obscure monk's self-sacrifice which brought the bloody games of the Coliseum to an end. And the emancipation of the slave was won, not by proving that free labor could produce more sugar and more cotton than the cowhide lash, but by persuading the public opinion that slavery as an institution involved horrors which were an outrage on humanity and an insult to God.

The moral appeal just now must mainly take the form of penitence and the spirit of reconciliation. Europe has deep cause for penitence.

Do we realize these two things? First, that the relations of civilized mankind has become so close that this war was at least as much a civil war as the chronic wars between the various cantons of ancient Greece, and, secondly, that after a century of growing humanity, a century which prided itself on having banished cruelty from the statute books, and which even concerned itself in safeguarding the rights of the lower animals to decent treatment, the nations of Europe were no sooner locked in the death-grapple, than horrors and atrocities were committed which ten or a hundred, or even two thousand years ago, would have been thought incredible except in savage warfare.

If this seems to you too strong, let me quote to you a few sentences from the Republic of Plato, in which Socrates lays down what seems to him to be reasonable and practicable rules for the conduct of war between Greek states. I have just said that the civilized world is quite as much bound together by common traditions, habits, and convictions as were the Greek states, so that the comparison is a fair one:

"Do you think it right," asks Socrates, "that Greek should enslave Greek, considering the danger that all Greece is in of barbarian conquest? Clearly no Greek should make a slave of another Greek. Then we must abstain from spoiling the dead or hindering their burial. Neither shall we offer up trophies in the temples of the gods, fearing that the offering of trophies taken from kinsmen may be a pollution. Again, we shall not devastate the land of Greek enemies, nor burn their houses. It is only lawful to reap standing corn and take it for ourselves, without injuring the next harvest."

This is pagan war mortality two thousand and three hundred years ago. And now it is widely assumed that if there is another war, each side will try to exterminate the non-combatants of the other by poison. I cannot altogether account for this outbreak of diabolism, but while such things are done, and justified, the less we talk about progress, the better.

The Poison of Untruth

In part, no doubt, these horrors are the result of the elaborately engineered propaganda of hatred which all the belligerents employed, knowing that the average man needs some incitement to kill his fellow-man. This is one of the most devilish parts of the whole business. The soldiers were told untrue stories of the outrages committed by the other side. Furious hatred and indignation were artificially stimulated. Even religion was freely dragged in. One side appealed to their ally, God. The other side represented the war as a struggle between Corsica and Calvary! Alas, the spirit of the Corsican was not hovering over one army only.

So the minds of the belligerents were systematically poisoned by their own governments and the deadly spirit of hatred thus generated has been slow to subside.

And then we think of "peace." The victors had to consider whether they wished to make an end of war, knowing, as we all know, that another war in our time would destroy our civilization utterly, or whether they wished to make a vindicative peace, which the losers would think themselves justified in tearing up at the first opportunity.

If we wished the former, we ought to have offered the Germans terms which they themselves would have thought unexpectedly generous, and then to have said to them, "Now we have given you no excuse for plotting revenge; join us in establishing a League of Nations and universal disarmament, and let us all help each other to 'gather up the fragments that remain.'"

We say that the Germans showed no signs of repentance. Did we make it easy for them to repent? The human heart is like water, it freezes at a certain temperature, and melts under the influence of warmth. The Christian method is to overcome evil with good. It does not always succeed, but the opposite method of driving out devils by Beelzebub invariably fails.

So far as I can gather from those who have lately traveled in Germany, the Germans are rather less bitter and fierce than we should be if we had met with such treatment. But I should not like to build upon this. I have no wish to talk politics; I merely point out the obvious fact that if one pair of gamblers has won and exacted full payment of a heavy stake, and then says, "Now we will play for love for the rest of the evening," the proposal is not likely to find favor with the loser.

Appealing to the Bible

It is an appalling state of things. And what should our feelings be when we turn to the Bible, to the visions of the prophets and the promise of the incarnation? "O that thou hadst hearkened to my law. Then had thy peace been like a river and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea."

The crowning title of the coming Deliverer, in Isaiah's prophecy, was the Prince of Peace. "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end." "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." The happy vision seemed to be near its fulfilment in the angels' song, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Alas! another passage in the Gospel comes to mind. "If thou hadst known, even thou in this thy day, the things that belong to thy peace; but now they are hid from thine eyes."

But if it please God, it is not yet too late. The gate of repentance is not yet shut. We have all sinned and suffered together; we may all repent together. We may all help to bear one another's burdens, not only by relieving the necessities of those who are suffering most grievously, but by bearing one another's moral burdens.

But here a caution is needed. We English are a sentimental people, and some of us in our reaction from the hatred fostered during the war, and our shame at having given way to the absurd idea that anyone who has the misfortune to be born between the Rhine and the Vistula has a double dose of original sin, have rushed to the opposite extreme. Justice, common sense and good will are the qualities which are needed, not sentimentality. The spirit of civilization would say to us all, "We are brethren, we Europeans. If one member suffers, all the members suffer with it." We have discovered this to our cost in the economic sphere; we must learn it also in the moral sphere. We cannot afford a humiliated, embittered, and a degenerate Germany. The harmony of the European symphony needs the best notes of all its members, and who, after all, are the typical Germans—Goethe, Schiller, Kant, Beethoven, or the Slavs—Nietzsche, Treitschke, and the Englishmen—Houston, Stewart, Chamberlain? "If ye forgive not men their trespasses neither will your Father in heaven forgive you your trespasses." "Repent, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshment shall come from the presence of the Lord."

The Poet in the Face of Sorrow

FIDES SUFFICIT

By Rev. Harold J. Hamilton, Laingsburg, Mich.

Sorrow hath laid its shadow at my door;
And suffering hath spread its white wings o'er;
E'en in my heart, terror doth reign—
Lest, unto Thee, O God, my cry shall come in vain!

Wilt Thou not heed, O Lord, as here I lie,
Helpless and bruised—my world-old aching cry;
Soothe Thou my pain, grant to me joy?
Give unto me, dear Master, gladness without alloy.

Sorrow still standeth at my open door,
And suffering still spreads its white wings o'er;
But terror from my heart hath fled—
And sweetest peace, by Him, implanted there instead.

SOUL-GLOOM LOSES MUCH

By B. W. Burleigh, Dunlap, Iowa

Some cannot hear the higher notes
Of the mocking-bird's sweet song,—
But, is it because no high song floats?
Or, is it the ear that is wrong?
All music is only noise to some,
And to them the sweetest throats are dumb;
But on the sensitive, listening ear
The bird's sweet song falls glad and clear.

No fragrance has the beautiful rose
To some who have no scent;
But must we all be classed with those
Upon whom it is wasted—spent?
Are unseen things unreal because
We cannot see them? Or the laws
Of love and friendship, are they naught
Because they touch some soul's blind spot?

Enamored, alas! with worldly art,
Some fail God's love to find;
Though kept by the love of the Father's heart,
They live in soul-gloom, blind.
But, oh! the love of God! How free
And real to those who will but see
His wondrous care midst joy and tears,
As He leads us onward through the years!

A SOUL'S CRY FOR FREEDOM

By Susan McWhirter Ostrom, Greencastle, Ind.

Oh, circumstances that do hedge me round about!
From them I find are none can help me out.
Nor wealth, nor means nor human hands
Can reach to me to loose these awful bands.

I am as one deep down within a wallèd pit;
In agony I cry for freedom from this writ,
And know no friend nor means can extricate
Save only God above, who holds my fate.

I trust in Him whose mercy sure, will never fail
The soul made helpless by events that do prevail.
I call upon Him in His mercy to release
My spirit bound, that cries in vain for peace.

O God of love, who holds the keys of life and death,
Hear Thou my cry and free me with one breath;
Change Thou my circumstances that imprison,
Else take me to Thyself above in heaven.

JESUS, THE SYMPATHIZER

By Alice Maude Carvell, Wheaton, Ill.

Dear heart, so wounded and alone!
With life-plans crushed, a bleeding heart,
How deep my sympathy for you!
How great my longing to impart
Some words of comfort, peace, and joy,
To cheer thy stricken soul today;
Yet limited, alas! am I,
To lift the load that mars your way.

So often in our pain and loss,
We fly to human agency;
Forgetting there is only One
Who can dispel our misery.
"The Man of Sorrows,"—kindest Friend!
Who understands the keenest woe
That ever rent the human heart;
To Him, for help and comfort go.

He sees the intent of your heart,
He knows what others do not know;
And feels—as only those can feel
Who deep have tasted human woe.
Go to His precious Word today,
And let Him speak in words of love
Some message fraught with glad surprise
A holy message from above.

He knows! He cares! O blessed thought!
Remember how He loves His own,
Grieve not the One who died for you,
By brooding o'er your cares alone.
Rise up! and pray for work to do,
In His dear name; see far and wide
The harvest fields are calling you,
To labor at the Master's side!

The Moody Bible Institute will conduct a Bible Conference at Ocean City, N. J., August 9-19.

An Open Letter to Senator Borah

SENATOR William E. Borah,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Senator Borah:

I noted in your speech of March 9, and again Monday evening at Madison Square Garden, that you cited the recognition of the revolutionary régime of France by President Washington as an historical precedent which would justify, if not compel, the immediate recognition of the present Soviet régime of Russia. You are quoted as saying, with the evident intention of showing the similarity between the revolutionary régimes of France and Russia, that:

"The only government in France on the 9th day of April, 1793, was the government of nine men, and that every foot of property in France and every human life was within the control and discretion of these nine men. At the time that this recognition took place, the guillotine was running every morning."

The reports of your speeches do not show that you pointed out another similarity existing between them, which is all important to a proper understanding of the subject. France, in the month of November, 1792, by a decree of its national convention, offered the aid of her soldiers to all nations which would strive for freedom as defined by the sans culottes. The policy of the French régime was summed up in the words of the President of the convention as follows:

"All governments are our enemies; all peoples are our allies."

A like international principle dictates the present policy of the Russian Soviet régime. You are right, therefore, in assuming that President Washington and his cabinet faced a very similar problem to the one presented to President Harding today when they were called upon to determine whether they would receive Minister Genet or not.

I am surprised, however, that you should close the book of history at the place where you discover that President Washington granted recognition to the French régimê, and then attempt to convince the public that such recognition justifies a similar action by the present Federal administration.

If you had turned over the pages of your history, you would have found that the recognition of Genet proved a most disastrous and costly error, and that the historical consequences of such recognition serve as a solemn warning to our government not to commit a like fatal mistake.

Let me review briefly some of the consequences of Genet's reception in this country. At the time of Genet's coming, war between France on the one hand and England and Spain on the other was inevitable, and Genet was instructed to secure the co-operation of the United States against these two powers. He was also instructed to set on foot military expeditions, recruited from American citizens, and under the command of Americans, to be commissioned by him to attack Canada, and the Spanish provinces of Louisiana and Florida.

He was directed, in case the administration should prove timid and vacillating, to spread the doctrines of the "Rights of Man," in order to win public opinion to his support, and by it control the federal administration, or, if need be, to overturn it and substitute for it one which would be subservient to the interests of the French régime. In the carrying out of his instructions, Genet unfortunately found in America many persons in high places who had been affected by the propaganda of Jacobinism, which was disseminated in those days with the same vigor as Communist propaganda is now being spread in this country. His projects were seconded by Thomas Jefferson and others in public office, in the same manner as you are now seconding the program of the Communist régime in an attempt to bring popular pressure to bear upon President Harding to effect recognition.

You did not tell your audiences that no single act of President Washington ever cost him greater embarrassment, more deep concern, or serious regret than his act in extending recognition to the French régime. You failed to say that the very act of recognition clothed Genet with diplomatic immunities and enabled him to proceed with impunity to carry out his secret instructions, although they involved a direct violation of Washington's Proclamation of Neutrality.

You did not point out to your audiences that a recognition of the present Soviet régime would necessitate the reception of a minister also clothed with diplomatic immunities and result in the setting up of an extensive consular service throughout the United States, representing a régime which has been since its inception, and still is, committed to the proposition of the overthrow of all capitalistic governments, including our own, and the stirring up of industrial unrest in this as well as other countries.

You are asking the people of this country to believe that because Washington, under pressure of misled popular opinion, committed an error which was costly to the peace and prosperity of our country, that we now should commit a similar one.

I do not believe that you intentionally misled your audiences in this matter, but your failure to tell the whole story must inevitably lead many to believe that in recognizing Soviet Russia President Harding would be following the wise leadership of Washington and Hamilton. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Very truly yours,

Archibald E. Stevenson,
Counsellor at Law, New York City.

Present Predicament of the Evolution Doctrine

By Professor George McCready Price, Collegeview, Neb.

THE best summary of the present situation regarding the evolution theory that I have seen recently, is an article in The New Republic of April 11, 1923, by Dr. Vernon Kellogg, permanent secretary of the National Research Council, Washington, D. C., and for sixteen years professor of entomology in Leland Stanford University. Thus the standing of Professor Kellogg entitles him to speak with authority as to what he and his fellow evolutionists believe; and all who have read his books know that he is a clear and forceful writer. In this article Professor Kellogg reiterates his profound belief in the general doctrine of organic evolution as the only rational explanation of the origin of our present plants and animals, and he tries to Coué himself into believing that every day in every way this doctrine is getting better and better; but he is very candid in saying that scientists are getting pretty well discouraged in their efforts to tell the how or the why of this wonderful fact(?) of organic development.

It may be worth while to go over some of the points brought out in this paper, and see how the question really stands today, in this third decade of the twentieth century.

Darwin Not a Pioneer

As a historical background of the present picture, a few facts need to be kept in mind. The first of these is that there were many teachers of evolution long before Charles Darwin. Not to go back to the evolutionary systems of the Greeks, we should at least remember that Erasmus Darwin, the grandfather of Charles, taught a system of organic evolution as the method by which the present plants and animals came into existence. And a scheme of evolutionary geology had become firmly established under the leadership of Charles Lyell, some time before the publication of the Origin of Species. Under Lyell the world was taught that the animals and plants appeared on the earth in a long-drawn-out series, covering many hundreds of millions of years, the various kinds of plants and animals appearing in a very definite and certain order, beginning with the small and simply constructed forms and progressing up to the much larger and more complex forms; and all that Charles Darwin claimed to do was to show the world how the larger and more complex kinds had probably grown out of the smaller and more simply constructed forms by a natural process of development. And surely, if Lyell's uniformitarianism represented a real historical outline of the history of life on the globe, we can hardly wonder that biologists, under the tutelage of Charles Darwin, should seek to find out the how of this wonderful fact of development. Nor can we particularly blame the modern scientists for still holding on to the general idea of evolution somehow, even though Darwin's attempted explanation, and all others hitherto suggested, have turned out to be wrong.

In other words, we are now beginning to see that the real outline of the theory of organic evolution lies back of Darwin, in the evolutionary geology of Charles Lyell; and as long as the world accepts the serial arrangement of the fossils as real geological history, and accepts a uniformitarian interpretation of the stratified deposits, just so long will all students of these subjects be assured of the general truth of the theory of organic evolution, even though they cannot find any biological facts which will serve to tell them just how this wonderful development came about.

And this is in full accord with the history of these ideas. For Charles Darwin took a copy of Lyell's Principles with him when he started out around the world as a young man aboard the "Beagle." Years later, when publishing his Origin of Species, he dedicated it to Lyell; and he always declared that Lyell's teachings had been one of the chief sources of his inspiration. It is also in accord with the statement of T. H. Huxley, who used to call himself Darwin's bulldog. Huxley declared that Lyell "was the chief agent in smoothing the road for Darwin. For consistent uniformitarianism postulates evolution as much in the organic as in the inorganic world." (Life and Letters, Vol. I, p. 168).

What Do the Facts Prove?

With this much of a historical background, we may now turn to a further consideration of the present status of the evolution doctrine, as outlined by Vernon Kellogg in the article mentioned above.

Professor Kellogg declares that all the old evidence from comparative anatomy, embryology, paleontology, and geographical distribution, which used to be relied upon to prove the doctrine, ought to suffice to convince any one of the general truth of organic evolution; for he says that this evidence "increases in amount every year." The latter statement is true, if he means that facts are constantly being discovered in these various sciences which those already convinced of the evolution doctrine think are of assistance to them; but it would be much more correct to say that a more careful study of the logical bearings of these facts has led thousands of intelligent people to say that these facts are wholly irrelevant as evidence.

I cannot go into this point at length in an article like this. But who that values clearness of thinking attaches any evidential value in favor of evolution to the facts of comparative anatomy by which the various parts of man's body are shown to resemble those of the apes? One might just as well attempt to show that a Packard has evolved from a Ford, or that the Dodge is the missing link between the Ford and the Cadillac. And just as severe remarks could very easily be used—and have been used time and time again—against all the other l nes of alleged "evidence" upon which Professor Kellogg still relies.

The one line of evidence which does appeal to every one, is that which seeks to show that species are now changing right before our eyes, and in this our modern world have actually changed or grown into distinctly different species. If this process were actually going on before our eyes, the situation would be different. Charles Darwin put forward his Origin of Species in an attempt to show that this transformation is a fact; and it was this supposed demonstration of a present-acting process which, added to the serial arrangement of the fossils in an alleged historical order, was what led so many scientists to say that organic evolution is established as a real scientific fact.

In his explanation of how one species can grow into another, Darwin built upon several assumptions, only three of which need concern us here. These three assumptions may be listed as: (1) the unlimited tendency to vary on the part of plants and animals; (2) the Lamarckian theory of the inheritance of acquired characters; and (3) his own private patent, namely, natural and sexual selection.

Mendelism Antagonizing Evolution

The answer to the first of these assumptions is Mendelism. We can no longer say that plants and animals show an unlimited tendency to vary in almost all directions, as Darwin assumed. The facts of Mendelism have shown us very definitely just how and to what extent organisms vary or change; and these facts have all been worked out since Darwin's day. Alfred Russel Wallace, the co-inventor with Darwin of the theory of natural selection, lived long enough over into the twentieth century to come face to face with these new facts about variation and heredity; and he has left us a very clear statement of what he thought about the bearings of these new discoveries upon his favorite theories. Wallace said:

"But on the general relation of Mendelism to evolution, I have come to a very definite conclusion. This is, that it has no relation whatever to the evolution of species or higher groups, but is really antagonistic to such evolution! The essential basis of evolution, involving as it does the most minute and all-pervading adaptation to the whole environment, is extreme and ever-present plasticity, as a condition of survival and adaptation. But the essence of the Mendelian characters is their rigidity. They are transmitted without variation, and therefore, except by the rarest of accidents, can never become adapted to ever-varying conditions." (Letters and Reminiscences, p. 340).

And yet the best biologists tell us that it is now practically certain that there is no other kind of inheritance than Mendelian." (Edwin Grant Conklin, Heredity and Environment, p. 99).

An Honest Confession

So much, then, for the first of the three assumptions of Charles Darwin, as listed above. What about the other two? We shall let Professor Kellogg tell us:

"In this same post-Darwinian period, also, the two most important explanations of evolution current in Darwin's time, namely, Lamarckism, or the inheritance of acquired characters, and Darwinism, or natural and sexual selection, have been weakened rather than strengthened as sufficient causes of evolution. Hence we are in the curious position of knowing now much more about evolution than was known fifty or sixty years ago, but of feeling much less confident that we know the causes of evolution. If this is ammunition for the anti-evolutionists, let them make what use of it they can. We can afford to be honest." (The New Republic, April 11, 1923).

In going on to speak in more detail of these two points, Kellogg says of Lamarckism that it was "a plausible explanation, but one wholly dependent upon the 'inheritance of acquired characters,' which, unfortunately, does not seem to happen. . . . Acquired characters, in the Lamarckian sense, are not inherited."

Regarding Darwin's selection theories, Kellogg declares them to be "also a plausible explanation, but also much weakened, if not shattered, by the results of modern biological study, which have shown that many of these small variations are not inherited. They are merely fluctuations around a mean to which mean the offspring tend constantly to return.

Also it is asking too much to ascribe a life- or death-determining value to these minute variations despite any conceivable intensity of the struggle for existence. Indeed, most of the species differences—let alone the individual differences—among such animals as the insects and others represented by large numbers of species, are of a kind which require a very lively imagination to see differences of life- and death-determining value. There is a large family of little beetles called lady-bird beetles among which the different species are recognized by very slight differences in the number, or size, or color of minute spots on the wing covers. Similarly, many little flies are distinguished as to species by the number and size of small bristles on the back, and small differences in wing-venation. One often needs a hand lens to distinguish them.

"Now are these differences, which we have to reinforce our eyes to see, going to decide whether a toad or lizard or insect-eating bird sees and devours, or does not see and devour, individuals of one rather than another of these insect kinds, or, even more fantastic, one individual rather than another, both belonging to one species and differing from each other by even more microscopic variations?"

The Moody Bible Institute will conduct a Bible Conference at Cedar Lake, Ind., July 29-August 12.

After pointing out that "mutations" are equally inadequate and unsatisfactory as a help in understanding how evolution has come about, Kellogg goes on to say:

"This sounds discouraging for the evolutionists. But it really is discouraging only to the seekers after the causes of evolution."

Yes; I suppose so. Those who are already firmly convinced of the fact (?) of organic evolution, will not change their minds because of any such discouraging failure to find a rational explanation of how it really came about.

But when, in addition to all this universal failure of biology to substantiate the doctrine, we now see that the supposed evidence from geology is also giving out, and that the serial arrangement of the fossils in an alleged historical order is now proved to be a blunder, there is little wonder that a widespread revolt against the entire evolution doctrine is taking place. And there is little wonder that the stand-pat evolutionists are getting somewhat concerned and are trying to reassure the public that belief in the doctrine of organic evolution is absolutely universal among all modern scientists "of high repute."

I have not the space to go into the geological evidence, which is now administering the coup de grace to this long popular theory. The full statement of these geological facts will be found in my latest book, The New Geology, a Textbook for Colleges, which has just been issued by the Pacific Press, Mountain View, Calif.

A Warm, Open Letter on Evolution

We comply with an earnest request to republish the following letter which appeared in the Port Huron Times Herald. It was addressed to a professor in the Wesleyan University at Delaware, O., by Rev. Levi Bird, Ph.D., of Port Huron, Mich.—Editors.

"MY DEAR SIR:

"I have read with amazement an article in the Detroit News, attributing to you certain statements as to the proof of Darwinian evolution as applied to man and his descent or ascent from the Simian tribes. If you hold such views and are teaching them in a Methodist college, you ought to resign and not longer disgrace old Wesleyan with such pernicious nonsense.

"I have examined thousands of fossil specimens and other forms of ancient life in the museums of Washington, Philadelphia, Chicago and other places, and have never found the first trace of any such monstrous absurdity. Besides for forty years I have examined beetles, bugs, animals, fowls, birds, fish, and humans by the thousands and have found that whatever may have been the law of evolution in past eons, at present in the animal and vegetable kingdom the law is absolutely the reverse of that. It is degeneration and not evolution.

"On page 38 of Darwin's Origin of Species he says, 'The key is man's power of accumulative selection.' That statement is true, and pray tell me what nature is doing when man fails to use the key? All of our fine bred pigs, horses, sheep, chickens, dogs, cattle, and our cultivated plums as well as pears, apples, peaches, oranges, strawberries, and grapes degenerate when man does not hold the key. All that the wizard, Burbank, has brought forth goes to the wilds when man ceases to cultivate them. That is the inexorable law of God and nature.

Submitting to the Younger Generation

"I challenge you to find that any species has ever produced any other or different species, and been able to perpetuate the new breed or genius. If such a thing were possible, you would not have to go more than ten miles into the jungles of Africa, nor five centuries into past history, to find not only the missing link, but also the everywhere connecting link. For human nature is such that prodigies would be found everywhere.

Evolution dishonors God, degrades man, discredits the Scriptures, and dethrones Jesus Christ.

"We are told that for the sake of our present youth we must make our interpretation of the Bible correspond with that taught in our colleges. The callous youth has wrecked Russia. In Rehoboam's time the youth divided his kingdom and finally caused the disruption of the whole Jewish nation, while now our youth are to be given free rein to destroy the church, repudiate the Bible, and make the world a moral and spiritual bankrupt.

"I protest with all my powers, and join William Jennings Bryan in defense of the faith of our fathers and the gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who did not belong to a race of monkeys.

Science and the Bible Compared

"When the almanacs say that the sun rises and sets, that is called scientific accuracy. When the Bible says the sun rises and sets, that is pronounced a legendary lie. When science says that the world is round, that is called an incontrovertible fact. When Isaiah writes that God sits upon the circle of the earth (40:22), then we must discard Isaiah (11:22) when he speaks as though the world were flat and many believed it. When the Bible says that God made man in His own image, that is declared to be a Mosaic myth; but when the pseudo-scientist says that man originated from a monkey that is considered a great advance in human knowledge. Some people are more anxious for a long pedigree even if they have to tie themselves up to a monkey than for an unimpeachable character which links man to Eden and to God.

"If I believed this evolutionary business I would myself become an ecclesiastical Bolshevist and pull God out of the heavens and Jesus Christ off the cross and help root up this thing called religion out of the earth. I would also put a chimpanzee in the manger of Bethlehem and a gorilla in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, and a monkey on Mount Olivet to bray out the folly of mankind for any longer following the Christ, and roll this world back to savage brutes and beastly man.

"I am a child of God 'and it doth not yet appear what I shall be' in Christ Jesus.

"If evolution is true, then man never fell, the atonement is wasted blood and ends in a religious and divine farce. In that case, God sits in the heavens, while cosmic atoms dance the jig of endless transmutation and He looks on helpless to control or guide the purpose and destiny of the forces and creatures that His wisdom and powers have let loose in the universe.

Dealing With the False Teachers

"The time has come when bishops who believe that tommyrot and allow it to spread under their jurisdiction, ought to be compelled to resign their office. Missionaries who teach it ought to be called home. Preachers who preach it ought to be made to vacate their pulpits. Professors who teach it in our Christian schools and colleges ought to be driven from the institutions. While editors who proclaim it through their papers ought to be silenced and their pens dried up.

"It is either evolution or the Bible; either Darwin or Christ. Let the church give her answer and make it quickly. There will never be another genuine revival of religion in this world until the Christian church repudiates the most subtle and monstrous lie that the Devil has ever thrown into the face of the Son of God, and until it drives the whole diabolical spawn of evolution into the nethermost depths of hell to where it belongs."

MAN'S EVOLUTION GOES ON

Prof. Charles Zeleny of the University of Illinois, is reported by the Associated Press as saying in an address to the Illinois State Academy of Science, that, "It is highly improbable that man is at the apex of a long series of upward changes. Instead, there is every reason why we should prepare for boundless further advance. We can accelerate the onward progress not only to a goal fixed by present aspirations, but pass it to conditions beyond our dreams."

The Moody Bible Institute will conduct a Bible Conference at Lake Mendota, Madison, Wis., Aug. 5-12.

Rooster Mountain Victorious Life Conference

By Rev. Milton L. Braun, Kaifeng Baptist College, Honan, China

WHEN a missionary from one of the remotest provinces in China publicly confesses that for eleven years he has held such a grudge against a fellow missionary that he had no social relations whatever with him, and then adds, "But now I have only love in my heart for him, and will make right as much as I can toward him," it is a sure sign of something new in the heart. The "Say So Meeting" at the close of the Kikungshan Victorious Life Conference in the center of China, in August, 1920, was one that indicated new found victory in the lives of many missionaries and missionaries' children.

Kikungshan is pronounced as though spelled gee-goong-shan, and it seems to mean, "Rooster Mountain." It is a mountain resort for recreation and inspiration for another year's grapple with the missionary's problems in heathendom.

Missionaries are human. Like Elijah they are men and women with passions like the rest of mankind, yet with more violent tests and temptations than those who live in Christian homelands are commonly called upon to face. So it was not like "carrying coals to Newcastle" for Mr. Trumbull, editor of The Sunday School Times, to bring to missionaries in China the same message of victorious life that is eagerly received by hungry Christians in western lands.

Rooster Mountain, China, where the Victorious Life Conference was held

Mr. Trumbull's Tenth Birthday

It was on the afternoon of Mr. Trumbull's "tenth birthday" that the editor and his wife reached Kikungshan, guests of Dr. and Mrs. Jonathan Goforth.

On the next morning, Sunday, August 15, Mr. Trumbull narrated a chapter from his own life story in which he explained that this tenth birthday was neither the day of his natural birth, nor of his "second birth," but an anniversary of the date upon which he became personally acquainted with the Christian's secret of a happy life.

In contrast with the life of frequent risings and fallings and of conscious unsatisfaction—if not utter dissatisfaction—with the character of service rendered to God and man, the life of constant victory was portrayed in beauty and attractiveness until the hungry soul of the missionary grew hungrier and the unsatisfied heart became more determined than ever to be filled.

The address and those that followed were not messages of mere theory, but such as showed from concrete examples how the Lord Jesus Christ calls and dwells in and uses the men and women who care to recognize the real nature of His existence, and of His divine will for individuals.

Joy Bells Ringing

There was nothing morbid about the atmosphere of the meetings; the joy bells were ringing. One doubts if a single person of the hundreds who attended the meetings in the Lutheran chapel could go away and not feel that the speaker had the only uplifting Bible message capable of perfectly satisfying the heart of man. There was no pulpit affectation in the speaker, but a bearing entirely in harmony with a layman's presentation of a gospel of joy, and constant victory over all evil.

Counterfeit victory on the part of Christians was described and exposed by illustrations.

A woman is sitting next to the only vacant seat in a street car. A backbiting neighbor enters. An ordinary conversation takes place in which feelings are suppressed and words appear smoother than butter. Regret is expressed that the parting has come so soon. Then the Christian breathes a sigh of relief and compliments herself on the victory won over all desire to speak out just what she thought about her enemy. Counterfeit victory!

Again; an unhappy saint thinks that victory has been won when, as she says, "I boiled and boiled inside, but I didn't boil over;" or, another, when saying, "Well, I didn't boil, but I certainly did simmer." "Bible victory," Mr. Trumbull said, "doesn't provide for even simmering—only radiant love for your worst enemy."

What "Surrender" and "Consecration" Mean

Two words frequently used in the Christian's vocabulary are often improperly understood, even by Christians themselves. The terms "surrender" and "consecration" in these meetings were given simple yet thorough definition.

The speaker said that we either surrender a thing or we do not surrender it. When we "surrender all" Christ accepts that surrender and does not require us continually to re-surrender that which He already has accepted.

New things, however, may come up in the consecrated Christian's life which, as quickly as recognized, are fully turned over to the Lord as of course belonging to Him. A furnished house with all it contains is entirely turned over to a new owner. The keys are surrendered, but the previous occupant still dwells with permission in the new owner's home. In time an article not mentioned in the inventory list is found. What shall be done with it? It may be slipped into some secret conscience-stricken corner and used, or worried over, at will. Or, on the other hand, it may gladly be given over to the new owner, with, as it were, a postscript to the original bill of surrender; ". . . and here is something else, Lord, that I didn't know I had; that too, I surrender to Thee."

Missionaries Surrender

In this way many surrenders were made during the meetings. One missionary surrendered a disposition to fret over the fact that he could not answer the accumulated letters from home friends as he wanted to. One surrendered a latent talent for writing when the line of least resistance was to let somebody else write the missionary articles and letters. Another surrendered splendid opportunities for missionary service when they came so thick and fast as to handicap the growth and feeding of her own soul. One young lady surrendered a constant refusal to use her talented voice for any other than strictly sacred music.

Declarative statements of fact from the Bible were presented and held up for full belief at face value regardless of adverse feeling, or of a natural tendency to relegate them to full application only in the future world; such facts as: "He that believeth on me hath everlasting life" (John 6:47); "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death" (Rom. 8:2); "My grace is sufficient for thee" (2 Cor. 12:9); "Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us" (Rom. 8:37). "These verses are not true because we believe them," the speaker said, "but we believe them because they are true." He continued: "If truth is truth, and if God's word is truth, then our feelings have nothing whatever to do with the altering of that truth."

Evan Hopkins' Illustrations

Mr. Trumbull made this graphic by an illustration he quoted from the late Evan Hopkins of England. Three imaginary men were introduced and marched in single file across the platform. The first man had his eyes fixed on the goal and marched straight forward. The second marcher kept his eye on the first, and followed close behind. The third was a little man, and it was his duty also not to lead but to follow. The names of the three men are, Mr. Fact, Mr. Faith, and Mr. Feeling.

With such abundant statements of fact no justification was found for worry. Worry was described as one of the gravest of sins because it means failure to believe the plain word of God. "The life of victory is a life entirely free from worry," said Mr. Trumbull, "yet many an earnest Christian mother worries as she prays for her wandering son, and many a consecrated wife worries as she prays for her unsaved husband or loved ones." A line of distinction was drawn between prayer accompanied by worry and anxiety, and prayer of real burden yet of peaceful assurance, though of the extremest intercessory nature for an erring friend.

"Thou, and Thy House"

And that led up to the theme of one of the services which made an indelible impression upon a large proportion of the missionaries who heard it, namely, that it is God's will and plan to save men one by one and yet by units, not of nations or cities, but of families: "Thou shalt be saved, and thy house" (Acts 16:31).

Frequently in the brief service of prayer which preceded each address request was confidently made for loved ones and personal friends in distant places, as well as for Chinese co-workers in many mission stations.

That God is especially pleased to have all the members of a family or household saved is encouraging to the missionary who knows what it is to have a lone convert come to him and tell of the persecution he is receiving under the roof of his own native house. Many of these individual converts are driven in their own homes to bend the knee and do obeisance before ancestral tablets and hideous forms of idols, and only too often is their newly found faith thereby choked out.

Thus to press the battle right on through the family against whatever the opposition might be, pleading God's delight in seeing whole households in the faith, is doubtless a better missionary method than to preach in one locality for a little while and then pass on to the next village—villages are so often synonymous with families in China—leaving one o two newly lighted candles to shine, or flicker, for themselves as best they can.

Many searching questions were sent by the missionaries to Mr. Trumbull for discussion at the last meeting, making it truly a conference. In some cases the speaker admitted that his own personal experience alone was insufficient to enable him to answer the question satisfactorily; nevertheless, his ready and fitting quotation from the Bible, always giving chapter and verse, made it possible for him to help many a missionary who perhaps not outwardly but inwardly was carrying some greater or lesser unsolved problem about the practical application of Christianity to life—to hard missionary life.

The Open Air Meeting

The climax of the conference was reached the second Sunday afternoon in the open-air testimony meeting. This was held on the premises of the China Inland Mission where there is a small hor e-shoe valley—a natural amphitheater, opening to the south.

Of scores of Spirit-borne testimonies that made this outdoor service one to be remembered, may I quote the substance of just one?

Modestly waiting until after many others had spoken, a frail little lady of the Lutheran mission testified: "Since we've been on the mountain we heard that the robbers broke into our station and plundered all the belongings in our home. Ordinarily, I would have worried and fretted and cried about it, but this time I find Jesus so much dearer and more precious than any earthly things that I cannot feel perhaps as annoyed as I ought to about the robbery. Occasionally I will think of some little article that I prized, and just this morning I happened to think of a certain present my mother gave me which I left in our trunks in the house; and I was tempted to say, 'Oh, dear, even that is gone too; if the robbers had only left me that one thing!' But just then Jesus Himself so filled my heart that I thought of Him and loved Him infinitely more even than that keepsake of my mother. Instead of feeling angry with the robbers, I can testify this afternoon that there is love in my heart for them, and if I could meet them I would be glad to pray with them and freely forgive them, for I'm sure they didn't know any better."

Need it be said that her very face witnessed her possession of the Christian's secret of a heavenly life?

A Work of Grace Among the Indians

From a private letter of Otto Lomavita of Oraibi, Ariz., to N. A. Ironside of Oakland, Calif.

"WE HAVE had some interesting days since coming home from the conference. The following Tuesday, after we had come home, Johnson, said to me in the evening,

"'Otto, I have something on my heart that I wish you to know and to pass your judgment upon. You know that the aged woman, my aunt, died today. With her passing away our clanship, The Bow-and-Arrow Clan, has come to an end as far as its propagation is concerned. Her only daughter, Dora, is a Christian, and Dora's niece, Tillie, is also a Christian. These are the only ones who should extend this clan (for the clanship belongs to the female line), but, as you know, we do not cling to this man-made affair any more.

A Proposal

"'There is in our house, or rather Dora's mother's house, a war god made of stone. Besides that, there was in our house the altar which belongs to our clan. I have been minded to bring them out on this coming Sunday afternoon and have the idol broken to pieces before the eyes of the tourists and the Hopi who are now here for the snake dance, after reading the chapter from God's Word that tells about such things. I do not know where the altar is kept now, but I can at least have the idol before the people. Will this be scriptural?'

"I told him I believed it to be according to God's Word, and so he made ready to carry it out after referring the matter to our white missionary.

The Proposal Discussed

"The following evening at our prayer meeting we had this matter put before the Christians for discussion. They all agreed that the idols should be put away. The oldest man, Kuwanwikvaya, known for short as Wikvaya, and was once a priest, was first asked to give his opinion and he replied,

"'I have done away with the idols for many years now and have nothing to do with them. They belong to the woman, my sister, and I do not know where they are now.'

"The old man, Talasnomtiwa, the blind man, was next asked, and he replied,

"'I had to do with living beings. I had men to perform the office of gods. I cannot burn them but they can burn themselves.' This man, too, was a priest at one time.

"And so on each gave his voice against the wood and stone.

Collecting the Trophies

"The day following Johnson learned that the war gods belonged to another household, but that the altar and idols belonging to their clan were taken to Hotevella by Chief Yukiwma. The next evening, that is, Friday evening, Johnson took me with him to Hotevella after the altar and the idols. We called the chief from the kiva (the underground association room), and after some lengthy talk, obtained our object.

"There were a great many white tourists there who were waiting for the snake dance to be had on the next day. To them we made known our plan and invited them to attend the bonfire of the idols.

"We did not, however, find them (the idols and altars) all, for some were still in Oraibi. These were gotten the next day and we put them in the back rooms of the chapel where we had them imprisoned and compelled these gods to wait or their trial for murder!

Resisting the Tempter

"On Sunday morning we had a double service. Two young girls were baptized upon confessing their faith in Christ. This was followed by the Lord's Supper. In the afternoon we made ready to have a unique service.

"After our dismissal in the morning, three white strangers entered the chapel and asked to see the altar and the idols, saying that they were obliged to leave soon, but would very much like to see these things as "they were very interested in antiquities."

"We took them down into the cellar where the prisoners were and gave them leave to examine them. They pleaded for them and entreated us to save them and have them sent to the National Museum for historical study. We refused to do that and then they asked if a photograph might be taken of them. This was refused. They pleaded to have them saved saying they might prove invaluable in furnishing a clue to the ancient history. The man said he was a geologist and the woman a scientist. Though we were fully conscious that such might be the case, and that Johnson might even receive a nice sum of money for the articles, Johnson at length answered:

"'Let my words be final. You have seen and examined all these things. They have no life in them. Though only wood, they have kept me from accepting Christ for many years. They have been the means of sending hundreds of souls into perdition and, though wood, yet under the power of Satan they will yet send hundreds more into hell. They have consumed our household. We may gain all knowledge and have all the money that can be found but all these things will never be sufficient to save our souls. I am determined that they should be burned. Not a single vestige of them shall remain.'

Doing Personal Work

"Upon this I asked them these questions: (a) 'Have you accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as your personal Saviour? (b) Have you staked all your future interest upon the atoning work done on Calvary?'

"They dodged by saying that of course they did, for they were Congregationalists! Upon this one of them, a man, left us immediately. I spoke with them for some time, telling them of their need of Jesus Christ and His words. Then Johnson said to them:

"Let me extend to you my hand believing you at your words that you both are God's children. I do not know how true you may be to your words, but God knows. You have now seen and handled that which no white man has ever seen and but few Hopis have seen. They are as old as the Hopis themselves, that is, since Oraibi was founded. They are wood and stone. They have kept me from coming to Christ for many years. They possessed my whole being (weeping). But God's Son, Jesus, cleansed me from all these and has saved me. I know from experience that I am saved and that God's Word says so. Now, shall we meet in heaven? I have looked you over very carefully. You have a superior intellect and can read and write. I lack these things. But I have accepted Christ and He has saved me. Will I see you in heaven, or will this be the last time that I shall see you? Will you meet me in Heaven?'

"To these questions they stood in silence as though they were struck. At last they softly thanked him for his words and left without smiling. We are praying that God might yet save these souls.

Tempted Again

"After dinner we made ready to load our idols and the altar pieces.

"Just then the missionaries from Polacca and Toreva (first and second Mesa) came. For the first time these sacred things were seen in the public.

"We then went on the top of a hill which is in the center of the lower village. On our way there the traders stopped us and pleaded with us to spare the idols to which a firm answer to the contrary was given.

"Several songs were sung. By this time a crowd of tourists were gathered together to witness the ceremony. Our missionary from Hotevilla and Paqavi offered prayer in English after which our missionary here, Mr. Karl Friesen, gave an introductory address explaining that this event was not due to his urgings but that it was prompted by the Holy Spirit and therefore we should give God the praise. Johnson had not so much as mentioned it to him until Wednesday night after he had talked it over.

"During this time Johnson was busily engaged in putting the idols and the altar pieces in order. While he was doing this I gave a short talk in English emphasizing the need of Christ by our people, and how that we are trying to lead our people to a new and a better way which the tourists who come for the snake dance, always tear down. I ended by saying, 'If you do not need Christ in civilization, do let us have Him.'

An Indian's Testimony

"Then Johnson opened his Bible and read Psalm 115:4-8. He then spoke in English and said in part:

"'We are this day gathered around these idols and altar for the purpose of destroying them. Permission will be granted you for you to examine all these things soon.

"'Look at the idols before you. They are made of wood. They have eyes but they see not; they have noses but should you pour out perfume before them they will not be able to smell it; they have hands but should you offer them your hand, they will not respond. They have ears but they will not hear your greeting; legs have they but they cannot walk.

"'And yet, these have kept me from accepting Christ for many years. They have sent hundreds of my people into perdition and have consumed our household. Though only wood, they will yet send hundreds into hell under the power of Satan. Shall we save them? "They that make graven images (and keep them) are like them." We may gain historical knowledge by these and know all history, but our knowledge will but drive us away from God and will never be sufficient to save our souls. I lay myself open to the consequences if there be any. I gladly sacrifice myself in saving our people from perdition through these idols.

An Indian Allegory

"'Let me tell you a story that you have never heard.

"Once upon a time a blind boy was born to a Hopi family. His parents loved him much and so took great care in raising him up. When he was about twelve years old, his father made for him a smooth stick, a staff, by which he was to be led about.

"'One day he said to his father, "Father, I want you to open my eyes. I hear people talk about things I do not know and I want to see how they look and I hear them speak about lightning but I do not know how it looks. I want to see the people! But his father said he could not do that but that a great doctor was coming and that when he comes he would open his eyes.

"'When he was about thirty-six years old, this doctor came and examined his eyes. He took him and operated on his eyes. Now the medicine and the operation hurt him. But the operation was successful though the boy was angry at the doctor when he pained him. Now for the first time he saw and for the first three weeks he could only see faintly. Then he went up on a hill and from there he viewed the whole landscape and then he went upon a mesa from where he saw more.

"'One day while he was walking he saw an object in the air but did not know what it was, having never seen it before. It swooped down to an ill-smelling thing on the road and commenced to eat it. He soon learned that the creature which swooped down was a buzzard and the bad-smelling thing was a dead horse. The buzzard flew away having evidently been satisfied.

"'The next day he was walking in the same way when he again saw this same buzzard, but this time he brought with him another one. They both satisfied themselves on a dead horse and then went away. This went on day by day, each day seeing the buzzards increase in number until he could not count them all.

"'Now let me interpret this allegory. This blind boy is myself. At the age of about twelve, my father gave me these idols, represented by a smooth stick, for me to be led about with. I heard people talk about heavenly things but I could not understand them. The doctor who was to come and who was to open my eyes is the Holy Spirit, even the Lord Jesus Christ. The medicine used is the gospel. How it did hurt me when it told me of my sins! I got angry at Him but He continued His work and operated on my eyes and it was successful. I could not see or understand all at once but when I got up on the top and mesa of experience I saw more.

"'The ill-smelling dead horse in the road is a snake dance! The buzzard is the first white man who came to the snake dance and devoured it. He soon went away and brought another white man with him. These went away and year by year saw them come more and more until today we see so many white people devouring a rotten horse!

"'This snake dance is a stinking, dead horse in the sight of God.

"'Friends, feed upon the Living Bread.'"

The Pile Lighted and the Storm Helps

"After this Johnson spoke in Hopi followed by others, calling upon our people to forsake the idols and to accept Jesus.

"Permission was then granted all to look upon these helpless prisoners of our Lord Jesus Christ. Strenuous attempts were made to photograph these things but without much success.

"By this time a lightning storm was approaching, led by a strong sand storm, such as Arizona alone produces. Quickly we piled them together, and I poured gasoline upon them and Johnson lighted the pile. Amidst the flashing of lightning and sand storm the flames arose of what was once the greatest despot in the souls of our people, but what now lay helpless before the majesty of Christ.

"Immediately we broke into singing, 'When the Roll is Called Up Yonder,' in Hopi, the words in Hopi being appropriated for the occasion. Soon the storm abated and smoke of the idols was seen rising in a great calm.

"Thus the foundation of the religious life of the Hopi was laid in ashes and we trust and pray that good may come out of this.

"We have received many criticisms for this action from the white people, but we believe that this was according to God's will. I have seen the very underground-association room, called the 'Kiva' by our people, and where this ceremony was formerly held, torn down by the unbelievers since then."

Modern Palestine

Abridged from a letter from Rev. Arthur W. Payne

OUR Palestinian correspondent, Rev. Arthur W. Payne, of the Mount Carmel Bible School of the British Jews Society, has sent us an interesting account, too long to publish, of a recent visit to the Holy Land which was made by two members of the Society, Rev. F. J. Exley and Mr. Richard Cadbury, who spent considerable time there in a careful study of the religious, political, and social situation.

These brethren met the governor and mayor of Haifa, the Greek archbishop of the district, the religious head of the Moslems, the chairman of the Chamber of Commerce of Jerusalem, and other dignitaries and officials whose titles sound so strange to those accustomed to the nomenclature of the Old and New Testaments. Think of the governor of the district of Phoenicia enlarging to them on the prospects of the "Rutenberg Electrical Scheme" already starting operations at Jaffa! Jaffa, where Peter was found praying on the housetop of Simon, the tanner! How absurd and ridiculous it seems to us, and how our indignation rises at the thought of such desecration! Yes, until our eyes fall on the accompanying photo of Jaffa, at whose chaste modernity we stand aghast. Can it be possible that Peter was ever there?

And then Mr. Payne goes on to tell of beautiful gardens visited, silvery orange blossoms, auto rides, playgrounds for children, art studios, etc., which leads up to what he says about the schools, the primary schools and the secondary schools. It sounds almost unbelievable that in these old Bible towns and villages of Abraham and the patriarchs, boys and girls, many of them recently from European ghettos, should now be receiving instruction in English and other languages, in geography, in physiology, in nature study, in mechanical arts, and related subjects.

Of course much of the account of Mr. Payne was taken up with the religious aspect of the situation. "The statements we hear that the youthful Zionists are atheistic," he says, "are far from the truth; one finds that each settlement has before long its appointed place of religious worship." In these settlements, as at other places, the visitors spoke as they had opportunity and left behind them tracts and pamphlets and copies of the Scriptures, sowing the seed beside all waters.

A Modern Colony in Jaffa

We close our synopsis of the paper so kindly sent us by quoting the following paragraph or two:

"We touched Nazareth on our way to Tiberias, and were glad to meet the Nile Mission Press colporteur, and give him some literature for circulation amongst the Jews who since the war are finding a home in this once fanatic Christian town.

"It was market day, and an interesting snap-shot the scene made. We read the story of Luke 1 and had prayer in the so-called Church of the Annunciation, stopping on the way to pick some of the most beautiful wild flowers.

"We read the story of the miracle of Cana, as we passed the fountain where doubtless, the water that the Lord turned to wine was taken.

"We did not get out of the car till we stopped at the traditional Bethsaida, and from this scene of the early life of Andrew, Peter and John, we went by boat to visit the remarkable ruins of the synagogue of the Roman period at Tel Hern or Capernaum. On the water we read all the Gospel passages referring to our Lord's words and works around the shores and on the sea of Galilee."

Americanization of the Unassimilated

[The Chicago Tribune has been dealing with this question as it affects the Jew, and receiving many letters on the subject from its readers, among them this from the pen of the new incumbent of the chair of Jewish Missions in The Moody Bible Institute. —Editors.]

"TO THE Editor of the Tribune,

"Dear Sir:

"Can you spare space for another comment on this important subject growing out of your editorial on May 19, with which I find myself in practical agreement?

"My reason for writing is that I approach the subject from the point of view of a Jewish Christian, and one who has recently come to America to aid in the direction you have pointed out. My credentials are that on the recommendation of the Hebrew Christian Alliance of America I have been called to the chair of Jewish Missions in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago for the purpose of equipping young men of my race who have accepted Christianity, to work among their own people for their salvation and their up-building in those elements of character which must inevitably make good citizens.

"The Jewish immigrant is totally different from any other immigrant that comes to these shores. The difference between the American and other non-Jewish peoples is largely outward—easily acquired, easily dropped—and the stranger is soon worked into the fabric of American national life. It is simply a matter of language and customs with him; he becomes an American as soon as he has learned the language and acquired the customs. The explanation of this is that he was part of a homogenous whole in the land of his origin, and the feeling of foreignness is absolutely uncongenial to him. With all his being he is striving to find his place in the new order of things, and having found it, to rest there contentedly.

"It is quite different with the Jew. He never considered himself a part of a homogeneous whole in the land of his origin. For centuries the feeling of strangeness and aloofness has been implanted and fostered in his soul, and while he easily adapts himself to new circumstances, he never learns to feel really at home anywhere. The reason for this lies very deep.

"The cleavage is not outward—it is a cleavage of soul. Christian civilization has driven the Jewish soul out of its pale and embittered it so that it is now well content to remain outside forever. The main reason for leaving the countries of Europe is to escape the burdens, humiliations, and sufferings which so-called Christianity has put upon him during the long centuries of the past. And his resentment is great when he meets his old enemy on these shores, though in a different form.

"Of course, his view of American Christianity is largely wrong, and distorted by prejudice—but it is the outcome of a deep lying fear of what it may bring upon him and his children in the unknown future. The kindest advances of Christians are therefore looked upon with suspicion as a kind of trap to capture and destroy the Jewish soul. And, judging by the history of the past and from many things that happen in the present, he considers his attitude amply justified.

"From the above consideration it appears that education must take a different form in dealing with the Jew than in the case of any other nationality, and after years of experience, I am convinced that the form of Christian education herein referred to is the very best.

"Christian ignorance of the deeper things in Judaism, and Jewish ignorance of the real soul and aim of Christianity were the cause of the hatred and prejudice which for centuries held the two apart. It is in the seats of high learning where these matters should be dealt with. Other institutions should follow this example, and so create an atmosphere of sympathy and understanding between the Jew and the Christian. The rest will take care of itself."

"Yours truly,

"S. Birnbaum."

HOMEWARD BOUND

By P. P. Bilhorn, May 3, 1923, written for my dear old friend and brother in the Lord, Dr. W. H. Clagett, in honor of his seventy-fifth birthday.

I'm homeward bound; soon I shall see
The flashing harbor light;
Its welcome ray will beckon me
Across the dark wild night.

Chorus:
I'm homeward bound, yes, homeward bound,
By wave and tempest driven;
With fav'ring gale and swelling sail,
I'll reach the port of heaven.

A little longer tempest tossed,
A little while to wait;
A few more days of chilling frost,
And then—the Golden Gate.

A few more billows yet to meet,
White-crested by the foam;
A few more sorrows,—then how sweet
Will be the rest of home.

A little nearer every day
When falls the eventide;—
The harbor is not far away,
Where I shall e'er abide.

WHY THE CHRISTIAN IS DYNAMIC

The Sunday School Times

Things that do not move have their usefulness in the world, after all. They are "static." The Modernist loses no opportunity to condemn the "static," insisting that the conservative or "Fundamentalist" Christian position, being static, would kill all progress; and that Modernism, by contrast, is dynamic because it is forward-looking and progressive. Dr. David J. Burrell of New York has made an illuminating comment on this. "The Christian is 'dynamic' only because his foundations are 'static.' His character rises like a glowing superstructure on fundamentals that cannot be moved. If a mathematician were to insist on going back continually to prove the axioms, he would never so much as cross the pons asinorum. Some things must be regarded as settled 'once for all.'" The Rock of Ages is gloriously, immovably static; and God's Word is the same, for "For ever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven." Those who know these eternally settled and therefore static truths and facts are dynamic with the dynamite of heaven, with the omnipotence of God Himself, and are active with a God-created energy that is unknown to and unknowable by those whose foundations are question marks.

RADIO AND SOUL SAVING

New York Evening Post

Radio broadcasting of church services has given rise to some interesting views as to the efficacy of this means of appeal to the spiritual consciousness. Cardinal Dubois, Archbishop of Paris, finds "wireless most interesting, but broadcast sermons cannot be expected to convert any one. Wireless is too dry and too cold to have an effect. Personal magnetism is lacking. A speaker conquers his audience by the eyes, gestures, intonation, personality."

How far is conversion in the sense here implied brought about by an appeal to one's emotions or to one's reason? Some persons might be reached by a mere study of the truth and beauty of divine teachings. Others "hit the trail" at Billy Sunday's meetings, this evangelist finding a fruitful field that is barren to gleaners not so strenuous or of less magnetic powers of persuasion. Might not still others get something out of the radio? Opinion among leaders of the church is sharply divided as to the value of radio in religious activities. Some assert that it is keeping away from the pews many people who, preferring the armchair ease and quiet of their own homes elect to "listen in" rather than exert themselves to attend Sunday services in person. Yet reports from authoritative sources show that broadcast sermons are growing in popularity. An increasing number of ministers are arranging for wireless service from their pulpits.

HERESY BY RADIO

New York Christian Advocate

The radio sermon is becoming a serious problem in some localities. When a man can sit at ease in his home and "pick up" the best preacher in the metropolis, he is under temptation to stay away from the little church at the corner. If the Protestant preacher winces under the competition which radio has suddenly brought upon him, what about his neighbor, the Catholic priest, who finds his flock discussing the sermons of some eloquent Presbyterian or Baptist divine? Books which are thought to be perversive of the faith can be placed in the Index Expurgatorius, a list which includes some of the noblest works of the human intellect. Is the same method to be applied to communications by wireless? It looks so. We need not be surprised to read in Saturday's paper a note opposite Sunday items in the radio programs to the effect "that good Catholics must tune this out." For The Observer of Pittsburgh (which can usually be depended upon to reflect truly the opinion of influential Catholics) recently published the following question and answer: Query: "Is there any harm for a Catholic in his own home following through the radio service conducted in a Protestant church?" Answer: "There certainly is harm, and it is difficult to see that the practice is defensible. We are not permitted to take part in heretical services. . . Faith is a priceless gift of God, and carries with it a grave responsibility. It may be forfeited, and no one is permitted to expose it to perversion. Listening in on the radio at heretical services, even if one is not bodily present, constitutes such a danger."

AFTER BLOWING UP ITS FOUNDATIONS, WHERE IS EVOLUTION LEFT?

Eastern Methodist

The Bible champion quotes from a writer in the New York Globe some deadly bombing of evolution by ultra-evolutionists themselves. Herbert Spencer says, "Either there has been inheritance of acquired characters, or there has been no evolution." And this surely is self-evident, for the fundamental principle of evolution is the accumulation and then transmission to offspring of slight variations in the life-time of some animal. So that if these variations die with the particular animal and are never transmitted there is no change upward ever possible. But on this point Alfred Russel Wallace, who announced the theory at the same time Darwin did, now says, "All the available evidence is opposed to the doctrine of acquired characters." Mind you, he says, all the evidence; and Professor Conklin, who goes the whole length of abusing everybody who denies evolution, strangely and inconsistently says, "It is now practically certain that acquired characters of the mortal body are not inherited; that is, are not transmitted to the germplasm." Then how, on any sane reasoning, can evolution take even one step? The very foundations are shattered by these unqualified admissions that acquired characteristics, the one only basis on which species could change to higher species, are not in evidence at all. And straight against all such origin of species by slow and infinitesimal variations transmitted is all the geological evidence in fossils that new forms appear suddenly in full character. Evolution would require millions of intermediate forms and there has never yet been found even one clearly such intermediate. Another shattering blast.

THE PULPIT'S MESSAGE

The Chicago Daily News

Efforts to increase church attendance commonly take the form of broadening the field of church activities. The church has taken on aspects of the club, the gymnasium, the public forum, the social center, the bazaar, even the moving picture theater. While efforts to socialize church work have been made with the worthiest of motives, it is possible that there has been a concomitant loss in emphasis on what used to be considered by very many persons the fundamental reason for the church's existence—good preaching.

It is characteristic of the age that, as an English minister complains, "while most congregations are grateful for good preaching, in practice they frequently discourage it and regard the minister who spends his evenings playing bridge as a man very much alive to the needs of the time." It is well to get the point of view on the other side of the pulpit, but this does not mean that the pulpit need be remembered by the minister only on Sunday, as one among a hundred other duties.

Not alone in modern times has the net of practical affairs enmeshed spiritual leadership. The church in the eleventh century faced a similar condition when its bishops and abbots were feudal vassals, and even in some cases military leaders and civil executives. These responsibilities laid the churchmen open to influences far removed from the spiritual. The present zeal of the church in social reform also has a tendency to reduce the emphasis upon more fundamentally spiritual problems which exist in spite of the vogue for a sociological religion.

Meditation is little practiced in the world to-day. Philosophy goes to seed in the modern university, while social science becomes increasingly popular. Yet neither knowledge nor religion is limited to its social purpose. Social science has its value, but only a sound philosophy can give it rational direction. In the church, social and charitable activities are important, but they should not overshadow the spiritual realizations which are valuable in themselves as well as a guide for conduct.

The earnest minister as a social worker is not a real success if the manifold odds and ends of superintending his church and its activities deprive him of the time and quiet necessary to make his church a spiritual force instead of merely one competitor among many for the people's time and attention.

THE SOCIAL IDEALS OF A STATESMAN-PROPHET

Chicago Evening Post

The soul of Isaiah had seen God. It had been stirred with a new sense of the divine reality, with a conviction that only a return to His program of love and justice and righteousness could save Judah. So from his fire-touched lips came words of stern denunciation for the evils of his day. It will be noted that the emphasis is on sins against human freedom and welfare, sins of selfish indifference to the common good. The rulers of Judah are told:

You have devoured the vineyards,
The spoils of the needy are in your houses.
What do you mean by crushing my people and by grinding the face of the needy? . . .
The authorities are lawless and leagued with thieves.
All of them love bribes and are running after fees.

Nor did he spare the monopolists of land the essential requirement for life in Judah. Isaiah, in the name of Jehovah, was against the control by a few of that which was necessary for the welfare of the many. Hear him:

Woe to those who join house to house,
Who add field to field
Until there is no space left,
And you dwell alone in the midst of the land.

There were skeptics and cynics in Isaiah's time. We have them with us today. They jest at idealism. They ridicule the thought that there is a God who cares, and who will vindicate the righteous principles they violate.

"Woe unto them," cried the prophet,
"Who say, Let Him make speed and hasten His work,
"Let the purpose of Israel's Holy One draw near
"And come that we may know it!"

They "call evil good and good evil; put darkness for light and light for darkness; they are wise in their own eyes," but their wisdom is folly.

Side by side with injustice, monopoly and cynicism in Isaiah's time, as now, went the indecent vanity of wealth. Judah's fashionable women come in for caustic condemnation:

Because Zion's daughters are haughty
And walk with heads held high, and wanton glances,
Tripping along as they go and jingling with their ankles,
Therefore Jehovah will smite with a scab the crown of the head of the daughters of Zion, and expose their shame.

But the constructive note sounds clearly amid the "woes" of Isaiah's message: "Cease to do evil; learn to do good; seek justice, relieve the oppressed; vindicate the orphan; plead for the widow. . . . Come, let us agree together, saith Jehovah, tho your sins be as scarlet they may become white as snow; tho they be red as crimson, they may become as wool; if ye willingly yield and are obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land. . . . If you will not hold fast, verily you shall not stand fast!"

Where is the statesman, with a vision of God, who will be for our modern civilization as faithful a prophet as Isaiah was for Judah?

All Eyes Are Focused on Russia

Most everybody is interested in Russia. Why? Because Russia is in the crucible and all the world is eagerly watching and tensely waiting for the outcome.

This is what our Commissioner, Boleslaw Goetze, who has just returned from Russia after spending 5 weeks in Ukrania and journeying thru to Moscow, says: "Religion seems to be daily faring worse. Bolshevism is Antichristian, and I was implored by leading pastors and others to tell the world the whole truth about their awful sufferings. There is organized persecution against Christians in Russia. Young people under 18 years cannot attend Sunday School or religious services."

In spite of all this a wonderful movement is gradually growing, resulting in marvelous blessing to multitudes. One man from Russia writes, "I am looking forward to a great Revival, the signs of which are already quite distinct." Another tells of a place where over a hundred people professed conversion. Literally hundreds are being saved thru the work of our missionaries. All praise to God!

Pastor Goetze's complete report will appear in an early issue of "The Friend of Russia," our official monthly organ. This Society is Interdenominational, Evangelical and Evangelistic, and we have about 150 missionaries already at work (all of them thoroughly orthodox), spreading the Gospel, distributing Bibles and Scriptural literature, and bringing relief to the destitute. Write today for a sample copy of this publication and read about the great work of God going on among the Russian people now. Your prayers and help will be greatly appreciated.

What Does Christian Brotherhood Mean?

1 John 3:10-24

To the Scripture reading as given above, there should be added such passages as Matthew 11:27; Galatians 3:26; 4:6 and 1 John 5:1-4. A careful study of these verses will give the best approach to the subject of Christian brotherhood.

This brotherhood is not universal. It is composed of those who have put their faith in the Son of God and staked their hope for time and eternity upon Him. In the words of Galatians 3:26, "We are all the sons of God by faith in Christ Jesus." Adding to this another verse from Galatians 4:6, we read that God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into the hearts of believers so that they are able to say, "Abba, Father." In other words, we become sons of God and members of Christian brotherhood by faith. Then the Holy Spirit comes into the heart of the believer to make the relationship real in experience.

The opening verse of our Scripture lesson tells of others beside the children of God. It speaks of the children of the Devil, those who love sin rather than holiness. The Bible flatly contradicts the modern doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God. In Matthew 11:27, we read that "no man knoweth the Father save the Son and he to whom the Son will reveal him," and again in John 1:12, 13 we are taught that to as many as received Christ, to them He gives the power to become the sons of God, even to as many as believe on His name.

Looking again at our Scripture lesson, we observe that Christian brotherhood involves a life that is Christ-like, a life of righteousness (v. 10), a life of endurance under trial (v. 13), a life of love (v. 14), a life of sacrifice (v. 16), a life of compassion (v. 17), and a life of sincerity (vv. 18-20).

Such a life demands the presence of the Spirit of Christ in the heart. This presence is the secret and source of Christian brotherhood and Christian brotherliness.

The Inner and the Outer

2 Corinthians 4:16-18; 1 Samuel 16:6-13

"The Inner and the Outer" indicates two different realms. First, it speaks of the difference between appearance and reality. The outer or outward appearance is that which man sees; the inner reality is that which God sees. In other words, man looks at us while God looks through us. When Samuel looked at Eliab, he saw only the outward appearance—"the height of his stature," but God saw the inner life. In God's estimate it is life, not bulk, that counts. Quality, not quantity. In spiritual quality and capacity David was much better than Eliab. This is the determining factor, for the usefulness of any man is measured by his spiritual power.

"The Inner and the Outer" sometimes indicates the difference between the natural man and the spiritual man. 1 Corinthians 2:14, 15, gives an example of this. The natural man is the one who lives on the plane of the bodily senses and sees and cares only for the present. He walks not by faith but by sight. He endures not "as seeing him who is invisible," but as one to whom only visible things are real. On the other hand the spiritual man lives in the power of the inner life. In the words of 2 Corinthians 4:18, "We look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."

"The Inner and the Outer" sometimes denote the difference between the old nature and the new, referred to in Scripture as the old and the new man. Romans 6:6; Ephesians 4:22 and Colossians 3:9 throw light on this. The old man stands for the fallen and corrupt nature with its tendency to evil and its expression in outward life. The new man is that holy nature referred to in Ephesians 3:16 as "the inner man." This holy nature is imparted to us in the new birth. It is that in which the Holy Spirit dwells and which He renews and energizes so that the Christian believer may be strong in grace and victorious in life. Read carefully Ephesians 3:14-21.

What in Present Day Social Life Would Christ Approve and What Would He Disapprove?

1 Corinthians 10:23, 24, 31-33; 11:1

It is evident that our Lord would approve, and does approve, any life patterned after the standard presented in these Scripture verses. Seeking the profit of others that they may be saved was the key note in Paul's ministry after his conversion.

Mark that word "saved." It means to deliver, to preserve, to make whole. This applies not merely to the physical but extends to the whole being—spirit, soul, and body. The so-called social gospel ignores this. Its aim and objective is "improved conditions." In a vague way the hope is entertained that improved conditions will lead somehow to an improved man, but improved conditions anyway is the objective whether the man is brought into reconciled relationships with his God or not. Would Christ approve of this as an end in itself? We think not.

The method Paul adopted was to go right for the citadel, the heart, to capture it and to cleanse it, for "out of the heart are the issues of life." Then from this new center, spiritual energies flow out to the circumference, changing and adjusting all the outward conditions of life. Regeneration not only changes the man but changes his environment. It makes him a citizen of heaven and a citizen of earth of whom his city can be proud. Does Christ approve of this? Surely, for it is the result of His own saving power and the greatest testimony to His glory.

This regenerated man with a new center and a new circumference, finds welling up within his soul the ambition to attain the ideal presented in verses

Industrial Missions at Home and Abroad

2 Thessalonians 3:6-13

The Scripture lesson affords a good introduction to the topic. Both by example and precept Paul emphasizes the dignity and value of work. He might have asserted his right as an apostle to be supported by the people because of his spiritual labors on their behalf and because of the great gain that came to them through his ministry. This would have been altogether right and proper, but in order to avoid any possible misunderstanding or adverse criticism he labored night and day, "that we might not be chargeable to any of you."

Missionary work now, is classified as evangelistic, medical, educational and industrial. Converts to the Christian faith need to be taught and trained. Industrial training in many fields becomes of special value to converts because it is helpful in providing a means of support. This develops a sense of self-respect and ability, and also enables the worker to contribute something towards the promotion of the work of Christ. This in turn, becomes a means of grace to the giver, and also brings the life under discipline, thereby introducing another helpful factor in the building of Christian character.

The teacher of industry has the advantage of close contact with those whose good he seeks, and for whose salvation he labors. Unless this form of work is supported continually by a warm evangelistic purpose, it would not commend itself to Christian people, but with such support it enables the missionary to secure the largest results. A recent missionary book, in dealing with industrial work says, that it has proved a distinct evangelistic agency through which many have heard the gospel story as they were being taught better methods of agriculture.

It would be of great advantage for the leaders of this meeting and others, too, to read in connection with this topic, an article published in the Sunday School Times of May 27, and entitled, "The Darker Side of Foreign Missions." In the light of this article one can see how easy it is to substitute something for the real objective of Christian missions which is to bring individuals to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Lessons from the Psalms—The Nature Psalm

(Outdoor meeting suggested)

Psalm 104:1-35

Luther described this psalm as, "The praise of God from the book of nature." In it the power and providence of God are clearly seen. The first chapter of Genesis might well be read in connection with this Psalm, or its contents might be summarized in such a verse as Nehemiah 9:6.

All the parts and powers in nature find a place here. The light, the heavens, the waters, the clouds, the wind, the earth, the mountains, the hills, the springs, the valleys; the beasts and the cattle, the grass, the herb, the wine and the oil, trees, birds, sun, moon,—all these find mention in this Psalm.

The opening verse is a fine introduction to the Psalm. The wonders of God's handiwork, when clearly seen, lead the soul to express itself in such words as, "O Lord, my God, thou art very great; thou art clothed with honour and majesty. Who coverest thyself with light as with a garment: who stretchest out the heavens like a curtain." Again, in verse 24, the writer breaks forth in admiration and wonder, "O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches." Then, in verse 27, the thought of God's providence for all His creatures finds expression. "These wait all upon thee: that thou mayest give them their meat in due season. That thou givest them they gather: thou openest thine hand, they are filled with good."

The closing words in verses 34 and 35 are equally significant. We can easily understand the expression, "My meditation of him shall be sweet." Eyes that are anointed to see the beauty and glory of God, even in nature, lead the soul into rich spiritual meditation.

"DOUBLE REFERENCE" AND "RECURRENCE"

E. P. W., Dunkirk, N. Y

Question: Where did the laws of "double reference" and "recurrence" originate?

Answer: We do not know. They are commonly used in the works of Benjamin Wills Newton, the English Bible scholar and have been given wide currency in the writings of Dr. James M. Gray. The first-named law is dwelt on a good deal by Prof. Franklin Johnson in his Quotations in the New Testament from the Old.

SINNING AGAINST THE HOLY SPIRIT

G. E. C., Buffalo, N. Y.

Questions: What is meant by sinning against the Holy Spirit? Who can sin against the Spirit, the saved or unsaved?

Answer: In general sinning against the Holy Spirit is rejecting the enlightenment He gives, especially with regard to the person of Christ. The unforgivable sin against the Spirit is the total rejection of Christ, which the unsaved sometimes commits. But the saint also sins against the Holy Spirit whenever He grieves Him by his manner of life or whenever he is disobedient to His promptings.

SAMUEL, THE PRIEST

C. H. W., Memphis, Tenn.

Questions: (1) Why was Samuel a priest? (2) Why did he sacrifice in high places? (3) Why was sacrifice away from the Tabernacle practiced?

Answers: (1) We are nowhere told that Samuel was a priest; neither was he of the priestly tribe. But he did offer sacrifices and apparently with divine sanction. (2) At this time, and upon this occasion (1 Sam. 7:12-14) there was nothing wrong in so doing. (3) The very fact of his not being a priest would explain why he offered sacrifices away from the Tabernacle. Besides the Tabernacle worship in this period of history was in a decline.

INFANT BAPTISM

G. W. W., Kewanee, Ill.
R. R., Rockford, Ill.
M. K., La Grange, Ind.

Several of our readers have misunderstood the reference to infant baptism upon page 426 of the May issue. This is not surprising, since the question was not printed. The answer was not intended as a defense of infant baptism, but was simply stating that in the case of infant baptism the children of believers only, not those of unbelievers, were subjects of baptism, as held by those evangelical Protestants who teach and practice infant baptism. The Institute faculty contains those who believe in infant baptism and those who believe only in adult baptism. We are living harmoniously together, and we wish that brotherly love might prevail among brethren outside of the Institute who hold opposite opinions about this matter.

THE REVISED VERSION vs. THE KING JAMES

H. I. L., Springfield, Vt.

Question: Is the Revised Version of the Bible better than the King James?

Answer: The King James Version has some obsolete words and phrases, and also lacks the advantages of the readings of the many manuscripts that have been discovered since that noble version was made. For many also who are students the paragraphing of the Revised Version is found more helpful, and many of the translations are to be preferred, though not all by any means. Since the new translation changes no doctrinal teachings, the King James is equally as good for devotional reading and all practical purposes, and, indeed, some good Bible teachers still prefer it for certain reasons. It would be well however to own an inexpensive copy of the Revised Version just for comparison.

MELCHIZEDEK

B. P., Cincinnati, O.

Question: Who was Melchizedek?

Answer: No sufficient reason exists for not accepting the plain statements of Scripture about this mysterious personage. See Genesis 14:18-20; Psalms 110:4; Hebrews 6:20. He was King of Salem, or Jerusalem, and priest of the Most High. This historical statement of the Bible has received coroboration in the deciphering of the Tel el Amarna tablets, in which the name Uru-salem (Jerusalem) is mentioned, whose king claims that he received his royal power not from natural inheritance but from "the mighty King," who will destroy the power of his enemies. Thus the origin of the name Jerusalem or the city of Salem, goes back at least to the period of Babylonian's intercourse with Canaan, and there is no reason to doubt that Melchizedek was a real king and a priest of the true God.

ACCEPTABLE WORSHIP

J. A., Morrisvale, W. Va.

Question: How does the Heavenly Father want us to worship Him? Please explain John 4:23.

Answer: Worshiping "in spirit and truth" means first of all that acceptable worship is not dependent upon its being offered in sacred places (2:21), nor in fulness of knowledge (2:22). Neither does it mean mere sincerity or honesty of worship such as some pagans offer, or even the Samaritans. Those words of Christ, "the hour now is," imply that true worshipers must come to the Father through Him, the promised Messiah (v. 26). He says, "No man cometh to the Father, but by me." He is "the truth"; He is the Revealer of the Father: and He is the Sender of the Holy Spirit, who alone can make man's spirit a true sanctuary for worship. Through His Son the Father is seeking all to be His real worshipers. Since "God is Spirit" none but spiritual worship is acceptable to Him. Special places or approved forms or meritorious acts are of little worth, for true worship is an act of the spirit of man as he realizes the spiritual presence of God at any time and in any place.

THE DAY OF CHRIST'S RESURRECTION

M. H. B., Searcy, Ark.

Questions: (1) What is the Bible evidence that Christ rose from the dead on the first day of the week? (2) How is that view harmonized with Christ's prophecy in Matthew 12:40 and the record in Matthew 28:1-6, Mark 16:1, and Luke 23:53-56?

Answers: (1) Luke 24:1-3; Matt. 28:1-6; Mark 16:1, 2, 9; John 20:1. (2) A strong argument has been made by some that Christ was crucified upon Thursday, which they claim is necessary if we believe the prophecy in Matthew 12:40. Others seek to prove that He was crucified upon Wednesday and rose upon the Sabbath. The common interpretation is that according to the Jewish mode of reckoning a part of the day may stand for the whole (1 Sam. 30:11-13; 2 Chron. 10:5,12; Esth. 4:16 and 5:1). But Matthew 27:63, 64 would seem to settle the question. There the expression "after three days," is interpreted to mean "until the third day." Paul also declares that Christ was raised "on the third day" (1 Cor. 15:14). Thus if Christ were crucified upon Friday His resurrection upon the first day of the week would satisfy the requirement of Matthew 12:40 and harmonize the references in Matthew 28, Mark 16, and Luke 23.

DRAMATIZING THE GOSPEL

B. C. R., New York City.

Questions: Is it right to develop plays based upon scriptural themes? Or in other words to dramatize the gospel with a view to bringing sinners to repentance or to enrich the redeemed? Are there any scriptural reasons against this?

Answer: Dramatizing the gospel is becoming more and more in vogue, but it is no new thing. It is claimed that the modern drama grew out of the custom of Bible plays in connection with the church. If this be true, then we may be certain that the present practice will also deteriorate into something far below what it now is.

In favor of attempting to visualize the scenes and events of the Bible it may be said that the shortest road to the brain is through the eye. As a mere means of instruction much can be said in favor of acting and of the motion-picture. The impression of pictures is also often more lasting than instruction imparted by mere words. Costume, color, scenic effects, and action greatly emphasize the spoken word. They awaken interest and hold the attention. They help to make historical scenes and events more real. Besides the miracles were acts which emphasized great truths. They have been called "parables in action." They appeal to the eye. Thus at the beginning the gospel was proclaimed by both sight and sound.

Upon the other hand, will not the entertainment feature of the dramatized gospel lessen its effect upon the observers? Will not imperfect reproductions cheapen or distort the gospel message? Is it possible to dramatize truth without marring its beauty? Can even the best acting accurately reproduce Bible scenes and events? Is not their sacredness lessened by the very attempt to act them out? Is it not better for the soul to have more room for the religious imagination than to witness an imperfect attempt at realism in connection with spiritual things? The emphasis of the New Testament is upon preaching and hearing the gospel. It is the Word that is sharper than any two-edged sword. It is the Word that is the sword of the Spirit. We fear that there is a snare in this attempt to visualize the gospel; that it is substituting a human method for the divine; that its tendency is to make us less dependent upon God and His written or spoken Word.

THE INTERNATIONAL UNION OF GOSPEL MISSIONS AND THE FAMILY ALTAR LEAGUE

At the tenth annual convention of the International Union of Gospel Missions, just closed in Minneapolis, it was arranged that each mission is to appoint a committee on family worship and in co-operation with the Family Altar League work among the families with which it comes in contact with a view to establishing or bringing back the custom of family worship.

The Family Altar League, which furnishes the "Daily Bible Readings" for the MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY, is just beginning a vigorous campaign throughout Cook County and the State of Illinois. Pastors interested are urged to correspond with the Family Altar League, 207 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, D. D., is president of the League.

Mary, the Mother of Jesus

Luke 1:26-38, 46-56; 2:1-20, 41-52; John 19:25-27

Golden Text:—"Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins."—Matthew 1:21.

I. Mary at Nazareth (Luke 1:26-38, 46-56).

Mary was a Jewish maid of the town of Nazareth. The first information we have of her is that she was engaged to be married to Joseph, a carpenter of the same village. It seems that the custom among the Jews was for betrothal to take place a year before marriage. During this interval the woman remained with her parents.

1. Gabriel Sent from God to Mary (vv. 26-38). It was during this interval of betrothal before Joseph and Mary were married that God sent the angel Gabriel to announce unto Mary that she was to be the mother of Jesus. Isaiah more than 700 years before prophesied declaring that a virgin should give birth to a son whose name shall be called Immanuel—God with us (Isa. 7:14). Though at first perplexed, she accepted the annunciation with remarkable courage and devotion. To be told that she was to be a mother was nothing startling, for this was the normal desire of every married Jewish woman. Under the circumstances she accepted motherhood at a tremendous cost. She was conscious of her virgin purity. She knew that to become a mother under such circumstances would expose her to unutterable suspicion and shame. This was the view that certain Jews took of the matter, for they cast this insinuation into the face of Jesus that he was born of fornication (John 8:41). Her faith was such that she responded with noble courage. She said, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word" (Luke 1:38). She accepted motherhood under these circumstances as God's command. It was made clear to her that the begetting was by the Holy Ghost and that the Most High would embody Himself with humanity divinely begotten, that the resultant thing born would be holy and called the "Son of God."

2. Her Wonderful Song (vv. 46-56). In her embarrassment she set out on a visit to an elderly kinswoman named Elizabeth. Having sought the sympathy and encouragement of this friend, her triumphant faith carried her beyond the misunderstanding, the scorn and shame which awaited her, and caused her soul to burst out in the most wonderful song of praise. This is called the "Magnificat," because of the first word in the Latin version, "My soul doth magnify the Lord." As pointed out by another, three features of her character stand out in this song: (1) Her purity of heart. Only a pure heart rejoices when God is come near. (2) Her humility. She forgot herself and gave her heart to God's praise. (3) Her unselfishness. She did not primarily think of the undying honor which through the ages would be attached to her, but the blessedness which would come upon future generations through her.

II. Mary at Bethlehem (Luke 2:1-20).

What Gabriel announced to Mary was now being fulfilled. Caesar's decree concerning taxation brought Joseph and Mary to Bethlehem at the opportune time for the fulfilment of Micah 5:2. Because of the crowded condition of the inn, the birth of the world's Saviour took place in a cave-stable. This was a most wonderful night—the angel's song to the shepherds in the field; the shepherd's visit to the manger-cradle to verify the truthfulness of the announcement, and their proclamation of the event to all within their reach. Mary did not understand all these things, but as a wise mother she kept and pondered them in her heart.

III. Mary in Jerusalem and Galilee (Luke 2:41-52).

Jesus was now twelve years old, was now a child of the law, for at the age of twelve the child took his responsibility as a worshiper. Here we see Mary characteristically a mother with human limitations.

1. Failure in Vigilant Care (v. 43). They had left the city and gone a whole day's journey without knowing where the child was.

2. Failure to Understand Fully Jesus's Action and Words (v. 50). No particular censure should attach to this, as it is beyond our ability even now to understand all these things.

3. Failure to Properly Sympathize with Jesus' Deepest Longings and Emotions. "How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

4. Failure to Perceive Her Limit of Masterfulness. The time comes when duty to God takes precedence over duty to parents. The wise mother recognizes her limits. Later Jesus declared that "he that doeth the Father's will, the same is my mother." All these limitations should be viewed with the background of her deep devotion to God. She was pure in heart, faithful in attendance upon the Temple worship. Her whole life was lived in a spiritual atmosphere. She was just the kind of woman to whom God would trust the upbringing of His Son. Jesus went back with them to Nazareth and was subject unto them.

IV. Mary at the Cross (John 19:25-27).

This was a great trial. For any mother to see her son die is a trial, but what must it have been for this mother in the face of all the sacred memories that clung to her soul! It is beautiful to note the tender care which Jesus in His dying hour manifested for His mother. He committed her to the care of John. Since she had other sons we wonder why she was committed to the care of John. It may have been that John was better prepared to give her the needed care. And since it was not until after the crucifixion that his brothers believed on Him He might have judged that she would fare better in the hands of the beloved disciple than in the hands of her unconverted children. John accepted the responsibility of a son and took her to his home.

Simon Peter

Matthew 16:13-18; John 21:15-17

Golden Text:—"Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee."—John 21:17.

Peter is a most interesting character. We should know him personally, for he is a striking revelation of human character and the transforming power of God's grace. Then, too, we should know him officially, for he stands in a peculiar relationship to the church. In the analysis of his person we find that he was a peculiar compound of stability and fickleness, strength and weakness, courage and cowardice.

I. His Name (John 1:42).

The name which he bore when introduced to Christ was Simon, which means "hearing." But Jesus gave him a new name—"Peter," which means "rock." This showed what he was to become. After Pentecost he is usually known as Peter.

II. His Call (John 1:41, 42).

His brother Andrew brought him to Christ. This brought him into fellowship with the Lord. From ordinary discipleship he was called to special ministry (Luke 5:10). From being a fisherman he was called to catch men.

III. Peter's Character.

1. Sincere. What Peter was at heart could be read on his face. He was free from duplicity. People could understand him. Because of this characteristic they did not believe him when he was lying. Even when people knew he was in error they could believe in him. He seems to have been ignorant of the word "diplomacy." Would that this trait had not gone out of fashion today!

2. Promptitude. He had the ability to decide and act quickly, as the occasion demanded. This made him a real leader. An example of his promptitude was at the empty tomb. John outran Peter, but Peter was the first to enter the tomb. When Cornelius sent for him at Joppa he responded without delay.

3. Courageous. While Peter played the coward sometimes, he was for the most part a brave man. No doubt it was through cowardice that he denied the Lord, but it was his courage that brought him to follow the Lord into the palace of the high priest.

4. Intense. He felt keenly and acted with vigor. Whether right or wrong, what he did he did with all his might. He was of a choleric temperament. When he preached it was with passion. No finer example of buring eloquence can be found than his Pentecostal sermon.

IV. Peter's Confession of Christ (Matt. 16:13-18, 21-23).

The disciples had been with the Lord for several years. They had heard His mighty words and seen His mighty works. Various opinions were extant about Him. It was now necessary for them to have a definite conception of Him. Examination came after the period of school life. The Master-teacher knew the necessity of having the disciples get the right conception of Himself. Men's actions are determined by their thinking. Ideas control men.

1. What It Was (v. 16). It involves His Messiahship—"The Christ," and deity—"Son of the living God." This is the burning question today. Those who have the right conception of Christ's person and mission have no trouble in the realms of science, philosphy or ethics.

2. Christ's Commendation (v. 17). He pronounced him blessed. Truly he was blessed, for he both possessed and confessed the Christ. The evidence that Peter was blessed was that he was in spiritual touch with the Father in heaven. His conception of Christ was not revealed by flesh and blood.

3. Peter's Blessing (v. 18). Christ declared that he should be the foundation stone in His church. Christ is the chief cornerstone on which the church is built. Christ's person and Messiahship was confessed by Peter, and on this rock is laid the foundation of apostles and prophets (Eph. 2:20). All believers are living stones of this house (1 Pet. 2:5).

V. Peter's Restoration (John 21:15-17).

Peter grievously sinned in denying the Lord, but he made a confession, shedding bitter tears of penitence over his sin and folly. The Lord tenderly dealt with His erring disciple and restored him. In this restoration He brought to Peter's mind the essential qualification for his ministry. Love is the pre-eminent gift for Christ's service. To impress upon him this, He three times asked the question, "Lovest thou me?" Three classes of people were to be served: (1) Those beginning the Christian life—"Feed my lambs." (2) The mature ones—"Shepherd my sheep." The shepherd needs to protect and feed the sheep. Love is the one essential equipment for this service. (3) The aged Christians—"Feed my sheep." Love is needed in dealing with the fathers and mothers in Israel.

John the Apostle

Luke 9:49-56; John 19:25-27; 1 John 4:7, 8

Golden Text:—"God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him."—1 John 4:16.

John is a most interesting character. He was reserved—decidedly reticent about himself. He had a rare gift of penetrative insight. The truth he set forth was not so much the result of a process of argument as what he saw. He was a true seer. He is known as the apostle of love. His very nature seems to have been steeped in the redeeming love of God. He was not the effeminate man usually thought of, but was thoroughly masculine. He was truly a "son of thunder" when circumstances provoked action. When principle was at stake or insult had been given to his Lord, his fiery temperament flashed forth.

I. His Intolerance of Irregular Service (Luke 9:49, 50).

John was conscientious in his intolerance of this disciple. There seems to have been no question but what the man was really casting out devils, even though he did not possess the same credentials as the twelve apostles. There seems to have been no question as to the reality of the truth which this disciple taught or the work he did. The same spirit has been manifested all through the Christian centuries. Whoever witnesses truly of Christ and does His work has recognition of God. Christ rebuked John's intolerance and declared that "he that is not against us is for us." May we everywhere show the same consideration to those who are doing the Lord's work, even though they are not members of our particular church.

II. John's Righteous Indignation (Luke 9:51-56).

1. Jesus' Face Set Toward Jerusalem (vv. 51-53). He knew what was before Him. He knew the awful fate awaiting Him at Jerusalem. Even though the dark shadow of the cross hung across His path He resolutely nerved Himself for the ordeal. The cross was no accident. The supreme purpose of His coming was to save the world through His sacrificial death. This was in the plan of God from all eternity. The cross is the grand center of the Christian religion. Everyone who follows Jesus must take up his cross.

2. The Inhospitable Samaritans (v. 53). The Lord was to pass through that city on His way to Jerusalem. When the people discerned that His face was set for Jerusalem they refused hospitality to Him. This insult to the Lord so aroused the anger of John and James that they desired to call down fire from heaven to burn them up. It was John's love for his Lord that prompted this suggestion. Love will brook no insult to the object upon which it is fastened. Christ rebuked him and corrected his spirit, but He knew that it proceeded from his heart of love. Mistaken love has done much harm in the church. The pages of history are red with the blood of heretics to the everlasting shame of the persecutors. Persecution is not the way to deal with those who differ from us. The spirit is not only wrong, but it is futile, for the blood of the martyrs has always become the seed of the church. May Christ's rebuke to John take from our hearts the spirit of intolerance and revenge. Jesus came not to destroy men, but to save them.

III. John's Care of Christ's Mother (John 19:25-27).

1. Jesus Saw His Mother (v. 26). Perhaps His physical suffering had so dimmed His vision that He had not seen her before. Even His death agonies did not cause Him to forget His mother. While engaged in the redemption of the world, He displayed His tender human interest in this beautiful act. The cross is the center from which love flows.

2. John Took Mary to His Own Home (v. 27). The same John who wished to call down fire upon the inhospitable Samaritans now is engaged in the tenderest act of human affection. He was caring for the mother of his Lord. The reason Jesus entrusted her to John was that He knew his real heart of love. He knew that John's experience was such that he could enter into full sympathy with her in her great sorrow.

IV. Test of Divine Birth (1 John 4:7, 8).

John's experiences in life were such that now near the close of his life he declares that the supreme test of fellowship in the divine life is love. Love is the bond of perfection—the cord that binds all virtues into one harmonious bundle. All the fruits of the Christian life spring out of this root. God is love. All that is good and beautiful in our lives is but the very life of God flowing through us.

Matthew, the Publican

Matthew 9:9-13; Luke 5:27-32

Golden Text:—"I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance." —Matthew 5:32.

I. Who Matthew Was.

Of Matthew little is known, even his birth place is concealed. Our first sight of him is while sitting at the toll-booth collecting taxes. He was no doubt a Jew, but from the fact that he was engaged in collecting taxes for the Roman government, we judge that he did not belong to the religious or educated class. The tax gatherer was hated by the loyal Jews because he was engaged in collecting taxes for the alien government whose yoke was galling, and also because of the extortion usually practiced by them. From the meager accounts we find that he was—

1. A Man of Decision. We do not know as to whether he had ever seen or heard of Jesus before this time, but we note that he at once arose and followed Jesus. No doubt, many things concerned him. It was no little task to break off from his business because it would seem that he had a lucrative business.

2. He was a Humble Man. In chapter 10, verse 3, the order in which he gives his own name and the fact that he designates himself a "publican" would show that he did not over-estimate himself. Neither Mark or Luke tells us that he was a publican.

3. He Possessed Force of Character. This is shown in the fact that he gave a feast and invited his friends in to see and hear his Lord.

He had two names, Levi, which means "attached" or "joined," and Matthew which means, "Gift of Jehovah." Most likely Matthew is the name taken after his conversion.

II. Matthew's Call or Conversion (Matt. 9:9).

1. As Jesus passed by, He "saw a man." He saw the possibilities which were in Matthew. The divine grace was revealed in this call. The Lord saw through the hated profession of a tax gatherer, the shining possibilities of his manhood and apostleship. He saw in him the fit man to perceive and portray the Messiahship of the Redeemer. Jesus sees what is in man regardless of their name or profession. May He see in us the possibilities of useful service.

2. Matthew's Response (v. 9). He acted with decision and promptness; he left his business behind him. When Jesus said, "Follow me," Matthew perceived that greater than man had spoken to him. May we yield ourselves unto Him and render such simple obedience that our actions may be but the echoes of the divine voice in commanding. Two things in Matthew's compliance prove the genuineness of his conversion: (1) "He left all" (Luke 5:28). Real conversion always results in the forsaking of all that is contrary to Jesus, such as illegitimate business, wicked associates and worldly pleasures, etc. (2) "Followed Jesus." Following Jesus means the commitment of one's life to Him for full salvation, abandonment of the will to Him to do whatsoever He wills, and a willingness to suffer, and even die, if need be, for Him.

III. Matthew Makes a Great Feast (Luke 5:29-32).

This feast was made in honor of his newly found Saviour. His conversion was so real that he wanted his friends to become acquainted with his Saviour. He was not ashamed to confess his Lord before his friends. He showed real tact in making a supper. Men will come to a feast much more readily than they will to a sermon. We should use every lawful means to bring men under the sound of the gospel. A great company of sinners came. These doubtless had been Matthew's companions in sin. He now desires them to become his brothers in Christ. The Scribes and Pharisees were astonished that Jesus would appear in company with such a motley crowd of disreputable persons. They were too cowardly to speak to Jesus but they came to the disciples. Jesus championed their cause and baffled His adversaries. His reasoning was unanswerable. A physician's place is among the sick. Only those who are diseased should come to the doctor's house. Since spiritual matters are of more importance than physical, Jesus was more than justified in being in the center of those who were morally sick that He might heal them of their maladies. He now declared that His purpose in coming among men was to save the bad, not to be served by the good. He came to call sinners to repentance.

August 5

Mary Magdalene

Luke 8:1-3; John 9:25; 20:11-18

Golden Text:—"Our soul waiteth for the Lord: He is our help and shield." —Psalm 33:21.

I. Mary Saved (Luke 8:1, 2).

While Jesus and His disciples were preaching throughout the villages of Galilee, she with certain other women heard the good news of salvation and was saved. Evil spirits were cast out of them. Mary had been possessed with seven demons. The number seven indicates the completeness of her affliction. Bodily affliction usually accompanied demon possession. Dr. Erdman says: "It is a cruel error to confuse Mary Magdalene with the sinful woman of whom Luke has just been writing. Mary had suffered from demon possession as here stated, but there is nothing in the Gospels to indicate that she had ever been a woman of notoriously evil life." So wide spread is this false impression that many rescue homes for fallen women unjustly bear the name of "Magdalene."

II. Mary Ministering (Luke 8:3).

She with certain women who had been saved from Satan's power, out of a heart of gratitude looked after the comforts of the Lord and His disciples. These women must have been in easy circumstances as they were able to buy food and other necessities, and doubtless obtained lodging for Jesus and His disciples. These women were the forerunners of that large company of saved women who have throughout the Christian centuries been ministering to the Lord through kindness to His ministers. How poor would be this world without the ministry of godly women!

III. Mary's Steadfastness (John 19:25).

After the men disciples had forsaken the Lord, a group of faithful women remained at the cross, among which was Mary Magdalene. Others lingered prompted by natural affection, but she lingered out of grateful love for salvation from Satan's bondage.

IV. Mary at the Empty Tomb (John 20:11-18).

1. Mistaken Tears. (vv. 11-13). She had come to the tomb to weep and to pay respect to the body of her Lord. She was weeping over what she regarded as a tragic loss. In spite of her love and faith, she was in a state of confusion. If she had known what was revealed to her a short time afterward, she would not have thus wept. She was weeping because the tomb was empty, when the real cause for weeping would have been the Lord's body in the tomb. How many times we break our hearts over misunderstanding. The fact that a living body had walked out of the tomb instead of a dead body in it should have occasioned rejoicing. The empty tomb is the Christian's ground for hope.

2. The Unrecognized Master (vv. 14, 15).

She was within sight of the living Lord yet mourning for Him. Let us look in the right direction and we shall have our sorrows turned into joys. The reason she did not recognize the Lord, was that He did not appear as she thought He should. Many times our preconceived notions prevent us from seeing Jesus.

3. Restrained Familiarity (vv. 16, 17).

The full meaning of Jesus' words when He forbade Mary touching Him perhaps we cannot surely know. The difficulty doubtless inhered in Mary's misunderstanding. She seemed to think that the same relations enjoyed before the resurrection could be resumed. He showed her that He was ascending into glory and that He should henceforth receive divine worship.

4. Mary Telling the Good News of the Resurrection (vv. 17, 18).

The need of telling of the good news to the poor despondent disciples was so urgent that there was no time for familiarity. What joy there must have been in the hearts of the disciples at this good news!

Missionary Department

Robert H. Glover

"Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course, and be glorified"—2 Thessalonians 3:1.

So wrote Paul the missionary on behalf of himself, not only, but also his fellow missionaries then and now. He links together prayer and preaching, even as the early apostles linked them when they said, "We will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word." In both passages prayer is put first, because it belongs first, because it is the mightiest of all factors in missions. Missionary success depends upon prayer because it depends upon God, and prayer as nothing else releases divine power.

The relation between prayer and the preaching of the Word is of vital importance. Today a conflict is raging around the Bible between those who accept it as the inspired Word of God and those who do not. But every time the Word is preached a mightier conflict immediately ensues between opposing spiritual forces. The Holy Spirit on the one hand seeks to make the Word His sword of conviction unto the salvation of souls, while Satan on the other hand seeks, like the birds of the air, to snatch away the seed of truth and render it unfruitful. If we ask by what means this conflict will issue on the right side, the answer is by prayer and prayer alone. Thus the apostle pleads for prayer "that the word of the Lord may have free course, and be glorified."

The importance of prayer before the Word is preached is rightly stressed and by many duly appreciated. But is the equal, or possibly even greater, importance of prayer following the preaching as fully grasped? Let us not fail God and our missionary comrades at this point. And inasmuch as there is probably never a moment from day to day when the gospel is not somewhere being proclaimed in heathen lands, there should likewise never be a moment when the voice of intercession for the missionaries and their hearers is silent. The Scripture's injunction is to "pray without ceasing."

PRAYER FIRST

"You can do more than pray after you have prayed, but you cannot do more than pray until you have prayed."—Selected.

NEWS FROM M.B.I. MISSIONARIES

The M.B.I. missionary family is a large one. At present it numbers 830, scattered in sixty-eight fields. It is inspiring to be kept in touch with the progress of missionary work in every part of the globe through the letters which come from one and another of these beloved workers. The following are a few items from such letters recently received:

Jesse E. Raynor, '07, African Inland Mission, Kenya Colony: "November 25 three women were baptized at Thare outstation, and December 15 nine women and three men were baptized at Githumu station . . . . . In May, near Mununga Kinyona outschool, a woman had twins. She stuffed their mouths full of leaves to gag them so that she could not hear their cry, and threw them into the bush for the hyenas to devour. To give birth to a deformed child or twins is considered evidence of being cursed by the evil spirits, and the only way to appease them is to throw the child or children to the hyenas."

Guy W. Playfair, '10, field director of Sudan Interior Mission, Nigeria, at last writing had just completed a trip to the south of the Niger, visiting all the stations there. He tells of wonderful progress in that district, where a truly great harvest is being gathered in. He was about to proceed to the other end of the field to direct the advance into new territory where a number of new stations are being opened.

The following items regarding that mission for 1922 are interesting and encouraging. Seventeen new missionaries reached the field and fourteen old workers returned, while seven were granted much needed furlough. The year closed with seventy-two on the missionary roll. Nearly 10,000 gospel services were held, with an average attendance of 2,000 at regular Sunday meetings. There were 480 baptisms, and large numbers in addition professed to accept Christ. Over 32,000 treatments were given in dispensary work.

Charles F. Hummel, '12, S.I.M., Nigeria, reports gratifying increase in Christian giving by the Christians in the Yagba country, who contributed $1200 during 1922. At his station a new church was built by volunteer native labor. The children took an especially active part, and Mr. Hummel writes: "Our own lads in the house helped as well as those from the villages. When I came to pay our house boys their wages on Saturday, the two larger boys at once handed me back one day's pay, saying they would not take pay for the day they helped on the church. One of these had a little earlier given back his whole week's wages to help pay the men who were working on the church building."

John S., '08, and Mrs., Hall, '16, S.I.M., Nigeria, send cheering news from the Tangale work. On the occasion of the sixth anniversary of the opening of work in that far-away tribe six were baptized who had given clear evidence of vital faith in Christ.

Mary Pickett, '14, C. Victoria, Mexico, writes: "Doors are open here for service as never before, and we realize that the fields are white unto harvest, but laborers are few. At Christmas time two young men came on foot, a three days' journey across the mountains to beg us to send a worker to teach them the way of life. Some one from Texas had taken them a Bible, which a group of eight or ten men had studied until they were convinced that it was the Word of God. They then constructed a little house in which to meet, and sent to us for help. We gave them a number of Bibles and hymn books and sent two evangelists to visit them. Many were found to be spiritually concerned. The evangelists held several meetings but were unable to stay. Still other villages are seeking the way of life, but workers are too few to send to them."

Hazel M. Ross, '20, I.S.A.M.U., Concordia, Argentina, writes cheerfully of her first experiences on the field. She was happy in being able to give several talks in Spanish and take charge of the Sunday-school. She reports Hazel M. Chamberlain, '20, and Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Fay, '18, in Concepcion, Paraguay, and J. C. Cunningham, '18, in Posodas, with a very successful church there, and about to open new work at Paragueri, Paraguay.

Florence Drew, '08, South China Boat Mission, Canton, writes of the recent extension of that work to Wuchow, a large and important city in Kuangsi province, 150 miles west of Canton. She describes their eventful boat journey up the river at a time when figthing was going on between the opposing Chinese troops of the two provinces. At one point the missionaries had to crouch in the bottom of their boat to escape being hit with bullets. Several bullets hit the boat, and some even pierced the mattress on the bed. Fortunately no missionary was hurt, although a woman on a boat near-by was mortally wounded, and died on the gospel boat after unsuccessful efforts to save her life.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Lang, '20, South China Boat Mission, have taken up the new work among the boat people of Wuchow. They report encouraging attendance at meetings and several conversions thus early in the work. Mr. Lang adds: "The trombone which I brought out is certainly proving a blessing, as I use it in the double capacity of a church bell and an orchestra. Just before the meeting I step out on the front of the boat and play loudly for five minutes, then I go inside and we sing until the people come."

Edna L. Larsen, '14, C.I.M., West China, describes the infinite variety of a missionary's task and testifies that life in China is anything but monotonous. She had just begun another term of school with sixty girls varying in age from five to twenty years. God was working in their hearts and lives, and already a number of them had taken a decided stand for Christ and were witnessing bravely in their homes in spite of no little opposition.

Ruth H. Anderson, '21, C.I.M., China, has completed her term of study in the language school at Yangchow, and has been appointed to her first station in the northwestern province of Shensi.

H. P. Elson, '95, Tangier, Morocco, has labored long and faithfully in evangelistic work and also carries on the Raymond Lull Home. He speaks of the great changes which have come to Morocco since the French occupation. On the one hand, European civilization has brought many new temptations and difficulties; on the other, it has increased facilities for gospel work in the shape of better roads and communications, better government and more liberty for public preaching. Mr. Elson was recently married, and his wife, who is a trained and devoted worker with children, has entered heartily into the work. A Ford automobile is proving a great boon in enabling these workers to visit many places hitherto beyond their reach.

Arthur M. L. Moohan, '22, Peru, S. A., has penetrated the almost wholly neglected northern part of Peru and opened work at a center called Cajamarca. He reports shocking conditions of unchastity and deceit on the part of the Roman Catholic clergy, describes the pitiable moral and spiritual conditions of the deluded people, and gives a very encouraging instance of his first efforts in dealing with souls.

Ships Orders to Missionaries all Over the World

At Home and Abroad

We have customers in great numbers in every country of the world, and we render special service to our customers in Foreign fields. The picture above shows actual orders packed and ready to ship to Missionaries. Perhaps some of your friends will receive one of these shipments.

Our Missionary Bureau

Gives particular attention to orders for shipment to Foreign Mission Fields. This Bureau is the outgrowth of the service rendered to the early Missionaries who went out nearly half a century ago, when it was so difficult to get supplies to them. Since that time, Missionaries all over the world have been buying from us because they know that we furnish, and can safely ship practically everything they need — Food, Underwear, Shoes, Dry Goods, Books, Household Articles, Tools, Office Appliances, Hospital Supplies, Pianos and Organs, all standard quality, at money saving prices. We know how to pack for ocean and distant inland transportation. We absolutely guarantee safe delivery.

Forwarding Service

Churches, missionary societies, families and friends of Missionaries, can arrange with us to send any articles, even entire households, to foreign points, whether the goods were purchased from us or not. Saves time, worry, trouble and money. Detailed information will be given gladly. Wherever mails go, Montgomery Ward & Co. has customers — and they are satisfied customers. For further information, address:

GRACE

Text: John 1:16,—"And of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace."

G-od (Gen. 1:1; John 1:1) has provided
R-edemption (Rom. 3:24) by means of A-tonement (Rom. 5:11, R. V., Reconciliation) on
C-alvary (Luke 23:33) whereby the believer is given
E-ternal Life (Eph. 2:8; John 5:24).

—B. W. Burleigh.

READY!

The Sinner—ready to perish (Deut. 26:5).

The Saviour—ready to pardon (Neh. 9:17).

The Supper—ready for guests (Matt. 22:4).

The Suppliant—ready to hear God's voice (Eccl. 5:1).

The Servant—ready to every good work (Titus 3:2).

The Saint—ready for the coming (Luke 12:40; 1 Thess. 5:4).

GOD AND NATIONAL LIFE

Text: Psalm 33:12,—"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."

God may be considered the God of nations. He chose one nation to be the channel of blessing to all mankind, and the nation that is to be prominent in the colossal world movements of the future. But this choice does not prevent the relation of God to other nations, whether monarchies, democracies or republics. As David said, "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy," so may the subject of any nation speak respecting his own nation. The citizens of the United States just now seem to have a just right to thus speak, and as the one hundred and forty-seventh anniversary of national independence is being celebrated, a few thoughts as to the nation and the principles of national life suggested by the text, may be in mind.

I. A Nation May Have God as its Lord.

1. This may be recognized in the constitution of the nation.
2. This may be recognized in the laws of the nation.
3. This should be recognized in the life of the nation.

II. It is Possible to Have Something Else than God in View as Lord.

1. The history of nations in the past shows that national aggrandizement and regard for prosperity without recognition of the rights of other nations were dominant.
2. To say, "Our nation, right or wrong," is a rejection of God, for God cannot tolerate wrong.
3. The love of power, pleasure and luxury is one of the great national perils of the day.

III. National Blessedness May Have Realization—

1. In internal tranquillity, peace with other nations, material prosperity, political freedom and ideal social relations, the family being the center.
2. In provision for support of cultural and educational activities.
3. In provision for and support of religious worship and the maintenance of a positive Christian atmosphere.

While recognizing the advantages of a republican form of government for the United States as compared with monarchy, absolute or limited, it is to be kept in mind that the ultimate government which will be ideal in every way will be a kingdom, and Christ will be King. —J. H. R.

THE GRACE OF GIVING

God is a great Giver. "He gave his only begotten Son" (John 3:16). "He that spared not his own Son" (Rom. 8:32). We are to be like our Father in everything.

The natural heart is selfish. Wants all for self. To give is not natural. So what we Christians need is the grace of giving. "As ye abound in everything, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also" (2 Cor. 8:7).

I. Source of This Grace (2 Cor. 9:8). "God is able to make all grace abound toward you." Note: This verse is in the middle of a chapter on giving. And the apostle affirms that God is able to make even the grace of giving abound unto you!

II. Example Given of This Grace. "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sake's he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich" (2 Cor. 8:9). "He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully (2 Cor. 9:6).

III. The Spirit of This Grace. "First a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not" (2 Cor. 8:12). Exhortation to carry out the grace (2 Cor. 8:11; 9:7).

IV. Results from the Exercise of This Grace. (1) On the givers: (a) "That fruit may abound to your account" (Phil. 4:17); (b) Brings them into fellowship with the work of God (Phil. 4:15, R. V.); (c) They receive the greater blessing (Acts 20:35).

(2) On the receivers: (a) Their need is supplied (2 Cor. 9:12); (b) Calls forth their praise to God (2 Cor. 9:11, 12); (c) Calls forth their prayers (2 Cor. 9:14); (d) Calls forth their love ("which long after you") (2 Cor. 9:14).

(3) Effect on others. Your zeal hath provoked very many (2 Cor. 9:2).

(4) As to God. It is "a sacrifice, an odor of a sweet smell, acceptable, wellpleasing" (Phil. 4:18).

—Arthur E. Storrie.

HOW TO ADDRESS AN OPEN-AIR MEETING

I. As to the manner of open-air preaching. The preacher should be heard. He need not shout, but should produce his voice rightly and be clear in his articulation. He should be natural, avoiding the holy tone of voice, and a patronizing attitude, and be free from foolish ungainly mannerism.

He should preach without notes, mastering his subject beforehand. Hence it is desirable for speakers to be planned and thus have time to prepare. He should adapt himself to his audience. Christ was the greatest of all open-air preachers, and in this as in all else, He is our pattern. He spoke the mother-tongue of the common people. Do not denounce the crowd. Jesus never did. He always used the wooing note when addressing them, because they were as sheep without shepherd. Expose and denounce sin, but plead with the sinner. Let humor and pathos have more play than in the pulpit. Avoid everything funeral, get on good terms with your audience.

Co-operation is an advantage. The united service of two or three churches is far more arresting and impressive than separate services. It shows they have no sectarian object in view.

Continuity. Hold the service regularly at the same day, and hour and place.

II. As to the matter. All agree it must be the "old gospel," with its great key words, "Ruin by the Fall," "Redemption by Christ," "Regeneration by the Holy Ghost," but modern phrasing, illustration, and application, not politics, not social reform, and not controversy but sin and salvation. Testimony meetings have their place. Let the leader call the witnesses and sum up the evidence, and appeal for the verdict.

But I plead for the preaching of the gospel. It is not enough to tell a story and say, "Come to Jesus." The modern crowd is too intelligent to be won by that. If a preacher is gripping his audience, give him time to press home the truth. Honor the Word. Put the text at the end or the middle or the beginning, but give the Word.

In every address the way of salvation should be set forth—if only in a few sentences. Seek the unction of the Holy Spirit. He alone convicts of sin. Claim the fulness of the Spirit and wherever you stand forth and speak rely implicitly on Him.—J. Tolefree Parr, in Home Mission Worker.

THE BEREAVEMENT IN BETHANY

A Funeral Sermon Outline for a Christian Young Man

John 11:11

Introduction. Jesus always welcome i n the Bethany home. Mary may have heard Him preach and invited Him home, and thus the friendship may have been formed. First one to be notified of Lazarus' sickness.

I. The Departed Brother.

1. Young—"Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth."
2. Beloved—by Jesus, as also by the rich young ruler.
3. Christian—follower of Christ, many today are not.
4. Sleeping—no death for Christian (1 Thess. 4:13).
5. Living—one thing more certain than death—that is life. Never told in Bible to look for death, tomb open since Jesus left it—we can see through it, and may pass through it, but never stop there; a station, not a terminal.

II. The Bereaved Family.

1. Mystified—at delay of Jesus, at death of brother.
2. Tried—Job buried ten in one day, all for glory of God.
3. Satisfied—looking to Christ, dries tears.

III. The Living Christ—"Alive forevermore—Keys of death."

1. His coming—not when they thought—may have doubted it—a picture of His second coming for dead.
2. His call—to living: they need Him more than the dead; to sleeping—Lazarus, so no doubt of resurrection. Raised soon after death—short time compared with eternity when all be together again.

Conclusion. They learned to know Jesus better through the experience—so we know the Shepherd better after an experience of Psalm 23:4.

—D. Lauck Currens.

FORGIVENESS

The Foundation of It:—His Blood (Eph. 4:7).

The Author of It:—God (Eph. 4:32).

The Completeness of It:—All (Ps. 103:3).

The Proclamation of It:—Is preached (Acts 13:38).

The Reception of It:—All that believe (Acts 13:39).

The Certainty of It:—Are forgiven (1 John 2:12).

The Results of It:—Saved (Luke 7:50).

The Results of It:—Peace (Luke 7:50).

The Results of It:—Blessed (Ps. 32:1).

—Chas. Inglis.

GOD'S WILL FOR BETTY

An old woman, full of bustle and activity, was laid aside, and her friends wondered how she could possibly bear the inaction after constant restless service. When they asked about this, she replied, "When I was able to do it the Lord said, 'Betty, go here,' and 'Betty, go there,' but now He says, 'Betty, lie still and cough.' "—W. H. Griffith Thomas.

"If any little word of mine
Can make a life the brighter;
If any little song of mine
Can make a heart the lighter,
God help me speak that little word,
And take that bit of singing
And plant it in some lonely vale
To set the echoes ringing."

WASHINGTON AND RELIGIOUS OBLIGATIONS

From His Farewell Address to the People of the United States, Sept. 17, 1796

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism, who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and to cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked, where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principles.

"It is substantially true, that virtue, or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule, indeed, extends with more or less force to every species of free government. Who, that is a sincere friend to it, can look with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?"

Blind zeal, as a blind horse, may be full of mettle; but is ever and anon stumbling.—Selected.

Additions and subtractions are weeds which it is hard to keep out of the garden of conversation.—Spurgeon.

Doubtless this will be our everlasting adoration, that so rich a crown should fit the head of so vile a sinner.—Baxter.

"I will that where I am, they also may be with me." Let this utterance be our soul's pillow and bed of down.—Luther.

Whenever I act in my own will in anything, I am wronging God of His own title through the blood of Christ.—Darby.

Prayer is not eloquence but earnestness; not the definition of helpfulness, but the feeling of it; it is the cry of faith to the ear of mercy.—Hannah Moore.

It is not a little reforming that will save the man; no, nor all the morality in the world; nor the outward change of the life. They will not do, unless we are quickened by the Holy Spirit, and have a new life wrought within us.—Selected.

VISIONS AND DREAMS

One good vision is worth a hundred dreams. People are asleep when they dream dreams; and when they awake, behold, it is gone! It flashed in, it flashed out, and that was the end of it. Not so with a good vision! It is only wide-awake people who see visions. A vision lasts. It spurs us onward, upward. It gets into our heart and soul, lays hold on timidity, fear, doubt, hesitancy, procrastination; casts them overboard and clears the deck for action. A vision is worth paying for, and worth praying for.—John Benjamin Lawrence.

DOCKS GROW WHERE NETTLES GROW

A party of friends were having tea in the country. Along with them were several children, who, while their elders were finishing tea, played in the fields. While playing, a little girl fell into a bunch of nettles, with the result that both arms and legs began to smart because of the sting of the nettles. The child screamed with pain, when a lady of the party told the mother of the child to go to the very place where the child had fallen in the nettles and there she would find a "dock," which when applied to the rash would take away the pain. This was done, the dock was found just where the nettles grew. The lady afterwards remarked, "Isn't it strange that wherever there is a nettle there is always a dock?"

This I thought was not strange, but the purpose of God. For wherever the Devil has planted a "nettle" in life, God has always in the very same place planted a "dock." "Where sin abounded grace did much more abound."

PERFECT PEACE

Two painters were asked to paint a picture illustrating peace. The first painted a beautiful evening scene and in the foreground there was a lake, its surface absolutely calm and unruffled, trees surrounded it, meadows stretched away to the distant cattle gently browsing or lying down, a little thatched cottage, the setting sun, all spoke of perfect rest and quietness.

The second painter drew a wild, stormy scene. Heavy black clouds hung overhead, in the center of the picture an immense waterfall poured over huge volumes of water covered with foam. The bare rocks, the mighty torrent, the columns of spray all stood out in sharp relief. All the great forces of nature were at work. One could almost hear its unceasing roar, yet almost the first thing to strike the eye was a small bird, perched in a cleft of the great rock, absolutely sheltered from all around, pouring forth its sweet notes of joy.

This is what we should know, perfect peace in the storms of life, God's peace.

The Evangelistic Field

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.
Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

Evangelist Robert E. Johnson and party are now in a tent meeting in Greenville, S. C.

The Loes are in Crowell, Tex., with the Albert C. Fisher Evangelistic Party, in a union campaign with all the churches. From there they go to Dayton, Tex.

John Imrie, song leader, of Topeka, Kan., writes that a meeting was held at Bernie, Mo., with gracious results. The local pastor did the preaching. A tent meeting began May 27 at St. Joseph, Mo.

G. A. DeFlon reports: "In Sarcoxie, Mo., the Lord gave us about 112 conversions, and about 37 thus far united with the M. E. church and more will follow. The other churches were blessed by the meetings."

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald E. Bonney, singing evangelists, together with Evangelist Earle T. Favro, are doing summer work in the New England states. Their first campaign was a union meeting in Hyde Park. Vt.

"We are in the closing days of a gracious meeting here," writes Harry O. Anderson. "Our campaign at Tucson, Ariz. was a great victory for Christ and the church. There were 178 decisions for Christ and many consecrations."

The Bible Conference Tent of Norristown, Pa. will hold its second season July 1-29 with the following as speakers: Rev. R. A. Torrey, D. D., Rev. John McNeil D. D., Rev. W. Leon Tucker, D. D., Rev. J. W. Ham. For further information write to Rev. Will H. Houghton, Norristown, Pa.

Evangelist Wade H. House and party have just closed a very successful revival meeting in Nashville, Tenn. The meeting was conducted under the auspices of the Calvary Baptist Church and resulted in over one hundred conversions with the membership greatly revived.

Evangelist Robert L. Selle of Winfield, Kan., conducted a very successful campaign in Copan, Okla., during the month of April; another in First Methodist Church of Bristol, Tenn., in May. In June he held a series of meetings in Asheville, N. C. He will spend the summer in camp-meetings.

Rev. Harry C. Grimes begins a series of meetings in June at the Baptist church near Nebagamon, Wis. In July he will go to Lyman Lake, Wis., for a union meeting. He requests the prayers of the readers of the MOODY MONTHLY for these meetings.

John W. Erskine writes, "We have just closed at Ashton, Mich. (Bethel M. E. Church), where we had a good meeting and souls found Christ. The roads were not traversable at times, thus the crowds were not so large. Mr. Headley, the pastor, is loyal to the old Book and is a firm believer in the second coming of Christ."

After brief services in the Bible Rescue Mission, Chicago, Ill., and in the Brethren church in Minneapolis, Minn., the singing evangelist, T. L. Fretz, Philadelphia, Pa., is now conducting services in Lankim, N. Dak. The services, during the week are being held in a moving picture hall and on Sunday in the Presbyterian church.

Singing evangelist, Wm. S. Dixon, Wheaton, Ill., who is specializing as a "pastor's helper in evangelism," has had another busy, full season with campaigns in Keokuk, Iowa; Oakland City, Ind.; Galveston, Tex.; Valparaiso, Ind.; Carthage, Mo.; Paris, Ill.; Earlham, Iowa; Jefferson, Iowa; Harvey, Ill. He is now dating for spring and summer campaigns.

Rev. Samuel B. Goff reports: "I have attended the St. John's River Conference at Lake Worth, Fla., where I delivered a series of evangelistic addresses under the direction of Bishop E. G. Richardson. From the Conference I returned with Rev. E. L. Housley in the home mission boat. A series of evangelistic services were conducted in the South Bay in the everglades. This month I will conduct a campaign at Jacksonville, Fla."

The Fourth Congregational Church, of Oak Park, Ill., opened its fourth summer evangelistic campaign, June 3. The tent committee were very fortunate in securing many noted and scholarly men of God for the campaign. The speakers are as follows: Dr. A. C. Gaebelein; Rev. W. B. Riley, D. D.; Dr. Arthur H. Carter, of London, England, editor of the Bible Witness; Rev. J. C. Massee, D. D., of

Object Lessons for the Children

Do you wish to have the joy of winning the children? Try the "Gospel Seeing Truth Packet." Each packet contains the objects used and full directions. The moving pictures are training the children to use their eyes. These packets will do the same. In thinking over your children's work for the coming Fall and Winter keep in mind "The Seeing Truth Packet."

Send 10 cents for samples and circulars. Also the tract, "How to Preach to Children."

REV. C. H. WOOLSTON
1242 Marlboro Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Moody Bible Institute will conduct a Bible Conference at Lake Mendota, Madison, Wis., Aug. 5-12.

Tremont Temple, Boston; Rev. A. B. Winchester, D. D., of Toronto, Ont.; and Rev. L. W. Munhall, of Philadelphia, the eighty-one year old editor of the Eastern Methodist.

Recent union and single church revivals held by Floyd John Evans and party included a return date at White Cloud, Kan., campaigns at Hebron, Neb., Gravette, Iowa, and a tabernacle campaign at Little Rock, Ark. They reported twelve hundred conversions and many reconsecrations. They are now at Junction City, Kan., and are arranging to hold a number of tent meetings this summer.

John L. Meredith of the Central Y. M. C. A., Chicago, Ill., writes: "Rev. John Wesley Lee was with us for one week during the Easter season, giving a series of splendid messages which gripped the attention of our men and produced some splendid results. A great many accepted the Lord Jesus Christ. Mr. Lee's personality coupled with the strong virile gospel message which he always gives, makes him a valued speaker in our lobby meetings."

Robert McMurdo of Goodyear, Ariz., writes: "Over three weeks ago I started a 'Get Right With God' campaign in Chandler, Ariz., and I have never seen such opposition in all my life. I am making a specialty of personal evangelism, visiting the homes and pressing the claims of Christ. I received the idea of the 'Get Right With God' campaign from Dr. R. A. Torrey's use of it in his great world wide tour."

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Vinaroff, gospel musicians, helped the pastors of two churches during the month of May. The first part of the month was spent in two weeks meeting at Warren, O., where they were blessed with conversions almost every night. The last two weeks were spent with the U. B. church at Jefferson, Ind. Many are accepting Christ in this small town. Their next meeting is a return engagement with the First Baptist Church, Cleveland, Tenn.

H. W. Moore, in writing an appreciation, an explanation and a definition of the Sunshine Mission and Jim Goodheart, of Denver, Colo., says, "I have observed both for years and I do not hesitate to aver without qualification that this work has reached a degree of usefulness and spiritual power never before attained by it. In my judgment, the mission is without parallel in the entire United States.

"The genius of the work of Sunshine Mission is spiritual. It is operated on the conviction that there is such a thing as divine intervention and interposition in the life of any man or woman who seeks, from God, moral and spiritual regeneration.

"Mr. Goodheart belongs to us. He, himself was 'rebuilt' in Denver fifteen years ago. Thousands of people acclaim him as their dearest, earthly friend."

The Colegrove-Ketchum Evangelistic Party writes: "We are in the midst of a most glorious revival at Romulus, Mich., a suburb of Detroit. Many souls are accepting Christ, among whom are some of the most influential persons of the community. The meetings close May 27."

From here the party will go to a union tent campaign at Bronson, Mich. The party consists of Rev. W. S. Colegrove as evangelist, Albert Allen Ketchum, song director and soloist, and Theodore A. Piper, pianist and cornet soloist.

"With my party I have just closed a series of campaigns, four months of which were in Columbus, Ga., and one month in Phenix-Gariard, Ala. There were over 3,000 professions with the greatest moral and spiritual reformation ever known in these cities. Many of the leading city and county officials, with gamblers, bootleggers and murderers were converted. Phenix and Gariard, Ala., were known as two of the wettest towns in America, but due to this campaign the two city charters were abolished, and they consolidated under a new name known as Brandon, Ala.

"We are now in my home town, Gaffney, S. C., with a tent seating 5,000, and my party consists of Mr. L. G. Sumner, Mr. and Mrs. H. Evan McKinley, and Mr. J. C. Sisk."

The Vom Bruch Evangelistic Party of Chicago closed a successful three weeks meeting in Calvary Baptist Church, Des Moines, Iowa, Rev. H. O. Meyer, pastor. This was the second visit of this party to the same field. Several young people will enter schools to prepare themselves for definite Christian work and large numbers will attend the Winona Lake Bible Conference as a result of the meetings. A unique incident in the meetings occurred when two women were saved. The husband of one was so mad he returned the next night with a revolver to take the life of the evangelist. The husband of the other woman was so rejoiced he borrowed another's check book, wrote in the name of his own bank, made out a check for $100 and presented it to the evangelist even before his wife came out of the inquiry room, as an appreciation. This party reports a full year ahead and are at this writing engaged in a campaign in the Bethel Methodist Church of Irving Park, Chicago.

THE INTERNATIONAL UNION OF GOSPEL MISSIONS

By Mrs. Carl A. Montanus

The Tenth Annual Convention of the International Union of Gospel Missions which met in Minneapolis, Minn., May 20-24, proved to be one of the most uplifting, inspirational, and soul-saving conventions ever held in America, and proved most effective in the demonstration of the Spirit, and of power, that the gospel of Jesus Christ is still the power of God unto salvation; which not only reforms men, but transforms them by the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost.

CHARLIE D. TILLMAN, Atlanta, Ga.

The local committee of which Rev. W. E. Paul, superintendent of the Union City Mission acted as chairman, manifested admirable ability in arranging for the entertainment of delegates and guests. The capacious twelve-story St. James Hotel, which is operated in connection with the Mission, was thrown open for the free entertainment of Rescue Mission superintendents, and workers, including representatives from nearly every state in the Union, and Canada.

The introductory meeting on Saturday evening, May 19, was a glorious prelude to the spiritual feast which followed. Never before had so many pulpits been supplied in the Twin Cities by convention speakers as on Sunday, May 20, when 135 requests for speakers were complied with.

A unique feature, never before attempted, was the holding of a "clinic in regeneration" during the five evenings of the convention. No less than one hundred persons accepted Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour, and hundreds of church members re-dedicated their lives to the Master's service.

The regular evening session was held in the Westminster Presbyterian Church, while the "clinic" was conducted simultaneously at the Wesley M. E. Church, under the direction of Peter MacFarlane, superintendent of the Union Gospel Mission of St. Paul, and president of the Northwest district.

The "clinic" or "witness conference" consisted of five minute testimonies by "twice born" men, such as—John Calahan, of New York; "Lucky Baldwin" and Charles Langsman, of Chicago, Ill.; Fred Becker, Milwaukee, Wis.; F. K. Ward, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; C. C. Beatty, Duluth, Minn.; Ed. Clark, Buffalo, N. Y.; Peter Quartelle, Dayton, O., and others. Every testimony, as well as every discussion of the varied rescue mission problems rang true to the "old time religion."

Immediately following the "clinic" Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, with rare tact and ability summed up the testimonies, sounding forth the key note when he said, "Salvation through the atoning blood of Jesus Christ on Calvary is not only for the 'down and outer,' but it is the one and only way of salvation for the 'up and outer.'"

The Moody Bible Institute was represented by Rev. C. A. Montanus, field representative, who rejoiced to find a large delegation of former Institute students in attendance, all of whom are engaged in Christian work, rendering valuable service, in many difficult fields, among which were: Mr. and Mrs. Hinkin, of the City Rescue Mission, Muskegon, Mich.; Miss Della Good-

Gore, former Correspondent student, City Rescue Mission, Philadelphia, Penn.; Fred Meuser, former Correspondent student, City Gospel Mission, St. Paul; Rev. and Mrs. Bob Moyer, Minneapolis, Minn.; Rev. H. M. Racer, Union Gospel Mission, St. Paul; W. C. Cole, 17, of the Cottage Grove Ave. branch of the Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago; Miss Auleen Rhoades, of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago; Rev. W. L. Porter, president, and Miss Sarah Seaborn, secretary of the Minneapolis Alumni.

The music under the able leadership of Peter Quartelle, of Dayton, O., consisted of a revival of the old time gospel hymns. Rev. W. E. Paul of Minneapolis was elected president of the Union for the ensuing year, and New York was chosen as the place of the next annual meeting.

THE C. M. S. SHOWING CLEAVAGE

A great organization of the Church of England, the Church Missionary Society, has been passing through troublous experiences recently. This society has been the organization through which the evangelicals of the Church of England have expressed their missionary passion. Recently a sermon alleged to be modernist, which was an attempt to answer the questions of Chinese students about Old Testament difficulties, was preached in Hongkong. This caused some of the officers and members of the society to believe that there was a departure from former loyalty to the inspiration of the Holy Scripture. Notwithstanding attempts to satisfy these men they have now formed an organization to be known as the Bible Churchmen's Missionary Society—The Christian Century.

July 1 (Sunday). Isaiah 40:1-8.

"The glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together." The first part of this promise was fulfilled when Jesus our Saviour came to earth; the second part is still waiting. In Jesus, as the brightness of the Father's glory, are made known the strength and the beauty, the love and the graciousness, the majesty and the wisdom, of the Godhead. But that all flesh do not see it together is quite evidently true. Is Jesus to you not merely one who has the value of God; nor merely one through whom God speaks and acts; nor one of many in whom the life of God in some mysterious manner flows; but is He to you both Lord and God? If He is, the prophecy is fulfilled in you.

July 2 (Monday). Luke 1:26-38.

"Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word." The Scripture has relatively little to say about Mary the mother of Jesus. Therefore let us beware of using unfounded imaginings to supply what sacred history omits. We may take our text nevertheless as the keynote of Mary's character: resignation to the will of God. Take your Bible; read attentively each mention of Mary, and you will find this trait in the forefront. What a beautiful character it makes. With it as the dominant one, that great composer, the Holy Spirit, can build celestial harmonies. Resignation to the will of God is the secret of peace and of strength, for to repose in the will of God is perfect rest; to work with the will of God is never failing power.

July 3 (Tuesday). Matthew 1:18-25.

"And they shall call his name Emmanuel. . . ." This is a quotation from Isaiah applied by Matthew to Jesus. The name Emmanuel exactly fits our Lord because it means "God with us," and that is the supreme truth manifested by the birth of Jesus Christ. For He was not merely the culmination of the human race, but something far greater and more glorious; God Himself with us. Have we aspirations after a more noble life? Our aspiration will not prove vain for in Christ our helper God is with us. Do we fear the coming years and what they may bring? Have courage; the Lord Jesus will not leave us; God is with us—Emmanuel.

July 4 (Wednesday). Luke 2:1-7.

"There was no room for them in the inn." This fact does not imply any intentional inhospitality. Most of the Jews then resident in Palestine were of Judah or Benjamin, and therefore at this time of the census all the towns and village of Judah would be full of visitors. The ordinary accommodations would soon be exhausted, and hence when the infant Saviour and His mother had the stall for their lodging place and the manger for a cradle, they were probably two of many who were crowded out of the traveler's usual resting place. But has not this happened many times to the Saviour? He is crowded out of not a few lives, not because people really dislike Him nor intentionally drive Him away, but other things, occupations, engagements, circumstances, and what not, simply leave Him no room to occupy within the life.

July 5 (Thursday). Luke 2:41-52.

"But they, supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's journey." Mary and Joseph went a day's journey on supposition only to find out that they were wrong and that they had to retrace their path. Many, whom we know, seem to be going their life's journey on mere supposition. "Is Providence guiding you?" we ask. "I suppose so," is the answer. "Is Jesus the Saviour whom you have taken?" "I suppose so," is the reply. "Do you think that God answers prayer?" "I suppose that He does." But why not pass from indecision to certainty? Mary and Joseph could have made sure by a little inquiry and investigation. We can say with Paul, "I know whom I have believed."

July 6 (Friday). John 2:1-11.

"Jesus saith unto them, Fill the waterpots with water, And they filled them up to the brim." Whenever the Lord was going to bless, He usually gave a command. "Go, wash in the pool of Siloam," He said to the blind man, and the sight returned when the command was obeyed. "Stretch forth thy hand," He said to the man with the withered hand, and when the order was executed, the hand was healed. But we are too fond of desiring the blessings and neglecting the commands. We want salvation, but we overlook the command, "Believe on me." We want forgiveness, and yet seemingly are unaware that Jesus said, "Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven." We labor hard and are often heavy laden, and we long so much for rest, but strangely enough we seem unaware that Jesus said, "Come unto me."

July 7 (Saturday). John 19:25-30.

"Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother. And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home." Our Lord was suffering greatly at this moment, and yet He provided for His mother by giving her into the care of the beloved disciple. As He did so He uttered words of the tenderest meaning. Our Saviour has a concern for our temporal as well as for our eternal interests, for even on the cross when He was expiating the world's sin, He yet comforted His mother. Do you think that His care is any less for those who do the will of the Father in heaven and whom He calls brother and sister and mother?

July 8 (Sunday). Luke 1:46-55.

"For, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed." The reason for this blessedness is that fact confessed by the church when in reciting the creed it says, "Born of the Virgin Mary." This fact results in both temporal and spiritual blessings. For no civilization has ever risen higher than the level on which it places its womanhood, and when a woman became the mother of the Son of God, the fact like a hidden leaven went out to make the life of men and women and children purer and gentler and happier. But beyond this is the inspiring thought that here we do not have the old humanity renewing itself in handing on to yet another child of man the old life, but a new creative act of God whereby God Himself has entered our life to make a renewed humanity?

July 9 (Monday). Matthew 16:13-18

"Upon this rock I will build my church." We believe that in these words our Lord asserts that two things are needed to build a church: a divine Redeemer and a believing soul. Nevertheless there have been, yesterday and today, not a few who assert that a church, or something equally as good or even better, can be built upon a human Jesus who uttered lofty words and lived an exemplary life, and upon an admiring soul who will reiterate the words and try to emulate the example. But this human Jesus is not the divine Redeemer of Scripture, nor is admiration any substitute for faith. For man cannot be saved by emotion alone any more than human power can build an undying institution.

July 10 (Tuesday). John 1:35-42.

"We have found the Messias." Although we are frequently advised "to defend the faith" it may yet be argued that it is usually better to "commend" the faith. To defend the faith when it needs defense requires resources of wit and wisdom, of training and experience, that most of us lack; but to commend the faith requires an experience of fellowship with Jesus Christ plus an earnest desire to witness to what we have personally felt, and this is within the reach of even the humblest believer. "We have found the Messias," said Andrew, and in so saying he commended the faith so earnestly that his brother Simon came to share what had been found. Have you beheld the Lamb of God that takes away the world's sin? Have you accepted His invitation to come and see?

July 11 (Wednesday). Matthew 4:18-22

"Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." Notice the future tense. One does not become an expert fisher of men all at once. Training is necessary, and as the pronoun "I" indicates, Jesus alone can impart that training. To be sure, we may learn foreign languages from human teachers, and theology, and psychology and sociology and what ever else an educated worker finds it advantageous to know; but to catch men for Christ demands other qualities than learning. Sympathy with all men, since Christianity is for all; an eye for spiritual values, since Christianity is far removed from materialism; self-sacrifice, since Christianity is founded on the cross of Jesus.

The Moody Bible Institute will conduct a Bible Conference at Cedar Lake, Ind., July 29-August 12.

July 12 (Thursday). Luke 5:1-11.

"Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught." Said the wife of my fisherman friend one day at the shore, "There haint no more fish; them pounds has spoilt it all." "The churches ain't what they were when I was young," said my farmer friend. "The folks that are buyin' up the farms, ain't the sort of people that make a church." "I don't know what's going to become of this church," said my city friend. "We lost twelve families last year, and the Italians and Negroes who are filling up the neighborhood don't help our church one bit." Perhaps these assertions sound familiar to you, but listen to Jesus. "Launch out," He says, "let down your nets." But that is the last thing that the speakers above seem anxious to do.

July 13 (Friday). Luke 22:54-62.

"And he denied him saying, Woman, I know him not." Peter's fall astonishes us. How could the man who rushed up and pledged himself to follow Christ; the man who discovered in Jesus the promised Messiah; he who alone of the disciples tried to defend his Master against the enemy—how could he, we ask, have ever said, "I don't know Him"? Does this not show that human character is a very complex thing? In it there are depths we cannot fathom, and possibilities we do not suspect. This was true of Peter; it is true of us. When the test comes, will we stand? Who knows? There is but one way of safety. Let us get where Jesus can look at us.

July 14 (Saturday). John 21:15-22.

"Follow me." The experience through which Peter had passed, had taken from him the braggart, forward spirit and left in its place humility. The old pride, passion, and irritability were gone, and in their place had come meekness and contrition. These were signs that Peter was now fit for the life-calling that Jesus had planned for him. As Dr. Bruce well says, "A life on the ocean wave, a life in the woods, a life in the mountains or in the clouds, may be fine to dream and sing of, but the only life out of which genuine heroism and poetry come is spent on this solid prosaic earth in the lowly work of doing good." This was the life that Peter was to live from now on; the life to which Jesus restored him as our reading narrates.

July 15 (Sunday). 1 Peter 2:1-10.

"Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house . . ." Apparently many persons do not find it easy to take the "corporate" view of the Christian life emphasized here. Like Peter in the days before the Lord restored him to his place, these persons regard everything from the selfish, individual point of view. It is a matter of church attendance, church work, church giving—their own personal convenience or pleasure come first. It is a day of discussion and decision—their foremost thought is how it will affect them personally. But would it not be better to do what Peter advises here, consider the matter from the standpoint of the entire household built upon Christ the cornerstone?

July 16 (Monday). Mark 1:16-20.

"And straightway he called them: and they left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him." Here is a good illustration of the manner in which the act of following acquired its figurative meaning. To follow Jesus signified originally to go away after Him; but since, as here in the case of James and John, the going away implied something else, to follow Jesus came to mean discipleship. Now, even although our following Jesus is not physical action, but spiritual adherence, we may still learn many things about the latter by reflecting on the former. The disciple must follow close on Christ; follow no matter where He leads; keep Him always in view; and if you would follow on to know the Lord, you must never substitute your imagination for the real Jesus.

July 17 (Tuesday). Mattew 17:1-8.

"And lifting up their eyes they saw no man save Jesus only." Their wonderful experience was over. Moses, the man who had saved the nation from polytheism and whose law-giving had been woven into the social fabric, had disappeared. Elijah, the founder of the great company of the prophets, had faded away. The Christ of the shining robes, glorious and full of heavenly majesty, had vanished. The gray morning was coming chill across the bleak hills, and the little breezes, companions to the dawn, made them shiver. Down below in the mist and the haze was man's world with its sins and its sorrows, its sickness and pain, its anxiety and need. But He was still with them—Jesus only—with His cheery voice and His sweet smile; His loving heart and His helping hand.

July 18 (Wednesday). Luke 9:49-56.

"And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us." "Tolerance raises many perplexing questions. No one cares to be intolerant, but on the other hand is there not danger of denial of the truth if the church becomes as a forceful phrase-maker puts it, "a total-toleration society"? Our text gives us a test by which Christ's disciples are to try others: if it cannot be seen that they are against Christ's cause, they are to be considered for it. But suppose that we see that they are against Christ's cause; what then? Are we to burn, torture, compel, threaten? Or, if these are too medieval, are we to substitute the politer modern equivalents?

July 19 (Thursday). John 13:21-30.

"Whom Jesus loved." This designation is applied to John five times in this Gospel. It does not imply that Jesus loved John to the exclusion of the other disciples, for the love of Jesus is, like the love of the Father in heaven, universal love. It does imply that Jesus expressed His love for John in a more noticeable way than He was able to do in War—Famine—Pestilence. These words in all their ugly significance characterize the Near East. Thousands of these people are in exile and have lost their Bibles. They are in sore need. Famine for the Word of God is greater than the famine for bread. One half-naked woman said, "Thank God I was able to keep my Testament and it kept my soul strong."

the case of the others, for a reason that is not difficult to understand. The expression of love becomes more and more manifest, the more its object is lovable and the less the object thwarts love. In John the love of Jesus found a lovable object. Therefore if we would increasingly enjoy the acknowledgement of our Lord's love, we must daily try to become "lovable" by our Lord.

July 20 (Friday). Acts 4:13-22.

"When they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marveled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus." The word translated "boldness" means more exactly free and frank utterance, or speech that goes straight and incisively to the point with no reservations or circumlocutions. When common and untrained men are in a tight place and in danger of life or liberty, they are not, especially in the Orient, apt to speak as did Peter and John on this occasion. This was the Lord's manner of speech, a manner that He can impart to all who stay in His company. For Jesus not only gives us much to tell, but also the way to tell it.

July 21 (Saturday). Revelation 1:1-11.

"Blessed is he that readeth and they that hear the words of the prophecy, and keep these things that are written therein." "Words quite similar to these are also found at the end of the book (22:6, 7). Again the importance of a diligent study of this much neglected portion of the Word is still further, and most strongly, accentuated by the seven times repeated exhortation, 'He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches.' This refers not alone to the special and individual messages to the seven churches which are found in chapters 2 and 3, but also to the contents of the whole book; for the Apocalypse, as a whole, was to be sent to all of the seven churches (1:11)."—Willis W. Mead.

July 22 (Sunday). 1 John 4:11-21.

"This commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God love his brother also." The true Christian life must combine two tendencies which unfortunately enough are often separated. One is the love for God that detaches us from the world and lifts us to the dwelling of the Father of our spirits. The other is the love for man that attaches us to earthly things, because it is only by means of these earthly things—the cup and the loaf, the house and the garment, the water and the fire, the medicine and the instrument—that we can perform love's ministry to our brothers. Alone of the religions of earth Christianity in obedience to the Lord's command has always tried to combine these two directions.

July 23 (Monday). Matthew 9:9-13.

"A man named Matthew sitting at the receipt of custom." Matthew being a tax gatherer, belonged to a class whom the Jews particularly hated because, apart from the abuses that tax gatherers too often perpetrated, their presence was a visible proof of the degraded and abject state of the nation. Tax gathering, therefore, while a lucrative business, was one that only the lowest would accept. Nevertheless Jesus added a tax gatherer to the noble company of the apostles. Does not this show that a man need not change his business before Christ will call him, although there is doubtless many a business which a man would have to change after Christ has called him?

July 24 (Tuesday). Luke 5:27-32.

"And Levi made him a feast in his own house: and there was a great company of publicans and others that sat down with them." The Christian way of life is a social way, and that is why the Christian does not shun society. Matthew had no intention of going to heaven alone, and therefore makes a feast in honor of Jesus. The company who gathered were not the cultured and respectable representatives of the first families of Capernaum, who would not have demeaned themselves to accept the invitation had it been given them, but social outcasts like the host. But what of that? Did not Jesus come to call not the righteous but sinners? Should not all "social" effort aim at bringing the sinner into direct contact with the Saviour?

July 25 (Wednesday). Luke 18:9-14.

"Two men went up into the temple to pray. . . ." Yes; both went up intending to pray, but only one prayer was offered; the Pharisee really did not pray. He asked God for nothing because his present condition seemed to him so good that he felt no need. He gave no thanks, and while he used God's name in the address, he was really thinking not about God but about himself. But the Publican offered a real prayer. He asked God for mercy; he felt his own need as a sinner; he did not adopt any familiar attitude toward God. For prayer self-humiliation is a much better attitude than self-satisfaction. The latter really makes prayer impossible; the former opens the gateway to grace.

July 26 (Thursday). Luke 15:1-10.

"There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." The joy of the angels must be very exalted, very sincere, very lovely, and the repentant sinner evokes such joy. What is a sinner worth? "Nothing," said the Pharisees. "There is joy before God when those who provoke Him perish from the earth." This answer does not agree with the parables of our reading. They teach us to regard a sinner as a possible subject of salvation and to treat him as such. This would mean not merely to blame him, although he deserves blame; not merely to punish him, although that is his desert; not merely to despise and to spurn and to shun, although all these are what sin naturally provokes; but to make the effort to save him.

July 27 (Friday). Matthew 16:21-28.

"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." Learn from this text the conditions of discipleship. First is willingness, because discipleship demands "thinking out" decision, definite commitment. Second, is following Jesus along a road that in self-denial and cross-

The Moody Bible Institute will conduct a Bible Conference at Ocean City, N. J., August 9-19.

bearing will prove wonderfully similar to the earthly path He Himself trod. As we go along after the Master we shall find many who in sin and sorrow wait to hear from us the good tidings of life and hope; temples to be cleansed of all that defiles; Gethsemanes and Calvarys where the enemy of souls will assault our very inmost soul; graves where we shall bury away our hopes; and Easter Days on which we shall find them again.

July 28 (Saturday). Matthew 13:44-52.

"Therefore every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old." The Saviour assumes that in His kingdom as it exists on earth there will be those who will devote themselves to sacred letters, and he would have them guard against the mistake of age and the mistake of youth. Age faces the past and treasures the old; youth faces the future and worships the new. Age runs the danger of a stagnation that ends in death; youth of an unsettlement that results in ruin. The Master tells us in our text that the old and the new belong together and must not be separated. Therefore we should be both progressive and conservative.

July 29 (Sunday). Isaiah 55:1-7.

"Buy wine and milk without money and without price." Some things money, in spite of the vastness of its power, cannot buy. It cannot buy the companionship of God, nor the forgiveness of sins. It cannot buy peace from an accusing conscience, nor the love for which many hearts yearn. Goodness, kindness, loyalty, tenderness, purity, strength, and compassion are also among the things that are not marketable commodities, because inconvertible into any medium of exchange. They are very necessary, nevertheless, and it is well to notice that Isaiah puts them under the wine and milk of the kingdom of God which He is willing to bestow on any who are willing to accept them and obey Him.

July 30 (Monday). Luke 8:1-3.

"Which ministered to him of their substance." Luke tells us in this passage what no other evangelist mentions, how Jesus and His disciples lived when they were not being entertained by hospitable persons. The common purse was kept supplied by the generosity of pious women, a form of piety that was by no means rare, for we know that women sometimes contributed largely toward the support of Jewish Rabbis. Note that Mary Magdalene is mentioned among these generous helpers of the apostolic company, but let us remember her for this and dissociate her name from the traditions concerning her character for which the Scriptures give no basis. She was not "the woman who was a sinner" mentioned in the preceding chapter.

July 31 (Tuesday). Matthew 27:54-56.

"And many women were there beholding afar off." Dr. Stalker very beautifully calls our attention to the three groups around the cross—the soldiers with their apathy; the Sanhedrim with their antipathy; and the women with their loving sympathy—and then inquires very pertinently whether it has ever occured to us to ask in which group we would have been if we had been there. This is a searching question. It is easy now to say which were right and which were wrong, for the matter is now history. It is not so easy to pass judgment on the present causes with which the living Christ identifies Himself. There are such causes and they still meet with these three kinds of treatment: apathy, antipathy, sympathy. Where do you stand?

Captain Pluck, by Isla May Mullins.

The story of a real boy's life, told with a a desire to inspire boys to wholesome living, and containing elements that tend to success.

235 pages. 7½x5 inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. $1.50.

G. S.

The House of the Lord's Prayer, by Amos R. Wells.

This is a series of eight meditations upon the Lord's prayer under the figure of a house. The entrance, fire place, windows, living room, dining room, bed room, kitchen and library are suggested by different clauses of the prayer. It is a very fitting book as a gift to a friend.

70 pages. 7x5 inches. Westminster Press, Chicago. 40 cents.

P. B. F.

The Realism of Jesus, by Prof. J. Alexander Findlay, M. A.

This book is a "paraphrase and exposition of the Sermon on the Mount." It abounds in vigorous and independent interpretation, and is stimulating reading. Except for repeated slurring references to the Bible as an infallible book, we might give it our most hearty endorsement.

240 pages. 7¾x5¼ inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. $2.00 net.

G. S.

The Unseen Leadership, by F. Herbert Stead, M. A.

The author's name is a guaranty of the literary qualities of this unusual book. It is the story of a life that received convincing proof of the reality of the living Lord and how He frequently revealed His plans to Mr. Stead. His remarkable experiences of divine leadership are a good corrector of doubt in these confusing times.

192 pages. 7¼x5 inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. $1.75.

Building a Country Sunday School, by E. L. Middleton.

The author provides statistics to indicate that our preachers and church leaders are largely recruited from the country districts, despite the fact that our urban is now larger than our rural population. Under these circumstances there is a definite challenge to country churches to make adequate provision for the best religious instruction and training. The simplicity of this book will make it attractive to every worker who is endeavoring to adapt modern methods of education to the limited resources of the country Sunday-school.

159 pages. 7½x5 inches. Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago and New York. $1.25.

Teen-Age Tangles, by Mrs. Leora M. Blanchard.

The authoress, who is known from her former book, The Intermediate Girl, has presented this supplement for the older pupil, which will be especially appreciated by those who are teaching the girls in the senior department of our Sunday-schools. It grapples fearlessly with the real social problem and the true stories told are from actual life.

172 pages. 7¼x5 inches. The Union Press, Philadelphia, Pa. $1.25.

C. H. B.

The Deity of Christ, by Robert E. Speer.

This is a new edition of Dr. Speer's book which was published some time ago. We rejoice to know that the publishers have brought out this new edition. It is exceedingly important at this time that sound views as to the person of Christ should be set forth. The author's reputation will win many readers for the book.

64 pages. 6x3½ inches. Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago and New York. 35 cents.

The Seven "V" Papers, by Seven Well-known Writers.

This book contains seven papers formerly printed in The Witness, a journal devoted to the defense of the fundamentals of the faith. They declare the virgin birth, the victorious life, the vicarious sacrifice, the victorious resurrection, the veritable presence, the valid advocacy and the verity of the coming of our Lord. It is a pleasure to commend this book.

123 pages. 7x5 inches. Pickering and Inglis, Glasgow and London. 1s. 9d.

The Shepherd Prince, by Abraham Mapu, translated by Benjamin A. M. Schapiro.

In this translation by Mr. Schapiro of a masterpiece of modern Jewish literature, we have that rare production, a book one will wish to read many times. It is written with an insight of customs and traditions that is only possible when an author writes of his own people and has been faithfully and vividly reproduced in the English. One feels as if he were living in the time of the prophet Isaiah-ben-Amos, one of these people rather than a reader. The intense situations and fascinating romance will appeal to the popular reader as the historical background does to the student, while the exquisite language cannot but charm all.

380 pages. 7¾x5¼ inches. 83 Bible House, Astor Place, New York. $2.50.

C. H. B.

The Jew and His Mission, by Henry Ostrom.

Since the Jew is omnipresent he is always and everywhere a problem of present interest. His past history and his present prominence demand solution. What is he here for? Whither is he going? How shall we reckon with him? What are God's purposes for him? These and other questions you will find answered in this carefully written book. The book is one of great interest and value.

The Business of Living, by Rev. L. D. Anderson.

This volume of sermons upon practical themes, while not strictly "gospel sermons," have a scriptural background. They have the special value also of being unified under a five-old outline of the title of the book. Part I is about "Life Capital"; Part II is about "Life Conservation"; Part III deals with "Life Investments"; Part IV with "Life Mortgages," and Part V with "Life Trial Balance." All are interesting and wholesome.

The Language of Nature, by Theodore Mead.

There is a language of nature which can be understood if we are willing to give ourselves to a careful study of the works of God. The author has brought out many interesting facts from the observations of the honey bee and other nature studies. It is his purpose to make a spiritual application in most instances, and while we do not accept his method as a means of interpreting all Scripture, there are many helpful truths that have been brought out in this interesting study.

A Year in John's Gospel, by Anna Richardson Kennedy.

This is a series of devotional studies in this Gospel for every day of the year. The author chose this book for devotional meditations because it so peculiarly centers upon the person and work of Christ. Since Christ is the source of life and the bread of life, the hungry soul not only finds Him as the source of its life but its sustenance as well. Through meditation upon this precious Gospel, Christ will be assimilated into our spiritual natures. The advantage of this book over others of its kind is that the Scripture passages cover the entire Gospel

Church and Sunday-school Publicity, by Herbert H. Smith.

This volume on church publicity by the Associate Director of the Department of Publicity in the Presbyterian church, U. S. A., will be helpful to pastors and publicity chairmen. Aside from some practical suggestions for using the daily papers, twenty-six other methods of publicity are mentioned with illustrations of a variety of advertisements. It is a book that every pastor and Sunday-school superintendent could read to advantage as its perusal cannot fail to lead to a better understanding between the church and the press.

And Today, by Mabel Johnston Camp.

This booklet deserves a wide reading. It records the remarkable personal experiences of the author which were granted in connection with the healing of her body. Jesus Christ is the same today. She wisely cautions any from seeking a similar vision of Christ, nor is she expecting to receive a repetition of it for herself. Nevertheless her experience is an incentive to greater faith in the present power of Christ. The booklet also contains three of this author's well-known hymns.

Sermons in Stories, by Rev. Henry T. Sell, D. D.

Dr. Sell is well known from his Ten Books of Bible Study, and now has manifested a gift for presenting the Bible in story form. These sixty-four brief, pithy addresses were first used for the benefit of the boys and girls of his own Sunday-school and formed as part of the regular Sunday morning service of his church. As some of the sermons have been adapted for special occasions like Christmas, New Year's, and Mother's Day, the book will be found useful the year around.

Money Talks, by Rev. Albert F. McGarrah.

Next to Mr. Babson, probably no man has done as much as Mr. McGarrah to introduce business methods into the management of the church. His books on church organization and management as well as finance, have been very valuable in increasing the general efficiency of the church. The nine stimulating studies of his latest book will be found very helpful, not only for the promotion of stewardship but also for the carrying on of a program of enlistment in the conducting of an every member canvass.

The Sunday School at Work in Town and Country, by William Mouzon Brabham.

Another excellent book has been prepared for the organization of the small Sunday-school. Some of the most valuable contributions are the illustrations and diagrams which plainly indicate how the one-room church building may be fitted up into a modern department Sunday-school. Having solved this important problem, the author gives some valuable information regarding the fundamentals of child study, pedagogy, Sunday-school organization and grading. The chapters on reaching and holding a membership, and upon building up the school's leadership will be especially helpful.

The Measure of a Man, William A. Shedd, of Persia, by Mary Lewis Shedd.

This is the biography of a great modern missionary hero, written by his widow. Dr. Shedd was born in Persia of distinguished missionary parents, and thus knew the land and people like a native. Realizing the clear call of God, he returned to Persia after completing his college and seminary training, and gave thirty years of highest service to that land. Few missionaries have had the capacity for such a many-sided ministry, or have had such a multitude of heavy responsibilities thrust upon them as he. He was at once evangelist, pastor, theological professor, educator, translator, supervisor and business man of affairs.

When the World War came on he and his fellow-missionaries at Urumia were thrown into an entangled and serious situation, and upon Dr. Shedd as the recognized leader devolved new duties of the most delicate and complicated nature. He became adviser to the Persian authorities, and later also American Vice-Consul, positions involving dealings with subtle Turkish, Kurdish, Russian and Persian diplomats and military leaders. Upon his shoulders largely rested the awful task of holding unscrupulous and antagonistic forces in check, defending whole communities of Armenian and Syrian Christians from massacre, and succoring and feeding many thousands of helpless refugees.

What that little band of missionaries went through for over three years is well-nigh indescribable. The climax came when 15,000 Christians were obliged to flee pell-mell from Urumia before the murderous Turks. Dr. and Mrs. Shedd accompanied them, and when, after a prolonged and desperate running fight, the exhausted survivors had almost reached a British camp, Dr. Shedd, their beloved leader and protector suddenly sickened with cholera and died. His remains had hastily to be buried by the roadside in the darkness of the night. Thus literally did he lay down his life for the nation he had served so long and well.

The Revolt Against Civilization, by Lothrop Stoddard.

This book follows two others by the same author, namely, The Rising Tide of Color, and The New World of Islam. But it does not compare favorably with the earlier books. Its line of argument while ingenious is far from convincing. Mr. Stoddard divides society into superior and inferior strains, and affirms that the former for certain reasons is diminishing, while the latter is steadily increasing. The "under-man," unable to cope with the complexity of civilization, revolts against it. The whole argument is based upon the biological theory that heredity absolutely controls the development of human beings, unaffected by environment, education, etc. The children of the inferior man will invariably be as inferior as he. Present-day Socialism, Bolshevism, and kindred movements are explained upon the author's theory. The only hope for the race is in eugenics.

Admitting the importance of the physical basis of life and the need of more attention being given to this feature, we cannot fully agree with Mr. Stoddard either in his premise or in his pessimistic conclusions, which if true would make all philanthropy, social service, and missionary work worse than useless. It is indeed surprising that a man of such intelligence should apparently ignore altogether the overwhelming evidence of complete transformation of character and life wrought in men of every land and race, overcoming heredity and environment and lifting them to a distinctly higher level. All reckoning which leaves out divine power and spiritual forces is deceptive and is bound to lead to false and disappointing conclusions.

ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT OF MEN

The accompanying photo will introduce to present and former students of the Institute, the Rev. W. Taylor Joyce, who has accepted a call to become Assistant Superintendent of Men. He is Philadelphia born, and of Quaker descent on his father's side, but was converted in a tent evangelistic meeting conducted by Dr. Munhall in 1898.

Rev. W. Taylor Joyce

Becoming at once actively interested in Christian work, Mr. Joyce entered the Reformed Episcopal Seminary as soon as his preparatory studies permitted, graduating in 1908 and accepting a call as assistant to the late Bishop Samuel Fallows, D. D., of this city. Two years later he became a member of the Presbytery of Chicago, having been called to the pastorate of Bethany Presbyterian Church, which he served for six years, resigning to engage in evangelistic work.

During the war, Mr. Joyce went overseas to engage in Y. M. C. A. work, and on his return in 1919 continued in that service.

His experience in this field as well as in other forms of religious and evangelistic work among young men in this city, has led the Institute to believe that he is peculiarly fitted for the requirements of this office.

NEW PLANS FOR THE EVENING CLASSES

Rev. Mr. Schaffer, the beloved and much appreciated Director of the Evening Classes has felt the work too heavy a responsibility in connection with the Superintendent's office, and has resigned, to be succeeded by Rev. Dr. Fitzwater, who is taking hold of it zealously.

Three features are being pushed beginning with the Fall Term:

1. Equivalency of the work with that of the Day Classes for those who are desirous and able to undertake it, qualifying them for the Institute diploma.
2. A shorter course of three years in preparation for service in local churches, entitling its graduates to the Institute certificate.
3. The revival of the popular weekly Union Bible Class, so strong a feature of the Institute life and work in former years, which will include an hour of synthetic Bible study and another for the Sunday-school lesson. To these will be added also a chorus-choir class in sight reading and related subjects.

The prospects are for a great broadening and quickening of interest in this part of our work.

James M. Gray.

MISS CHARLOTTE A. CARY

The Executive Committee, acting for the Board of Trustees, has expressed the appreciation of the Institute for the long and valuable service of Miss Cary by conferring on her the title of Honorary Superintendent of Women. Her work in the future will be to represent the Educational Department in the strengthening of the bonds existing between the Institute and its alumnae, both by personal visitation and correspondence. It is possible also that a little later she may become responsible for a department in THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY dealing with the spiritual problems of women, for which she has become so well qualified by her former experience in the Superintendent's office.

James M. Gray.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

Rev. George E. Guille conducted the Fourth Annual Conference at the Moravian Church, Watertown, Wis., June 17-24. He is on the program of the Eagles Mere Bible Conference, July 6-15; also on that of the Erie-side Bible Conference, July 20-26.

Dr. J. E. Conant is enjoying his vacation.

Miss Elinor Stafford Millar filled an engagement at St. Louis under the auspices of the Southern Presbyterian Women's Association and the Y. W. C. A. On June 4 she sailed from Vancouver for Australia, where she will represent the Institute. In addition to other service, she will go on a speaking tour in the interests of the Laymen's Christian Association of which her brother, the late A. B. Millar, was president.

Dr. Henry Ostrom held meetings in DuBois, Pa., at the call of the local Bible Conference Association. He spoke at a Bible conference at the Salem Norwegian Free Church of Minneapolis, and at the Union Gospel Mission of St. Paul. This was followed by an engagement at Otter Tail Lake, Minn., under the auspices of the Otter Tail Lake Bible Conference, June 17-24.

Following his engagement with the Methodist Protestant Church of Dalton, O., Mr. C. E. Putnam conducted evangelistic meetings in the West End Mission of Cambridge, O.

Rev. J. A. Sutherland worked under the direction of the Billy Sunday Club at Spartanburg, S. C., covering a schedule of surrounding towns.

Miss Virginia C. Williams is scheduled to teach the Bible at the Women's and Girl's Institute of the Erieside Bible Conference, July 7-15.

MR. BIRNBAUM WELCOMED

A reception was tendered Rev. Solomon Birnbaum of the Institute Faculty by the Hebrew Christian Fellowship Circle of Chicago at Marcy Center, Friday evening, May 18. A company of about 150 people were present, two-thirds of whom were Hebrew Christians. Rev. A. J. Kligerman, the president of the Circle, and Mr. L. Bolotin, the secretary, delivered addresses of welcome. These were followed by stirring and friendly messages from Rev. C. P. Meeker, superintendent of the Chicago Hebrew Mission, Mr. Norman H. Camp, Mr. Meeker's predecessor, Rev. L. W. Gosnell, Assistant Dean of the Institute, and Mr. Birnbaum, guest of honor of the evening.

The key note of the gathering was praise and thanksgiving. The establishment of the chair of Jewish Missions and the call of a Hebrew Christian teacher to occupy it was greeted as the beginning of a new era of understanding and good will between Jew and Gentile. The meeting was an inspiration to all who are interested in Jewish mission work not only because of the optimistic tone of the addresses but also because of the enthusiasm created by such a large assembly of Hebrew Christians.

THE OPENING SESSION OF THE SUMMER CONFERENCES

The opening address for the Eagles Mere Conference will be Friday, July 6, at 7:30, when Rev. George E. Guille will speak on the "Ruin and Renovation of Creation."

Dr. James M. Gray has been selected to open both the Cedar Lake and the Lake Mendota Conferences with the interesting subject, "Why We Believe the Bible Will Stand." The opening session of the Cedar Lake Conference is Sunday, July 29, at 10:30, while that of Lake

The Moody Bible Institute will conduct a Bible Conference at Ocean City, N. J., August 9-19.

Mendota (Madison, Wis.) is August 5 at 3:00.

Rev. Henry Ostrom will open the Ocean City Conference, Thursday, August 9, at 7:30, speaking upon the theme, "The Battle Center of Present Day Activities."

The Extension Department of the Institute has prepared for distribution a beautiful illustrated bulletin of the four Bible conferences, as well as the Special Summer Course, which will be mailed upon application. This interesting bulletin not only contains pictures of these summer resorts with full information as to transportation and accomodations, but also the photographs and personalia of the thirty-six speakers and singers that appear on the program.

VISIT OF DR. THOMAS

The Institute was privileged to have as visitor Dr. John Thomas, a distinguished Welsh preacher. On May 22 he addressed the entire student body. Later in the week he conducted several classes.

Rev. John Thomas, M. A.

Dr. Thomas is editor of The Bible Call, published in England, and is president of the Baptist Bible Union of Great Britain.

THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH OF CICERO (CHICAGO), ILL.

This church for ten years has adhered strictly to a certain policy as to pulpit ministry, government, separation from the world, biblical finance, evangelistic effort, missionary activity, emphasis upon prayer, the setting forth of the fundamentals of the Christian religion, and the giving of proper emphasis to the premillennial coming of the Lord. Last year the missionary offerings of the church through its various organizations exceeded $6,000. For the coming year the total budget will be about $21,000. William R. McCarrell, of the Institute class of '12, is pastor of this flourishing church.

A CORRESPONDENCE DEPARTMENT STUDENT

Mr. "Jack" Tanenbaum, a prisoner in the Federal Prison, Atlanta, Ga., is a Correspondence student in the Synthetic Course, and has completed about one-half of the course. He has organized a Bible study class in the prison, which meets in a quiet place on Saturday and Sunday afternoons for two hours study and religious service. In these meetings they have testimony, Bible study and prayer, as the members of the meeting may be led. These men, including Mr. Tanenbaum, are all university men. One of them studied for the priesthood, another was an honor man at Yale. One of these men is taking steps to reimburse a bank whose money he misappropriated.

Four Gideons of Philadelphia provided the correspondence course for Mr. Tanenbaum, and have money on hand for another course as soon as he finishes the course he is now pursuing.

MISSION WORKERS GUESTS OF INSTITUTE

A party of seventy-five delegates from the South and East, en route to the Tenth Annual Convention of the International Union of Gospel Missions at Minneapolis, May 20-24, were the guests of the Institute Friday afternoon and evening, May 18. They were taken sightseeing in cars about the city in the afternoon. A dinner was given them in the evening. At a service held in the Auditorium later in the evening, a number of the mission superintendents and workers spoke, telling about their conversion and present activities. Among their number was John Callahan, '97, now chaplain of Tombs Prison, New York City.

Dr. Gray, in behalf of the Institute, extended them an invitation to hold their next convention in Chicago at the Institute.

Seventy-Seven Rescue Mission Workers on a Visit to the Institute While Enroute to Annual Meeting at Minneapolis, Minn.

M. B. I. REUNION AT ATLANTIC CITY

Former students of the Institute in attendance on the Northern Baptist Convention held a reunion at Atlantic City, May 25, arrangements having been made by the Business Manager of the Institute, Mr. A. F. Gaylord. During the dinner, which was given at the Breakers Hotel, the former students were asked to rise, give name, date of study at the Institute and present field of service. Without reservation and pre-arrangement all gave testimony that the Institute had fixed their faith and had strengthened their loyalty to their denominational responsibilities.

Rev. Joshua Gravett, of Denver, Colo., the guest of the evening, spoke most interestingly of his former association with Mr. Moody in England and America and of his love for the lost and of his unselfish devotion to the interest of others.

Rev. J. A. Sutherland, of the Institute Extension Staff, presiding at the dinner, gave a picture of the present student body and said that the Institute was still carrying out Mr. Moody's ideals. He also spoke of the work of the Extension Department and of the summer Bible conferences.

Steps were taken at the reunion for close affiliation with the auxiliary association at Chicago, looking especially to a much larger gathering next year, when the Baptist convention will meet in Milwaukee. A note of thanks was tendered to the proprietors of the hotel for special courtesies, and to the convention for the privilege of announcing the reunion publicly.

DR. WILLIAM TAYLOR IN BERLIN

Mr. Paul Umlauf, of Berlin, Germany, a Correspondence student, writes that Rev. William Taylor, of the China Inland Mission, arrived in Berlin recently, and that a fine meeting was held by Mr. Taylor with the German boys who are studying the Synthetic Course with Mr. Umlauf.

ATTRACTIVE EMPLOYMENT FOR THE CHRISTIAN MOTORIST

The farmer on the roadside is a good "prospect" for the "book missionary." The entree of the colporteur gives opportunity for a brief rest and "personal work" by the agent, opening the way for a heart-to-heart talk on the great issues of life. Scores of believing laymen should engage in this evangelizing agency during the present summer months. A part or all of one's vacation period may be profitably spent in this way.

THE COMPANIONSHIP OF A GOOD BOOK

One of the greatest privileges we are permitted to enjoy is the reading of books. While our ancestors had few books today there is a continuous stream of them flowing from the press, many of them not worth reading, and yet there are some that are really helpful. The trouble with us is to know what to select, and this is very important. There are comparatively few people who have enjoyed the companionship of a really good book. They do not know the helpful influence that comes from association with authors who have presented their subject-matter not only in a readable form, but also in such a manner that it can be assimilated. There is a saying that one can know a man by the company he keeps. It is just as true that we may know a man by the books he reads, and it will not be difficult to decide whether he had read any.

In reading a book we should have some definite object in view. That object should not be to hurry over it in order that we may be able to say that we have read it; neither should the object be to criticise the author, even though we may differ from him in his views. We do not always agree with our most intimate friends, and we cannot be expected to do so with men whom we have never seen but whose pages we have read. The object in reading a book should be to get some good out of it. If we fail to find anything stimulating or worth remembering, it is because the book has no thought in it, or the fault may be with ourselves. We may lack the power to grasp and appreciate what it contains.—Edward Herbruck in Herald and Presbyter.

Our readers are asked to pray for colporteurs everywhere.

God's Challenge to Intercession

"It was in the midnight of the Dark Ages," says D. M. Panton, "that the huge revival which we call the Reformation, breaking out in an Augustinian monastery, convulsed Europe, AND CHANGED THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD.

"The conditions before the revival of Wesley and Whitefield have been thus described: 'Death in the churches, rottenness in public morals, infidelity coming in like a flood.'

"Blackstone, the commentator on the laws of England, under George III, says he went to EVERY CHURCH OF NOTE in London, AND FOUND IT IMPOSSIBLE TO DISCOVER WHETHER THE CLERGYMAN WAS A FOLLOWER OF CONFUCIOUS, MOHAMMED OR CHRIST. [Do any worse conditions than these prevail today?]

"So, before the last great general revival, that of 1860, the lands the revival visited were those lying under a pall of reckless waste, an unparalleled fever for riches, deepening doubt, and alarming ungodliness.

"Historically, conditions of appalling darkness have not been AGAINST revival, but FOR it; for revival is God, by a mighty uprush, saving the world from its downgrade to hell."

God's resources are not exhausted. That worldliness has all but engulfed the professing church; that an evolutionary philosophy has swept like a devastating flood through our colleges and universities; that twenty millions or more children are said to be growing up in America with practically no religious instruction; that a large part of the true Church of Christ has turned its back to the enemy in cowardly, despairing defeat,—these things do not constitute a situation too hard for God! Rather they constitute the mightiest call to simultaneous prayer ever sent forth to the members of the body of Christ. THEY ARE GOD'S CHALLENGE TO INTERCESSION!

Let Gideon's hosts return home, but let God's handful remain, and the victory is won—not by human might nor by power, not by human means nor by calls to prayer, but solely "by My Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts;" that GOD, and GOD ALONE, may receive ALL the glory. (Isa. 42:8.)

Pray AGAINST the world-wide apostasy of the professing church. (Eph. 6:12; 2 Thess. 2:7.) Pray FOR the world-wide revival of the true Church. (Eph. 3:14-21; Rev. 3:18-22.) Yea—

PRAY FOR REVIVAL!

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Wherefore, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us.

"Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."—Hebrew 12: 1, 2.

Cut From the Loaf

Have you ever wondered what Paul referred to as weights? It is easy to picture one ready for a race; he has laid aside everything that can in any way hinder his free and easy movement, but Paul seems to see those Hebrew Christians trying to run while carrying heavy weights and beset with sin. We may not be certain what things they were holding to while trying to run, but if we are truly anxious to get rid of every hindrance so that we may win the prize, we will find what our weights are. They may be the secret hopes of which we are hardly conscious, the desire for wealth, social position, or pleasure. They may be cares, anxieties, or disappointments that keep the heart aching night and day.

Paul said, "Lay aside every weight." We are to look away from these weights and not keep an eye on them after we lay them aside, but look to Jesus, keeping our eyes fixed on Him while we run. May we not come to Him and say, "Lord, we lay these here; they are hindrances; take care of them if they are worth it; they seem very dear to us, but we will count all but loss that we may win Thee"?—Uuoka Shehee.

How to Explain Some Things

A Christian woman in a neighboring state is perturbed. Her family is perturbed. Some of them read The Congregationalist, and others The Sunday School Times and THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY. In one they are told that the Modernists are all right, and in the others they are warned against them as enemies of the Cross and destroyers of the faith. How are they to know? Who shall decide? If the Modernists are wrong, how can their influence over the people, their popularity, be explained?

The answer is to be found only where the apostle Paul found it in his controversy with the false teachers of his day on the momentous subject of justification by faith, "What saith the scripture?" (Rom. 4: 3).

The Sunday School Times and THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY take their stand firmly and uncompromisingly on the fact that the Bible is the revealed Word of God throughout. With them it is "To the law and to the testimony! If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8: 20). "They" in that text, applies to all preachers and teachers whether by pen or by word of mouth, whose appeal is not always, and only, and finally to the Bible, which is "the law and the testimony" that Isaiah means.

Therefore our perturbed friend and her family are referred to the Bible. Let them compare what we say with what they find therein and judge accordingly.

It must be confessed, however, that what some of these Modernist teachers speak and write is very subtle, very beguiling. It is difficult to understand them sometimes. It is hard to believe that such nice persuasive speech, and personalities of such "sweetness and light" could possibly cover up spiritual miasma, deadly in character. But that is what the Bible says; read it and judge for yourself.

Of course one must know how to read the Bible; at least he must be diligent in doing so, and he must know the Holy Spirit as its interpreter to his heart. And he must have a regenerated heart, for "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God" (1 Cor. 2: 14). But these conditions being fulfilled, there will be little difficulty in discerning truth from error and "taking forth the precious from the vile" (Jer. 15: 19).

The pages of the MONTHLY are meant to help in this matter. Take the contribution of Rev. F. Z. Browne, a Presbyterian pastor, in this issue. It is invaluable because it is so plain, and because it is based on the Scriptures all the way through and because it explains the Scriptures as it goes along. Then take Mr. Bryan's reply to the Chicago Tribune, with quotations from such a body as the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, and President Mullins of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville. Who could desire stronger testimony? And placed alongside of it is the evidence of the shifting sands on which the structure of the higher criticism, which houses Modernism, is found to rest. Read Dr. Griffith Thomas' article in proof of this. In other words, read the pages of this magazine seriously and prayerfully month by month, and you will come to know how to explain some things and how in patience to possess your soul.

Controversy Without Bitterness

"I read your magazine. Please don't be so bitter in your persistent antagonism toward the liberal theologians. They are merely seeking the truth—let them go to it. 'You can neither bury, burn, or drown the truth.' Our present disgraceful, childish conflict between the liberal and orthodox schools is the greater tragedy in view of the crying needs of mankind in this peculiar generation."

The above quotation is from a friendly letter and is replied to in a friendly spirit. We are not aware that the correspondent expected a reply, but we enter upon it because he may be representative of others of our readers whose conception of the present critical situation in the church is equally erroneous, and we must add, equally deplorable.

In the first place, we wish to say that the amount of space we allow to the "antagonism" he mentions, whether it be editorially or in the pages given to our contributors, is small in comparison with that which the latter ask, and which, in the judgment of many, it properly calls for.

In the second place, there is no "bitterness" in it. The public ministry of our Lord was one of controversy from the beginning, and not with "them that are without," but with the religious leaders of His nation. The words He uttered against them also (see Matthew 23 and John 8), were of the strongest character, and yet we never associate bitterness with them, nor yet with similar utterances of the apostles (Gal. 1:8; 2 Pet. 2:3; 2 John 1:10). Of course we are not placing ourselves on a level with Christ and His apostles, but simply trying to show that antagonism to error and bitterness of spirit are not necessarily linked together.

In the third place, the "liberal theologians," for whom our correspondent pleads, are not merely "seekers of truth" as he surmises. If they were, their place should be in the seat of learners, and not in the influential positions of preachers, editors, and professors which they occupy for the most part. Instead of being seekers of truth they are, many of them, the most arrogant and dogmatic propagandists of error under the guise of truth.

It is true as he says, that "you can neither bury, burn, or drown the truth," but there is something else you can do with it, you "can hold down the truth" by your unrighteousness, as the Bible says (Rom. 1: 18). You can thrust it below your consciousness and keep it there while you follow your own way as Bishop Moule puts it, and that is precisely what many of the liberal theologians are doing for themselves and encouraging others to do.

Hence the present conflict between the orthodox and liberal schools so far from being "childish or disgraceful," or a "tragedy in view of the crying needs of mankind in this peculiar generation," is the most serious warfare in which the church has been called to engage in its whole history. The need of mankind in this generation is not essentially different from any generation since that of Cain and Abel. It is the need of the putting away of sin through the redemption of Christ to be accepted by faith. And the obligation resting upon the saints of God to earnestly contend for that faith delivered unto them once for all, is as binding today as it was when the inspired Jude was constrained by the Holy Spirit to pen those words.

There was a period before our country entered into the world war, when it was difficult for some of our citizens to realize the situation and prepare for it. But there were others willing to suffer reproach in an effort to awaken them before a second Lusitania was sunk, and it was well that they succeeded. May the lesson not go unheeded in the spiritual sphere.

"The Faith of the Church"

A correspondent in Virginia sends us a copy of an address with this title, delivered by Mr. Murray M. McGuire before the Men's Club of St. James Protestant Episcopal Church of Richmond, Va. Mr. McGuire is an Episcopal layman and a leading lawyer of that state, who is deeply stirred by the growing tendency among ministers of the gospel "to present their message in such terms as to almost, if not actually, deny the deity of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God."

We thus see that the apostasy is spreading, and that gradually the pew is awakening to the conspiracy of darkness that holds many of our pulpits in its power.

Thank God for such laymen as Mr. McGuire, a copy of whose address, doubtless, would be sent to any other layman who would write for it, care of the church above named.

Movies and the Church

A prominent moving picture director when asked by an evangelical minister why it is that the moving pictures are taking such a hold upon the public, whereas the churches, taken as a whole, are becoming depleted, replied: "We take the unreal and impossible and make them real, whereas the present day preacher makes the real, though seeming impossible, unreal." Much truth is wrapped up in the director's diagnosis of the case. How true it is that we constantly hear of preachers declaring, for example, that the blood of Christ (real) and its cleansing power from all sin (seeming impossible) is an imagination of some old pious Jew or just a Bible story (unreal). Ought we not to pray that the faith once delivered to the saints should ever be kept real?

Meanwhile speaking further on the subject, it is impressive to hear a distinguished lawyer like William Howard Taft, tell the International Congress on Motion Pictures that "recent tendencies in journalism, literature, the drama and music—yes, even in education and in the pulpit—have been toward a surrender, almost unconditional, to what are supposed to be the demands of the public and sometimes to their baser instincts."

Mothers to Blame?

On another page, a wife and mother complains of husbands and fathers that they do not set their children an example by attending church. The women and the girls go, but she asks, Where are the men? Years ago we heard the senior Gipsy Smith testify the very opposite. He gave it as his opinion, after wide observation, that men were more in evidence in religious meetings than women. Then we heard Dr. A. C. Dixon, a preacher on two continents, say the same. After this we began ourselves to take notice, with the result that we were able to add our testimony to theirs.

For a few years now the writer has been responsible for a Sunday afternoon gathering for worship and Scripture exposition where the attendance is something like 800, and he would say that, five-eighths of them at least, are men. He has often wondered where the women were, and lamented their absence.

This does not necessarily prove that wives and mothers are less godly or religious than their husbands, but it raises a question as interesting as that of the correspondent we refer to. We still hold that so far at least as our young girls are concerned, mothers, and some grandmothers, have a good deal to answer for.

The Problem in the Philippines

A missionary in the Philippines, having seen nineteen years of service, writes us that he is just awakening to the fact that evangelism must be the one great outstanding feature of his work—a gospel message and a personal approach.

"The problem in the Philippines," says he, "is not one of statesmanship at all, but one of Christian leadership, and evangelism is the key to secure it." He testifies that our government is educating the people very successfully, but that the process can never make them Christian; and he speaks from a most advantageous point of view, because he lives next door to a high school with 1,500 students and across the way from a normal school with a capacity for 2,000. "It is up to us missionaries," he exclaims, "to buy up this opportunity."

How sincerely we agree with him, and how earnestly we in the home land should pray for him and other missionaries like him, that they may not fail in faithfulness and success.

The United States Supreme Court

Of all the Decoration Day addresses of our public men this year, none sounded better to us than that of Chief Justice Taft at the unveiling of the monument to his great predecessor, Salmon P. Chase. He made no direct reference to recent proposals in Congress and elsewhere to curb the power of the court, but he recalled that similar proposals were made by the "radical Republicans" in reconstruction days following the Civil War, and that the verdict of the country in retrospect has sustained the court against its critics. "The people now are glad," said he, "that the guarantees of personal liberty were maintained by the court against the partisan zeal of the strong majority."

Our fathers made no mistake in giving us a republic governed by three coordinate bodies, legislative, judicial, and executive. Let us keep them in their places and oppose any propaganda intended to lessen the power of one at the expense of either of the others.

The World Court

So far as our knowledge goes we are in favor of our going into the World Court, although we confess the feeling is based largely on our confidence in the foreign policies of the present Administration. Nevertheless, the argument of the Secretary of State before the American Society of International Law is a strong one.

It must be a good thing to have an International Court of Arbitration, for our government has always advocated it, and the present suggestion is simply to make such a court permanent. We never believed in the League of Nations, but we have the assurance of those who are supposed to know, that no entanglement therewith is involved in this case.

We are willing to wait, however, until the United States Senate is heard from on the subject, only premising that if there is any way in which we can help the world out of some of its present difficulties without getting into them ourselves, it is a religious as well as a political duty to do it. We think all shades of politics and all denominations of Christians will agree to this.

Whole Bible Sunday-school Course

We have received in manuscript an outline of the "Whole Bible Sunday-school Lesson Course" prepared by the lesson committee appointed at the Fundamentals Conference at Fort Worth. It is to be printed in leaflet form and will be obtainable at five cents a copy, or $3.00 a hundred, by addressing Biola Book Room, 536 South Hope St., Los Angeles, Cal.

"Will Christian Taxpayers Stand for This?"

An Editorial Reply to a Porto Rican Correspondent

"DEAR Mr. * * * *:

"We appreciate your letter and criticism of May 10 concerning our editorial in the issue of that month, 'Will Christian Taxpayers Stand for This?' and deem it of sufficient importance to warrant an extended reply.

"(1) You say that 'legislation to determine what views shall, or shall not, be taught in a publicly supported institution is a dangerous thing.' But have you not overlooked the fact that publicly supported institutions do not permit the Bible to be taught? Why then, should they permit that to be taught which directly contradicts the Bible?

"(2) You say, 'the days are past when the church can dictate what views may be held by teachers and investigators in scientific fields,' and you are right. But is there not a difference between the views which may be held by teachers and investigators and the views which they are at liberty to impress upon the youth committed to their charge?

"(3) You say that 'if the views of the Moody Bible Institute triumphed, a great blow would be struck at our much-prized freedom of thought and speech,' but we think you are mistaken. The Moody Bible Institute believes thoroughly in freedom of thought and speech, but not in the dogmatic and arrogant assertion of a fact which is not a fact. If evolution, in the sense our editorial discussed it, were an undisputed fact, our mouths would be closed, but that it is a theory merely, evolutionists themselves are witnesses.

"(4) You say that 'the separation of Church and State is involved in this matter.' But if so, it is not because the Church has intruded upon the prerogatives of the State, but because the State, should it permit the teaching of atheistic evolution in the schools, would thereby be undermining the Church.

"(5) You say, 'What shall we say if the education of the youth of the future should be distorted to please the fancies of Christian Science, Communism or any other group?' We answer that the fight to prevent atheistic evolution from distorting the education of our youth is the same that we would make if any of the groups you name attempted to do what is now true of the evolutionists.

"(6) You say that 'evolutionists are in control only in the sense that a teacher of any subject is in control when he is permitted to teach according to his convictions.' No teacher of any subject should be permitted to teach in public schools according to his convictions when those convictions are contrary to truth and fact.

"(7) You say you have known 'some very devout Christians who are believers in evolution, and with whom it is not a religious creed or dogma.' We also have known such Christians, and to such we were not referring, but to a class of evolutionists who are pretty clearly defined in our editorial.

"(8) You say that 'many things men thought in former times were taught by the Bible have been disproved.' This is true, but there is a difference between what men have thought the Bible taught and that which it did actually teach, and just as soon as it is proven that the Bible teaches evolution we shall believe in it, but not before.

"(9) You say that 'no one can say with certainty that the doctrine of a special creation of man is inconsistent with evolution.' You are clearly in error here, for the evolution our editorial was talking about is as contrary to the doctrine of a special creation as darkness is contrary to light, to which again evolutionists themselves are witnesses.

"(10) You ask, 'Shall the instructors of youth be free to teach the truth as they see it, including theories as well as demonstrated facts, or shall they be the slaves of legislation or religious dogmas?' We do not object to their teaching theories if they keep it plain that they are theories, but when they teach theories as demonstrated facts, especially in a matter of such importance as that now under consideration, we protest against it.

"(11) You ask, 'Shall we maintain the separation of Church and State, or turn again to the religious intolerance of the Dark Ages?' We reply that the way to prevent a return again to the intolerance of the Dark Ages is to maintain a steadfast testimony to the Bible as the Word of God and against all such insidious attacks upon it as that of atheistic evolution.

"Yours truly,
—"The Editors."

Mr. Henry S. Dulaney and Goucher College

Editorial

MR. DULANEY is an influential Christian business man of Baltimore, appreciated for his interest in all good causes, but especially that of Christian education. For ten years he served as trustee of Goucher College, a Methodist school of learning for young women, from which office he recently resigned because of erroneous teaching in its department of Biblical Literature.

The press gave considerable currency to Mr. Dulaney's letter of resignation because of its bearing on the current discussion of the teaching of evolution in our schools and colleges, and, also, because coincidently with his resignation at Goucher, he accepted office on the Board of Trustees of the Moody Bible Institute. As to this last it may now be said, that the corporation of the Institute had no knowledge of Mr. Dulaney's intention as to Goucher when an invitation was extended to him to become associated with its management.

As Mr. Dulaney's spirit in the whole matter has been somewhat misjudged by those unfamiliar with the circumstances, we take pleasure, for the sake of truth and Christian courtesy, in publishing a letter addressed to Mr. Dulaney by the president of Goucher College, and also in republishing part of an editorial entitled "Honest Conviction" from the Baltimore Evening Sun.

The letter and editorial follow:

Goucher College,
Baltimore, Maryland,
May 29, 1923.

Office of the President:

"Dear Mr. Dulaney:

"I was very sorry indeed not to have you at my right hand in your accustomed place yesterday afternoon at the Board meeting. For ten years now you have stood strongly in my support for all the policies that meant for the material and educational development of the College. You have known what the struggles and hardships have been and the obstacles we have had to overcome, and you have been a real part of all the development of this last decade. I feel that with the raising of this first million of our $6,000,000 fund we have made a turn in the road and have come to another guidepost which points onward and upward. I sincerely hope that we shall now, in the years that are immediately before us, begin to reap some of the fruits of these last ten years of toil. I cannot help but tell you how much I regret the fact that you cannot go with us into these coming years and be a part of what I am confident will be a most noteworthy development in the spiritual and educational life of hundreds of young women who will come to Goucher College.

"I presented your letter to the Board yesterday afternoon with regret, and every member of the Board received the communication in the same way. There were many warm tributes to your worth and sincerity, and you leave the Board with the good will of everybody. Personally I want to thank you for all the many courtesies you have shown me. I deeply appreciated them all and will consider my association with you during these past ten years as one of the pleasant and treasured possessions of my life.

"Very sincerely yours,
(signed) "Wm. W. Guth
"President."

"Mr. Henry S. Dulaney,
"Resinol Chemical Company,
"Baltimore, Maryland."

(From the Evening Sun, May 29, 1923).

Mr. Henry S. Dulaney has long been actively and generously interested in Goucher College. Its upbuilding and success have been due in no little measure to the unselfish service he has given it. His decision to withdraw from the board of trustees, therefore, cannot be regarded as a trivial matter. One may not be able to understand his viewpoint in regard to the place of evolution in the study of the Bible, but one can understand and respect the unwillingness of Mr. Dulaney to temporize with his convictions for the sake of the treasured associations he has had with Goucher College.

We are obliged to Mr. Dulaney for reminding us that men still are capable of formulating a guiding principle that they will not compromise to meet the varying demands of expediency. There was a time when men in public office, even, resigned their positions rather than be time servers, trucklers and dissemblers. It occurs too seldom today. It is the custom in religion, business, professions and society, to dodge the issue that by such dodging one may not appear to be out of tune with the majority. If we have any outstanding principle today, it is to keep with the crowd.

Past, Present and Future

By Rev. H. Tyndeman Chilvers, Metropolitan Tabernacle, London, England

(A sermon preached at the Jubilee of Victoria Baptist Chapel, stenographically reported and abridged).

"THAT which hath been is now; and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth that which is past" (Eccles. 3:15).

The book from which my text is taken is the inspired biography of a prodigal who has returned from his prodigal ways and relates his experiences. In later days he concludes by saying, "I have learned that the conclusion of the whole matter is that it is the whole duty of man to fear God and keep his Word."

Will you follow me in just three thoughts that will engage our attention?

I

There are some things that fundamentally, unalterably, belong to the past, the present, and the future.

1. We can do no other than begin with God Himself. He which hath been is, and will forever be. Our children will find no successor to our God. The future generations, if time is lengthened out till then, will find that our refuge and strength will be theirs. Ours today is the refuge and strength of our fathers. The people who rejoiced here fifty years ago found the Saviour the center of their joy. In Him is found no change. God is the same yesterday, today, and forever; fundamentally and unalterably He abides—past, present, and future—and gathers it all up into His own mind and heart.

(1). God is the same in the rule of His conduct. The only rule of His conduct is His own will. The unalterable will of Himself is the rule of His acts; the determinate factor is His own mind. He may change His course of action, but He never changes His mind. That belongs to poor mortals.

It is a great thing to know the will of God, to live within the center of it, to recognize that our lives, insignificant as they are, may be linked with the eternal mind:

"Deep in unfathomable mines,
Of never-failing skill,
He carries out His deep designs
And works His sovereign will."

If you deny that where would you be? Like a vessel without a rudder. The men and women with whom you deal, the society with which you come in touch, they are fickle at their best. We all are necessarily fickle because we are so limited in our knowledge. Thank God there is One who has a rule for His conduct which is inflexible, abiding always in righteousness, equity and truth, God Himself making His will the rule of His conduct.

(2). Then all the attributes of God remain the same, whether you think of His knowledge, power, omniscience, omnipresence, goodness, or love. What our fathers found Him to be we will find Him; what He was to men in the dark days of the past and gone, He will be to men today who will trust in Him and bury their faith in all that makes up Deity, and exalt the assurance and the immovable and unchangeable attributes of His Being.

Take one of the constituents of His power. Did any human being ever understand the faithfulness of God? What a sheet anchor that is to the faith of any soul! What an inspiration to faith it is! His immovable, eternal, abiding faithfulness.

Your fathers used to talk to you about God's faithfulness. Some of you have seen those who are now in heaven with a faith tested and tried, hold on to their loving God and say, "I will trust and not be afraid." Oh, there are some things which are fundamentally and unalterably in the past, present, and future. And the principal one is God.

Do you not think, my friends, that we need to have a deeper apprehension of what God is? Have we not lost the vision of Him in these days? Men are talking about their rights so much without stopping to think of God's claims and God's rights. He has claims and rights that are established in righteousness and truth and equity. While I do not understand all His dealings, I comfort myself with the fact that the Judge of all the earth never does a wrong thing, never exercises anything but love and wisdom. Wisdom is always linked with unalterable love.

2. Man in the past, present and future is just the same. He is a sinner, and civilization does not make him a better sinner; in that aspect of his character he is still a sinner. He may be different in appearance and manner toward other people, but after all, it does not matter what my neighbor thinks about me. The final bar before which I am to appear is the bar of God, and the last one with whom I have to do is God. There is too much examination by one another. What we ought to do is to see ourselves in God's sight—with His eyes. In this enlightened century men are sinners as they were a thousand years ago.

Dr. Campbell Morgan said: "They tell us men are changed; that there are no cannibals in these days. That is quite right; we are not cannibals; we do not eat men, but we scientifically kill them. Which is the bigger barbarism, to shoot a man by scientific means, or to cut him up and eat him?"

Beneath the surface man is a sinner. He was that fifty years ago when this chapel was established. Man is no better today. Oh, may God save us from the strange imaginations about human nature getting better and better! Man is a sinner, lost, undone, until regenerated by the Spirit of the living God.

You say, "put them in better houses and they will be better men." Give them a paradise and they will make it a pig-sty. How many instances you have had how men will make their own environment. When they have known what it is to be changed in their souls by the regenerating power of the Spirit of God they make their own paradise.

Whatever we do or say, the fact remains that past, present, and future, the human heart is just the same everywhere. Every part of Europe, America, Australia, the South Sea Islands—everywhere the human heart is sinful. Jesus Christ always recognized that fact. He dealt with man from a three-fold point of view. He always recognized man was a sinner. He assumed that in speaking to him, dealing with him, always without stating the fact, assumed that he was a sinner, but that he was spiritual, had a capacity for spiritual things, and was salvable.

3. Then may I remind you that the gospel of God's grace is past, present and future. Its sufficiency abides and remains. It is the power of God unto salvation today as in past centuries. You need no new gospel. You may have new preachers. But if the pastors of the past could speak, they would say, "You do not need a new gospel. The gospel of a thousand years ago is the gospel of today and of everlasting, the gospel of the grace of God." In the uttermost parts of the earth, in all places, times and circumstances men have met God by the power of the everlasting gospel of His grace. Thank God there are some things that abide, and the gospel is one.

4. Then again you need to remember that the Holy Spirit is the same past, present, and future, and He is the agent of God's purposes, fulfilling the purposes of His mind and will and His enactments in the councils of eternity. God is using time to accomplish that upon which He has set His own heart.

God keep us from being like an opposing current against the mind and will and purpose of God! Come, follow Him, make His will the rule of your conduct. Make His Word the man of your counsel. And you will find that the man of your counsel is the man of yesterday, today, and tomorrow. There are some things that characterize the whole term of creation, God, man, the gospel, the Holy Spirit.

II

Many things, though they vary and change, are, nevertheless, interchangeable and indispensable to each other. Change is certain everywhere.

1. Death effects changes. You have seen that yourself. Your own church could not abide fifty years without seeing the effect of changes. There are some young people who would gladly be sitting beside grandfather, or maybe, father or mother. You say, "I am sitting just where father or mother sat." Yes, exactly. Death has brought its change. You are here, but they have gone. And so, as time rolls on and one after another falls from the ranks, in God's providence changes are effected.

One of your officers began a conversation with me, and he rolled off in two minutes about a dozen changes he had seen in his life in fifty years. Death will always be playing its part.

2. Then there are national and geographical changes. We see the effect, and they affect us in our movements, our work, and our ministry. And yet they are all inseparably linked. The change of yesterday brings about something that is essential in the purpose and mind and will of God today. If the lifting of our finger would bring back some of the dear friends who have left us, we would refrain from lifting the finger because today a niche has been made for some that could not have been made without their removal. The perplexity of the changes will be cleared up. God will clear these up.

There is a text in the New Testament which people think on as applying to eternity too much, "What we know not now we shall know hereafter." I do not think the Lord meant the disciples to understand that referred to heaven. I think He meant this very likely: "What you do not know now about Good Friday you will know on Easter Sunday morning. What you do not know on Easter Sunday morning you will understand at Pentecost, when the Holy Spirit lights up Easter Sunday and Good Friday." And those men who went about after Pentecost preaching that Jesus was alive, knew something they did not know when Jesus was with them.

There is something you may not know now, but in a day or two the sun will shine, in a year or two God will make clear His purpose in providence. Here is a chance for faith, to trust where you cannot see, and wait for a bright unfolding of His purposes.

"Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan His works in vain.
God is His own Interpreter,
And He will make it plain."

3. Then there is change in method. Quite right to have change in method. Some churches used to sing two or three hymns, now they sing four. There is no compromise. Some churches used to sing six, now they sing four. There may be change of method and manner. Jesus never did things the same two days running. He performed miracles, but not in the same way.

There may be adaptations to circumstance. Take life, for instance. How many links you have—infancy, childhood, youth, adolescence. All are linked to manhood and womanhood. We do not grow into manhood and womanhood all at once.

I remember the days of my boyhood, and thank God for many lessons I learned then. I fervently thank God for some things my mother taught me as a boy. I find the value of them as time goes on as I did not then. Our youth is linked to age, and age to youth.

God is linking circumstances right along the way. I can see in things that happened fifty, forty, thirty years ago, there is a link in the circumstances of today that is closely connected with years ago. Have you not found it out? And the longer we live, the more we learn of this deep lesson.

There are many things closely linked. They may be connected with the past and the future. They are connected with, and necessary to, one another.

Think of this a moment. Take the discipline of yesterday—what a big word it is!—the discipline always is in love. We need the shaping, the moulding, the refining, the different processes that have to be brought to bear upon us, to take us where He wants us to go, where God wants us to be. At the time of the discipline we cannot see the purpose of it, but ten years hence you see it.

I call to mind, for instance, in the days of my young manhood when I lived at home. I remember my father and mother passing through a terrible trouble for nineteen or twenty weeks. During that time I was just a watcher, a looker-on. But I was learning. The mystery of those weeks I could not understand then. But as a preacher today I would not have been without those twenty weeks for all I possess. My ministry is colored by what I learned of my father and mother during those twenty weeks when they were in the depths of trouble.

"But," you say, "had God any such idea in His mind?" Personally I believe He had. And by linking up events, by shaping, moulding, fashioning, He fits a man for the place which is to be his life work. If only we could see it is to fit us for a place.

God has a place for you somewhere. The lessons of yesterday are that I may profit today. There are two parts to Christian service; sowing and reaping. One sows, another reaps. You, today, are reaping what somebody did fifty years ago. You are connected with fifty years ago, though some of you were not born then; you have entered into their labors. They travailed in soul, but you have brought things to the birth. And so it is always; one sows, another reaps.

"My father used to pray that I might be brought to the Saviour," says someone here, "and the Lord heard and answered his prayer, and so I take my father's place."

That is it. Your father did the sowing. Your father's prayers instrumentally made you what you are. They did the sowing, you are putting in the seed and going to care for the completion, and all things that shall be will be the result of things done in the present. Though you may not see the result, your children will rise up and bless God that their fathers prayed for what they inherit.

III

It is very evident that in the present and future we are to believe in the past.

Do not be fools like some, who run down the past, talking about "old fossils, old fogies, etc." Let them talk. They are generally bigger fools than the old fogies of the by-gone days. They fulfilled their time according to the will of God, and you are asked to do no more.

Do not anathematize the past and speak of the people of the past as if they were all ignorant and we have only just come into the light. The church of Christ has been maintaining and fighting for the truth for centuries. And then some modern light comes along and says they were all wrong. I will keep to the wrong ones. They did a greater work than these others are doing.

What shall we do with the past? Gratefully remember it. Remember the past, dear men and women, and never doubt.

Then may I say, for the sake of the past, improve upon it. You improve by what you know of the by-gone days. You have the best behind you. You ought to be better. You have greater advantages than they had. Let us seek to improve upon the days that are gone. Never forget your indebtedness to them. God makes Himself dependent upon them. He requireth that which is past.

A good woman said to me some time ago, "I heard a minister preach upon a text once which I never thought was very striking. I remember the outline of the sermon, and isolated thoughts of it have come to me occasionally and been forgotten. But recently I have been in circumstances where that sermon came back in full, and I do not know anything that has been a greater help than that sermon preached thirty years ago."

Very often God gives a church a minister and you do not know the value of him till he is gone. You cannot realize the value of his ministry, for he may have been preaching for ten years hence. God requireth of the days that are past, that He may form it in the present. That equips us for the days that are to come.

There are limitless resources for the days yet to be born in Jesus Christ and the gospel that will meet our need. Abandon vourselves unto Him who was enough for the past and will be for the days to come.

They that know the Lord will be strong to do exploits. God abides, the Bible abides. Access to God remains. Our fathers prayed, we can pray no better. They expounded the Word, read the Bible, loosed its truth. God help us to do it, and to make much of God as they made much of Him. Thank God the merits of Emmanuel are as mighty this afternoon as on the Day of Pentecost. Let us not forget that He Himself has pronounced the work of Redemption finished. None can add to it or take from it. The finished work of Jesus Christ is the basis of faith, past, present, and future.

Is Belief in the Deity of Christ Essential?

By Rev. F. Z. Browne, Texarkana, Tex.

PERCY STICKNEY GRANT, occupying a Protestant Episcopal pulpit in New York City, is quoted as having said: "I do not believe Christ was born of a virgin. What has that to do with Christianity?" Harry Emerson Fosdick, a Baptist preacher occupying a Presbyterian pulpit in the same city, has asked the same question. He too, would recognize as Christian those who do not believe in the Bible story of Christ's birth, and in His consequent deity.

But the Scriptures plainly teach that a belief in the deity of Christ is essential to salvation, and that a knowledge of this great truth can only come through the Spirit of God as He reveals the meaning of the Scriptures.

An Untenable Position

In Matthew 16: 13-20, we read: "When Jesus came into the coasts of Cesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? His disciples answered, Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some Elijah; and others Jeremiah, or one of the prophets." Men who are not indwelt by the Spirit and who know not the Scriptures are making a similar answer to this question today.

However, the position of such men is wholly untenable. The Scriptures clearly proclaim Christ as the Deity Himself. Christ when upon earth applied the statements of the Old Testament Scriptures to Himself (Matt. 22: 41-46; Luke 24: 25-27; Isa. 7: 14; Ps. 2: 2, 7, 8; Isa. 9: 6; Mic. 5: 2; Ps. 45: 6, 7), and proclaimed Himself God's own Son (John 5: 17, 18; 17: 5; 10: 30; 14: 11; 10: 33; 8: 58; Mark 14: 61, 62).

To this must be added the witness of other inspired men who saw Him after He rose from the dead, and of God Himself (2 Pet. 1: 15-21; Rom. 1: 3; Heb. 1: 2, 3; Matt. 3: 17; 17: 4, 5).

An Awful Alternative

A Greek word in John 5:18, not usually translated, reveals the cause of the anger of those to whom Christ spoke. They sought to kill Him because He said that God was His own (idion) Father. The Jews understood perfectly that He had claimed to be Deity, for they charged that He had made "himself equal with God."

If, therefore, Jesus was not God, men are estopped, to use a legal expression, from calling Him a great teacher and a good man. He said He was God, and proved His claim by wonderful words (John 7: 46) and mighty deeds (John 3:2; 11:44). If He was not what He claimed to be, then He was a child of shame, and the worst impostor, deceiver and liar the world has ever known. These are the charges those who deny His deity bring against Him, despite their honeyed words.

Let those who profess not to believe the virgin birth be honest with themselves and their hearers and face the consesequences of their awful error. How long would their congregations permit them to remain in the pulpits they are disgracing, if, true to the logical inferences of their false teaching, they thus should openly brand and condemn Him who claimed to be the Son of God, and stigmatize the virgin Mary as a fallen woman? But these false teachers will never come out in the open.

What Explains Fosdick and Grant?

Again, Jesus asked a question of His disciples, saying, "Whom do ye say that I am? And Simon Peter answered, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Did our Lord deny this confession of Deity? No, He commended Peter for it and pointed to the Spirit of God as its source in the words: "Blessed art thou, Simon the son of Jonas: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven."

Here is found the explanation of the blindness of false teachers on this all important subject. God by His Spirit must reveal truth. Only he that is of God heareth aright God's words (John 8: 47; 1 John 4: 6). Jesus Christ, the divine Son of God, Deity Himself, is the center and source, sum and secret of that "wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory: which none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory." How true it is that "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (1 Cor. 2: 7-16; Luke 24: 45).

One of the Great Proofs

After Peter's confession of His deity, our Lord said to him, "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hades shall not prevail against it."

This striking statement, rightly understood, furnishes one of the great proofs that a belief in the deity of Christ is essential to salvation. The clue to the Lord's real meaning is found in the fact that in the Greek there is a play upon the words, "thou art Peter (Petros—literally "a little rock"), and upon this Petra ("great rock," "crag") I will build my church." The word Petra in its use here plainly refers back to the confession of the Lord's deity which Simon Peter had just made. Knowledge and acknowledgement of the deity of our Lord is here proclaimed as that which is essential to salvation, and as the great rock foundation (Petra) upon which the true Church in triumph over the powers of hell shall be established.

The Lord does not promise to build His Church upon Peter (Petros—a little rock), but upon Himself. Peter himself is careful to tell us this: "To whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious, ye also, as living stones, are built up a spiritual house.....Wherefore also it is contained in the scriptures, Behold I lay in Zion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded" (1 Pet. 2: 4-8).

In Ephesians 2: 19, 20, the same great truth is revealed. The church is here spoken of not as being built upon the foundation of an apostle, but upon the foundation of "the apostles (plural) and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself (not Peter) being the chief corner stone."

It is important to note in this connection, that the same power of binding and loosing (power for the exercise of proper discipline in the future church) which was conferred upon Peter in Matthew 16: 19, was conferred upon the other apostles and disciples, and upon Spirit filled men in all ages, in Matthew 18: 18, and in John 20: 22, 23.

Deity More Than Divinity

The word "deity" and not "divinity" has been used advisedly in this article, for there are many who profess to believe in the divinity of Jesus and yet have not the slightest conception of His deity.

The statement that Jesus was a divine prophet, like other prophets, Mahomet among them, is found in the Koran. The disciple of Mrs. Eddy speaks of the divinity of the Christ principle. Even the Unitarian and the reformed Jews are willing to admit that Jesus was as divine as we are, only a little more so —perhaps!

It is said that when the angel Ithuriel saw Satan whispering at the ear of Eve, he touched him with his spear. Momentarily at the touch the foul fiend was revealed in his true colors.

The word deity is the Ithuriel spear which reveals false teachers, glibly professing to believe in the divinity of Christ. Ask them if they believe in His deity, and demand an unequivocal answer. If they do not reply in the affirmative they are the successors of those Unitarians of old who slew Him because "He made himself equal with God (John 5: 18; Matt. 26: 63, 65).

Witness of Taft and Priestly

Chief Justice Taft has stated that while the number of professed Unitarians was not so great, they were exerting an influence beyond their numbers because so many in the pulpits and pews of professedly Christian churches were Unitarian in belief.

The late Dr. Priestly, a Unitarian protagonist, said to one who believed in the deity of Christ; "I do not wonder that you entertain and express a strongly unfavorable opinion of us Unitarians. The truth is, there neither can, nor ought to be any compromise between us. If you are right, we are not Christians at all."

The Plain Issue

The issue is very plain. Men must believe that Christ was God manifest in the flesh (1 Tim. 3: 16; 2 Cor. 5: 19; John 1: 14), or be eternally condemned.

Because they would not accept Him as Messiah—Son of God, and God the Son—the Lord wept over Jerusalem saying, "How often would I have gathered thy children together . . . and ye would not! Behold your house is left unto you desolate."

These words express the yearning desire of all who have the Spirit of Christ for your salvation, dear reader.

Where do you stand—on the sinking sand of higher criticism, godless evolutionary theories, and Unitarianism, or on the rock (Petra) of Christ's deity?

As the Spirit, speaking through the Scriptures, moves upon your heart, will you not move with Him to believe? Will you not now by faith like Thomas cry: "My Lord and my God" (John 20: 28)?

"His oath, His covenant, His blood
Support me in the whelming flood;
When all around my soul gives way,
He then is all my hope and stay.
On Christ, the solid Rock, I stand;
All other ground is sinking sand."

A Higher Critic Backs Water*

By Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D. D., Germantown, Pa.

IN the Expositor for May, Professor Adam C. Welch of Edinburgh, a well-known critical scholar, has an article "On the Present Position of Old Testament Criticism," in which he takes a line that deserves to be noted by students of the Old Testament.

He opens by speaking of the critical view as that which "during the life time of us older men, has passed from the position of an extreme heresy into that of a new orthodoxy," and he reminds his readers that this view "rests on three main positions, which are, or may be, regarded as the surest results of modern criticism."

The Three Main Positions

The first of these is the analysis of the Pentateuch into three main sources, which were afterwards combined into one. The second is that Deuteronomy in its original form was first brought to light in B. C. 621, and was used as the basis of religious reform in Josiah's reign. The third is that Ezra about B. C. 440, introduced to the returned exiles a new law-book which, because it changed the national life from a civil to an ecclesiastical organization, has been called the Priests' Code.

Dr. Welch then remarks that this critical theory has always been questioned in many of its details and has been continually modified to meet objections, but he now says that "increasingly grave objection has been raised against its three cardinal positions."

Subjective Evidence Only

I

In connection with the first, the analysis of the stories of Genesis, the critical view has been challenged from two different sides. On the one hand it has been argued that the differing use of the divine names, Yahweh and Elohim, was an insufficient basis for such an analysis.

In regard to this Dr. Welch allows the force of the objection, though he rightly says that the entire question has been moved from so narrow a basis and made to rest on a wider foundation by the addition of other considerations based on differences of languages, theology and social outlook. Yet notwithstanding this, Dr. Welch speaks with frankness of "the subjective character of the evidence," calling it "the curse of all Old Testament criticism," and he allows that circumstances compel this to continue to be the permanent weakness of the position. These words seem to be eminently worthy of notice:

> "It must further be frankly acknowledged that, where the other criteria are employed, they often fail to give any sure result. Certain documents, which are wholly divergent in attitude and outlook, so divergent as to be even contradictory, are only held together by the fact they all employ the divine name Yahweh."

The other criticism of this position is based on the reliability of the Hebrew text in its use of the divine names.

In this connection Dr. Welch while criticizing Mr. Wiener for certain aspects of his theory, speaks of the value of his contribution to the problem and acknowledges his "clear cross-examination of the defense" and also "his convincing insistence on its insufficiency." Then follows this significant statement: "The present Hebrew text of Genesis has been accepted unthinkingly: yet it is the basis of the whole position."

Nothing could be more striking than this acknowledgment. Years ago Sir George Adam Smith frankly admitted that the use of the divine names was insufficient as a criterion of authorship, and now Dr. Welch adds that the other criteria are equally inadequate. The way in which criticism has made the present Hebrew text of Genesis the basis of the whole position, has often struck me as puzzling in view of the fact that Dr. Driver in Samuel, so freely uses the LXX to correct the Hebrew.

This is the conclusion of Dr. Welch in regard to this first position:

> "Neither the use of the divine names nor the use of other criteria leads to sure results. And, when the insufficiency of the one method is pointed out, to seek refuge in the other is neither dignified nor convincing. It is better to say frankly that the regnant hypothesis, so far as the analysis of the sources, especially in Genesis, is concerned, has been built up without sufficient attention having been given to its basis—on the one hand, to the reliability of the Hebrew in connection with the employment of the divine names, on the other hand, to the practice throughout the whole of Scripture in the use of the same names. There is need for renewed close and unprejudiced examination on both these matters."

II

With regard to the date of Deuteronomy Dr. Welch points out that much of its contents are impossible if dated from the time of Josiah, and his summing up is expressed thus:

> "Closer examination of the book by the use of historical criticism has brought clearly to light the fact that its legislation represents different attitudes, a non-homogeneous ritual. And, what is of greatest significance, the conditions of the national life and the ritual represented in the book do not correspond with the features of both, which we know from other sources to have been prevalent in Josiah's time."

*The Editor assumes responsibility for the title

Clear proof is given of this contention, these comments being particularly worthy of quotation:

> "The application of the same historical criticism which produced the regnant hypothesis is forcing students to recognize that the book of Deuteronomy as a whole has a history, and that inside the book the groups of law, even the individual laws, have a history. The application of this fact will have a far-reaching influence on the attitude which must be taken to the reform under Josiah."

Is the Deuteronomic Hypothesis Reasonable?

In regard to the points involved in the critical position it is clear that Dr. Welch feels much the same as conservative scholars have felt for years past.

> "While others have been gravely disturbed by the ethical question as to what must be thought of the morality of the body of men who obtained the imprimatur of their boy king, and claimed the authority of Moses, for a code which they themselves created, I confess to have been always much exercised over the humbler difficulty as to how a corpus of law, deeply affecting and transforming the life of an entire nation in connection with its habits of religious worship, was ever passed and enforced per saltum at the bidding of a civil authority."

There is much more to the same effect. Years ago a prominent conservative scholar maintained that the date of Deuteronomy was the key to the entire critical position, because if the date of B. C. 621 could be sustained, everything else in the critical view would necessarily follow. On the other hand, if Deuteronomy could be proved to be early, the entire critical position would fall to the ground. Dr. Welch's arguments go to support this contention, which I tried to set forth in an article published some eight years ago.

III

With regard to the third position, the date of the Priests' Code, Dr. Welch rightly speaks of this as "the Achilles' heel of the theory," and on this account "here, more than anywhere else, it has suffered heavily." With refreshing candor he adds, that "it is impossible to deny that here, with less excuse than in the case of the analysis of Genesis, the theory has been built on a basis which had not been tested." The result is that,

> "What has happened in connection with Deuteronomy has happened in the case of the Priestly Code. The document, thus disengaged, has been studied by itself in the light of the modern historical method: and the more this has been done, the greater are the difficulties which have emerged, if it is to be regarded as uniform in its character and the product of so late a period."

The code is first considered as a history and some weighty arguments are adduced to show how impossible such a code was at the time of Ezra. Its account of Israel's past is shown to be contradictory of other documents. It is frankly allowed that the account in the Priests' Code cannot stand alone, while its supposed uniformity of spirit and outlook "is simply not true."

The code is then considered as a body of legislation, and it is argued with, I think, convincing force that the code has a history behind it "of some length and of great complexity." As to the circumstances of this development reference is made to the Samaritan Pentateuch which will be particularly interesting to scholars like Mr. Munro and Dr. J. E. H. Thomson, who have given this matter special attention. Here is what Dr. Welch says:

> "If all the growth of the law, or even much of it, be located at Jerusalem and assigned to the period after the promulgation of the code by Ezra, it becomes extremely difficult to explain how the Samaritans came to accept these later developments. It is well known that the Samaritan Pentateuch is, with a few inconsiderable modifications, identical with the Hebrew, and that the two rituals were governed by the same law. Now it is possible to conceive that the Samaritan community, before the breach between them and Jerusalem became acute, accepted practically the Priestly Code. But in view of their claim to be an independent and rival center of the true religion, it is hard to suppose that they submissively followed each successive modification which was adopted at Jerusalem, and even went so far as to incorporate it in precisely the same language in their code."

A Significant Admission

Dr. Welch does not hesitate to argue that much of the Priests' Code must be carried back not merely to the exile but to the period before it, and that what was done in the time of Ezra was the "codification of a practice which had long been in existence." This codification is associated with the time of the prophet Amos, who is said to imply "a pretty elaborate code for the guidance of both laity and priests."

Here, again, readers will recall the way in which this very point was substantially made thirty years ago by Robertson in his The Early Religion of Israel, which, in spite of the recent contention by Dr. Peake, has never had adequate attention from the critical school as a whole.

It will be seen from what has been said that Dr. Welch has made some very remarkable criticisms of the dominant modern view of the Old Testament.

It is not unnatural for him to say that all that he has set forth does not imply that the critical theory "is on the point of disappearing from Old Testament study," but he frankly allows that "what seems sure is that the hypothesis can only be accepted with grave and fundamental modifications." He thereupon urges all students to avoid assuming that "all these questions are settled beyond the reach of debate."

The conclusions of the article are equally interesting, and deserve special attention. The critical theory is said to have been based on historical study, but it has failed fully to apply its own principles,

> ". . . and has not been fully alive to historical conditions and has ignored many factors. It has, accordingly, framed a rigid, inelastic theory which it has imposed on the movement of history. In particular, it has utterly failed to recognize that in religious matters humanity does not advance like a drilled army along a well-defined highroad."

Could condemnation be much more severe?

A Bunch of Damaging Statements

In the face of these admissions on the part of this leading critical scholar, the following comments seem justified:

(1) Dr. Welch takes a position that is substantially identical with conservative contentions of many year's standing. As I have pondered his arguments, I seem to have been reading Whitelaw and Orr over again.

(2) What are we to say of a scholarship which can be described in the following statements of the article? "The present Hebrew text of Genesis has been accepted unthinkingly" (p. 348). "The curse of all Old Testament criticism . . . the subjective character of the evidence" (p. 349). One attitude of the critical school is said to be "neither dignified nor convincing. It is better to say that the regnant hypothesis . . . has been built up without sufficient attention having been given to its basis" (p. 352). As to the Priests' Code, it is said that "the theory has been built on a basis which had not been tested." "The supposed uniformity of spirit and outlook is simply not true" (p. 362). "It has not been fully alive to historical conditions and has ignored many factors" (p. 368).

It is tempting to imagine what would have been said if these damaging statements had been made by conservative scholars.

(3) Before the war, it is well known that all British, American and Canadian criticism was based on German scholarship, not a single critical position being anything else than either an adoption or an adaptation of some German view. Since the war I have often wished to see indications of an independence of German scholarship on the part of English-speaking scholars, whether their conclusions lead them to the conservative position or not. Dr. Welch's article seems to be an indication of this independence, and I trust it will make its impression upon the younger men whom it will reach.

It is surely not too much to hope that a new generation of scholars will arise, refusing to be bound by a position so weak and impossible as Dr. Welch's article indicates; a position, which, instead of being that of a "new orthodoxy," will be soon and forever relegated to its former position of "an extreme heresy."

Further Suggestions About the New Scholarship

By Prof. Lowell H. Coate, B. D., Dean, Marion College, Marion, Ind.

THERE appeared in the June number of the MONTHLY an article entitled "A New Scholarship Needed." The response from college men, editors of church papers, and others has been so favorable that the writer is encouraged to accept the editor's invitation to follow up the previous article with a few additional suggestions regarding the new schlarship.

In closing the previous article we proposed that perhaps the greatest educational need of the hour is a Christian college with sufficient independence of the world and sufficient faith in God, to ignore the whole worldly system, and organize courses independent of the world's stereotyped curricula, engage the strongest conservative scholarship in America, raise the educational standard above the present unchristian philosophy, stablish it upon "the faith once for all delivered to the saints," and then challenge the world to meet the new scholarship.

"If God Be for Us, Who Can Be Against Us?"

Such an institution would cause rejoicing throughout orthodox Christendom.

At least one such college is needed in America now, with courses suited to the needs of young people preparing for service in the evangelical churches and institutions. Teach them the message of the church, and teach them to preach the doctrines of the inspired Word of God in harmony with His eternal purposes and His great commission to the church of this dispensation.

Such an institution should not be a college only, but an institution complete in itself. It should have a graduate department which could recognize its own college graduates and those of similar colleges which would rise up everywhere throughout the country and rally to the new standard. Such an institution is essential to the new scholarship; and the new scholarship is essential to the Christian faith—the hope of the world.

The question arises, Where can such an institution be found? Is there available a graduate institution where our college graduates and college teachers can with safety go to take post-graduate courses, at the termination of which they will be prepared to return and teach our college students the orthodox faith and the fundamentals of the Christian system? We do not say there are no such colleges, but we are asking, Where are they?

Small Colleges Growing

It is evident, however, that the small college is just coming into its own in a way that it has not done before. Parents are realizing that they cannot afford to send their boys and girls to certain large and accredited institutions at the expense of their religious faith and Christian experience.

Many of our best small colleges however, are not on "the list of colleges accredited by the state." It is constantly drilled into the students in high school that they must, by all means, attend an "accredited college." In Indiana a college to be accredited must have $500,000 of endowment, and nothing counts as endowment except "cash in hand and reinvested." Even endowment notes do not count. Judged by this artificial standard only six of the fifteen colleges in Indiana can classify as accredited institutions.

Planning an Association

As a result of these arbitrary and unjust requirements in the different states the smaller orthodox colleges, as a matter of self-defense and self-preservation, are being driven to form an association of their own, whereby they may protect each other in an effective and legitimate manner.

This association can establish its own accredited standards upon a substantial basis determined by the actual number and kind of teachers engaged, the nature and quality as well as the quantity of work done, and the excellence rather than the amount of the equipment. These standards appeal to everyone as being fair and legitimate instead of arbitrary and unfair. Already a number of the smaller colleges have expressed themselves as favorable to uniting in an effort to establish such a standard among themselves.

An invitation is now ready to go forth for a conference of representatives from the orthodox and conservative colleges if, and when, there is, on the part of such institutions as may be concerned, sufficient response to the suggestion hereby offered.

How to Co-operate

If the reader of this article is an official, or in any way connected with an orthodox college known to champion the fundamentals of the Christian faith, and to oppose evolution, destructive criticism, and liberalism as taught by

When the Holy Spirit Comes!

By Mrs. Marion M. Escott

The Spirit comes, I feel His touch;
  His presence now reveals so much
Of Jesus, I've not known before,
  My prostrate soul doth Him adore.

The Spirit comes, and mountains fall,
  That fear has summoned to His call.
And valleys, dark with unbelief,
  Rise full of faith and light and peace.

The Spirit comes, and tired feet,
  On level ground no hindrance meet;
With strength renewed from day to day,
  The lame may run their heavenly way.

The Spirit comes, and knowledge grows,
  Of God and truth which He bestows,
And faith and righteousness divine—
  The Spirit tells me these are mine.

The Spirit comes. The chosen Bride
  In secret made, the Spirit hides
Till made complete, then Spirit led To realms of light to Christ her Head.

the modernists, he is hereby invited to communicate with the writer expressing his attitude toward and his desire relative to the proposed conference. A further definite announcement regarding it will be made in these columns at an early date. Should one be interested in this proposition, but not officially connected with his own college, he is urged to bring this matter to the attention of the proper officials of the institution. In this way everyone interested may co-operate in accomplishing a victory for the cause and the faith to which we are alike devoted.

In conclusion, permit us to present one more matter for the consideration of the friends of Christian education. When the proposed association of Christian colleges has been formed and the organization completed, we shall be prepared to concentrate unitedly our moral support upon some thoroughly orthodox and satisfactory graduate institution where all the colleges of the association may feel safe in sending their own graduates and teachers for post-graduate training. The association will be in a position to offer strong moral support to such a graduate institution, and in turn it will give back to us our teachers full of faith and well equipped to continue the great work in all th colleges affiliating with the association

We invite all of those who are of like precious faith to join with us in prayer that God's will may be speedily accomplished in this matter, because not only is the eternal destiny of thousands of our best young men and women involved, but also the salvation of multitudes of souls in this and in succeeding generations.

Dr. C. I. Scofield on Acts 15:13-18

Correspondence with a Christian Lawyer

"MY Dear Dr. Gray:

"May I venture to trespass on your valuable time? For some years I have been bothered about a matter of interpretation, concerning Acts 15:13-18. I have outlined the problem and I enclose it herewith. Personally I would like to see the solution in accordance with the view of Dr. Scofield and others referred to in the discussion of the problem. I have referred the matter to some of my friends of deep learning and spirituality, but have not been able to get a satisfactory explanation. You will notice that, in my presentation of the problem, I have apparently aligned myself upon the other side. In my own legal profession I find that this is often a useful expedient, though the alignment may only be tentative.

"Recently I read an address given by you at one of the conferences some time ago, in which you seem to adopt the interpretation made by Dr. Scofield, but without discussion of the reasons leading to it.

"Will it be asking too much of you to ask you to try to get me straight on this matter?

"Thanking you, I remain,

"Yours sincerely,

"* * * *"

"Dear Mr. * * * * :

"1. You ask, 'Can the words "after this" refer to the words of Peter, that "God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name?" '

"My answer is that those are not the words of Peter. The words of Peter are quite different, namely, 'that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of God, and believe.' James is not quoting the words of Peter, but commenting on them and, under the special illumination of the Spirit, revealing to the Jewish church the dispensational significance of the fact they relate. He says, in effect, the explanation of the fact that the Gentiles are now hearing the word of the gospel and believing, is, that now God is visiting 'the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name.' After this, he goes on to say, God is going to do something else for Israel.

"2. You say, 'the question before the council was as to putting the Gentile converts under the law' (circumcision).

"True, but there was a larger question back of that, i. e., larger for the Jewish mind, for the Jewish national consciousness. That question was, 'Have the Old Testament promises to Israel failed, and does the Church take the place of the earthly kingdom?' One cannot discover this on the surface of this particular chapter, but coming at it from the atmosphere of the Old Testament, considering it in the light of a synthetic study of the whole Bible up to this chapter, one is almost shut up to that conclusion. The thing that chiefly agitated the Jewish church at this time, was the same thing that raised the inquiry of the disciples in Acts 1:6. If that were not the case one fails to see the pertinence of James' words in verse 16 at all.

"3. You say, that, 'what James is showing is that the prophets had foretold this calling of the Gentiles, and in order to show that, he quotes—"After this (in that day, says Amos) I will return, and will build again the Tabernacle of David, etc." '

"I think you are mistaken. What James is showing is that after the Gentiles are called out, the Lord will return and build again the Tabernacle of David. This was a question on which the Jewish church was anxious and as to which they must be satisfied independent of any other question. The Old Testament promises to Israel seemed at stake.

"4. You say, 'the prophetic words, "after this" do not follow, but introduce the calling of the Gentiles as well as the building again of the Tabernacle of David.'

"In my judgment the calling of the Gentiles which is equivalent to the building of the Church is not in the prophecy of Amos at all, who is speaking only of the sifting of the house of Israel among the Gentiles. When this sifting is ended, the day will have come to raise up the Tabernacle of David. The Church will have been completed meanwhile, but Amos' prophecy is not concerned with it.

"5. You say, that, 'according to the order of events given by Dr. Scofield, the prophecy of the calling out of the Gentiles is not fulfilled during this present age, but only after the return of the Lord and the restoration of Israel.'

"Again you are mistaken. Dr. Scofield is stressing the point that the calling out of the Gentiles is now taking place, and that when it is completed the other events will follow. You are right in asking, that if such were not the case, 'How does James fortify his position by this prophecy?' Dr. Scofield has no 'dilemma' to escape at this point, but what he says is perfectly consistent with both James and Amos.

"6. You ask, 'May not the rebuilding of the Tabernacle of David refer at least partially to that spiritual house, the Church, which the Lord is now building?'

"Certainly not, I think. The New Testament never confuses the Church, which is the body of Christ, with the Tabernacle of David. The Church, which is His body, has never 'fallen down' and will never be in 'ruins.' The gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

"7. You ask, 'Can it be that the words, 'After this I will return,' necessarily refer to the second coming of the Lord?'

"I think so, not to His coming into the air where the Church will be caught up to meet Him, but His appearing on earth to judge the nations and restore Israel.

"Yours sincerely,

"James M. Gray."

The Hebrew Vowel Points

[Some of our readers may find value in the following letter from a member of our staff to a young minister who asked for light on a newspaper report which interested him.—Editors.]

THE clergyman quoted in the newspaper clipping you sent me says:

" 'When the Old Testament was written there were no vowels in the Hebrew language. The vowel points now in use were not invented until the sixth century of our era. The stenographer will understand what a stupendous miracle would be involved in a shorthand manuscript a thousand years after it was written.'

"On the supposition that he is correct, concerning the invention of the vowel points, and his opinion is a common one, it is only a proof of their comparative unimportance in the reading and writing of the Hebrew. As a matter of fact there are Hebraists today who ignore the vowel points entirely. Therefore his appeal to the stenographers in his audience falls rather flat. More than this, he did not mention that there are versions of the Old Testament older than the sixth century of our era, the Septuagint, for example, extending back to the third century before Christ, by which the reading of the vowel points might easily be compared as to accuracy.

"On the other hand, the uniform tradition of the Jews down to the sixteenth century of our era affirms that the points descended from Moses, it being a higher critic of that period, Elias Levita, who first raised the question about it. In the disputation then started the integrity and the inspiration of the vowel points was ably defended by three or four of the best known Hebraists of modern times, such as Buxtorf, Lightfoot and Piscator. So important was the question in the estimation of the Reformers, that maintenance of the Jewish tradition as to the vowel points was an article of faith in the Reformed church of Switzerland, as against the position of the Roman Catholic church. The latter strongly opposed the vowel points, because in their absence the Roman Catholic church herself could become the interpreter of the Old Testament, putting in her own vowel points. Indeed Morinus, the leading advocate of the papacy of that period, boldly states that the reason God ordained the Old Testament to be written without the points was in order that every man should be subject to the judgment of the church and not interpret the Bible in his own way."

Why Make Investments in Pain?

By Rev. Christopher G. Hazard, D. D., Catskill, N. Y.

EVER since man was dismissed from Paradise he has wanted to get back. The gates of the garden being closed and guarded he has sought to climb over the fence. Toil has seemed harder and harder, thorns and thistles have gathered vigor and spread, the scorching heat has withered energy; while flowers and trees, sweetness and shade, the easy fruits of nature, have all been more and more enticing.

The serpent, still in business, has continued his ministry of seduction. Stolen waters are sweet, bread eaten in secret is pleasant, why submit to difficult physical and moral conditions, conscientious about doubtful utterances that may not have been so very divine? To eat, to drink, to be merry, may be the soundest philosophy of life, after all. Glum Puritanism feeds on sour apples. Men were made for joy.

It is a successful business. The cherubim do not seem to notice when men are on the wrong side of the fence. A lot of tramps are ever keeping fat although they neither toil nor spin. People who refuse to dig are not ashamed to beg, yet they have prosperous iniquities and pleasant experiences, they get more than heart could wish; while their diligent and God-fearing neighbors are sweating for inadequate incomes and disappointed wants. Sinners make easy money and squander it on vice. Progress is made without a ticket. Iniquity gets there while righteousness is considering the impossible expense. No wonder that it puzzled the Psalmist.

But it puzzled him only until he considered final results. Then he knew the difference between the wicked and the righteous and perceived that while the wicked had been "raising Cain," the righteous had been raising character; some had rejoiced in what they called "raising the Devil," but others had caught a vision of Christ. He observed that when wickedness gets to the end of its rope it hangs itself. The end of the wicked is not health, or wealth, or virtue, or any permanent gladness, or lasting pleasure, or any established prosperity. When the pursuer of unlawful pleasure gets put out of life he does not go out with joy and he is not led forth with peace. The last end of sin has a very bitter and inveterate sting in it. How hopeless is the devotee of enjoyment as he leaves even the chance of climbing over the barriers that encircle all good things behind him!

If men would visit poor houses, hospitals, asylums and jails oftener they might learn what kind of a living people get who think that the world owes them much but forget what they owe the world. If men would consider that the nature of things is so calculated that it always blesses the good citizen of the universe and invariably curses the bad one, they would be more ready to invest their abilities and energies in industrious and patient labor for late but sure results of good. If men would not try to pluck pleasure before it is ripe! If they would refuse to take stock in all enterprises that are built on the false foundations that are laid by that principal promoter and adversary, Satan, what a lot of loss would be saved!

For the stock in all wrong concerns is always valueless. The currency of sin is not worth 100,000 marks to the dollar. The notes of the Devil always go to protest. It is better to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Unto achieved character must all things come. All things belong to righteousness. The faithful farmer gets the full barn. The believer in Christ gets eternal life and those lasting delights that are to be found only at the right hand of God.

Meet temptation with this truth: it promises pleasure but it pays in pain. Ask the lazy, ask the vicious, ask the dishonest, as they near the end. Poverty, dishonor, disease and death are the real offers of sin. Do not make investments in pain!

THE BEST IN THE OLD AND NEW RELIGIOUS SONGS

Rev. E. O. Sellers says in the Baptist Messenger of Shreveport, La., in the issue of June 21:

"The answer to the problem of how to conserve the best of the old and at the same time make use of the best of the new songs is to secure leaders of culture, men of refinement and discrimination, and never be party to the use of the vulgar, the tawdry and the cheap. Pastors and church leaders need training in musical appreciation and in turn ought to encourage and support every honest effort for advancement, recognize and encourage the right sort of leadership, and resolutely set their faces against any and all songs that are uncouth and will not stand honest and fair criticism.

"Let us support our training agencies, encourage our fast developing newer leadership, and give music its rightful recognition and proper valuation. Our people ought to learn here on earth to express themselves in song thus preparing them to sing the 'song of Moses and the Lamb' which all will be expected to sing in the new heaven and the new earth."

WHISKY DISTILLERY QUITS

The Great Western Distillery of Peoria, Ill., has put out its fires and locked its doors. This was one of the largest distilleries in the United States, representing a $35,000,000 capital stock of the American Spirits Manufacturing Company, once known as the powerful whisky trust.

How the Dream of a Little Jewish Boy Came True

By Rev. Solomon Birnbaum

MANY years ago a little Jewish boy stole out one night from his bed, went to the back of the house unseen, and there alone began to look up to heaven and to wait till it opened.

It was the eve of Pentecost, the Jewish Feast of Weeks; and some one had told him that on that night when the holy law was given to Israel from heaven long, long ago—just in the middle of the night—the heavens would open and those who patiently waited and watched would be able to see the glory inside. And if they had any desire and knew how to express it at the right moment, and were worthy, their prayer would be heard and the desire of their heart fulfilled.

Now that little Jewish boy gazed steadfastly upward to heaven, not even daring to blink his eye-lids for fear that he might miss the supreme moment. He had no wish except the great longing to see what was beyond the deep blue star-covered vault.

All day long he had been reading Bible verses allotted to him by his mother. She, too, had been holding the book before her most of the time reading as many pages as she could—because there was great merit for herself and her children if, on that day when the law was given, she repeated all the ordinances and statutes and commandments found in the five books of Moses and in the Talmud—613 in all.

In the corner of the room by the window, forgetful of all around, his grandfather with white shining beard, had sat from morning till night also reading, reading. When the old man retired to his corner the rest of the family left him alone with the law. "He lives in the 'other world'," they said.

Now that little Jewish boy was longing to see heaven. He had no idea of the hour. His brothers were all asleep, and he was supposed to be asleep, too. And yet alone in the darkness and in solitude, battling against fear and weariness, he was watching for a glimpse of heaven.

But silently, the gentle fairies of slumber gathered round the solitary wide-eyed child, and knowing that it should not be so, hung themselves with all their weight upon his long eye-lashes pulling them gradually down, down.

When he awoke it was broad daylight and his mother was bending over him with a tender smile.

"I wanted to see heaven!" the boy cried with dismay, "now it is too late!"

He was the dreamer of the family—perhaps all the rest, too, had dreams of their own, and he did not know—only he was called the dreamer.

That boy grew up. He read about lands and peoples and also began to think his own thoughts. By degrees the world with its allurements grew bigger and bigger in his heart.

Then again one night, while all the rest in his home were yet asleep, he stole out of his bed and began to be a wanderer over the face of the earth.

On a cliff overlooking the Black Sea he for the first time saw water, water as far as the eye could reach. From the dim line where heaven and sea met came white-crested waves across the dark-green deep hastening, crowding, chasing each other till they broke at his feet. Long he stood contemplating this wondrous sight—then he began to dream.

The white-crested waves became people—their noise, the roar of the multitudes—and they all came with tremulous haste to lay their strength at his feet.

Strange, lying dreams!

The world with its allurements failed utterly—and then some one placed in his hands a little book which spoke of heaven.

For a whole night he again kept vigil and read this book that spoke of heaven, and there he learned that his Father in heaven was looking down upon him with great tenderness, and also of the Good Shepherd who came down to earth and was a friend of the lonely and broken ones.

Previous to his leaving home his mother had been ill for many, many days. All that time he had remained by her bedside, nursed her as best he could; cooked the meals for his brothers who went to school, and had all the care of the home. When his mother was well again she put her hand upon his head and said, "God bless you, my child. He will undoubtedly reward you for what you have done for me." This, his mother's blessing, especially the "Undoubtedly" was his stay and guiding-star through the many dark hours of his wanderings.

It was Pentecost again, the Jewish feast, the anniversary of the same night when that Jewish boy looked up to heaven many years ago. The old longing for heaven came back with double force.

Then somewhere, in a small town in Germany, a man of God rented a hall and invited men and women all round to come and praise and glorify God together. It was a wondrous sight, a multitude with one heart and soul praising and magnifying the Lord.

There it was that at last he saw the heavens opened and viewed the glory of God! For there it was that at last he saw Jesus of Nazareth to be the Messiah, the Saviour of his soul. He saw Him dying, risen, pleading for him at the right hand of God. He saw Him as the Promised One who is coming again in power and great glory. He saw and believed, and the glory of the only begotten of the Father, flooded his soul.

His one and only desire now is to help other little Jewish boys to behold the same glory of God or the face of Jesus Christ. To open heaven for them. To make their dreams come true. To lead them to the Saviour whom to know is eternal life.

A Mother Appeals to Fathers

(Letter No. 1)

"DEAR Mr. Editor:

"It is surprising, and I may say disappointing, to see on your editorial page in a recent issue, that you agree with Mrs. Forbes Robertson Hale as to the training of children, though she seems to refer only to girls.

"Where is your authority for saying we need either mothers or grandmothers to do this? As far as my reading of Scripture goes, it is to fathers that God spake, and told them to speak to their children (Ex. 12:26; Deut. 6:6, 7, 20; Josh. 4:6). Then, if we turn to the New Testament, we find that the apostle when instructing the churches, tells the children to obey their parents, and then turns to the fathers and tells them not to provoke their children, lest they be discouraged (Eph. 6:1-4; Col. 3:20, 21). When writing to Timothy and Titus also, he says the aged women are to teach the younger, and the younger are to bear children and guide the house (1 Tim. 5:14; Titus 2:4).

"As I read, the mother's work consists of nourishing the children's bodies till such time as they can feed themselves, and that fathers are to do the moral and spiritual training. I have never had any fellowship with 'Mothers' Day' apart from fathers, as there cannot be one without the other.

"Our trouble and sorrow is that fathers have neglected their children for several generations, and the natural result is just what we have today.

"In regard to our girls, we must not forget that they are being pushed out into the world of commerce to earn a living, and are facing many things their mothers never had to bear. But the fathers knew, and should have put an armor on their daughters to protect them, instead of finding fault with their mothers, because they are not strong enough to come through unscathed.

"Many, many girls are heroines, and are gaining victories here and now with which those gained by our boys in France and Flanders cannot compare.

"Mr. Editor, prayer daily should be offered for our girls that they may stand, and thanks returned for the many that do. For those who fall, pity; they have been worsted in the fight and more sinned against than sinning, in many cases our boys too.

"One last word. Our churches are empty except for mothers and other women, with few exceptions, and why? Because the fathers do not attend and take the children. It is better to say, "Come" than issue a command, "Go."

"Yours in the Lord's name,

"* * * *"

"Quebec, Canada."

(Letter No. 2)

"Dear Mr. Editor:

"My note has failed of its message seeing you are only 'interested.' I had hoped to awaken you, to ask the question, 'Are these things so?'

"For years the plea has been sent out to ask for a revival and it has not come, as yet. I have asked myself the question, 'Why?' and have kept eyes and ears open, looking and listening for a reply.

"I see the churches well-filled with women and girls, doing their part of the home and foreign mission work, in evangelistic and philanthropic efforts, giving to the utmost of their ability, the money earned each day or week or month. Not as I heard a minister say, not long ago, reaching down into the men's pockets, but earning and spending for the Lord, not stealing as he informed his hearers. And last, but not least, praying daily that the gospel of the grace of God may have free course and be glorified. They attend their own as well as the church prayer meetings, but, where are the men?

"From this, I conclude it is useless to pray for the unsaved until the men who profess His name, take up the neglected duties to their boys and girls; to say to them, 'This is the way, walk ye in it'; to worship at the family altar and at the church altar on Sunday; to teach them their own pleasures and pastimes, and not to do what they do not want them to do. I don't think we should have to blush for our boys and girls then, do you?

"I am hoping, Mr. Editor, you will ask some of your contributors to write on this subject, and if possible get the men to see how their neglect of their God-given duties is leading society down, down.

"Would our Lord, if He came now, have to leave two-thirds of the men behind? I wonder, at times, what the proportion will be in that day?

"Many thanks for saying you will publish my note as it is; it is quite a compliment I know, but that is not what I am anxious for, but the salvation of our boys and girls, and that cannot be apart from their fathers, humanly speaking.

"Yours,

"* * * *"

Mr. Bryan Replies to the Chicago Tribune

VILLA SERENA, Miami, Fla., June 14. "The Editor, Chicago Tribune: 'My attention has been called to a recent editorial in your paper in which you not only misrepresent my position but attempt to ridicule the views of those who, like myself, accept the orthodox interpretation of the Bible. In your attempt to state my views as to the Scriptures, you have not in a single instance stated them correctly and, as I have never said anything that could by any reasonable construction justify your misrepresentations, I am at a loss to know whether your mistakes are wilful or merely evidence of indifference as to the facts.

"If I were alone in my views, I might expect to be ridiculed, but it so happens that the views which I hold on this subject are those which are held by a large majority of the church members of all the Christian churches, Catholic and Protestant alike. The present outburst of criticism was aroused by the action of the Presbyterian General Assembly in reaffirming a pronouncement made thirteen years ago. I supported the action taken at the late General Assembly held in Indianapolis last month, but as it was a reaffirmation, in the exact words used in 1910, I do not know why I should be singled out for ridicule.

Mentions Five Points

"The position of the church on the five points is as follows:

"1. It is an essential doctrine of the Word of God and our standards that the Holy Spirit did so inspire, guide and move the writers of Holy Scripture as to keep them from error.

"2. It is an essential doctrine of the Word of God and our standards that our Lord Jesus Christ was born of the Virgin Mary.

"3. It is an essential doctrine of the Word of God and our standards that Christ offered up Himself a sacrifice to satisfy divine justice and to reconcile us to God.

"4. It is an essential doctrine of the Word of God and of our standards concerning our Lord Jesus Christ, that on the third day He rose again from the dead with the same body with which He suffered, with which also He ascended into heaven, and there sitteth at the right hand of His Father, making intercession.

"5. It is an essential doctrine of the Word of God as the supreme standard of our faith that our Lord Jesus showed His power and love by working mighty miracles. This working was not contrary to nature, but superior to it.

No Advantage Taken

"As the vote was by roll call there was no advantage taken of the opposition—in fact, it is quite safe to say that most of those who voted against the reaffirmation of these doctrines did so for other reasons than for opposition to the principles stated. The chairman of the majority report expressed his willingness to have these principles embodied in the majority report.

"I think it is safe to say that not more than one hundred out of nine hundred would have voted "No" if the referendum had been taken on these principles by themselves, separated from the other questions. Among the members of the church the proportion would be much larger.

Baptist Action Similar

"Only a few days before the action taken by the Presbyterians, the Southern Baptists at Kansas City made a pronouncement identical in substance and almost identical in language. Dr. Mullins, the president of the largest Protestant theological seminary in the United States, was presiding officer, and his statement of the church's position was declared by the convention to represent that denomination. The part of his address covering these points reads as follows:

> 'We record again our unwavering adherence to the supernatural elements in the Christian religion. The Bible is God's revelation of Himself through men moved by the Holy Spirit, and is our sufficient, certain authoritative guide in religion. Jesus Christ was born of the Virgin Mary through the power of the Holy Spirit. He was the divine and eternal Son of God. He wrought miracles, healing the sick, casting out demons and raising the dead. He died as the vicarious, atoning Saviour of the world and was buried. He arose again from the dead. The tomb was emptied of its contents. In His risen body He appeared many times to His disciples. He ascended to the right hand of the Father. He will come again in person, the same Jesus who ascended from the Mount of Olives.'

Gives Evolution Attitude

"If you deny that these utterances represent the views of orthodox Christians in all the denominations, let your readers have your proof; if you admit that I am in harmony with the Christians of the nation and of the world, then your ridicule is aimed at the Christian church rather than at myself. Do you want your readers to understand that that is your attitude?

"You also misrepresent my attitude on the teaching of Darwinism. My views are set forth in a resolution unanimously adopted by the Legislature of Florida, expressing it as the sense of the Legislature 'that it is improper and subversive of the best interest of the people of this state for any professor, teacher or instructor in the public schools and colleges of this state, supported in whole or in part by public taxation, to teach or permit to be taught atheism or agnosticism or to teach as true, Darwinism or any other hypothesis that links man in blood relationship to any other form of life.' Please note that the objection is not to the teaching of the evolutionary hypothesis as a hypothesis, but to teaching of it as true or as a proven fact. This was the language of the resolution which I introduced at the Presbyterian General Assembly, which was defeated by a substitute which went part of the way and which, in its wording, recognized the injury that is done to students by the teaching of materialistic evolution.

Total Abstinence Pledge

"From the space that you devote to the resolution, adopted by the assembly, urging total abstinence upon preachers, teachers, church members, and students, and endorsing pledge signing, one might suspect that your reference to the Bible was merely an introduction to the critiism of total abstinence. Total abstinence is not a new idea; we have had many total abstinence societies in the United States. Lincoln was a teetotaler. The Women's Christian Temperance Union requires a total abstinence pledge of its members, and the Anti-Saloon League has secured a great many signatures to its temperance pledge. All the churches indorse total abstinence societies. We have a fraternity, the Good Templars, who have built their organization upon a temperance pledge. Everybody understands that individual total abstinence is the most effective support that can be given to prohibition. The Presbyterian church has now gone on record in favor of total abstinence by its preachers, teachers, members, and students, and I doubt not the other churches, which have contributed so largely to the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment, will give their support to total abstinence.

Asks About Miracles

"It is rather interesting to see The Tribune ridiculing the orthodox interpretation of the Bible and then clinging so tenaciously to one miracle—the changing of water into wine. May we not hope that, having been convinced of the truthfulness of this one miracle, The Tribune will finally admit that the record of other miracles is likewise reliable? But, honestly now, does The Tribune really think that the liquor forces will be able to appropriate the 'blood-stained banner of the Cross'?

"We are, Mr. Editor, engaged in a controversy which church members, whether conservative or radical, regard as a very serious one—a contest upon the result of which depends the power of the Christian church to prosecute its work. Is it asking too much of The Tribune—which is the largest paper in Illinois, and which, I believe, makes even a more ambitious claim to consideration—to state its position on the questions at issue so that its readers may be able to understand its point of view? If The Tribune regards religious questions as outside its domain it can consistently ignore them, but it cannot consistently ridicule the attitude of a majority of the Christian church without at least stating its own position.

Advantage Held by Paper

"A daily paper has a great advantage over the individual; it reaches a large number of readers and can daily reiterate and defend its views, while the individual is limited in the number he can reach and in the opportunity to reach them repeatedly—but the newspaper's power brings with it a responsibility for its proper use.

"In politics one must expect criticism, and one who discusses religious subjects should not object to criticism, but surely in religious discussions, if not in political ones, we have a right to expect candor and frankness and some approach to truth. The editorial to which I call your attention was not characterized by either candor or truthfulness; but I take it for granted that The Tribune would not want it to represent its habitual attitude on either religion or temperance.

"Very truly yours,
"W. J. Bryan."

The Chicago Tribune Answers Mr. Bryan

By a Teacher in the Moody Bible Institute

ON another page in this issue is a reprint of the reply of the Hon. William Jennings Bryan to an editorial reflection upon him in the Chicago Tribune. That journal with its accustomed eye for a good thing gave to Mr. Bryan's reply the first column on its first page, and then began to cast about for the best way to get even with him.

The editor bethought himself of the Presbyterian ministers and theological professors in Chicago, of whom there are many, and among whom he felt reasonably sure he would find some of the right sort. There are six on the staff of the Moody Bible Institute, but none of them happened to be called upon. Those who were called upon, however, were of the kind who were all for "progress" as the term goes, and who therefore have the ears and hearts of the public with them on religious matters, while Mr. Bryan stands for that kind of preaching in our pulpits and that kind of teaching in our seminaries which is called "static," and which arouses a popular outcry when it is insisted on.

But why this prejudice about "static"? Some things must be static for human life and thought to build upon. Even in natural science there is a department of scientific study called "Statics." There are no dynamics without statics. The one cannot do without the other, and must not be confused with the other. To mix them up in thought means confusion, in reality means chaos. And with all the scientific progress of our days, taking even the doctrine of relativity into account, we must assume, for practical purposes at least, something unchanging, something permanent.

So then, if this is the case in physical science why should we object to it in religion? A vital element in religion represents in the moral and rational sphere what "statics" is in natural science.

To take a particular point. One of the fundamental beliefs of the Christian church is the resurrection of Jesus Christ. The ministers interviewed by the Tribune, have a horror of the "static" and would apply "progress" to this fact.

But how are they to do it? As far as one can see, this can only be accepted as a historical fact or denied. In the understanding of it and in its bearing upon life there may be unlimited progress, but to substitute these explanations for the fact itself amounts to nothing less than actual denial.

That this is so, hearken to what a theological professor said to the Tribune: "A man does not have to leave the Presbyterian church even if he cannot believe the five points (enumerated by Mr. Bryan, of which the resurrection of our Lord was one)."

Perhaps the professor means to express the hope that such a man may remain in the church till he does believe in these points and becomes a Christian, with which one could heartily sympathize. But if that man is a minister and a teacher in a theological seminary, the sooner he leaves the better, for his presence in the church is a danger.

The question also whether a man like this may honestly remain in such a position is pertinent. One of the ministers who came to the aid of the Tribune in his plea for "progress" said, "that the young men trained in the modern scientific method regard the methods of the seminaries as unscientific and the institutions as 'static' in character."

But if so, what shall we do with them? Why, the only thing to do is to teach them the difference between the various subjects of study, and that one cannot solve historical problems by the mathematical method, or a moral difficulty by the law of gravitation, or sum up a religious question in physical terms such as weight, measure or volume. Above all, no scientific "logy" can ever take the place of the religious experience of being born again.

Finally, although it is incumbent upon us older folks, to be as lenient and considerate as possible to the opinions of our juniors, yet it would be cowardly and well nigh bordering on madness, if, instead of facing their questions and leading them to a better understanding of the problems before them, we gave up our task and allowed them to remodel our theology and laws and institutions according to their immature and untried ideas. The result would be pure anarchy.

What President Mullins Said at Kansas City

(Mr. Bryan's reply to the Chicago Tribune, reprinted on another page, quotes in part the clear and strong testimony of President Mullins, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, in his opening address as president of the Southern Baptist Convention. We think it of sufficient value and importance at the present crisis, to give it to our readers again in the light of its context on the subject of evolution in our schools and colleges.—Editors.)

DR. MULLINS said:

"We recognize the greatness and value of the service which modern science is rendering to the cause of truth in uncovering the facts of the natural world. We believe that loyalty to fact is a common ground of genuine science and the Christian religion. We have no interest or desire in covering up any fact in any realm of research. But we do protest against certain unwarranted procedures on the part of some so-called scientists: First, in making discoveries or alleged discoveries in physical nature a convenient weapon of attack upon the facts of religion; second, in using the particular sciences, such as psychology, biology, geology and various others, as if they necessarily contained knowledge pertaining to the realm of the Christian religion, setting aside the supernatural; third, in teaching as facts what are merely hypotheses.

"The evolution doctrine has long been a working hypothesis of science, but its best exponents freely admit that the cause of the origin of species has not been traced, nor has any proof been forthcoming that man is not the direct creation of God as recorded in Genesis.

"We protest against the imposition of this theory upon the minds of our children in denominational or public schools as if it were a definite and established truth of science. We insist that this and all other theories be dealt with in a truly scientific way, that is, in careful conformity to establish facts.

"We record again our unwavering adherence to the supernatural elements in the Christian religion. The Bible is God's revelation of Himself through man moved by the Holy Spirit, and is our sufficient, certain and authoritative guide in religion. Jesus Christ was born of the Virgin Mary through the power of the Holy Spirit. He was the divine and eternal Son of God. He wrought miracles—healing the sick, casting out demons, raising the dead. He died as the vicarious, atoning Saviour of the world and was buried. He arose again from the dead. The tomb was emptied of its contents. In His risen body He appeared many times to His disciples. He ascended to the right hand of the Father. He will come again in person, the same Jesus who ascended from the Mount of Olives.

"We believe that adherence to the above truths and facts is a necessary condition of service for teachers in our Baptist schools. These facts of Christianity in no way conflict with any fact in science. We do not sit in judgment upon the scientific views of teachers of science. We grant them the same freedom of research in their realm that we claim for ourselves in the realm of religion. We do insist upon a positive content of faith in accordance with the preceding statements as a qualification for acceptable service in Baptist schools.

"The supreme issue today is between naturalism and supernaturalism. We stand unalterably for the supernatural in Christianity. Teachers in our schools should be careful to free themselves from any suspicion of disloyalty on this point. In the present period of agitation and unrest they are obligated to make their positions clear. We pledge our support to all schools and teachers who are thus loyal to the facts of Christianity as revealed in the Scriptures.'

These words of Dr. Mullins were adopted as the sentiment of the convention of over 3,000 delegates, with only two votes in the negative.

The Baptist Bible Union Outlines Its Program

THE Baptist Bible Union of North America is preparing for the greatest battle, or rather war, known to ecclesiastical history.

The committee has been in session in Grand Rapids for four days, and it has determined alike its line of defense and aggression. Members present here, Dr. T. T. Shields, of Toronto; Dr. R. E. Neighbour, of Elyria, O.; Dr. J. F. Norris, of Fort Worth, Tex.; Dr. W. B. Riley, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Dr. O. W. VanOsdel, of Grand Rapids, Mich. The Union will meet next year in the same city with the Northern Baptist Convention. Its members of that convention will fight for the adoption of a revised New Hampshire Confession of Faith; they will also back the demand made in the late convention at Atlantic City that Baptist rationalists such as deny the inerrancy of Scripture, the virgin birth, the substitutionary atonement, the bodily resurrection and the second coming of Christ be no longer honored with important program places. While being themselves educated men and advocates of education, they will not approve the "Standardization of the Ministry," on the ground that the call to the ministry is divine, and men have no right to fix conditions not biblically imposed.

They will also make a fight against the autocracy of the ecclesiastical machine in favor of the competency and autonomy of the churches. They will demand that all professors in Baptist schools and all missionaries sent out by Baptist Boards subscribe to this Baptist Confession before their appointments are received, and in cases of those already in office, in order to continue.

They will oppose further entangling alliances, such especially as fellowship with and financial aid to "The Federal Council of Churches of Christ of America." They hold this Council to be nothing other than a medium of Liberalism. There was said to be an entire unanimity in the committee on all these points and the new organization of Fundamentalists among Baptists proposes an aggressive campaign of organization to include every State in the Union and every Province in Canada by October 31.—[Baptist Temple News.

Spiritual Awakening at Helena, Ark.

Meetings conducted by the Stephens-Storrs Evangelistic Party and reported by Miss Helen Byrnes

NEVER have we had such a meeting. The entire city and the surrounding country was stirred. Some date a meeting from the time of the opening until the close of the campaign, but the Helena meeting began four years ago. Inquiries came to us regarding the possibility of a date, but when Mr. Storrs visited the field to investigate conditions, he found them not hungry enough for a revival.

Time went on, and again came the inquiry from Helena, and again Mr. Storrs visited the field. They were still not ready; a meeting can be God-planned or man-planned. If God-planned the results will be far-reaching; if man-planned He will not give as great a blessing. But all of the four years we prayed that Helena would awaken to her need, and in the hearts of a few of the church people fires began to burn.

In January and February of this year the Lord called us to Blytheville, Ark., a big cotton section in the northern part of the state. At the beginning of the meeting came a letter to Evangelist Stephens from the Episcopal rector of Helena, and one from the Presbyterian pastor, begging us to come to them when through at Blytheville. Then other letters followed, wires and long distance phone calls, and we knew that Helena was ready for a meeting. They were desperate, hungry and sick of the conditions the young people had gotten into.

The advance man was sent to the field and the executive and sub committees were organized. The building committee got busy with the tabernacle.

Volunteers were called for and the tabernacle was started.

The women served the noon dinners to the men who built, and thus began a unity of spirit that was carried through the entire period of the campaign.

The devotional committee had been organized, and while the men built the tabernacle they began to erect the altars of prayer. The city was divided into districts and a captain appointed over each district. Preliminary circles of prayer were started two weeks prior to the opening of the campaign, and when the total came in for the first week it numbered over seven hundred, and the total of the week preceding the opening date was over nine hundred.

February 18 was the opening date, all the churches co-operating. Evangelist Stephens could not be there the first three days because of illness, but the meeting began on the scheduled date for the people were not tied to man but were trusting God.

A program of events from week to week will show the progress of the meeting and the growth spiritually. Evangelist Stephens preached morning and evening with extra group meetings in the city and surrounding towns. Mr. Storrs, the chorus leader and men's worker, had the prayer meetings for men; Miss Byrnes had the women's work, business girls in Bible study, Personal Workers classes; Mr. Young, the boys and young men together with his piano work; Mrs. Young the high school girls, and Miss Burbridge the grade girls and solo work. With all these group meetings came a host of personal interviews which kept us going from morning until midnight nearly every day.

The first week the circles of prayer continued for three mornings in the homes and then terminated in a union circle in the tabernacle annex on Friday morning. The annex is our power room, and is usually built at the back of the tabernacle. We use it for group meetings and for most of the extra prayer meetings. In Helena this building was at the right of the platform and we used it for overflow crowds. Over the choir platform was a banner with the motto "PRAYER CHANGES THINGS," and no one could come into the building without seeing those words Prayer did change things for Helena.

While the women gathered for prayer in the various homes at 10 a. m., Mr. Storrs met with the business men at the tabernacle. They began with forty-six for the first morning and grew until the number totaled over seven hundred. At 6:15 Miss Byrnes met with the business girls of the city, the church women serving them supper. These young women gathered for Bible study and prayer, and the interest grew from twenty-four the first night until over two hundred girls had been touched through these hours. Mr. Young met the boys and young men at 7 p. m. in the annex for prayer and for helpful messages; Mrs. Young had the high school girls for prayer on the choir platform at 7.

Then at 7:30 the great evening service with Mr. Stephens preaching.

The second week, the men closed their stores for the 10 o'clock morning hour of prayer.

At the union circle of prayer on Friday morning of the second week

Ninth Annual Conference of the Hebrew Christian Alliance of America, Trenton, N. J., June 4-8

By Rev. Solomon Birnbaum

THE outstanding features of this conference were its spiritual atmosphere and business-like proceedings. Each day began with a season of meditation and prayer. The morning and afternoon sessions were devoted to business among the members, the evening meetings were given to the general public.

There was a solemn and whole-hearted reaffirmation of the original aim and purpose of the Alliance to stand as a corporate witness to the saving power of Christ among the Jews, and to do its utmost to promote the work of the Lord among the chosen people and the world at large.

A budget of $7,500 for the coming year was voted. Only about 35 members and delegates were present when the vote was taken, but they personally handed to the treasurer in cash and pledges nearly $800, promising to raise at least $2,000 more from their Hebrew Christian brethren. Having done the utmost themselves—the Hebrew Christians are members of churches whose burdens they are also helping to bear—the Alliance plans to go to the Christian public for the rest of the amount. They hope to organize at least three conferences a year in various parts of the country and bring the cause of Hebrew Christianization before the church of God.

All the officers of the Alliance are doing their work without pay. The money is to be distributed as follows: $3,000 for the support of the chair in Jewish Missions at the Moody Bible Institute; $1,000 to enable young Hebrew Christians to come to the Institute for training for the service of the Lord; $500 for the relief of needy Hebrew Christians especially in cases of sickness. The rest to go for the Quarterly, for office expenses and for the establishment of a home for aged Hebrew Christians who otherwise have no home.

Ninth Hebrew Christian Alliance Conference at Trenton, N. J., June 4-10, 1923

One afternoon of the conference was given to reports of the work among Israel and the discussion of methods.

At the public meeting on the same evening, the Rev. D. J. Newgewirtz gave a most thrilling story of what the Lord was doing in his hometown in Poland during his visit to his brother who is a ruler of the synagogue; a story which should be heard by all lovers of Israel and which will hearten them in their faith that one day all Israel will be saved and that their receiving will be life from the dead.

Mr. Newgewirtz is a missionary to Jews in Montreal in connection with the Episcopal church of Canada, but he will be glad to answer calls anywhere to tell his story before God's people, in the interest of the Alliance.

Mr. Max I. Reich was re-elected president of the Alliance, Mr. Newgewirtz vice-president. Mr. Jos. R. Lewek, 1216 Washington Ave., Bronx, New York, continues as secretary and treasurer for the coming year.

The Hebrew Fellowship Circle of Chicago extended the invitation to the Alliance to hold its next Annual Conference in Chicago, and the invitation was cordially accepted.

Seven Times Twelve

By W. H. McCreery

This poem of eighty-four lines, (seven stanzas of twelve lines each), was written and read on the occasion of the eighty-fourth birthday anniversary of a lady in Loveland, Col., by the author who was also in his eighty-fourth year.

I

The Psalmist's three-score years and ten
You've seen—then full fourscore:
And He who filled life's measure full
Has heaped yours with four more.
These years were crowned with mercies too,
From Him, the only wise;
And what seemed ills you often found
Were blessings in disguise.
You used to teach some factoring
Inside the schoolroom door,
Today let's try some simple stunts
In factoring eighty-four.

II

Factors just two I wish to stress.
The wondrous twelves and sevens,
Which God has writ so large and oft,
In Word and world and heavens.
Seven is God's primal measuring line
In reckoning sacred time—
Cycles of days, weeks, months and years—
Millenniums sublime.
The seven hued rainbow still declares
Deluge shall come no more.
God's seven-fold Spirit 'tis which forms,
Adorns and doth restore.

III

Seven were the planets known of old,
And seven the Pleiades,
All music sends its seven notes
To vibrate on the breeze.
Seven is God's covenant number,
Composed of three plus four,
Telling of perfect harmony,
When God doth man restore.
The Lord in glory walks between
Seven candlesticks of gold.
And in his right hand seven stars
The prophet did behold.

IV

Seven are the seals on title scroll
Of man's lost heritage.
Seven trumpets and seven bowls of wrath
Must consummate the age.
Twelve sign's comprise the Zodiac,
Twelve months the solar year,
Twelve numbers on the dial plate
That charts our work-day here.
And twelve are chosen Israel's tribes
Twelve Christ's apostles, too,
And at twelve gates twelve angels guard
Jerusalem, the New.

V

Days in a week, by months in year
Give product eighty-four:
Your life's a poem—stanzas seven,
In each twelve lines—no more.
In the divine arithmetic
God wondrously entwines
Your earthly years—their factors, too,
With planetary times.
Our years are months on Jupiter
Up in the second heaven,
If on that giant world you'd lived
You'd be a girl—just seven.

VI

While eighty-four you celebrate
Of journey's round the sun,
Your sister twin on Uranus
Has just completed one.
And if on Neptune's far-flung orb
Your life you did unfold,
Your life no longer counts in years—
Just infant—six months old.
While wandering thus afar in space,
Time values fade away:
What were Methuselah's centuries
To decades of today.

VII

For life is not mere length of years,
Rather what race we've run,
Of what events we've been a part -
What humble service done.
We've seen some great wrongs righted,
Hoar thrones come tumbling down,
Some leveling of the highway
He'll tread who takes the crown.
We've moved with His procession
We're moving with it still,
Meanwhile we wait His coming, or
His summons—as He will.

AN ILL-ADVISED ADVOCATE

The Christian Statesman

The Pacific Christian Advocate is worried again. This time its feelings are bruised because of statements made through this magazine by a present citizen of Utah, concerning the political perfidy of Mormon Prophet Grant. By quirky expressions, The Advocate conveys the impression that the National Reform Association has some venal interest in a misrepresentation of Mormonism and that the Association's chairman of board of publication is peevish.

It may enlighten, even if it does not reform The Advocate, to learn, as we now explicitly state, that our special articles on Mormondom and Mormonism are written by a present day resident in Salt Lake City. This correspondent enjoys in Utah a high reputation for veracity and shrewdness. No one possesses better opportunities for observation. The Advocate once boasted that it had inside information from Zion. Will it not permit others to enjoy their own similar privilege? In more than a page, The Advocate makes inferential and even direct defense of Prophet Grant's political perfidy; but also it seeks to cloud the issue by introducing extraneous matters.

Here is the whole issue as our correspondent presented it:

Prophet Grant announced last summer that the church and its ruling authorities would not interfere in politics during the campaign which then was coming on. He broke his word. He did interfere. And many American citizens in Utah are resenting his interference. In such an issue there is no room for outside venality or peevishness.

The Advocate would better get on the right side of the Mormon question. Its continuous straddling must be as painful to itself as surprising to members of the mighty Methodist church. For one thing, The Advocate says that President Heber J. Grant has been a friend of prohibition for years. Now the fact is that Heber J. Grant, as one of the ruling heirarchs of the Mormon church which controls the great Zion store in Mormondom, was himself a director of that mercantile corporation; and the Zion co-operative mercantile institution, whose sign bears the "all-seeing eye," was for nearly forty years a wholesale and retail dealer in whiskey. It supplied the individual bottle and it supplied the saloons of surrounding territory. The Advocate may exhaust itself in wordy argument but it will never make anyone believe that a man who sold whiskey and took the profit of that trade in sin and death, was a friend of prohibition.

The Advocate declares that it desires to introduce The Christian Statesman to the truth about Mormonism. Before officiating as introducer, The Advocate itself would better get acquainted with both parties. The introduction of people who know each other well, by a total stranger to both, is insolence and ignorance combined.

EUROPEAN PROTESTANTISM AT A CRISIS

Church Federation Bulletin

Dr. Adolph Keller, general secretary of the European Central Bureau for Relief Work of the Evangelical Churches, spoke on the present condition of European Protestantism at a recent meeting of the Commission on World Friendship, in part as follows:

"European Protestantism is passing through one of its most critical hours. There is a saying that, from the military standpoint, France has won the war; from the political, England; from the economic, America; from the cultural, the Jews; and from the religious standpoint, the Roman Catholic church. That means, at the same time, that Protestantism, considering its general situation, is severely menaced in spite of many hopeful signs of life in certain Protestant countries of Europe. Many churches and church buildings in France, Galicia, Letvia, Alsace-Lorraine, and a great part of the home missionary work and benefit organizations are menaced with ruin.

"There is also alarming news about the condition of many pastors and their families. In some countries the middle class is vanishing—a social fact of far reaching importance. Suicide is becoming frequent among these poor people. The lot of the children is heartrending, especially in the larger cities; 10 per cent of them have no under-clothing, and nearly as many are under-nourished or menaced with tuberculosis.

"In certain countries, evangelistic minorities are hit, not by persecution, but by land loss and language loss. The religious press is disappearing. In a single country about 300 church periodicals have ceased to appear in the last four months.

"The churches in neutral countries have organized a general Protestant religious work, decided upon at the first Protestant Assembly gathered last year in Copenhagen. But these five neutral countries—Denmark, Holland, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland, with their fifteen millions of Protestant souls, are confronted with the need in fourteen European countries with more than fifty millions of souls. These small countries, which are themselves under economic pressure, have collected in the last four months about $200,000 for their suffering sister churches, but they cannot do more.

"They look, therefore, to America, and hope that American Protestants will not follow the same policy of isolation which is followed by the nation. The task for the next years will be to save, in co-operation with the helping churches of Europe, European Protestantism as a whole."

THE SOLID ROCK

Globe-Democrat (St. Louis)

It has been a long time since the Christian churches were so torn with doctrinal dissensions as now, and there are many who fear that they will bring disaster to the church. But the records of history prove that conflicts of opinion have but served, as a rule, to spread and increase the influence of the church, to put it upon firmer ground; and in no case have they retarded but momentarily the progress of the church. Religion being founded upon faith, which is the outcome of belief, must be, and has always been, affected by differences of opinion. Almost from the beginning the church was the arena of fierce discussions of theological questions that were considered fundamental. The heresies of Gnosticism, Ebionitism and Manichaeism successively filled the church with controversies for several centuries, and every succeeding age has developed its own battles of opinion, precipitated by men who, whether right or wrong, had the courage to think for themselves and to give voice to their convictions.

Yet Christianity has not checked its progress, nor has truth suffered from the conflict. On the contrary, the inevitable effect of such discussions is to arouse increased interest in religion, to awaken passive faith into the activity of contest. Division has but created competition in the spread of Christianity, under whatever subordinate names assumed by separatists, and, although the passions aroused and the deeds done have often been far from Christian, the net result in almost every case has been not only an advance of Christianity in the physical sense, but an advance of Christian thought and conviction to a higher plane. Not infrequently the heresies of today have become the orthodoxy of tomorrow, because in the end they have appealed with overwhelming force to the reason and the hearts of men. We smile now at many of the questions over which furious battles were waged in the past, but it was only by struggle that truth in such instances could conquer error.

And truth, whether orthodox or heterodox, has seldom failed to emerge from such struggles in clearer, stronger light. Even when temporarily obscured it has ultimately shown the stronger for the cloud that covered its face for a brief time. For truth, whatever its form, its nature, its trend or its influence, is indestructible. If God is truth, as we must believe, it may be assumed as an invariable postulate that all truth is from Him, and accepting this we may feel confident that no truth can harm His cause. That science can in any way weaken His foundations is a notion that in itself implies a doubt of his strength. All science has ever done has been but to reveal the greater heights and depths of His glory. And it is no less true of so-called scientific research that whatever it discloses that is indubitable truth can be no manner of menace to Him, whether revealed by His lovers or His enemies; for however it may necessitate changes of human opinion it is, in fact, but a further revelation of Him, if it be truth, indeed.

There is no danger to Christianity in interrogation or investigation. It is not founded upon sands, but on a rock.

MODERNISM ON MISSION FIELDS DOOMED

Bulletin of the Bible Union of China

During a discussion on Christian fellowship at the International Christian Conference in Shanghai recently, Rev. Walter Lowrie, D.D., a very distinguished Presbyterian missionary, said, among other things:

"The supreme condition of all leadership in the planting of a living church of Christ among the Chinese people is implicit faith in the whole Bible, and obedience to it as God's inviolable record of His deeds among men, penned by men who spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

"Men who juggle with its statement of fact, men who would strip it of its supernatural character, who lend a friendlier ear to current winds of teaching than to its clear, consistent, changeless witness to the salvation that is through the death and resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ, are ipso facto, precluded from lasting leadership of the real church of Christ in this land.

"On October 23, 1921, in the 'Old First' (Presbyterian) Church, New York City, there was preached a sermon by a well-known theological teacher, in which he held up to mirth and scorn the Bible records of God's wondrous doings amongst His chosen people in ancient days, laughed at the pre-scientific view of the world in the Hebrew Scriptures, at 'fishes swallowing men,' at 'the left-overs of medieval theology' and our 'belated hymns,' and gave the impression that the preaching of a gospel in China based upon the trustworthiness of the whole Bible as history was 'backward-looking obscurantism impossible of acceptance by an educated mind.'

"I declare with all the energy of my being that such teaching as that, such giving the lie to God's great Book, such contemptuous rejection of that simple faith in God's Word which intelligent people who are supporting the missionary enterprise at the base in the West, and we who are pushing it here, are presenting from the pages of that Book, such teaching is a doomed thing.

"Let no one dream that men or women, however brilliant or disciplined in mind, can hold any permanent leadership in the missionary movement or in the living church in China, who proffer negations of the Sadducean sort, a mutilated Bible, and the denial of the central teaching,—Christ crucified (and risen again) in the place of you and me and for the sins of the world."

THE GREATEST BOOK ON
"DISPENSATIONAL TRUTH"
IN THE WORLD

This book is bound in cloth, Atlas form, size 10½x11 inches, and is one inch thick. It contains 34 chapters, 300 columns of reading matter, equivalent to an ordinary book of 450 pages, and also 42 splendid Prophetical Charts, 9x20 inches, covering two pages, 48 one page charts, and numerous cuts. The Charts are simple, clear, uniform in style, and present every phase of "Dispensational Truth." It is the result of 35 years' study of the "Prophetic Word." The book is SANE, not a "TIME SETTER," contains no speculative matter, is not made up of quotations from other writers, but is based solely on the Scriptures from the "FUTURIST STANDPOINT." It is of permanent value, and a mine of information on "Prophetic Truth" for the busy Pastor, Evangelist, Bible Teacher, and all lovers of the Word. It is largely used in Bible Schools all over the world.

TESTIMONIALS

"Mr. Larkin is a 'Master Workman' in 'Rightly Dividing the Word'." (Rev. I. M. Haldeman, D. D.)

"It is the best collection of 'Dispensational Charts' ever published. I know of none to compare with it." (Rev. Frank S. Weston, Toronto Bible College).

"It is the most remarkable publication on 'Dispensational Truth' in existence. The Charts are masterly and cover the entire range of Bible History and Prophecy. With the Scofield Bible and this book before him the student will be well equipped to secure an all-around knowledge of the 'Plan of the Ages.'" (Rev. Charles C. Cook).

"Pastor Clarence Larkin has published what may be called the most elaborate and exhaustive specimen of Biblical and Dispensational Cartography that has ever been designed." (Rev. F. W. Farr, D. D.)

What Can Be Done Toward Abolishing Poverty

Luke 16:19-30.

As an aim and objective the abolishing of poverty is good, the amelioration of suffering is better, the elimination of sin is best. Underneath the problem of poverty and suffering is the bigger problem of sin, or if the word be preferred—selfishness. Sin and selfishness are practically synonymous. When man fell from God he fell into himself, self became the center around which all his interests moved and do move, others are considered only to the point of convenience. That great moral quality, love, which seeks the good of another, is so rare as to cause comment when it shows itself.

The supremacy of selfishness indicates the sovereignity of Satan. For this purpose was the Son of God manifested, that He might destroy the works of Satan (1 John 3:8). This He does by dethroning self and enthroning Himself. He is God, and God is love. There is great significance in the words, "Ye must be born again." The old nature is selfish and self-centered. It can never be changed. Nothing availeth but a new creature. See 2 Corinthians 5:17 and Galatians 6:15, 16. To ignore this is to invite disaster. Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? (Job 14:4).

Underneath all plans for right relationships in commerce and in industry, there must be right principles. A structure of righteousness can never be reared upon a foundation of unrighteousness, and no foundation of righteousness can be laid apart from Jesus Christ and His saving grace, whether it be for personal salvation or the establishment of right relation in civic and social life. Mr. Rockefeller's industrial creed recognized this—"I believe that the application of right principles never fails to effect right relations, that the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life. Forms are wholly secondary, attitude and spirit are all important." To this may be added the words of Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston, who appeals to human beings everywhere to realize that the way of Christ is the way of the only adequate light of life for man. He goes on to say that "Christ's philosophy of life is the only one that compasses the whole range of facts involved in the right relations of men to God, and to their fellows. The salvation of God through Jesus Christ is proving in every land, in every class and condition of men to be the transforming, uplifting, inspiring dynamic which is changing the outlook on life here and hereafter for all who give Christ a place as Lord and Saviour." Surely this is the only way by which one can triumph over poverty, adverse conditions, suffering and sin.

How To Get On In Life
Deuteronomy 8:1-18

In this Scripture, Moses interprets to Israel the significance of their wilderness journeys. The second and third verses are especially applicable in this explanation. "Thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee these forty years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldest keep his commandments or no. And he humbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee with manna, which thou knewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live." In such words, there is defined the meaning of the circumstances through which they were permitted to pass.

To get on in life, one must understand oneself. This understanding can be reached only by acquaintance with the Word of God. This Word imparts the knowledge of the ways of God with men. It explains the nature and reason of things. It begins with God and it declares that "of him and through him and to him are all things," which means that God is the source, channel, and end of all things. There are no unforeseen emergencies with Him.

All the circumstances of life have one end in view, namely, to bring out the real attitude of man towards God. This explains the underlying reason of the ways of God with men. To yield to Him in the various circumstances of life as they arise is the evidence of a right attitude of heart. It spells submission. For all such it is written, "the meek will he guide in judgment and the meek will he teach his way"—His way of forgiveness, of cleansing; His way of justifying and saving; His way of fellowship and service; and His way of grace and glory in Christ Jesus.

As one is taught of God in the understanding of these things, he learns in the best sense of the words, "how to get on in life."

Lessons in the School of Prayer
Matthew 18: 19, 20; 21:18-22; John 14:12

There are grades in the school of prayer, but no graduates. There is always more to follow and never complete attainment. Satisfaction and joy in answered prayer is a matter of endless growth.

The one essential lesson taught in these Scripture verses concerning prayer is that of faith, "If ye have faith." Let these words be pondered, and also the other words, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer believing, ye shall receive."

All through the synoptic Gospels, this essential quality of faith is the outstanding one. In the Gospel according to John, another condition is added which expresses the truth of the believer's union with Christ—"If ye shall ask anything in my name."

Concerning the words of John 14:12, some one has well said, "If this message stood alone, we might well question its possibility of fulfilment and wonder as to the relationship between these 'greater works' and the presence of Christ in heaven with the Father; but, happily the passage continues with an unfolding of another reason why the 'greater works' are possible, throwing a flood of light on the secret of their accomplishment. 'And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son' (14:13).

"After all, then, He it is who proposes, and who alone is able to do these 'greater works'; but He so relates the man of prayer to Himself that He is able to speak as though all this would be accomplished by the man of prayer. O wonderful union with the living Christ! O marvelous possibility! Who other than the man Christ Jesus ever passed beyond the shallow waters of this fathomless, boundless sea of divine possibilities?"

Lessons from the Psalms—A Singing Psalm
Psalm 96:1-13

The word "sing" occurs three times in the first two verses of this psalm. The word "give" occurs three times in verses 7 and 8. All that we can "give" to God directly is praise. Other gifts may be offered indirectly, but praise can be addressed direct to God. "Who so offereth me praise glorifieth me."

The theme of the psalm is found in verse 10, "The Lord reigneth." When this is realized in personal experience, it is natural and easy to "sing unto the Lord a new song," and to show forth His salvation from day to day. The reign of God in the human heart leads to joy and praise. The same truth appears in another form in Ephesians 5:18, 19. First there is the command to "be filled with the Spirit." This corresponds to the reign of God in the heart. Then follow the words, "Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord." God's full salvation evokes joy and praise. It includes forgiveness of sins, peace of mind, victory in conflict, and power for witnessing. It makes available to faith all that Christ died and rose again to secure.

This psalm carries us beyond a present and individual salvation to the time when the earth shall be filled with the glory of God. In reading verses 3 and 10 of this psalm, substitute the word "nations" for the word "heathen." This will give more clearly the future aspect of God's salvation, that time when the prayer which we often pray will be answered, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done, as in heaven so on earth." Read verses 11-13 with this in mind; then turn to Revelation 22:20 and repeat with new interest and longing the closing prayer of the Bible, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

Martha and Mary
Luke 10:38-42; John 11:1-46; John 12:1-9

Golden Text:—"Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her."—Luke 10:42.

In order to properly understand these two characters, it will be necessary to look at the several narratives in which they are brought to our view. These are three in number. We should see them as several scenes dissolving into one majestic portrait. The first picture gives us a view of Mary and Martha as they appeared in the days of sunshine. The second scene depicts them in the day of great sorrow, and the third scene depicts Mary rendering the highest and most intelligent service to her Lord.

I. The Behavior of Martha and Mary in the Days of Sunshine (Luke 10:38-42).

In this picture we see Martha engaged in preparing a meal for Jesus. In her effort to make the best preparation for her honored guest, she became distracted. She not only was cumbered with much serving but she found fault with Mary for not helping her. She not only found fault with her sister, but even censured the Lord for permitting such neglect. Martha has had her followers in all ages; every church knows them. The busy, troubled and fussy women who are engaged in service for the Lord with little patience for those who sit at the feet of Jesus. Mary sat at Jesus' feet and heard His word. She had taken her turn in the service as the word "also" would imply. She did not neglect service but had the keenness of perception to discern that communion with the Lord was more prized by Him than the unusual care about the many things connected with the serving of a meal. Both of these women loved the Lord and it is impossible to say which loved Him more, but Martha received His rebuke and Mary His commendation. In the days of sunshine in this home, Mary made the good choice of communion with her Lord.

II. Martha and Mary in the Day of Great Sorrow (John 11:1-46).

The next scene which occupies our attention is on the occasion of the resurrection of Lazarus. In the time of the sickness of Lazarus, these sisters had sent for Jesus. Jesus loved the members of this household and yet, strange to say, He delayed His going to them until after the death of Lazarus. Martha met Him with rebuke saying that if He had been there her brother had not died. This carried with it the censure for His delay under such trying circumstances. This act of Martha called forth some marvelous teachings on the resurrection. After this interview with Martha, she came to Mary with the message of a call from Jesus. Mary was composed and remained in the house until called for. She immediately responded to this call but used the identical words of Martha, but instead of receiving a rebuke, He mingled His tears of sympathy with hers. It seems that the reason she had such composure in this dark hour was that she had patiently sat at His feet and listened to His Word so that she understood the meaning of the tragedy. The difference then in the behavior of these two women in this dark hour was doubtless due to the fact that in the days of sunshine Mary had entered so fully into fellowship with the Lord, and that Martha had lost this grace through her fretfulness. May we so enter into fellowship with the Lord in the days of prosperity that in the hour of the dark shadow we may with calmness of soul behave ourselves.

III. Jesus Entertained at Bethany (John 12:1-9).

At this supper appeared Mary and Martha, and Lazarus who was raised from the dead. Doubtless this service was in grateful appreciation of His help and sympathy in the days of their trial. At this supper Martha was back at her old business of serving, but it would seem with an unruffled disposition. The Lord's rebuke had its desired effect. While engaged in the same service it would seem that she now was able to serve a larger group because the twelve were doubtless with Him, so instead of having to prepare for one guest, she now was to prepare for thirteen. Mary took a pound of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus and wiped them with her hair. This was a token of her great love and devotion. She was back to her accustomed place at the feet of Jesus. Because in the days of sunshine, she sat at the Master's feet listening to His teaching, she was able to pass through the dark shadow of her brother's death, and now when the cross was casting its cruel shadow across Christ's pathway, she with the keen intuition of true love, reads his sorrow and brings her costliest gift as an evidence of her love which withholds nothing from Him. She thus anticipated His death and burial and knowing that she could not minister unto Him then, she renders this service beforehand.

The Lord received this act of love at its full value. It is much better, then, that we show our love to our friends while they live than after they can no longer appreciate it. Against the foul criticism of Judas, Jesus defends Mary. He declared that it was no more of a waste than the ointment placed on the bodies of the dead in embalming. In fact it was doing that very act beforehand unto Him. We should learn from this to so relate ourselves to Jesus in the days when we are well and prosperous and have our friends and relatives with us that in the hour when death and disappointment crosses our pathway, we may be intelligent and composed, and in the hour when intelligent service is to be rendered we may even anticipate as did Mary the opportunities of thus honoring our Lord. Only Mary, of all His disciples, had really understood Jesus when He said He must be crucified and raised again the third day. The announcement of His crucifixion brought unto them dismay and they refused to believe in the resurrection, but Mary came to anoint His body for the burying.

Stephen the Martyr
Acts 6:1-7:60

Golden Text:—"Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation or distress or persecution or famine or nakedness or peril or sword?"—Romans 8:35.

I. Stephen, the Deacon (6:1-8).

The early church was threatened with dissension over suspected partiality in the distribution of alms. Thus we see that as soon as the church had relief from external troubles, difficulties arose from within. Up to this time it would seem that the apostles did all the work. In view of such burdens, perhaps some things had been neglected. However, the church proved itself capable of meeting the emergency. A congregational meeting was called, the case placed before the church, and the church instructed to select seven men of good reputation and spirit-filled to administer the temporalities of the church giving the apostles the necessary time for prayer and the ministry of God's word. Thus we see how that the Spirit-guided church was able to solve its own problems, and how church government developed. Just as the deacon's office sprang out of this dissension, so new needs called forth new officers. Among the seven deacons, Stephen had first place. While engaged in his duties as deacon, he sprang into the light as an eloquent and powerful preacher. So mighty was his ministry that the number of disciples greatly increased, even many of the priests believing.

II. Stephen before the Council (6:9-15).

The success of this movement soon came to be noted by the enemies of Christ.

1. Disputing with Stephen (vv. 9, 10).

Certain foreign speaking Jews took the lead in this controversy. Perhaps the fact that Stephen was a Grecian Jew provoked them to act. He was more than a match for them while the debate was carried along the lines of reason and Scripture. Beaten in this line, they had him arrested and brought before the Council.

2. Charged with Blasphemy (vv. 11-14).

They trumped up this charge and endeavored to support it by secretly finding and inducing men to perjure themselves in their testimony. Stephen showed in his preaching that God's purpose was progressive and that the policy instituted by Moses should be superseded by the new faith since this was the culmination of what Moses began. He showed that the old dispensation would be superseded by the new and that the church would come out into the liberty of Christ. Christianity did not destroy Judaism but caused it to blossom forth into the glory of the new order. The Mosaic dispensation was the root, and the Christian dispensation the fruit.

3. Stephen's Face Transfigured (v. 15).

He was so completely filled with Christ that as he saw the angry mob and realized how soon he would be violently dealt with and pass into the presence of the Lord, his face shone as the face of an angel. It was Christ shining through him.

III. Stephen's Defense (7:1-53).

In refuting their charge he shows by the history of God's dealing with the Jews that they had always resisted Him. Therefore their present attitude was because they were unwilling to move forward with the divine purpose. As pointed out by Stifler four points stand out in his defense:

1. God's dealings with the Jews showed progress. The end was not reached by a single leap but by gradual stage.

2. The Temple was not the only holy place. God appeared at different places and at different times.

3. Israel invariably opposed God as He tried to lead them on.

4. He showed his loyalty to Moses by constantly referring to him.

IV. Stephen Stoned (7:54-60).

His words were too much for them so they gnashed upon him with their teeth.

1. Looked Steadfastly into Heaven (v. 55).

Instead of looking about upon his murderers in their raging fury, he looked up to heaven. This was the secret of his calm. If he had looked about him he might have been afraid.

2. He Saw the Glory of God.

A vision of God's glory can only be seen by those who are loyal unto Him, even unto death.

3. He Saw Jesus Standing on the Right Hand of God. The fact that Jesus was standing shows that He was actively interested in the suffering of His faithful witness.

4. Cast Him Out of the City and Stoned Him.

5. His Prayer (v. 60). How like that of Jesus on the cross. Christ so completely filled him that he could thus act.

6. He Fell Asleep (v. 60). The Christian's death is only a sleep. This sublime scene must have vitally affected Saul who was consenting unto his death.

Barnabas the Great-hearted
Acts 4:36-37; 11:19-30

Golden Text:—"He was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith."—Acts 11:24.

I. Barnabas the Man (Acts 4:36).

His original name was Joseph. When he became a Christian, he was renamed Barnabas signifying the change from the old life to the new. This was a common custom, for example, Simon to Peter and Saul to Paul. The name means

"son of prophecy" or "son of exhortation and consolation." This shows not only the nature and spirit of Barnabas but that he possessed the gift of hortatory preaching. The exercise of this gift made him a son of consolation.

II. Barnabas the Philanthropist (Acts 4:37).

So fully had the divine love permeated the very being of Barnabas that seeing the need of his fellow-believers, he sold his property and brought the money and laid it at the apostles' feet. His generosity expressed itself in deeds, not in pious words and promises. He counted nothing his own while his brethren were in need. He was in no sense obliged to do this as there was no such thing in the early church as a binding law of a community of goods. Private ownership of property was recognized (Acts 5:4). Such a sharing of goods will take place any time and any place among real Christians under such circumstances.

III. Barnabas the Christian Statesman (Acts 11:19-30).

The violent persecutions of the church sent many disciples into the regions about the Mediterranean Sea. As they went they preached the gospel and churches were established. The most conspicuous of these was at Antioch, the capital of Syria, because it became the most important center in the spread of Christianity. Everything went well as long as the gospel message was preached to the Jews only. The idea held among the disciples at that time was that the Gentiles were excluded. Here certain of these disciples deliberately preached Christ among the Greeks. They announced to them that God had become incarnated in a man and that that man, after a ministry of love and grace, had died a sacrificial death on the cross and that salvation was now offered to all who would accept Him. The seal of the Lord was upon this ministry and great multitudes believed and turned to the Lord. Frequently forward and revival movements originated outside of the centers of ecclesiastical authority, for example, the Reformation and the Wesleyan revival in England. The news of this revolutionary preaching reached the ears of the church at Jerusalem and caused not a little excitement and discussion. The church decided to send a committee to Antioch to look into the matter. Eccelesiastical authorities seldom start revivals but usually seek to regulate them after they are started.

1. Barnabas Sent to Antioch (vv. 22-24). Fortunately in this case they sent the proper man. Barnabas was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and faith. Therefore, he had spiritual discernment and broad sympathy. Good men are quick to see good. When he came to Antioch he saw the grace of God and was glad. If we have grace in ourselves, we will be able to see grace in others. He exhorted and urged them forward in their work. Men like Barnabas are much needed today in our churches—men of vision and Christian courtesy and sympathy.

2. Barnabas Goes after Saul (vv. 25, 26). The work so prospered that help being needed Barnabas went after Saul. These men had been together before. After Saul's conversion, he came to Jerusalem and tried to join himself to the disciples but they were afraid of him. Barnabas befriended him (Acts 9:26, 27). He saw that Saul was really a converted man. Being a good man he could see there was good in Saul. Barnabas thus introduced Saul to his great work as the apostle to the Gentiles. The gifts of both these men were needed on that field. Different temperaments when brought into harmony by God's grace are needed in the church.

3. Disciples Called Christians (v. 26). After a year of teaching by Paul and Barnabas, the name Christian was given to the disciples. The name was associated with the teaching. Paul taught the vital oneness of the believer with Christ so it was natural that the disciples should be called Christian. The notion that the name Christian was given in derision has no basis in fact. It was not said that they were called Christian by their enemies.

IV. Barnabas and Saul go to Jerusalem with Alms (vv. 26-30).

Because of the oneness of Christians with Christ and with one another, the distress of the brethren at Jerusalem must be relieved by the gifts of the believers at Antioch. These gifts had a powerful effect in removing the suspicions of the brethren at Jerusalem.

Paul the Apostle

Acts 22:3, 6-10; Philippians 3:4-14

Golden Text:—"I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."—Philippians 3:14.

Paul's name stands second to none in the annals of history. The story of his life is of perennial interest.

I. His Birth (Acts 22:3 cf. Phil. 3:17).

He was born in Tarsus of pure Hebrew stock. He could with legitimate pride boast of godly ancestry. It is highly important that each generation should so live that no handicaps be placed upon their children.

II. His Home Training (Phil. 3:5).

His parents were pious people and carefully cultured him according to Jewish standards. Most religious leaders spring out of such homes, for example, Moses, Samuel, Timothy. Stern principles of integrity were inculcated in him thus giving him strength of character to impress the world. He was strongly attached to the peculiarities of the Jewish religion. The heroes which molded his life were Joseph, Moses, David, Isaiah, instead of Achilles, Hercules, etc. What a blessing today if the boys and girls were brought up under such influence!

III. His Education (Acts 22:3).

1. His Patriotism. He was brought up to love his nation. He proudly affirmed, "I am a Jew." Paul was a nationalist of the true type. Children should be taught to love their nation.

2. A Love for the Bible. The Scriptures were to him the very Word of God. What was found written therein was the final word for him. Loss of love for the Bible and implicit faith therein is a tragedy.

3. Zealous for God. Acts 22:3. The word zealous literally means "to boil."

The Master's Command

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature," is exemplified in this country by the American Sunday-School Union

whose workers seek out everywhere the communities unreached by the Gospel, and Establish and Maintain Sunday-Schools

in which the people are gathered for religious services and Bible study, using the helps published by this Society. Last year 1,145 new schools were organized. 47 churches of various denominations grew out of Union Schools, 20 houses of worship were erected, and 5,315 conversions were reported. It is a pioneer work, helpful to all denominations. Its publications are sound, evangelical, practical, and specially adapted to the smaller Sunday-schools and the rural homes. Its benevolent work is supported by gifts from individuals identified with all Protestant denominations.

Over 3½ Sunday-Schools organized for every day of 106 years—this is a striking record.

Assured Income Bonds, bearing a higher rate of interest than ordinary bonds, are issued to the benevolent who desire their money to work for the Master after they have passed on. Ask about them.

Zeal without knowledge is better than no zeal at all.

4. Conscientious. His supreme aim was to have a conscience void of offense. Conformity to the dictates of conscience is demanded. It is the law of life for every man, but because of the blight of sin the conscience needs to be taught by God's Word.

5. He Had a Trade. Every Jewish boy, regardless of his father's wealth, was taught a trade. It was a saying among them that, "He who failed to teach his son a trade, taught him to steal." This would be a good plan in our modern days.

IV. His Conversion (Acts 22:6-10).

1. On the Way to Damascus (v. 6). He was the enemy of Christ and was on his way to Damascus with authority to bring bound such Christians as might be found to Jerusalem to be punished. While on this journey he had time for reflection and his conscience now began to work.

2. A Light from Heaven (vv. 6-9). As this light burned through the sky over him, he fell to the ground humiliated. Accompanying the light was a voice saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" Upon inquiry as to who was speaking, the Lord declared that it was Jesus of Nazareth whom he was persecuting.

3. An Honest Inquiry (v. 10). He was willing to do what the Lord willed, so he was instructed to go to Damascus where fuller light would be given.

V. His Estimate of Christ (Phil. 3:7-9).

When he came to know Christ, he counted all but loss in comparison with Him. He saw Christ as the supplier of righteousness. He who has Christ and His righteousness has everything worth while.

VI. His Transcendent Aim (Phil. 3:10-14).

1. To Know Christ and the Power of His Resurrection. He desired that he might be made conformable to His death and have fellowship in His sufferings.

2. He Desired to Attain unto the Resurrection of the Dead. This refers to the first resurrection in which the believers shall come forth from among the wicked dead.

3. He Pressed Toward the Mark. He did not count that he had yet attained. He depreciated his present attainments, perceived the dignity of his calling and pressed forward with all his strength in order that he might win the prize. The conditions which determine growth are (1) a decided dissatisfaction with present attainments, (2) perception of the height of truth, and (3) a resolute determination to attain at whatever cost.

"I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some."—1 Corinthians 9:22.

The apostle to the Gentiles here gives expression to the great principle of adaptation in missions. This principle applies to method of work as well as to personal bearing.

We must ever distinguish between missionary aim and missionary method. The aim is one, and that spiritual, namely, to bring men to know Jesus Christ as the only Saviour from sin. The methods may be many—evangelistic, educational, literary, medical, industrial, philanthropic.

We need not insist upon uniformity of method; indeed, such uniformity would not be in keeping with the apostle's "by all means," and far from being desirable it would be a misfortune.

But what does need insisting upon is that all methods shall have one and the same ultimate aim, and that first and last they be held faithfully to that aim. As "by all means" defines the methods, so "save some" defines the aim. Not education merely for its intellectual values; not medical work merely for its physical benefits; not social service merely for its material advantages. Great and good as all these results are, they are not sufficient in themselves to justify calling the efforts which produce them missionary work. They should be regarded as so many means to the still higher end of evangelization and the salvation of souls.

Alas, far too many instances of the miscarriage and failure of missionary enterprises through their becoming absorbed in the method to the losing sight of the original aim, and their ultimate substitution of the means for the end!

It is all too easy to let the pressure of school curricula, medical clinics and industrial activities crowd out the distinctly spiritual note and touch for which these very lines of work have created a golden opportunity. Thus the highest aim is defeated and the best results are lost. Oftentimes the overworked missionary under these conditions deserves sympathy rather than blame. But it is a matter for constant prayer that the true missionary aim may be kept insistently in view and the highest results achieved.

EVERY CHRISTIAN'S MAIN BUSINESS

"Forget not that your first and principal business as a disciple of Christ is to give the gospel to those who have it not. He who is not a missionary Christian will be a missing Christian when the great day comes of bestowing the rewards of service."

—Dr. A. J. Gordon.

SPIRITISM OUTSTRIPPING THE GOSPEL

Emil W. Halverson ('21) writing from Bananal, his station in Brazil, tells of a successful trip of several weeks which he had taken to Corumba, a town of 10,000 and the second largest in that great neglected state of Matto Grosso. He found Corumba not only a stronghold of corrupt Romanism, but actually a field for the dissemination of pernicious literature on Spiritism.. He met with full sets of such books in several homes, where their poison had begun its work. Fortunately he was able to sound a warning in these cases, and to place a corrective in the form of the written Word of God. He sold 20 Bibles, 170 New Testaments and 327 Gospel portions, and gave away over 3,000 gospel tracts, mostly in homes.

He reports blessing and results in the work at Bananal, where quite a few have recently accepted Christ. Mr. Whittington, the senior missionary, has been conducting Bible study classes there for the Indian workers as a means of strengthening their faith and increasing their zeal. Ten of these workers were taking turns in visiting outlying villages in the district, where the gospel had never before been preached. Already two souls had accepted the Saviour in one village.

THE ADVANCE INTO MATTO GROSSO

One objective ever before the I. S. A. M. U. has been to reach the Bororos and other savage Indian tribes in the vast unoccupied portion of the state of Matto Grosso. There have been many hindrances and delays in these plans, including the recent revolution in Paraguay. The cheering word now comes that this pioneer expedition, under the leadership of Alex R. Hay, has already set forth. They arrived at Corumba in May, and decided to open that place as a mission station and base of supplies and communications for the farther interior. This journey involves serious danger and is fraught with important issues for the missionary cause. It should be upheld by many earnest prayers.

"ENLARGEMENT IN DISTRESS"

Such is the impressive title given to the Annual Report of the China Inland Mission for 1922. In spite of widespread trouble and unrest in China, 6,300 were baptized by this mission during the year, bringing the total number baptized since the beginning of the work to 93,131. What a cause for rejoicing and praise is this!

A TRIUMPHANT BAPTISMAL SERVICE

V. D. Roberts, '19, Bolivian Indian Mission, in a letter from San Pedro dated May 8 says: "Saturday afternoon twelve were baptized in a pool. So far as is known this is the largest number ever baptized in one day in Bolivia. It was a blessed sight, and some of the onlookers were deeply moved. One year ago Demetria was baptized, and this year her sister Angelica. Their father, who conducts a saloon, stood by with tears in his eyes. The next night he raised his hand and accepted Jesus as his personal Saviour. If you knew conditions you would indeed magnify the Lord for this miracle of grace. Then last year Dionecia was baptized. Her parents opposed, and it was only after long persuasion that they gave their consent. This year they were both baptized and came out of the water with radiant faces. Eight others are asking for baptism, but it is thought better that they wait a little."

SUDAN INTERIOR MISSION ANNIVERSARY

This mission has just celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. During the first decade (1898-1908) 23 missionaries were sent out and there were less than 10 converts. During the second decade (1908-1918) 44 new missionaries were sent out and there were 600 converts. Now the missionaries number 72 and the converts 2000. Thus the last five years have seen much more accomplished than the previous twenty, and the future, under the guidance and blessing of God, is big with promise.

At Home and Abroad

We have customers in great numbers in every country of the world, and we render special service to our customers in Foreign fields. The picture above shows actual orders packed and ready to ship to Missionaries. Perhaps some of your friends will receive one of these shipments.

Our Missionary Bureau

Gives particular attention to orders for shipment to Foreign Mission Fields. This Bureau is the outgrowth of the service rendered to the early Missionaries who went out nearly half a century ago, when it was so difficult to get supplies to them. Since that time, Missionaries all over the world have been buying from us because they know that we furnish, and can safely ship practically everything they need — Food, Underwear, Shoes, Dry Goods, Books, Household Articles, Tools, Office Appliances, Hospital Supplies, Pianos and Organs, all standard quality, at money saving prices. We know how to pack for ocean and distant inland transportation. We absolutely guarantee safe delivery.

Forwarding Service

Churches, missionary societies, families and friends of Missionaries, can arrange with us to send any articles, even entire households, to foreign points, whether the goods were purchased from us or not. Saves time, worry, trouble and money. Detailed information will be given gladly. Wherever mails go, Montgomery Ward & Co. has customers — and they are satisfied customers. For further information, address:

for July, the following figures are given: Moslems in North and South America, 204,429; in Europe, 17,769,957; in Asia and the Islands, 154,678,909; in Africa, 60,948,397—a total of 233,601,692.

A WORTHY MISSIONARY AUXILIARY

From many missionaries in the different republics of Latin America, as well as from workers in Spain, come grateful testimonies to the help and blessing realized from the Underscored New Testament, selected portions from the Word of God, and other Spanish literature published and sent forth by the Bible House of Los Angeles. This society, like the other Bible and tract societies, has proved an invaluable auxiliary to the missionaries on the field, by furnishing them with generous grants of gospel "ammunition." Its work is one of faith, carried on by the free-will offerings of God's people. Its headquarters are 702 Knickerbocker Building, Los Angeles, Calif.

CONSOLIDATION OF PRESBYTERIAN MISSION BOARDS

The Board of Foreign Missions of the Northern Presbyterian church has lately been reorganized and made to include the hitherto separate Women's Board and also the Special Committee on work in Europe. It will henceforth consist of 40 members, namely, 25 men and 15 women. The old Board was organized in 1837, so that its missionary history covers 86 years. In 1837 its total missionary force was 38 men and women; in 1923 it is 1543 men and women. The total length of service rendered by all its foreign missionaries during these 86 years is 39,120 years.

This church has now in its 26 foreign missions 1,214 organized churches, 4,412 groups, 1,281 self-supporting churches, 206,043 communicant members and 4,816 Sunday-schools with an enrolment of 345,727. In its many fields it is responsible for the needs of more than 100,000,000 souls.

GROWTH OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

The foreign missionary movement has grown to large proportions. There are now altogether 28,000 Protestant missionaries in non-Christian lands. Of these, 17,000 have gone out from America. The largest church in the world is said to be at Ongole, India, the Baptist, Telugu station where, during the wonderful revival 45 years ago, 2,222 were baptized in a single day. That church today has over 45,000 members. The largest communion service in the world is that of the Presbyterian church at Elat, W. Africa, where 18,000 are wont to surround the Lord's Table.

PERSONAL MENTION

Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer has just sailed for England to attend the meetings of the International Missionary Council. He will then spend some time in Europe and plans to reach Cairo, Egypt, in September. He has recently been honored by being elected president of the General Synod of the Reformed Church of America, a position similar to that of moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly.

Rev. H. L. Hellyer, associate director of the American Christian Relief Mission for Russia, Ukrainia and Eastern Europe, has again sailed for Europe to investigate and report further upon the distressing conditions there and the progress of the relief work. Rev. O. R. Palmer, director of the same mission, expects to follow shortly and to join Mr. Hellyer in the visitation of the afflicted areas. He will also take part in several conferences in Central Europe. These brethren have also in view a survey of the situation in Eastern Europe with the thought of the possible establishing there of a center of Bible training for workers among Jews and Russians. The need for such a center is keenly felt as being a vital factor in reaching the millions of unevangelized.

Rev. M. A. Stone, president of the American Council of the Ceylon and India General Mission, is about to leave for England for an important conference with the London Council of the same mission.

ONE WOMAN'S PARISH

Miss Florence Logan, '21, Presbyterian Mission, Paotingfu, China, writes of the sudden death of her senior fellow-worker, and continuing says: "Overnight I was changed from a language student to a missionary responsible for carrying the gospel to at least a million women and girls. Of course such a burden is too great for human strength, so I have been blessedly cast upon the Lord. The field is divided so that the work of the different missions does not overlap. The portion for which we are solely responsible has that number of women and children, and I am the only woman country evangelist to go out to them."

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Grant Stroh

The right is reserved to reject controversial questions and others which may be deemed unprofitable to answer. All questions should be briefly, but clearly stated. Personal answers cannot be sent.—Editors.

WINGS OF ANGELS

B. W., Newton, Iowa.

Question: Where do artists get their authority from God's Word for picturing angels with two wings?

Answer: No authority in Bible for angels having wings. The cherubim in connection with the Ark of the Covenant had two wings each, but in Ezekiel's vision each had four (Ezek. 10:21). Each of the seraphim in Isaiah's vision had six wings (6:2).

THE RAPTURE

E. F. R., Mizeria, W. Africa.

Questions: (1) On what Scripture is belief in "the rapture" based? (2) Give Scripture for the belief that the Church will not go through the Tribulation.

Answers: (1) Only one clear passage (1 Thess. 4:14-18), but inferred also from the passages in answer to the second question. (2) Luke 21:36; 1 Thess. 1:10; 3:13; 4:17; 5:1-4, 9; Rev. 3:10; 4:4; 5:8-10.

LOSING ONE'S SALVATION

J. A. E., Columbia, S. C.

Question: Can a person who has been truly saved ever lose his salvation and be eternally lost?

Answer: Such a question implies that salvation is something like a bit of jewelry that may be stolen or carelessly dropped and never found; or like an experience which passes away with the subsiding of the emotions. While eternal life is a gift, it can not be detached from us but becomes an essential part of our being.

NEW TESTAMENT "INTRODUCTION"

E. B., Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

Question: Please recommend a book on the New Testament by as good an authority as Robert Dick Wilson on the Old.

Answer: Prof. J. Gresham Machen, an excellent authority upon the New Testament, recommends the Introduction to the New Testament, by Zahn, published by Scribner. To which we would add Sir William Ramsay's work, The Bearing of Recent Discoveries of the Trustworthiness of the New Testament.

THE BOOK OF ENOCH

R. O. J., Chico, Cal.

Question: Is there extant a book of Enoch, or is anything known of the writing therein mentioned in the book of Jude?

Answer: See the International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, article "Apocalyptic Literature." No original of the book exists, but copies of parts of it are found in the great libraries at Oxford, Paris, and other places. It was never regarded as canonical or part of the sacred text of Scripture. The words in Jude refer not to the book of Enoch, but to Enoch the person, "the seventh from Adam." The reference does not depend for its veracity upon what may be found in the book of Enoch.

JOSEPH AND LEVI

M. W. M., St. Louis, Mo.

Question: Why did Joseph and Levi lose their identity as tribal leaders, being replaced by Ephraim and Manasseh?

Answer: The two sons of Joseph were taken by Jacob to be his own (Gen. 48:5), received the patriarchal blessing (v. 9), and were given their place among the tribes (vv. 17-20). Thus the name of Joseph was dropped as a tribal name and the names of these two sons substituted. This would have made thirteen tribes to whom the land was to be allotted; but the tribe of Levi was chosen as the priestly tribe, receiving no particular section of the land but having forty-eight cities, together with their suburbs, scattered throughout the entire country.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

R. H. W., Cleeves, Sask.

Question: (1) Is there anything in profane history that warrants the theory that the book of Daniel was written after the events had transpired? (2) That the Old Testament canon was closed and that the writer had to forge Daniel's name? (3) That the book was not written in Babylon but probably in the Holy Land? (4) Why is profane history taken as the standard with which sacred history must coincide?

Answers: We answer "no" to each of the first three questions, which are the positions taken by the rationalistic higher critics. (1) The basis for this theory is that a portion of the eleventh chapter so minutely portrayed the history of Antiochus Epiphanes that they decided this was history instead of prophecy, hence written after the events described, or in the second century B. C. (2) The Old Testament canon was closed about 330 B. C. Upon the supposition that the book of Daniel was written in the second century, it was necessary to assume that the writer forged Daniel's name, and then that he or some other schemer managed to slip it into the canon without being caught. (3) This theory is based upon linguistic assumptions, such as that the Aramaic in the book is western instead of eastern, for which there is no proof. (4) Chiefly because these rationalists want to rule out the supernatural, both in history and in prophecy.

CONCERNING THE KINGDOM

E. B. H., Everett, Mass.

Questions: (1) Is the "gospel of the kingdom" the same as the "gospel of the grace of God?" Is "my gospel" and the "gospel of the grace of God" the same? (2) Have the Jews as yet ever had the opportunity to accept Jesus as earthly king to sit on David's throne? In other words, in Matthew 3:2, does John call the Jews to repent because an earthly kingdom is at hand with Jesus as its king reigning on Mt. Zion, or does John call the Jews to repent because a new creation, the church with a heavenly citizenship and an invisible king is at hand? (3) Are the "kingdom of God" and the "kingdom of heaven" the same? (4) Did Israel reject an earthly kingdom with Christ as king, or life eternal or immortality? For which are the Jews today scattered and blinded? (5) Was it in Christ's power to offer Israel the earthly kingdom at His first coming? (6) Is the kingdom of His dear Son both the kingdom of God and the kingdom of heaven (Col. 1:13)? (7) If one of those Jews repented at John's call to repent, would he belong to the church which later came into being? (8) Is the Sermon on the Mount in Matthew's Gospel as much for the church as for the Jewish remnant in the Great Tribulation?

Answers: (1) Paul's "my gospel," and the "gospel of the grace of God" are practically the same; but the "gospel of the kingdom" is in a sense a broader term than the "gospel of the grace of God." (2) The offer of the Messianic kingdom was a bona fide offer, but conditional. The Jews could understand no other kind of an offer. Even after the resurrection of Jesus His disciples still anticipated an earthly kingdom. This offer does not preclude God's fore-knowledge that it would be rejected. The rejection made way for His other plans concerning His church. (3) The "kingdom of God," in its external aspect, is all-inclusive. It embraces the "kingdom of heaven" over which Christ now rules invisibly. (4) The Jewish nation, in the person of its representatives, rejected Christ as their king, for which their city was destroyed and the people scattered abroad until they shall be willing to accept Him as their Messiah. It is evident that this judgment upon them was not because they rejected Christ as their Saviour, merely, for that is a purely personal matter and the offer of salvation is always open to them. It was because He was rejected as their King. (5) Answered under two. (6) The "kingdom of his dear Son" is the kingdom of God" in its internal or essential nature, and in this sense is a part of the "kingdom of heaven," (7) Those who repented under the preaching of John the Baptist became true citizens of the "kingdom of God" and as such would have all the privileges of the church which was founded later. (8) We see no good reasons for applying the "Sermon on the Mount" exclusively to the Jews of any particular period in the future.

TO MAKE YOU THINK

We never need prayer so much as when we are indisposed for it.

Nothing but the Cross of Christ can set other crosses straight.

Distress is virtue's opportunity; we only live to teach us how to die.—Southerne.

What we have from God, we cannot keep without God.

All our prayers are by cyphers till Christ's intercession be added.—Ambrose.

Pray and stay are two blessed monosyllables.

Prayer is the wing wherewith the soul flies to heaven, and meditation the eye wherewith we see God —Ambrose.

"WE WOULD SEE JESUS"

John 12:21

This is the request of certain Greeks who had come up to Jerusalem to worship on the occasion of the last Passover. They had referred this request to Philip, one of the disciples, who in turn carried it to Andrew, and the two together went and told Jesus.

The effect of their request upon Jesus Himself was markedly strange. But we pass for the moment from the consideration of that effect to dwell on the circumstances under which we feel or ought to feel the same aspiration.

1. "We would see Jesus" when our souls are burdened with a sense of guilt. What other name can bring us peace? What other voice can charm away our fears? "For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him" (2 Cor. 5:21).

2. "We would see Jesus" when we are engaged in His holy worship. Frederick Whitfield draws an impressive picture of the blind, halt, and withered that roamed the streets of Jerusalem where Jesus stood comparatively unknown. He contrasts their unhappy and destitute condition with its magnificence, and especially its boasted righteousness, and outward observances of devotion. And He employs this contrast to illustrate the worthlessness of the holiest of religions without Christ. All the grandeur, all the ordinances and ceremonies of that city put together were not able to accomplish for any one of those poor wretches what a single touch or word, or even a look from Jesus did.

3. "We would see Jesus" in the details of our daily life. In our hearts as the Lord of their affections, purposes, and pleasures. In our social intercourse, for what are the charms of friendship unless sanctified by the thought of Him? In our business relations and domestic responsibilities, to sweeten care, to inspire effort, and to further the principles of purity and brotherly love. In our sorrow and affliction as the One "who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God" (2 Cor. 1:4).

4. "We would see Jesus" in death. Severn tells of the last moments of the poet Keats. Shelley and Hunt had deprived him of his belief in Christianity which he wanted in the end, and he endeavored to fight back to it, saying that if Severn would get him a Jeremy Taylor he thought he could believe. But a copy of Jeremy Taylor was not to be found in Rome. Another time, having been betrayed into considerable impatience by bodily and mental anguish, he cried, with an oath, "Oh, Severn, a man ought to have some superstition that he may die decently." What a contrast with this pitiable wail is the triumphant paean of an aged saint of our acquaintance who, falling accidentally upon the floor one day, and supposing the stroke of the sickle had fallen which was to garner her into the eternal storehouse, broke forth in the happy song.

"Hallelujah! 'tis done! I believe on the Son, I am washed in the blood of the crucified One!"

5. "We would see Jesus" in glory. This is the hope of every awakened soul, and which has its foundation in Holy Writ. "They shall see his face, and his name shall be in their foreheads" (Rev. 22:4). "Father, I will that they also whom thou has given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me" (John 17:24).—James M. Gray.

TWELVE REASONS WHY A CHRISTIAN SHOULD BE HAPPY AND ENCOURAGED IN A DAY OF DIFFICULTY

1. BECAUSE he has a Father in heaven who loves him, cares for him, and has blessed him with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ.
(John 16:27; Luke 12:22-32; Eph. 1:3)
2. BECAUSE he has a great High Priest in heaven to sympathize with him, succour and support him, and to conduct him into heavenly things.
(Heb. 2:17-18; 4:14-15; 8:1-6)
3. BECAUSE he has a great and good Shepherd to lead him and to feed him all the way home.
(Ps. 23; Heb. 13:20-21)
4. BECAUSE he has an "Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous," who pleads his cause, and always prevails.
(1 John 1:8-10; 2:1)
5. BECAUSE he has a "Wonderful Counselor" to go to for advice at all times. (Isa. 9:6)
(See Micah 4:9, middle of verse)
6. BECAUSE he has an abiding Comforter (the Holy Ghost) to guide him into all truth, to teach him all things, and to take of the things of Christ and show them unto him.
(John 14:16, 17, 26; 16:13, 14)
7. BECAUSE he has a "throne of grace" to go to, where he can "obtain mercy and find grace to help in every time of need."
(Heb. 4:16)
8. BECAUSE he has the Holy Scriptures to search and study, which testify of "the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow." (1 Pet. 1:2)
9. BECAUSE angels minister unto him, being an heir of salvation.
(Heb. 1:14)
10. BECAUSE he is an heir to an inheritance "which is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven," and is kept by the power of God until he comes into possession.
(1 Pet. 1:3-5)
11. BECAUSE he has the interests of Christ to engage him "a little while," until the return of his Lord. (Refer Eph. 6:18-19, "All Saints," and 1 Tim. 2:1-6—"All Men." See also Luke 19:12-19 and 1 Cor. 11:23-26)
12. BECAUSE he has before him the bright and blessed hope of the Lord's appearing in glory, when all His saints will appear with Him, and be like Him, and reign with Him for ever and ever.
(Tit. 2:13, 14; 1 John 3:2)

—"Quartus."

The service of Christ is the business of my life.
The will of Christ is the law of my life.
The presence of Christ is the joy of my life.
The glory of Christ is the crown of my life.—Selected.

THE MASTER'S VISITS TO BETHANY

Our Lord appeared at Bethany in a four-fold capacity:

1. As the Faithful Teacher (Luke 10: 38-42).
2. As the Divine Consoler (John 11: 1-45).
3. As the Gracious Interpreter (John 12: 1-8).
4. As the Priestly Blesser (Luke 24: 50-53).

In these four passages we have:

(1) A scene of bustling hospitality—Worry at the hearth (Luke 10: 40);

(2) A scene of sisterly grief—Weeping at the grave (John 11: 33);

(3) A scene of lavish thanksgiving—Waste at the table (John 12: 5; Matt 26: 8);

(4) A scene of tearless farewell—Worship at the last tryst (Luke 24: 52).

In all we see Jesus:

1. Rebuking undue solicitude (Luke 10: 41, 42);
2. Removing domestic friction (Luke 10: 41, 42);
3. Restoring to a bereaved family the dead brother (John 11: 41-44);
4. Revealing to the world the glory of immortality (John 11: 41-44);
(5) Receiving the tribute of costly devotion (John 12: 3);
(6) Rewarding it with eternal memorial (Matt 26: 13);
(7) Renewing His promise of the Holy Spirit (Acts 1: 4, 5);
(8) Returning to His Father in heaven (John 20: 17).—Albert W. Bean.

The influence we exert in the world is created by our relationship to Jesus Christ; and our relationship to Jesus Christ is revealed by our influence.—Selected.

Truth Illuminated

By Shafts from Various Quarters

HOW FAITH OPERATES

The faith of the child of God is like the sail of a boat. The sailboat makes its headway against the steady flowing of the current because the wind, blowing in the contrary direction, fills the sails. The currents are not always controlling factors in life. There is a power that drives men counter to them. Faith spreads the sails and courageously defies the power of the currents of opposition, unbelief and sin.

THE UNIVERSAL RELIGION

The notable elements of Christianity concerning the inspiration of the Scriptures, the divine nature of Jesus Christ, His virgin birth, His miraculous power, His atonement for sin, His resurrection and ascension, are the distinguishing and peculiar facts that differentiate it from merely human religions and mark it as divinely qualified for man's salvation. To eliminate these were death to men and an insult to God. To hold fellowship with those who discard and disbelieve these truths is to use efforts in leveling downward, and in repudiating the holy elements of God's gracious redemption. What our race needs is not the religion that is common to all, but the peculiar, essential, distinguishing, vital, elevating, and saving truths of the gospel that have come to us from God, by inspiration of the Holy Spirit, and through the saving grace of Jesus Christ.— Herald and Presbyter.

THE INFIDEL'S BOOMERANG

It is told of one of our early American evangelists that in the course of an address he made the broad statement that all infidels are fools, and that he could prove it in any given case in ten minutes.

A man in the audience asked if he might interrupt, and remarked that he must take exception to the statement, since he was himself an infidel and thought he was no fool.

The preacher looked him over rather curiously and said, "So you are an infidel? Will you tell me just how much of an infidel?" "Certainly, sir; I deny that there is anything at all in religion." "Nothing at all in religion? Are you willing to go on record as saying that?" "Go on record?" the infidel replied. "Why, I have been writing and lecturing against religion for these twenty years."

The evangelist glanced at his watch and said, "Well I said I could prove an infidel a fool in ten minutes, and I have seven minutes left. I'll leave it to the audience if a man isn't a fool to write and lecture for twenty years against a thing that has nothing whatever in it!" There is more than a sharp retort here. There is the exposure of the infidel's recognition that Christianity represents something that he must fight—for it condemns him.—C. B. McAfee.

Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

Rev. F. H. Ream, who was pastor of the Immanuel M. E. Church in Dalton, Mo., has again entered the evangelistic field. He may be reached at 3302 Prospect St., Kansas City, Mo.

Loren G. Jones and Evangelist John E. Brown are having fine meetings at Chester, S. C. Mr. Jones has charge of the music and Mrs. Jones has charge of the women's work.

Evangelist Othie Sackett has been engaged by Rev. R. W. McGranaham to give six addresses at three summer conferences, Xenia, New Concord, and Monmouth, Ill. Three of his addresses will be on "Soul Winning" and the other three will be on "Tithing."

Mr. and Mrs. George Preston have had a full season helping pastors in campaigns in Battle Creek, Mich., Sparta, Mich., Lucerne, Ind., Macon, Ill., Cambridge, O., Grand Haven, Mich., Poplar Grove, Ill., Cowden, Ill., and Jackson, O.

The Central Union Mission, of Washington, D. C., has raised more than $185,000 of their $200,000 fund for the building of a Children's Emergency Home. Babies now living and ill, babies yet unborn, are the beneficiaries of these splendid gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nyberg, evangelistic singers and children's workers assisted Rev. H. W. White in a two weeks evangelistic meeting at the Mount Zion U. B. Church near Kentland, Ind. The church was quickened and souls were saved.

A successful meeting was held at Irondale, Mo., with 10 conversions. The preaching was done by Evangelist C. W. Bibb, assisted by Rev. Mr. Neely. J. W. Maxwell had charge of the music.

The doors of this church had been closed for several years but as a result of these meetings Rev. George Graham will preach there once a month.

Evangelist Chas. Cullen Smith recently closed a very successful union meeting at Worthington, Minn., which the pastors said was one of the most satisfactory ever held in that city. During August he fills the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He will begin the fall work with a union campaign at Hawarden, Iowa.

Evangelist E. J. Rollings and party just completed a very successful campaign in Clarendon, Ark. The visible results of the meetings were 263 persons who professed conversion and many who reconsecrated their lives to the service of Christ.

The party, which consists of Rev. and Mrs. E. J. Rollings, George E. Nhare, musical director, and Harry W. Bundy, soloist, will go to Elmira, N. Y., for their next campaign.

Rev. T. DeBoyce Franklin writes: "We have closed a successful meeting at Kiester, Minn. Among the visible results were 22 covenants to establish family altars.

"From there we went to Wrightstown, Minn., where my daughter Elsie R. Franklin joined us as pianist, musical director and children's worker. God's Spirit is moving in power upon the hearts and giving us a blessed time. Will the readers of the MOODY MONTHLY remember us in their prayers?"

Rev. G. C. Fisher of Arpin, Wis., writes: "We have just closed a meeting at Arpin and Sherry, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Holland Oates, of Chicago, were our helpers in these meetings. We are real happy that we had these days of fellowship together in the Lord's work. There were several conversions among the young people and a number of consecrations made among the older folk. Elders were found at the altar getting right with God. We praise God for the results."

The Rescue Society, Inc., of 5-7 Doyers St., New York, give in their thirtieth annual report that 193,369 persons attended the midnight services, 28,700 requested prayers and 1,352 professed conversion. Positions were obtained for 186; thousands received food, lodging and clothing. Score of families were united. On Christmas eve every man who came into the mission was given as much as he could eat, and a dime as he went out. One hundred fifty-five boys were sent to good homes and 770 girls visited our Settlement House.

Clyde Lee Fife reports as follows: "Three thousand people heard us on the Bob Fife is the chorister and slide trombone player. You have our prayers for the Moody Institute that it may send out many more such men as some of the ministers and laymen from your school who are helping us turn this town for Christ."

The Boardwalk Church, at Atlantic City, N. J., is one of the most unique churches of the nation. It is a church without a choir, an officer, a single member, or a collection plate. The whole working force is a preacher, organist, soloist and a church visitor. The congregation is transient, 75 per cent of which is new each Sunday. Yet this church has a record of thousands of people reached with the gospel of Christ.

Rev. Robert Arthur Elwood possesses a delightful personality and preaches the old-time religion in an up-to-date way, which grips his hearers.

The business men of Atlantic City realize that this church is a good thing for the resort and practically support the church.

August 1 (Wednesday). Luke 23:50-56.

"They . . . rested the sabbath day according to the commandment." This was true not only of the women, but also of the Lord. For in the new tomb, upon a bed of aromatic spices and fragrant flowers, the gifts of those who loved Him, He stretched out His weary body. Linen vestments enfolded Him and a white napkin hid the wounds made by the crown of thorns. It must have been very silent there because the great stone which formed the door excluded the world's noises. Had He not worked hard at man's salvation while it was called day? But now it was night. Sacrifice and suffering, hatred and reviling, heat and thirst and agony were all over.

August 2 (Thursday). Mark 16:1-9.

"Be not affrighted . . . he is risen." A famous psychologist once wrote, "In civilized life . . . it has at last become possible for large numbers of people to pass from the cradle to the grave without ever having had a pang of genuine fear." This may probably be true of physical fears; it is not true of the spiritual fears that arise from the presence of sin and the expectation of death. Hence the peculiar comfort of the Easter message which we have taken as our text, a message that was so often repeated both by the angels and by the Redeemer. "Fear not . . . He is risen." There is only one who can deliver from the fear that brings us into bondage and that one is the risen and glorified Jesus.

August 3 (Friday). John 20:11-18.

"She . . . knew not that it was Jesus." Had the resurrection made Jesus difficult to recognize? Was that the reason why Mary, and the two on the road to Emmaus, and the eleven on the mountain, and the seven by the lake, failed to know the Lord? Some have thought so and the suggestion is perhaps not unplausible. There is, however, an alternative explanation. Men recognize only that which they have the inward power of seeing. The disciples of the forty days were so pre-occupied with their own reflections that they did not quickly recognize their Saviour. Is not the same too often true of us? He who turns his gaze inward to concentrate on his own feelings and troubles and anxieties will not see Jesus so quickly as he who looks out of himself and up to Him.

August 4 (Saturday). Psalm 42:6-11.

"His song . . . my prayer . . ." Trouble after trouble had come on the Psalmist until it seemed as if a veritable flood of affliction was about to overwhelm him. Yet he was able to say that through all the evil times he had had two sources of strength: "His song" and "my prayer." The former is Jehovah's song, a song, that is to say, not merely about Him, but by Him, a song that musically expresses His love and grace and power. The latter is the Psalmist's own prayer, or as it might also be put, the privilege and power of communion with God. These two great resources are ours in every time of peace or time of trouble. Our fault is that we do not heed God's song as we should, nor do we pray as we ought. Let us make use of each privilege; His song in Scripture—our prayer in the Spirit.

August 5 (Sunday). Psalm 45:1-8.

"A song of loves." So the title describes the psalm set for our reading today. All commentators seem to agree that in form certainly and in occasion probably, this psalm was a nuptial ode. But this does not mean that it was either irreligious or uninspired, for all recognize that it is typical of Christ, the Messiah, and His Bride, the Church. For Scripture regards the ordinary relations of human life as part of the divine order of the world, and makes them the vehicle of lofty thoughts and the type of spiritual mysteries. Two results follow: these relationships are ennobled and consecrated, and we understand divine mysteries in language that appeals to us. The word "loves" here used is a high and noble word employed of the Lord's love for His people.

August 6 (Monday). Luke 10:38-42.

"Martha, Martha, thou art careful." The "carefulness" that our Lord attributes here to Martha is not a virtue but a fault. A better translation would be "anxious," "disturbed," "uneasy," "troubled at the thought of what may happen." Such "carefulness" is forbidden in Scripture. Our Lord forbids it in the oft-repeated exhortation, "Take no (anxious) thought for life and food and clothing" or what may happen on the morrow; and Paul tells us that we must not be anxious about anything. But it is said that anxiety is an emotion caused by bodily states that we cannot control. That is not quite true, however. Think on yourself and what may happen, and anxiety will surely come; look away to Jesus and it will just as surely depart.

August 7 (Tuesday). John 11:1-16.

"Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick." Most people do not act unless some appeal is made to their emotion, or some argument is addressed to their reason to show that the desired action is expedient, or for their interest. But this was not true of the Lord Jesus. To get Him to act it is only necessary to state the fact. Appeal to emotion or self-interest is all out of order. Mary and Martha called His attention to Shall Latin America have the Open Bible?

The West Indies, Mexico, Central America, The Republics of the Andes, Brazil, the Argentine—all Latin American countries are, or have been, the lands of the closed Book. For years the American Bible Society has labored patiently in these countries. Today it is rewarded with an eager interest in the Bible. The problem now is one of funds with which to place in the hands of the people the open Book.

In a single year the American Bible Society circulated 284,184 volumes in Latin America, where every book circulated means a book read.

what had happened, and at once He sets out to visit them with His help. Is not this a blessed truth? That "He knows" should fill our lives with strength and joy. There is therefore no need to persuade, to argue, to explain. Simply cause Him to know your need, and He will act to prove His love and increase your joy.

August 8 (Wednesday). John 11:17-30.

"I am the resurrection . . ." If our Lord had said, "I promise the resurrection," or "I shall work the resurrection," or, "I shall in some way or other procure for you a resurrection," it might have been what one should have expected and perhaps one would not have been surprised. But Jesus says, "I am the resurrection." Must this not mean that the resurrection is not merely a doctrine—something taught for men to believe—nor merely an event that will happen in some mysterious future, but it is a present fact. How present, do you ask? In Him, is the reply. Grasp Him, therefore, by faith, and at once you shall have as a present experience a spiritual resurrection, a guerdon of the future bodily resurrection.

August 9 (Thursday). John 11:31-46.

"He that was dead came forth . . . ." This stupendous miracle could not have been for the benefit of Lazarus—for what benefit can it be to him who has once safely passed through the valley of the shadow, to be recalled only to pass through that vale once more?—but for the church. So it has come down through the ages as a revelation of Christ's power over death, and it has brought joy and comfort to all believers.

"O heart I made, a heart beats here.
Face, my hands fashioned, see it in myself.
Thou hast no power nor mayst conceive of mine,
But love I gave thee, with myself to love,
And thou must love me who hast died for thee."

August 10 (Friday). John 12:1-8.

"The poor always ye have with you . . ." From this reminder we are to learn not that it is useless to attempt to eliminate poverty, but how to treat the poor. On that festal night in Bethany the poor were represented by the Lord, and the gift of Mary was taken as the type of help for the poor as the Lord would have it. One outstanding feature of His ideal is that mere present and practical utility should never be the measure of what we do for the benefit of those whose circumstances are not good. From the merely practical viewpoint Mary's act was extravagant, daring, original, and yet Christ valued it as an act of high-hearted devotion. Judas paid no attention to this and concentrated on the utility. Whose opinion seems to you more worthy and truthful?

August 11 (Saturday). Proverbs 31:10-31.

"In her tongue is the law of kindness." Today's reading has been called the "Golden ABC" of the perfect wife, because for ease of memorizing it is arranged in the original in twenty-two couplets each beginning with one of the letters of the Hebrew alphabet. All that is here written is worthy of careful attention, but our text is especially notable. Kindness is friendly good feeling, and is a character of God to be imitated by men. The ideal wife has it. As becomes a business woman she is a most efficient manager, but she is neither harsh nor domineering, but friendly and kindly. All her advice and exhortation to children, servants, and friends are dictated by the "law" of kindness.

August 12 (Sunday). Psalm 116:1-8.

"I love the Lord." After all has been said and done this remains the fundamental witness of the church in general and of each individual member. Witness must be borne of course to many things: to the power and guilt of sin, to the need of righteousness, to the grace of God manifest in Jesus Christ and His atoning sacrifice, but unless these are united with a personal "I love the Lord," they will affect the listeners little, because witness to truth, even divine truth, unaccompanied by sincere personal love of truth's source, is but a hollow form lacking the persuasion that will win men and women to God. Think then on Christ and all He has done for you; remain in His fellowship; you will soon find "I love the Lord" coming to your lips.

August 13 (Monday). Acts 6:8-15.

"His face as it had been the face of an angel." Some years after the Civil War an ex-confederate general was sent to make some investigations among the freemen. He returned with the remark that "these people are beginning to have a read-and-write expression." Our associations, our thoughts, our work, all affect our facial expression. Who can tell the exact nature of the angel face that Stephen had when he appeared before the council? All seem to agree that it was some sort of wonderful brightness, but they do not venture an explanation. May we not say that it was the reflection of the glory of the risen and ascended Redeemer brought out by Stephen's daily communion with Him and daily work for Him? May we not also say that all who live with Christ in daily fellowship will catch the Christlike face?

August 14 (Tuesday). Acts 7:1-16.

Stephen's defense was in the form of an elaborate historical argument. He tells the story of the chosen people with the impassioned eloquence of one not only himself an ardent patriot, but also a trained orator and scholar. He dwells on the famous national heroes, bringing out with rare skill particular events in their lives, and showing how notwithstanding the fact that they had been sent by God they had been again and again rejected by the chosen people. Of the Old Testament characters two are mentioned especially, Joseph and Moses. The former had been rejected by his brethren and the latter the people had again and again refused to obey.

August 15 (Wednesday). Acts 7:17-34.

Yesterday we pointed out the general course of Stephen's argument. Today let us notice another feature: his ready command of Scripture by which he was able to give a reason for the faith that was in him. All the facts he brought forward were from Scripture, and these facts were presented largely in the very language of the Scripture. No apologetic is so effective as that which comes direct from the Bible. No propaganda in aid of the kingdom is so persuasive as that which uses the ideas and the words of Scripture. Skill in this matter is not gained in a week nor a year, but is the result of much time spent in prayerful, attentive, sensible, study of the word of God.

August 16 (Thursday). Acts 7:35-53.

Like all effective speakers Stephen understood what is called the principle of climax. As we have remarked he reviewed the history of the chosen people to show how again and again divinely sent messengers had been rejected. He then refuted the accusation that he lightly esteemed the Temple, and after mentioning the treatment his forefathers had showed to the prophets, he comes to the climax, and in a blaze of righteous anger he charges his accusers with following their example by being themselves the murderers of Jesus. Here he was interrupted and violently hurled to the last scene outside the walls. We do not have the end of his speech, but there can be no doubt that it would have contained an offer of pardon and a plea for reconciliation with God.

August 17 (Friday). Acts 7:54-60.

"He fell asleep." Stephen's martyrdom in the full flower and beauty of youth shows what a change the cross and the resurrection of the Lord had made in the Christian's thought of death. For the believer in Christ, death was no longer death; the loss of life, but sleep, the recovery of life. The grave became a cemetery or sleeping place where bodies lay awaiting the resurrection. The close of earthly life is not an end-all, but a portal to a fuller and more glorious state of being. Martyrdom was therefore not considered a defeat, but a stupendous victory. If we can share these Christian ways of thinking, we shall forget the fears and the troubles that attach to the notion of death. We shall look up to heaven and cease to be distracted by the passions of earth.

August 18 (Saturday). Revelation 7: 9-17.

"A great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations . . ." It would do us all a world of good if we would think for fifteen minutes on the theme suggested by our text: the innumerable multitude before the Lamb clothed in the white robe of righteousness and with the palms of victory in their hands. Think of it as a vision whose reality will be future indeed for us, but in idea present already and in part fulfilled in the view of our Lord. If we get the vision, we must surely abandon our egoism as if we and ours were the only ones before the Lamb. We must surely get away from our narrow sectionalism and restricted nationalism, our pride in our race as the superior race, and we shall think of the future heavenly kingdom and of the present earthly kingdom as made up of all to whom the same great promises were given.

August 19 (Sunday). Romans 8:31-39.

"Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" Paul expects the answer, "Nothing," and this makes the question one of the most comforting in all Scripture. Like all of us Paul had grown up in a hard world and the world's hardness was in his heart. He was a ruthlessly energetic persecutor of the church; he was relentless, cruel, fanatical, implacable. But even these things could not separate him from the love of Christ, because that love followed him, and changed him and converted him. It has done the same for many of us. Now, this love does not hesitate to let us pass through tribulation, nor does it always will softness and sweetness for us. It exposes us to danger and to death. But these things do not separate us from it.

August 20 (Monday). Acts 13:1-12.

"The Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas . . ." A special call has always been considered necessary for the preacher of the gospel, and our reading shows us very clearly what this call is. There must be a divine summons, but this has no uniform way of reaching the person. There must also be a sincere longing to lead men to Christ, the possession of the natural gifts needed in the work, the willingness to go wherever there is work to be done, and the spiritual experience that comes with the new birth and the gifts of the Holy Ghost. There must also be in all ordinary cases the commission of the church by which human warrant is given to that which the Holy Spirit has first ordained. Three voices thus unite in the calling, each according to its rank and function, all present in the call of Barnabas.

August 21 (Tuesday). Acts 9:26-31.

"But Barnabas took him . . ." The name Barnabas signifies according to the Revised Version "son of exhortation," and according to the King James Version "son of consolation," two meanings that are not necessarily different if we recall that gospel exhortations are in most cases also gospel consolations. A proof of the accuracy of this designation of Barnabas may be seen in the fact that twice over he saved Paul for the work of Christianity. The first time was when, as told in our reading, he commended Paul, the young convert, to the apostles at Jerusalem. The second was when he sought out Paul at Tarsus and brought him to Antioch to work with him in the preaching of the gospel.

August 22 (Wednesday). Acts 4:32-37.

"Barnabas . . . having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet." The communism of the Jerusalem church, if indeed it deserves to be so called, differs in one important respect at least from modern communism as advocated by many enthusiasts today. The latter aims to be a compulsory political system binding the practice of everyone, whereas the former was an entirely voluntary and spontaneous sharing of goods. For example Barnabas was not forced to sell his field and add the proceeds to the common fund, but he did it as a free will offering to the common cause. This voluntary service is one of the delightful things in Christian life. Christian giving is cheerful, not of necessity; Christian service is that of freewill in the day of the Lord's power.

August 23 (Thursday). Acts 11:19-30.

"Who, when he was come, and had seen the grace of God, was glad." To attribute every blessing to the free grace of God, and to rejoice because of it, is a mark of a genuine Christian heart. Contrast it with the many non-Christian reactions to the blessings that accompany revivals. These may take the form of surprise that such things can happen; or ridicule because they are so uncouth and extraordinary; or disbelief that they are from God; or enmity because they forbid what the worldly conscience allows; or grudging admission that after all they may have some good in them. Every great outpouring of the showers of blessing calls out such reactions.

August 24 (Friday). Acts 13:44-52.

"And the disciples were filled with joy and with the Holy Ghost." Of the New Testament writers, Luke emphasizes the "joy" of the Christian experience, just as John emphasizes its "love." Christian joy as Luke describes it is present even in the face of adverse circumstances as when in our reading the preaching of the word resulted in opposition and momentary defeat. Such joy does not depend so much on present circumstances as on future hopes and the assurance of the triumph of the kingdom of Christ. It does not arise like earthly joy from the gratification of our emotions and passions, but its author is the Holy Spirit who bears witness with our spirits that we are very dear to God. Jesus Christ radiates this joy; therefore keep always in His company.

August 25 (Saturday). Acts 14:8-18.

"We also are men of like passions with you." This passage (and others) is a proof that God's Word gives no countenance to the worship of saints. Barnabas and Paul assert here that they are men of like passions with other men, subject to suffering and death, sinful and in need of the cleansing blood of Jesus Christ, and as such they refuse to allow themselves to be considered objects of worship. The situation is not relieved by making the distinction of grades and kinds of worship; one to be paid to God only, and one to be paid to the saints. The Scripture does not support this distinction, but its constant command is, "Worship God" and Him alone.

August 26 (Sunday). Psalm 96:1-10.

"O worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." This is a striking phrase. Interpreted of things external, it doubtless refers to the clothing appropriate to the times of worship in the Temple, for, as you may remember, the divine command was that Moses should make holy garments for Aaron "for glory and for beauty." Therefore it is fitting that God's people on God's day should put on their best when they come to His house. But holiness is rather an internal thing. As such it means separateness for God, and the divine exhortation is that on the Lord's Day we should consider ourselves set apart in a peculiar way for worship and for service.

August 27 (Monday). Acts 26:1-11.

"I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus . . ." This statement shows that conscience when unenlightened by the gospel of Jesus Christ is not an unerring and infallible guide. It also implies that something more than sincere belief is necessary to make an action right. For every moral act has two main elements, intention, or the will from which it proceeds, and content, or the matter of fact that it embodies. In other words, a person intends it, and it is something definite done. Both of these must conform to the standard set by Jesus Christ if the action is to be righteous in the Christian sense. Paul's acts before conversion were righteous in neither intent nor content.

August 28 (Tuesday). Acts 26:12-20.

"I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." If you want to know the meaning of genuine conversion, look at what happened in the case of Paul. He made a break with his evil past; he came into close and constant touch with the risen and glorified Jesus; he at once began preparation for some real and necessary gospel work. Genuine conversion implies all these features. Unlike the new birth which happens to all the people of God once and for all, conversion is to be a daily and hourly repeated act. This may seem strange on first thought, but reflection will surely show how true it is to say so. Why not break away from sin every time it assails us? Why not strive moment by moment for closer contact with Christ?

August 29 (Wednesday). Acts 26:21-32.

"I continue unto this day witnessing both to small and great." It is magnificient if one makes it the aim of life to bear witness before men for Jesus Christ. To witness means to tell what one has seen or heard or experienced. It excludes imagining, romancing, falsifying, inventing, theorizing. Under these conditions it may readily be understood that good witnesses are not easy to find, but when found they do a splendid work for the Master. The witnessing may be carried on by word and deed, and therefore is an activity in which all Christians should engage. It demands no specially fitted surroundings, nor is it limited to any set occasion. It can be carried on wherever people meet together and at all times. Witness bearing was the ideal of the apostle.

August 30 (Thursday). Acts 16:1-13.

"Come over into Macedonia and help us." The cry that came in those early days from Europe to Paul comes to the Christian church today. We might very easily every night if our minds were not otherwise engaged hear a similar cry from some one in our own cities, or from the place in which we live, entreating us with exceeding urgency, "Come over and help us." In every place on this broad earth of ours can be found the wretched, the broken, the miserable, the needy. We have the very thing that they are dying for the need of, the gospel of Christ. To be sure while they are conscious of their need, they are most frequently unconscious of the remedy, and very often when the remedy is offered them, they refuse it. But that does not change our responsibility to view the world from the standpoint of the Macedonian call and to hasten to help it.

August 31 (Friday). 2 Corinthians 11: 16-33.

"I will glory also . . ." As the Apostle explains he is not boasting for the sake of boasting, but because of his regard for the Corinthians. The false seducing teachers had impressed the Corinthians by their inflated claims to be far superior to the apostle, and therefore Paul says that if they glory, he is going to glory also in order to win back the Corinthian church to its first affection. One must not forget the irony in this assertion, and at the same time notice the outcome in that it leads Paul to write an autobiography the like of which is nowhere else in the New Testament, and that a new subject for glorying is introduced; services and sufferings, heavy work and hardships.

MORMONISM INCREASES IN THE UNITED STATES

According to the following information furnished by Rev. John D. Nutting, the present numerical status of Mormonism in the United States is shown. From the same source we find that Mormonism has had some loss in foreign countries.

Last year 7,118 converts were made to it outside Utah, with 15,666 additions by birth, making the net increase to Utah Mormonism alone of 22,779 in one year; while eastern or "Reorganized" Mormonism shows a larger rate of increase, though recent figures are confused by revision of rolls—the total gains of both being perhaps 28,000. In Great Britain, with double or triple the missionary work done by them (143 workers), they report net gain of 123 converts, and membership, Dec. 31, 1921, 849 less than a year before. Some of this loss is doubtless due to emigration, which is likely included in the gains in U. S.

RADIO CAN'T SAVE SINNERS

Sermons broadcast by radio can never convert sinners, Cardinal Dubois, archbishop of Paris, believes. The cardinal is himself a radio enthusiast and has a receiving station in the archiepiscopal palace.

"I find wireless most interesting," he said, "but broadcast sermons cannot be expected to convert any one. Wireless is too dry and cold to have an effect. I have listened to wireless speeches by famous orators and admired their fine phraseology and style, but they left me unmoved."

Old Memories, by Sir Henry Jones, C. H.

This autobiography is full of encouragement and inspiration for the boy that must work his way and obtain an education in the face of great obstacles. Besides being helpful in this respect it is most admirably written.

227 pages. 7⅜x5 inches. George H. Doran Company, New York.

G. S.

Men, Women and God, by Rev. A. Herbert Gray, D.D.

This is a discussion of sex questions from the Christian point of view. The subjects treated are all vital and practical and are treated in a wholesome, Christian way. It is the best book we know upon these subjects. The high spiritual tone is especially commendable.

G. S.

Henry Martyn, Confessor of the Faith, by Constance E. Padwick.

This is the first of a series of modern missionary biographies which aim to give a fresh interpretation of the life and work of great missionaries. The author is distinguished for her previous literary and educational work, and has been connected with the work of missions most of her life. This first volume of the series sets a high standard.

G. S.

A Moneyless Magnate, by Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, D.D.

This is a series of eight essays by the pastor of the Central Church, Chicago. They display his usual charming style, but the book is marred by his essay on "Bryanism." He accuses Bryan of being afflicted with a form of myopia, but Dr. Shannon's attack on Bryan most surely shows that he is badly afflicted by the same disease.

P. B. F.

Life of Christ, by Giovanni Papini.

This is a remarkable and interesting book, especially in the light of the fact that for years the author was an avowed atheist. He writes as a man who really believes in Christ. In commending this book, it by no means implies that all the author says is to be accepted as true for two reasons: we must be careful in our reading since his thoughts are cast into the poetic mold, and he is not a theologian. His interpretation of many of Christ's sayings cannot be accepted.

P. B. F.

Being A Preacher, by Rev. James I. Vance, D. D.

Few men are as well able to speak upon this subject as the well-known pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Nashville. The work is a collection of seven addresses constituting the James Sprunt lectures of 1923, and in a word provides the unsurpassed opportunity to live the life offered by the minister and the worth to God and man of a preacher of the gospel.

C. H. B.

Under Twenty, by Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D. D.

The talented New York clergyman has prepared some messages well worthwhile for our younger generation, based on the "Sin of Untruthfulness," "The Tongue," "Discipline," and "Five Wrong Ideas of God," which will prove of unquestionable profit to our young readers, and topics discussed in other chapters will provide instruction and food for young and old.

The Men's Class in Action, by F. Harvey Morse.

In this day, when the adult Bible class and men's organizations are such an important factor in the Sunday-school, this book will be especially valuable in helping to solve the problems as well as to develop the greatest efficiency of older classes. In addition to the chapters upon the organization, the teacher, and the curriculum, there are some excellent suggestions regarding class promotion, class finances and class socials. It should prove an excellent textbook for every teacher and officer of a men's class.

The Authenticity of the Holy Scriptures, by Prof. H. E. Dana.

We commend this book for its great simplicity and lucidity. The author shows his complete knowledge and grasp of the great problems which the church has to face in dealing with the modern assaults against the Bible by those who profess to be its friends, and also shows how they are to be fearlessly met. Under four main heads he outlines and deals with the deplorable situation: "The Problem Stated," "The Bible and History," "The Bible and Science," "The Bible and Experience."

What About Evolution, by Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D. D.

This is one of the shortest and simplest expositions of evolution that has yet appeared in print. In addition to the general statement, the writer sets forth seven unanswerable questions, and also the testimony of scientists as to the utter absence of supporting evidence. A second chapter is given over to a discussion of evolution and Genesis, in which the science, anthropology and catastrophe set forth by the initial book of the Bible, are plainly at variance with the doctrine of uniformity. A bibliography also adds to the value of the pamphlet.

The Community Daily Vacation Bible School, by E. C. Knapp.

The general secretary of the Inland Empire Sunday School Association has enrolled more than 1,600 boys and girls the last four summers in his Community Daily Vacation Bible School. Few men have probably improved this great movement of Bible training in vacation time as successfully, and the results of his plans and program will be read with interest. This book will be especially helpful to those who may have any hesitancy in attempting the vacation Bible school in their church and city. The excellent bibliography with which the author concludes, suggests a mass of material and information for carrying on this work.

Christianity, the Flower and Fruit of Judaism, by a Son of Levi (Rev. Mark John Levy).

The appearance of this book is very timely. Everywhere the church of God is awakening to her responsibility towards the Jews in her midst. This little book contains the heart-cry of an aged servant of God, himself a son of Levi, who for forty years had worked and prayed for such an awakening.

It treats the subject from the standpoint of the Jewish believer who with all his love towards his Master considers himself nationally to be one with, as yet, unbelieving Israel. We cannot agree with all the conclusions of the author, nor is it our opinion that the English speaking peoples are the descendants of the lost ten tribes of Israel. But on the whole it is certainly a very striking contribution to the subject of Jewish evangelism and well worth reading.

Japan in Transition, by Loretta L. Shaw, B. A.

This book is heartily commended as being thoughtfully conceived and ably written, and as giving to its readers a clear and impressive picture of present day conditions in Japan, and of the struggle between old and new ideals and forces through which that nation is passing. It is written distinctively from the Christian standpoint, and sets forth both the need and opportunity which this transitional stage in Japan presents to Christianity as the only solution to the problems of the Mikado's kingdom. Chapters IV and V, on "Woman," and the final chapter, giving four striking illustrations of the power of the gospel in the lives of Japanese converts, are particularly fine.

The Story of Grenfell of the Labrador, a Boy's Life of Wilfred T. Grenfell, by Dillon Wallace.

The story of the beloved physician of the Labrador is here finely retold by one who has himself lived in those parts and can therefore speak as an eyewitness of much that he describes. While designated especially for boys, the book is equally well adapted to adults. It gives a vivid picture of the many-sided labors and thrilling adventures of that unique man who for more than thirty years has made himself "all things to all men" in those bleak, inhospitable lands of the far north, and whose name is the best known and loved by the whole diverse population of that vast region—deep sea fishermen, trappers, traders, "liveyeres" and Eskimos—not only for his skillful ministry of healing, but almost more for his unnumbered acts of unselfish kindness and practical help of every conceivable kind. Incidentally the book furnishes no little useful information about a part of the world that, although comparatively near, is very little known to the great majority.

R. H. G.

Evolution a Witness to God, by Rev. George Craig Stewart, D. D.

This little booklet is sent forth with the apparent expectation that it will "lay" the opponents of Darwinian evolution, but if that is its purpose, the opponents of evolution need have few fears. It is brightly written, full of sneering at conservative Christianity, and would please some with its wit.

But as to argument, there is none. For instance, in speaking of the Christians who believe the Bible to be inerrant, the author asks what version of the Bible is inerrant. No intelligent person has ever claimed any version of the Bible to be inerrant, but they have claimed that if we had the original manuscripts we would have an inerrant Bible.

The author says that the Bible does not claim to be a book of science. Certainly not, but whenever the Bible refers to geology, biology, cosmography, or anything else that belongs to the sphere of science, it speaks correctly. The author insists that the Bible is itself conspicuous evidence of the law of evolution, and quotes from a friend who calls attention to the testimony of the Old Testament to God as jealous, envious and vengeful. He goes on to say that Isaiah is the bridge to the God of Jesus, in all this denying that God is unchangeable.

He says that he knows the book of Genesis was not written by one man. How does he know? He says that it was probably written four or five centuries before Christ. In this statement he is lining up with the destructive critics. The author's reference to astronomy is a boomerang, for it must be the same God that now controls the universe who established the star from which it takes light 3000 years to reach the earth. He says that light travels at the rate of 186,000 miles per second, and that this speed is static. If God is not static, certainly none of the laws of nature could be so considered.

Is the author right in saying that no one claims that man is descended from a species of monkeys that are on the face of the earth? Monkeys now are just what they were since history has any record. Mr. Bryan is not astray when he asks whether if you keep a monkey long enough it will turn into a man. The author says that the monkey is not his ancestor. Where then is the doctrine of evolution as far as the appearance of man is concerned? The author's claim that the difference of species is the survival of the fittest, has no basis in fact nor in the teaching of true science.

The author's reference to Walt Whitman is a clear witness against evolution: "Animals do not lie awake in the dark and weep for their sins. They do not discuss their duty to God. Not one of them is respectable or unhappy in the whole world." He claims also that there is no antithesis between creation and evolution. He insists upon creative evolution, and presents the second Adam as the climax of this evolutionary process. What blasphemy to so designate God Himself incarnate as a process of evolution! But no less was the first Adam a new species; not the result of inherent forces in nature, but something created by a transcendent God in His own likeness and image.

REV. A. H. CARTER

Rev. A. H. Carter was special lecturer at the Institute the second week in June. Mr. Carter is the pastor of the Hounslow Undenominational Church, London, England. He is also editor of The Bible Witness, and lecturer on Christian evidences in Wycliffe Preacher's College.

Speaking of his impressions of the Institute, Mr. Carter said: "It has been a great joy to see the magnificent work which The Moody Bible Institute is doing on behalf of the truth in these solemn days. As these great bodies of young people go forth from time to time, they ought to, and will, exercise a mighty influence by the power of the Holy Spirit against the onrush of Modernism."

BIBLE CONFERENCE IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Former students of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago gathered at the Central Presbyterian Church Wednesday evening for their regular alumni meeting. The president of the local association, Capt. Harold R. Smith, presided.

After a devotional service and business session, Mr. Burkett, field representative of the Moody Bible Institute, presented plans for a Bible conference to be held in this city in the fall. The aim is to make this the biggest Bible conference ever held in Washington.

Rev. Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, spoke to the gathering on "The Power of the Cross," emphasizing the cross as the symbol of reconciliation between God and a sin-cursed world.

The next meeting of the association will be the annual meeting in October.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT

Following his vacation, Dr. J. E. Conant supplied the pulpit of Moody Church for two Sundays, and then went to Alderson, W. Va., where he is conducting a Bible conference in the Baptist church. He is also to be one of the speakers at the Cedar Lake Conference.

Rev. George E. Guille taught the Bible at the Summer Bible Conference conducted by the Institute at Eagles Mere, Pa., July 6-15, after which he was on the program of the Erieside Bible Conference. On July 28 he commenced his work with the Central Pennsylvania Bible Conference at Lakemont Park, Pa., and beginning Aug. 8, he gives a series of addresses at Cedar Lake, Ind.

Her many friends will be glad to learn of the safe arrival in Australia of Miss Elinor Stafford Millar.

Dr. Henry Ostrom supplied the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church of Duluth, Minn., during most of July.

Following the close of a Bible teaching engagement in Marion, Ind., June 25-30, Mr. C. E. Putnam went to Kenosha, Wis., for similar work.

Rev. J. A. Sutherland has been representing the Institute in an evangelistic tour of Union, Inman and Rock Hill, S. C., following which he will come north to speak at the Bible conference at Green Lake, Wis., July 25-Aug. 5.

Following her two weeks engagement under the auspices of the ministerial association of Willard, O., Miss Virginia C. Williams taught the Bible at the Women and Girls' Institute at Erieside, O.

REUNION AT INDIANAPOLIS

The Institute invited as its guests for the evening of May 18, at Indianapolis, in connection with the meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly, twenty-six of the commissioners who were former Institute students, twenty-one of them being ministers.

Among those who were able to be present were Rev. P. V. Jenness, D.D., Denver, Colo.; Rev. Cornelius M. Steffens, D. D., Dubuque, Iowa; Rev. J. C. Leonard, Ph.D., Petersburg, Ill., and Rev. Richard T. Ferrell, Spokane, Wash. Those representing the present life of the Institute were Professor Grant Stroh, Mr. A. F. Gaylord and Dr. J. H. Ralston, the latter presiding at the dinner. Among other guests were Rev. Otis T. Dale, D.D., and Mrs. Dale, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Rev. Joseph T. Britan, D.D., Columbus, O.; Rev. David S. Kennedy, D.D., editor of the Presbyterian, Philadelphia; Rev. H. M. Hildebrandt, Springfield, Ill.; Rev. J. T. Hartman, superintendent of Presbyterian Synodical Sunday-school Missions, Kansas City, Mo.; Rev. J. C. Ferguson, superintendent of Presbyterian Synodical Sunday-school Missions in Iowa, and Mr. R. F. Sulzer, superintendent of Presbyterian Synodical Sunday-school Missions, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dr. Jenness, Dr. Britan and Rev. Mr. Hildebrandt made brief addresses, and referred to the long and most honorable history of the Institute founded by Dwight L. Moody, its present great work, not only in furnishing a large number of Christian workers, but as a bulwark for the fundamentals of the Christian religion.

Resolutions of greeting were sent to reunions of Moody Institute students held at Baptists gatherings at Kansas City and Atlantic City.

EVENING CLASS GRADUATION

The Spring Term graduation exercises of the Evening Classes were held in the auditorium on the evening of June 29. Fourteen women and ten men were awarded diplomas, having completed a four year course corresponding to the two year course of the Day Classes. Rev. Lewis Sperry Chafer, pastor of the Scofield Memorial Church, Dallas, Tex., delivered the address.

Rev. Mr. Chafer stressed the danger of depending upon human teachers and human writings. He said in part: "The divine plan is that every individual Christian shall be taught of the Spirit. My theme particularly tonight is that theme from the Scripture that treats of the teaching of the Spirit. I think you understand exactly why I bring this message, that through it I may turn you over more completely now, if possible, by these words of exhortation and explanation from the Scripture—turn you over more completely and consciously on your part to this great ministry of the Spirit of God, that He may truly occupy the place in your thought and in your experience as your teacher.

"It seems to me most important to say at this time that the difficulty with the church of God is that we have been willing to listen to men who because of great intellectual attainments have been permitted to tell us what we can believe and what we cannot believe in this Book. It makes no difference what degrees or high honors a man has attained in the learning of this world, if he is not born again he is as ignorant as an unborn child concerning spiritual things. He is not even a babe in Christ. He could not even receive the milk of the Word. You can see very readily what happens when perhaps through some strange combination permitted these days an unregenerate young man is ordained to the ministry and sent out to preach. Preach what? Preach the best he knows. He will be sincere. Perhaps his zeal and humanitarian heart will be a rebuke to some of us, but the difficulty is that not being born again he has no spiritual message whatever."

Dr. Gray announced that the graduating class had contributed $4,000 in pledges.

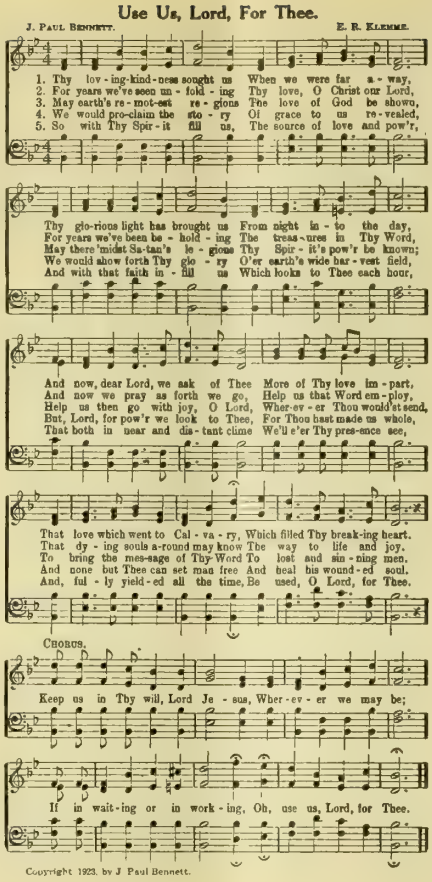
The list of graduates follows: Ruby Bartlett, Mrs. Laura M. Bradshaw, Rose F. Gemeinhardt, Nellie V. Haynie, Mrs. Ruth F. Hoover, Edith L. Johnson, Esther R. Klemme, Elva J. Pierce, Phebe A. Rogers, Anna P. M. Stahr, Hazel E. Weber, Carrie E. Wilcox, Lettie E. Woolley, Anna Wulf, James P. Bennett, Oliver E. Ekstrom, Alfred R. Hanson, Herbert W. Johnson, T. Clarence Lightfoot, Robert J. Little, Milton H. Moberg, George A. Petersen, John P. Pierce, and Roy W. Schaumburg.

On the previous Tuesday evening, June 26, the graduating class held their class exercises in Keith Hall. The Faculty, graduates, friends of the graduates, and Evening Class students were present. A splendid program was given, followed by a social hour. Mrs. Laura M. Bradshaw and George Petersen were the class speakers. Elva J. Pierce sang as a solo the class song, "Use Us Lord for Thee," words by James Bennett and music by Esther R. Klemme.

This is the last class to graduate under the leadership of Rev. J. R. Schaffer who has so efficiently served as director of the Evening Classes for the past three years. Dr. P. B. Fitzwater, the new director, is actively engaged in promoting this department before the churches of Chicago. The outlook for the fall term is promising.

Use Us, Lord, For Thee.

J. PAUL BENNETT. E. R. KLEMME.



1. Thy lov-ing-kind-ness sought us When we were far a-way,
2. For years we've seen un-fold-ing Thy love, O Christ our Lord,
3. May earth's re-mot-est re-gions The love of God be shown,
4. We would pro-claim the sto-ry Of grace to us re-vealed,
5. So with Thy Spir-it fill us, The source of love and pow'r,
Thy glo-rious light has brought us From night in-to the day,
For years we've been be-hold-ing The treas-ures in Thy Word,
May there 'midst Sa-tan's be-guiling Thy Spir-it's pow'r be known;
We would show forth Thy glo-ry O'er earth's wide bar-rest field,
And with that faith in-fill us Which looks to Thee each hour,
And now, dear Lord, we ask of Thee More of Thy love im-part,
And now we pray as forth we go, Help us that Word em-ploy,
Help us then go with joy, O Lord, Wher-ev-er Thou would'st send,
But, Lord, for pow'r we look to Thee, For Thou hast made us whole,
That both in near and dis-tant clime We'll e'er Thy pres-ence see,
That love which went to Cal-va-ry, Which filled Thy break-ing heart.
That dy-ing souls a-round may know The way to life and joy.
To bring the mes-sage of Thy Word To lost and sin-ning men.
And none but Thee can set man free And heal his wound-ed soul.
And, ful-ly yield-ed all the time, Be used, O Lord, for Thee.
CHORUS.
Keep us in Thy will, Lord Je-sus, Wher-ev-er we may be;
If in wait-ing or in work-ing, Oh, use us, Lord, for Thee.

MRS. GRANT STROH, MISSIONARY HEAD

Mrs. Grant Stroh, the wife of Rev. Grant Stroh of the Institute Faculty, has been elected first vice-president of the Women's Synodical Society of Illinois under the new regime of the Presbyterian church, which combines the home and foreign missionary work of the women of this state.

THE CENTRAL AMERICAN MISSION

Rev. Lewis Sperry Chafer is the director of the Central American Mission, and in connection with his visit to the Institute to deliver the address to the graduates of the Evening Classes, an additional hour was given for the students to hear him speak upon this important work of the Scofield Memorial Church.

This missionary society began its work thirty-three years ago, under the leadership of the late Dr. C. I. Scofield, and there are now fifty-one working missionaries on the field. The society has relied entirely upon God to meet its financial obligations. According to Mr. Chafer's statement: "We have no pledges, we have no guarantees. The first day of July is coming on very rapidly. I shall reach my office and have the responsibility of sending out funds for the support of the work on July 1. One would get just a little worried and anxious if it were not for faith. But we wait quietly for God and we have never yet, in thirty-three years, failed to have the funds to send out on the first of the month."

As Mr. Chafer has but recently returned from a visit to the different stations of the Central American Mission, he was able to set forth the present conditions and needs with unusual vividness, and his address made a strong impression upon the student body.

DONALD SCHAFFER HONORED

Donald Schaffer, the twenty year old son of Rev. J. R. Schaffer of the Institute Family, recently was graduated from Northwestern University cum summa laude, having been elected to Phi Beta Kappa honors.

Miss Ruth Schaffer, has been elected to the National Honor Society, the Phi Beta Kappa of the high school. This honor is conferred upon the four-fold basis of scholarship, service, leadership and character.

A second daughter of Mr. Schaffer, the youngest in a class of three hundred and thirty-one members, has been on the honor roll ever since her entrance to the high school and has likewise been elected to the National Honor Society.

A SUCCESSFUL CORRESPONDENCE STUDENT

Rev. Harvey Lee Bryant, 119 Clopton St., Richmond, Va., June 6, 1923; writes: "I have been pastor of a Baptist church for sixteen months, and without training save only what I have received through your school. I took a church that had died, and preached first to ten people, but after using the instruction I received from you, our membership has grown to 400, fifty-two having been baptized during the last three weeks. We have put in three new furnaces, bought a new organ, put in a new basement, 250 new chairs, and haven't room for all the people. We are now figuring on a new church. The Sunday-school has doubled or more; the collections have gone from $38 a month to $686 last month."

MT. CARMEL BIBLE SCHOOL

The Mt. Carmel Bible School, Haifa, Palestine, is of special interest to the readers of THE MOODY MONTHLY, because of the relation it sustains to Rev. S. B. Rohold, the superintendent. Mr. Rohold has become a familiar figure at the Special Summer Course of the Institute, through his interesting addresses upon the present Jewish situation in Palestine.

In the accompanying photograph Mr. Rohold is seen to the right of the archbishop of the Greek Orthodox church, who has just paid an official visit to the Mt. Carmel Bible School. This visit is said to be a new departure for such a dignitary, who has the reputation of being evangelical in many of his views.

Mr. Rohold will be heard at the summer conferences at Cedar Lake, Ind., Madison, Wis., and Ocean City, N. J.

ALUMNI BANQUET AT MINNEAPOLIS, JAN. 29

Dr. P. B. Fitzwater and Miss Charlotte A. Cary have been visiting different parts of the country during the past year with the purpose of organizing the alumni of the Institute into auxiliary associations. In various cities former Moody students living within a radius of forty or fifty miles were assembled for fellowship banquets ending in formal organization and election of officers. Twenty-eight such auxiliaries have already been formed.

The organization of the Minneapolis unit took place in the Y. M. C. A. building, Monday evening, January 29. Mr. Reuben Larson had charge of the preparations for the dinner. This was followed by an address by Dr. Fitzwater, in which he presented the object of the association. After the election of officers, the students had an old-fashioned fellowship meeting; in which each contributed reminiscences and items of interest regarding his present work. The officers elected were: President, Rev. W. L. Porter, '94; vice president, John O. Ferris, '01; secretary, Miss Sarah Seaborn, '14; treasurer, Harold E. Ingersoll, '20.

PERSONALIA

R. I. Humberd, '21, is pastor of the First Brethren Church, Roann, Ind.

Mary Eleanor Allen, '20, was graduated from Alexander College, May 30.

The address of Andrew Telford, '21, is Ingenio La Esperanza, San Pedro de Jujuy, Argentine, S. A.

Henry W. Uffeln, '11, is now located in a Brooklyn pastorate. His address is 1554 Putnam Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

David Rees-Jones, '16, is pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Chelsea, Okla. He edits the church paper The Monthly Messenger.

Members of December class, 1917 are requested to write their annual letter immediately and send it to their secretary, Kathryn MacKenzie, 642 N. 56th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley M. Armstrong, '14, evangelistic singers, sailed for Europe June 29, on the steamer "Montcalm." They will sing at the Baptist World Alliance in Stockholm, Sweden, after which they plan to study music in Paris.

F. Bertram Miller, '18, pastor of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Gospel Tabernacle, Mattoon, Ill., is the editor and publisher of the Tabernacle Tidings and a contributor to the Beacon Light published in Chicago.

Annie Ludwig, '20, sailed for Africa July 2 under the direction of the Africa Inland Mission board. After she was graduated from the Institute she completed her college preparatory course at Albright College, Myerstown, Pa.

George E. Griffith, '10, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Stanley, Wis., is chairman of the evangelistic committee of the Winnebago Presbytery which is planning an extensive soul-winning campaign in northern Wisconsin.

W. B. Williston, '09, China Inland Mission missionary, is opening up new work among the Tibetans and aboriginal tribes of Tibet Kansu Szechuan. He asks that the Institute family remember him in prayer.

John B. Grimshaw, '19, Sudan, Africa, writes: "Mrs. Grinshaw and I are happy in our work here for the Lord. We have been permitted to see some results from our labors which encourage us to continue sowing the seed and to wait upon Him for the increase."

Hester E. Field, Lois Henderson, Olga Johnson, and Ranier McKenzie, all of the class of August, 1920, represent the Institute at Tarku, Korea. Miss Henderson teaches foreign children at Seoul. Miss Johnson and Miss McKenzie are evangelistic workers.

Winfred Altvater, '10, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Huron, O., reports an excellent increase in the attendance at both the church services and Sunday-school during the past year.

A. E. Danly, '02, has an Indian church with some forty members on the Shoshone Reservation, Wyo.

The degree of Bachelor of Arts was conferred upon Helen Sinclair, '20, Marian Downey, '17, Sara Lackey, '20, and Lillian Boehmlander, '16, members of the graduating class of 1923 of Wheaton College. Miss Sinclair expects to teach near Oak Park next winter. Miss Downey has accepted a position as head of the French department in a Junior College in Mars Hill, N. C. Miss Boehmlander will teach science, biology and hygiene near Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Miss Lackey has an opening in the public schools of Harrisburg, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Talmadge W. Wilson, '18, are residing in Portland, Ore., where Mr. Wilson is engaged in Y. M. C. A. work. They are members of the church of Bernard B. Sutcliffe, '04.

John H. Hunter, '96, sailed on May 31 for China to speak at the summer conferences held under the auspices of the Milton Stewart Evangelistic Fund. Mr. Hunter was for many years secretary of the Faculty of the Moody Bible Institute, and at present is holding the same position at the Bible Institute of Los Angeles.

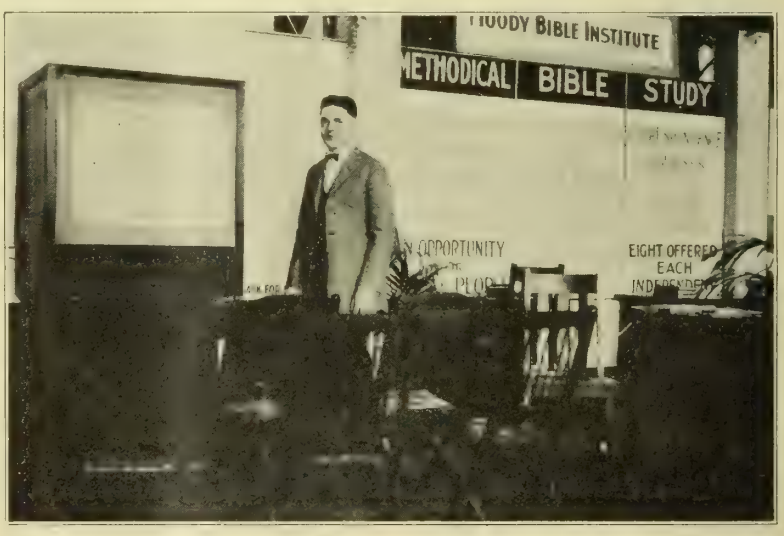
The blessing of the Lord has attended George R. Bernhard, '08, in his work as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Nunda, N. Y., according to a letter received from him. The people show great interest in the prayer meetings. The Bible class which meets on Monday evenings is well attended by young people.

R. S. Nickerson, '95, asks an interest in the prayers of the Institute family. He is beginning work among the Eskimos at Wales, Alaska, located at the extremity of the American continent nearest Siberia. It is a cold, desolate, isolated place, but several hundred souls without Christ live there. Mr. Nickerson formerly worked at Cordova, Alaska.

In a recent letter, Mrs. Ward Hartman, '11, of Yungsin-Hunan, China, writes: "We are beginning work here among the Mias, supposed to be the aborigines of China. Nothing has hitherto been done for this tribe in Hunan. They seem responsive to the gospel, although we do not have much fruit as yet, the work being only in its beginning."

Reports made at the recent annual meeting of the First Presbyterian Church, Wausau, Wis., of which F. W. Eastwood, '14, is pastor, indicated growth and success. The work of the church extended all over the city, through its several chapels and Sunday-schools. Evangelistic services conducted during the winter by R. H. Cantwell and A. F. Perkins, former Institute students, were reported very successful.

Through the courtesy of the Chicago Vocational and Trade Schools, the Institute was given generous space and a splendid location at the Exposition held at the Coliseum, May 30-June 10. The exhibit was one of the most attractive shown and received much favorable comment and quite a number manifested interest in some phase of the Institute's work.



The automatic stereopticon machine, seen at the left of the picture, presented a continuous run of slides showing the various activities of the Institute and was a unique feature of the exhibit.

After being graduated from the Institute in August, 1919, Carel Hamel finished his studies at the McCormick and Drew Seminaries. He is now working at Buitenzorg, Java, under the direction of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal church. The Dutch language, his mother tongue, is proving very useful to him, as Java is a Dutch colony. He does circuit work, teaching, and translating from the English into Dutch. Any one interested in the work can correspond with Mr. Hamel. His address is Gang Kebon Djae Ila, Buitenzorg, Java.

SPURGEON'S SERMONS

Speaking at a luncheon in London, given on behalf of an effort made to raise funds for the new home of the Pastors' College founded by the late C. H. Spurgeon, Mr. Lloyd George said some things in praise of "the greatest preacher of his age."

There had been no man in English literature, since John Bunyan, he remarked, who had equalled Spurgeon, and that was why Bunyan and Spurgeon are going to be part of the literature of our land as long as its tongue is spoken.

Spurgeon's sermons, added the ex-Prime Minister, throbbed with tenderness. He had a great love for his fellowmen, and he had a faith indomitable, inexhaustible and pervading.

All this is true, and the fact that Spurgeon's sermons are still in such great demand is a tribute to his sanctified genius. In fact, although he has been dead for thirty years, Spurgeon's sermons are probably more widely read today than any living man's. That, of course, is due to a combination of rare qualities. Not only did Spurgeon possess in a wonderful degree the art of simple and direct expression, but his keen spiritual perception enabled him to get to the very heart of great truths and to present them in language which even the uneducated and unlettered could easily understand.—The Life of Faith.

THE VALUE OF GOOD BOOKS

The subtle influence of books permeates every department of life and is the controlling factor in a vast number of human destinies. Were it not for these millions of pages of records, the great thoughts, the wonderful deeds, the noble dreams of those who have gone before us, would have perished from the earth.

* * *

We have in the Book of books the very words of God Himself; we can turn its sacred pages and hear the gentle voice of the Master of men expounding that simple and marvelous philosophy of conduct that meets every test that life can offer. We can sit at the feet of Paul and drink in his eloquent exposition of the faith that was in him; or gaze with John at the marvelous vision of the Holy City. In that one Book—which is printed today in almost every known tongue and distributed free by millions every year—can be found a complete moral and spiritual education for every one of us.

* * *

Without the art of the printer and binder how many millions of the human race would ever have had the opportunity to learn of the divine message which this Book holds?

* * *

Learning, indeed, is one of the principal uses of books. We are all learning all the time, and we should see to it that our books, from which we derive much of our information, are of the highest type. You are careful to feed your body with the best you can procure. Be no less careful of your mental food, for it is, if anything, even more important than the physical nourishment that you absorb daily. Books are all educational, rightly used, but certain books are exclusively so.

* * *

In conclusion, let me say to you that in books, perhaps more than in any other single product of man's intelligence, lies the hope of the race. Teach your children to love books and to read them carefully and understandingly and you will be making friends for them that shall stand by them through life, companions that shall help to pass many lonely hours, consolers in grief, and aids in adversity. The man or woman who loves and uses books need never fear a rival or a lack of return for his or her affection.

* * *

A good book is an investment that will repay its cost a thousandfold. As a treat for yourself or a gift for those you love, there is nothing that adequately takes its place.—David J. O'Connell.

SPIRITUAL AWAKENING

the entire city seemed to be there for the tabernacle was crowded to the doors. And on that morning the meeting broke with mighty power. When a song had been sung and Mr. Stephens got up to preach he only got as far as the pulpit when a woman arose and said, "Mr. Stephens, I am not a Christian, but these meetings have been a blessing to me. I said I was not going to attend the circles of prayer, but I got started and now I surrender my life and take Jesus to be my personal Saviour."

Then began a time of confession, of renewing of covenants, getting right with God, getting right with neighbors, that lasted for three days.

Interspersed through all these meetings all over the city would burst forth the loved songs of the gospel, "He Will Do the Same for You," "I Know a Great Name," "Count the Cost," "Take It to the Lord in Prayer," "Jesus is Mighty to Save," and "Christ Can Set You Absolutely Free." This last was the most loved of all. It rang through the city, men whistled it, people hummed it on the streets. Thousands of lives will never forget that song.

The Pocket Testament League work, "Carry the Bible with You," took on deep interest, and the Word of God was thus being read by hundreds who never had opened their Bibles except a few days during the year. The circles of prayer were carried on in many of the districts after the campaign was over. The Y. W. C. A. organized a Bible study class. The men organized into a Men's Christian Workers League for gospel team work until many sections around about were touched by their services. The men of the city called for a mass meeting of all the men and boys and began preparation for a Y. M. C. A.

Are You A Premillenarian?

If so, I have a message for you.

It is of supreme value if you wish light for these dark days.

I advertised the same message some time ago. The letters I received from those who had sent for it were filled with gratitude to God for a new awakening that had come into their lives; almost everyone said in effect, "This should be read by every Christian in America."

That is why I am making the announcement again this year; I want to reach every—every—true Christian who is longing for the coming of the King, and I am doing my part to accomplish it. Whether I reach you, depends on yourself.

Your copy of the message is ready. Just enclose 5c worth of stamps in a letter and say, "I am a premillenarian: Send me your message."

If you are not a premillenarian please do not answer this advertisement.

A Special Offer of Unusual Interest and Value to All!

There have been more Christian martyrs in Russia during the past 5 years than in the rest of the world during the last century—and yet the number of Christian believers in that land has grown from about 250,000 before the world war to approximately 10,000,000 today. The Russian State has said quite openly it fears nothing so much as the Christian believers, and the authorities have taken steps to hinder and altogether stop the spread of the Gospel, until only a mere shadow remains of the freedom of religion established by the revolution of 1917.

Most of these statements are taken from the intensely interesting account of the journey into Russia of our Commissioner, Pastor B. Goetze. Every American Christian should read this report, in order to get a true and proper understanding of conditions in Russia.

"The Friend of Russia" for 8 months for only 50c

Our monthly organ, "The Friend of Russia," contains the latest news from the Russian missi on field, together with splendid spiritual messages, and we will send this magazine to new subscribers 1or 8 months for 50c (regular price $1.00 a year). Don't miss reading Pastor Goetze's story. The first instalment appeared in the July number, and we will begin all new subscriptions with this issue so that you will not miss any part of this gripping story.

This Society has about 150 missionaries in the field (all of them thoroughly orthodox), and God is blessing the work. Your prayers and help will be welcomed.

Send us 50c for your subscription before you forget. Stamps will do. Many write they would not be without our magazine, and we know you will enjoy reading it.

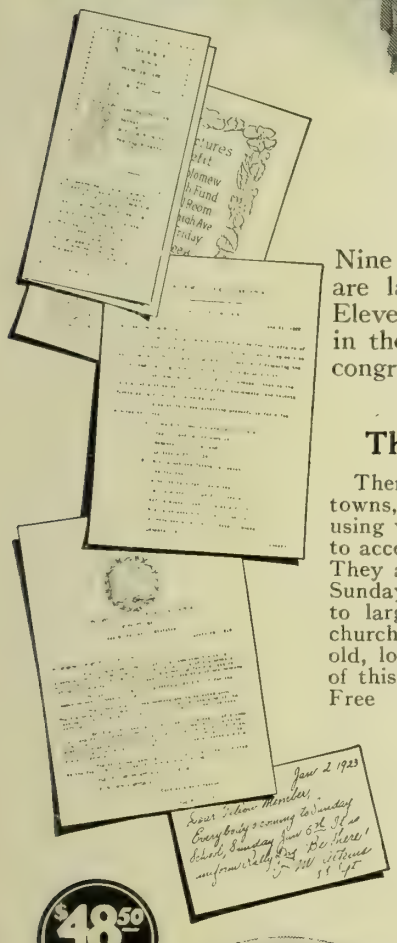
Wonderful Ideas that Bring New, Smiling Faces to Church

Nine thirty! New, happy, smiling faces in Sunday School. Interested children who are laying the foundations of becoming good citizens, staunch church members. Eleven! An active congregation, eagerly attentive, steady in attendance, generous in their offerings. Isn't that what you are striving for? Isn't that the kind of a congregation you want?

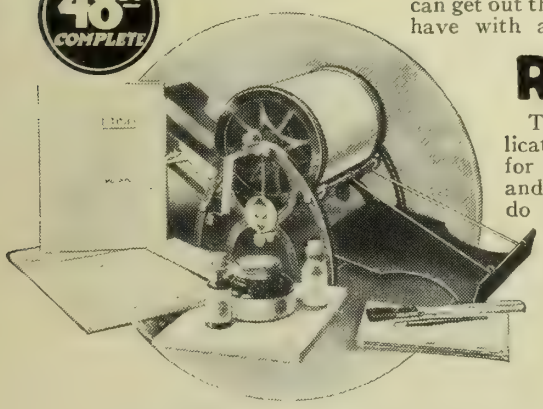


FREE—Ideas That Will Accomplish This

There are ministers in large cities, smaller towns, villages and in rural districts who are using wonderfully effective and practical ideas to accomplish just what you most want to do. They are finding it necessary to expand their Sunday School quarters. They are preaching to large audiences. They are putting their churches on a sound financial basis, lifting old, long-standing debts. They are doing all of this in a dignified, economical manner with Free Ideas.

You Can Use The Same Idea

These highly successful ministers are using beautifully illustrated folders, illustrated forms and charts and wholehearted letters to bring about these remarkable results. They are using ideas that were given to them. You can have the same ideas to use. You can get out these ideas as other ministers have with a



ROTOSPEED STENCIL DUPLICATOR

The Rotospeed Stencil Duplicator is an ideal machine for you to use. It is simple and easy to operate. You do not have to bother with type or cuts, yet you can actually print attractive folders and letters and illustrate them with figures and borders. You do not have to be mechanically inclined. You can easily do the work yourself with splendid results, right in your study. And best of all you can get out thousands of pieces of printed matter at practically no cost to you, other than the insignificant price of the paper.

Ten Days' Free Trial

Today you can take advantage of a liberal sales offer. Today you can get a complete Rotospeed outfit—machine, stencil paper, ink, brush, impression paper, and the big Idea Book,—for a ten days' free trail. (You can use the machine and materials for ten days.) You can send out folders, charts and letters that you have copied from actual samples in the Idea Book. Then, after this ten days' trial if you aren't satisfied with the results you can send back the machine. If you want to keep it the total cost is only $48.50.

Check on the coupon below whether you want the complete machine and materials for a ten days' free trial, or some actual working samples of these wonderful ideas and full details telling how you can have this machine for a ten days' free trial. WANTED- MISSIONARIES

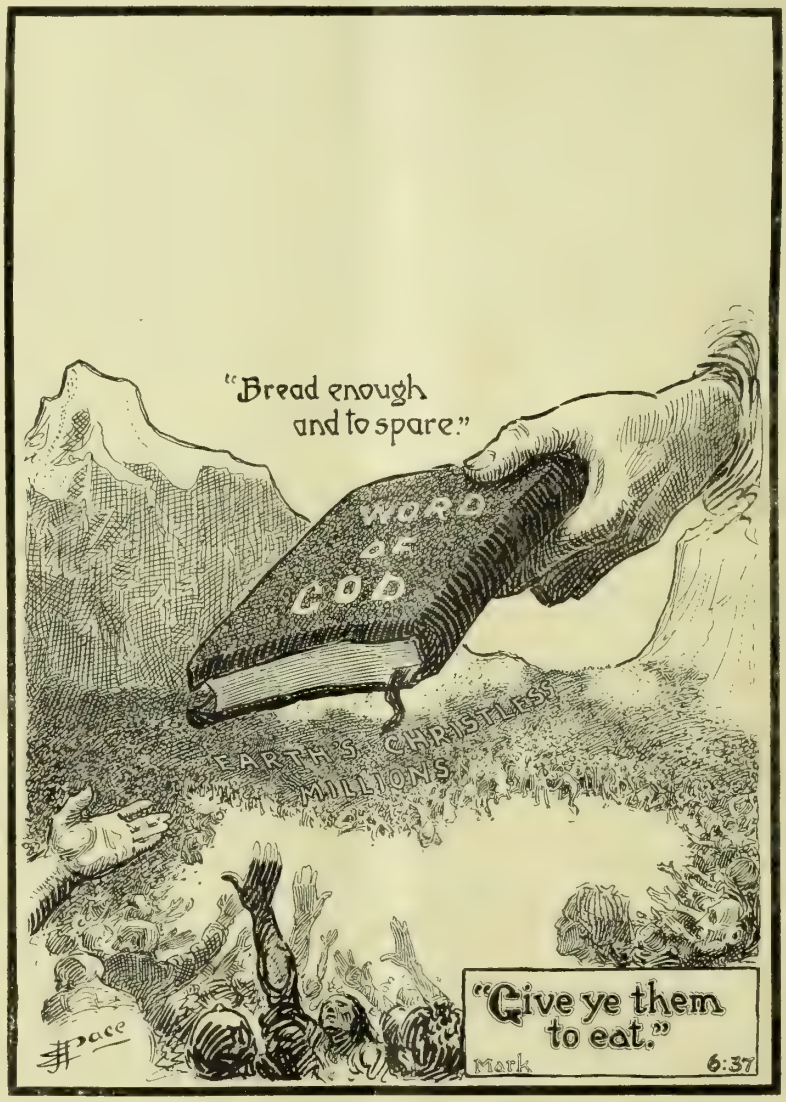
The general director of one of the largest missions in Africa wrote the Moody Bible Institute as follows:—

"We are pounding away at about the hardest rock that I think is to be found in the world field, trying to meet the greatest need and overcome the greatest opposition with the most limited force, but it is good to be at the very front of the battle and to be making some progress in carrying the gospel to those who have not heard.

"I wish you could send us about 500 more of your choicest workers. None but the very best are really worth sending.

"Nearly every worker should be able to conduct a Bible school under difficulties - - - greater than at home. Every worker should be a leader capable of leading people who do not see fully his motive or understand how great is its object. Every worker should have an enthusiasm which can not be dampened by endless difficulties and that rises superior to all adversity."



The need is as great now as when this letter was received. The calls for workers are still coming. The problem is not so much to find volunteers for the service as it is to find those who will provide the necessary funds to train them.

We invite your co-operation by an outright gift or an investment under the Life Annuity Plan. Complete information will be sent on request.
